"12:10" for some time has been enjoying a rapid increase in bookings and last week "The Blue Pearl" bookings almost equaled those of "12:10." This week's report shows that in one state alone the bookings on "The Blue Pearl" passed those of the other picture by six. This was in New York State. Illinois, California, New Jersey, Arizona and Missouri showed the greatest increases in bookings this week.

Another Republic production scoring heavily, according to the exchange reports, is "The Amazing Woman." The bookings on this have been rising in a manner similar to those of the two other Republic releases.

American Film Breaks Records.

Guy E. Bacon, proprietor of the Lyric Theatre, Mr. Pleasant, Mich., is wishing he could get another picture like "When a Man Rides Alone." It broke his house records.

"When a Man Rides Alone," one of American's Russell-Minter-Fisher series, has always been a money getter, and exhibitors find the interest in it never wanes. It is a story after Russell's own heart, a gripping tale of a rough diamond of the desert, "Captain Bonfire," who was slow to love, but quick on the trigger.

Select Cast for Anita Stewart.

The cast supporting Anita Stewart in her new Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction, "The Yellow Typhoon," has been completed. It includes Ward Crane, Joseph Kilgour, Donald MacDonald, George Fisher, and Ed Brady. The story is by Harold MacGrath and Edward Jose is directing the picture from the screen version by Monte M. Katterjohn. Rene Guissart is in charge of the photography and light effects.

Paul Scardon Joins Goldwyn's Culver City Directors Staff

PAUL SCARDON, who has just joined the Pacific Coast force of Goldwyn directors, having completed Leroy Scott's "Partners of the Night" in the east, is making his first visit to the Coast since 1906. He has been assigned to the production of "Milestones," the stage play by Edward Knoblock and Arnold Bennett recently purchased by Goldwyn.

"It's amazing," says Mr. Scardon. "One has to visit Los Angeles to really appreciate what an enormous thing the motion picture business is I was last in California in 1906, having come here from my home in Australia with Nance O'Neill and her company. D. W. Griffith was also a member of our organization.

Mr. Scardon says he is going to enjoy his work in California immensely. He has brought with him his assistant, Tenny Wright, who has been with him for three years. He prefers to direct strong, dramatic pictures with mystery and heart interest combined.

Selznick Gives Film to Northcliffe.

In return for the many nice things W. G. Faulkner, Lord Northcliffe's representative in this country, has said about "The Land of Opportunity," both privately and in his public speeches, Lewis J. Selznick has given him a print of the picture.

The presentation was made at a luncheon in the Hotel Astor, New York, Wednesday, February 25. The print is a specially prepared one, especially titled, etc., and Mr. Faulkner will take it with him back to England and give it to Lord Northcliffe as a present from Mr. Selznick.

Faulkner has been particularly enthusiastic about the Americanization picture, and in an address made the week previous told a gathering of film men what an impression it made upon him when he first viewed it in the Capitol Theatre.

Fox Secures "Her Honor the Mayor."

Fox Film Corporation has purchased the world's motion picture rights to Arline Van Ness Hines' stage success, "Her Honor the Mayor," which attracted lively attention when it was presented on Broadway about three years ago. The Fox organization points to the fact that the spoken drama, being crammed with action and rising to a logical and superb climax, lends itself exceptionally well to filming. The story is essentially dramatic, but contains a wholesome leaven of mature humor.

"Her Honor the Mayor" will be screened at the West Coast studios. It will be a vehicle for Madlaine Traverse.

Arthur Mackley Returns to the Screen.

Arthur Mackley, who will be remembered as the "Sheriff" in all of the Broncho Billy western pictures of a few years ago, has again returned to the studios after several years in the army, and will be seen in the near future supporting House Peters in his forthcoming production, "The Great Redeemer."

What Is Said by the Reviewers

Moving Picture World (Unindicated); Motion Picture News (N.); Exhibitors' Trade Review (T. R.); Wid's (W.); Exhibitor's Herald (E. H.)

The Copperhead (Lionel Barrymore, Paramount)

Rich in its spectacular features, and more valuable in its human appeal, "The Copperhead" is greatest in what it stands for—uncomprising and militant Americanism.

T. R.—It is an American film for the American people. It will go down as a real drama in film history.

E. H.—Is destined to be one of the big pictures of the present season.

The Phantom Melody (Monroe Salisbury, Universal)

Many strong dramatic moments occur. The rather involved plot is consistently and clearly handled.

T. R.—It carries interest, a strong plot, clever acting and able direction, all of which blend into a film drama of real value.

A Modern Salome (Hope Hampton, Metro)

Affords interesting material for a moving picture production.

N.—This is a good Dwan feature which should satisfy the patrons who enjoy the work of this producer.

T. R.—A succession of scenes which will be remembered for their beauty chiefly and for their human appeal as an afterthought. Pleasing as a whole.

E. H.—Will be found a permanent asset to the exhibitor who plays it.

The Fear Market (Alice Brady, Realart)

Alice Brady in well acted society play.

N.—Is well acted and for that reason will make many friends. Its settings are gorgeous.

T. R.—Offers a story with a consistent degree of suspense, an abundance of action and a character exposition on the part of Alice Brady that makes of it an exceptional attraction for the exhibitor.

Beckoning Roads (Bessie Barriscale, Robertson-Cole)

Story of moderate strength. Bessie Barriscale covers herself with glory in the more dramatic moments of the play.

T. R.—An unimportant bit of melodrama, with Bessie Barriscale beginning as a child and finishing as a young woman.

E. H.—An altogether satisfactory evening's entertainment.

The Walk-Offs (May Allison, Metro)

Smart production of rather ordinary society story.

T. R.—Good satirical comedy.

E. H.—The star is perfectly cast. The production is lavish in the extreme, both as to settings and costuming.

Nothing But the Truth (Taylor Holmes, Metro)

N.—A mildly amusing farce comedy which has been given a good production.

T. R.—Fails to reach the bright glimmer of previous screen classic successes.

The comedy as a whole, sets a strong pace for screen stories of this type.

N.—An entertaining photoplay.

T. R.—The picture contains a wealth of human interest, good comedy, a bit of pathos and all the atmosphere of Avenue A that one could desire. It will delight the Irish.

Greater Than Fame (Elaine Hammerstein, Selznick)

T. R.—Offers entertainment of a kind which appeals to all admirers of "red-blooded" melodrama.

She Loves and Lies (Norma Talmadge, Select)

There is never a moment when the picture is not enjoyable.

N.—Scores for its humor, charm and the acting of Norma Talmadge and Conway Tearle.

T. R.—Provides excellent light entertainment, moves swiftly, offers exquisite photography and should prove a lucrative box office asset.

The Beauty Market (Katherine MacDonald, First National)

N.—A very orthodox play is this, given a very good production with correct types in all the roles.

T. R.—Despite the jarring inconsistencies of the unconvincing plot "The Beauty Market" affords Katherine MacDonald and Roy Stewart opportunities to register effectively in its many emotional scenes.

My Husband's Other Wife (Sylvia Breamer, Pathe)

N.—Satisfying offering on a martial theme.

T. R.—Ranks high in story and production and should prove a lucrative box office production.

The Web of Chance (Peggy Hyland, Fox)

N.—This picture does not pretend to be anything but light and frivolous, and it is both.

T. R.—An ordinary program offering that will while away the hour for the not-too-discriminating.

Wanted a Husband (Billie Burke, Paramount-Artcraft)

N.—Registers a highly amusing comedy.

T. R.—Billie Burke saves the day in a measure, by sheer force of her radiant personality and vivacious charm.

The Capitol (Leah Baird, W. W. Hodkinson)

Contains a fairly interesting situation which has not met with the best treatment in its transition to the screen.

T. R.—Rather meagre entertainment.

E. H. An expert picturization of Augustus Thomas' stage play. . . . The picture will bear out promises made for it.

The Cyclone (Tom Mix, Fox)

There are some splendid scenic effects in the opening reels and the plot is a compelling one of its kind.

N.—Familiar formula makes fair picture for Mix.

T. R.—It is an example of the outdoor melodrama which travels at high speed and tosses off all sorts of heroics and villainous outrages.

E. H.—Presents the screen's premier horseman in what many will pronounce his best picture.

T. R.—The story is appealing and holds a rich amount of pretty sentiment.

Toby's Bow (Tom Moore, Goldwyn)

The entire production is artificial, though it provides a bright ensemble or two.

N.—A very entertaining photoplay that should give pleasure to all classes of patrons.

T. R.—This is a pleasing comedy-drama, imbued with a touch of pretty sentiment and a good deal of quaint humor.

E. H.—Will entertain by reason of the star and the acting of the cast.

Eve in Exile (Grace Darling, Pathe)

The plot is at all times entertaining, but promises rather more drama as the story develops.

N.—You have an absorbing drama in "Eve in Exile."

T. R.—A story rich in dramatic values, sponsored by a capable cast and beautifully photographed.

The Teeth of the Tiger (All-Star, Famous-Players)

A story of tense interest, so constructed by Roy Somerville as to keep expectation constantly on edge.

T. R.—Is one of the better class mystery-detective pictures and patrons who favor that class of amusement should, in the language of the low-brows, 'eat it up.'

Blind Love (Lucy Cotton, Gerald F. Bacon)

The picture should succeed through the beauty and charming personality of Lucy Cotton and the richness and extensiveness of the settings.

N.—Nothing wonderful, but will entertain.

T. R.—A society drama, which is dressed luxuriously, has good plot interest, and the undeniable imprint of "class."

Piccadilly Jim (Owen Moore, Selznick)

N.—Entertaining light comedy from popular story.

T. R.—Light and pleasing farce.

E. H.—There is no question of its pleasing.

Her Elephant Man (Shirley Mason, Fox)

T. R.—One of the best of all the circus pictures.

E. H.—A story of circus life and circus characters, cleanly and entertainingly told. It should be widely successful.

The Peddler of Lies (Frank Mayo and Ora Carew, Universal)

Slaves of Pride (Alice Joyce, Vitagraph)

In the summing up, "Slaves of Pride" stands very high because there is a definite impression made.

N.—Enough force and vitality to make it generally interesting.

Pollyanna (Mary Pickford, United Artists)

A gem of exquisite pathos and humor.

N.—The supreme effort of true artists.

T. R.—It is a photoplay that will live while memory lasts; its appeal is universal and lasting.

W.—A wonderful entertainment and a wonderful drawing card.

Sidelights and Reflections

AT last New York has seen "Mary's Ankle." The picture version of the May Tully stage play had already been shown in several of the larger cities, and a glance over the screen "ads" in last Sunday's papers disclosed a general booking of the feature for the week of February 29th. Its engagement at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, the same week, resulted in excellent houses of uniformly pleased patrons, Douglas MacLean and Doris May having again been trimly fitted with the brand of clean and snappy comedy that best suits their youth and unfailing sense of good fun.

The story itself is not in the least original. The condition of being dead broke and hungry, which the trio of young chaps exhibit at the opening of the picture, is familiar enough both in fact and in fiction; but by expert handling it is made to yield a continuous flow of wholesome and apparently fresh humor.

There is that last desperate resort of the famished youths, in which the "Pretty Polly" of the confiding landlady figures and the exchange of the bird at the pawnbroker's for three ninety-five, under the pretext that Polly is ill and must be taken to a hospital for feathered patients.

Then, the start for the waffle shop with the precious cash, and the encounter with the "Have a Heart" girls! Few male beings there are that will not recognize an experience that has befallen them, when the three chaps are forced to surrender a dollar apiece to the tag day pirates and only ninety-five cents' worth of the parrot's crime stained pawnshop ransom stands between them and starvation.

And that feast of waffles, with the remembrance of the longing faces of the three hungry young chaps watching from outside the window as the smiling cook flips over the browning batter on the shinning hot plate and sees to it that each tempting cake is done to a turn! Nothing out of common in this, perhaps. But mixed and blended of the proper ingredients as are cook's waffles, the combined humor and fellow feeling of it all gets under one's skin with each mouthful of the "feed" the boys tuck under their belts.

There is also the acting of Donald MacLean and his companions in the pawning of Polly or the crime of the keen scented waffle hounds. Young Mr. MacLean is developing rapidly into a light comedian of admirable quickness and variety of method. He has already learned how to wrinkle his nose into a dozen amusingly expressive positions, and there is no lost motion to anything he attempts.

Almost at the end of the column and nothing has been said about Mary or her ankle or Doris May who really supplies the ankle and furnishes the doctor with a patient and a wife. Well, the omission is entirely the fault of the story. It's all together too interesting in the beginning. However, as it never weakens in that respect and Doris May is the best possible foil or mate for young Mr. MacLean, the reader can hardly do better than go and see for himself what the rest of the picture is about.

"Jack Straw"

Reviewed by M. A. Malaney.

THERE are many names that may be used by the exhibitor in advertising Paramount-Artcraft's "Jack Straw." First there is Robert Warwick, the star; then there is William C. DeMille, who directed the picture. The photoplay is based upon the stage play by W. Somerset Maugham, in which John Drew starred. But "Jack Straw" is not a wonderful story, though the talent used in making it has provided a pleasing entertainment.

In the first place the plot does not allow the star sufficient latitude to show his ability. Others in the cast take up more feet of film than Warwick. And it lacks genuine love interest. On the other hand, there are many clever comedy situations and a general atmosphere of fun throughout.

Mr. Warwick, as "Jack Straw" gives a mighty good interpretation of the part. He is a very natural actor and carries the role easily and convincingly. Carroll McComas as Ethel Parker Jennings and Chas. Ogle as her father are well cast. The work of Sylvia Ashton as Mrs. Parker Jenkins also stands out. She really has the biggest part in the picture, for it is around her social ambitions that the entire plot revolves. "Jack Straw" should please an average audience.

Cast.

Jack Straw	Robert Warwick
Ethel Parker Jennings	Carroll McComas
Mrs. Parker Jennings	Sylvia Ashton
Mr. Parker Jennings	Charles Ogle
Mrs. Wanley	Helene Sullivan
Holland	J. M. Dumont
Rose	Frances Parks
Sherlo	Lucien Littlefield
Count of Pomerania	Robert Brower

Story by W. Somerset Maugham.
Scenario by Olga Printzlau.
Length, 4,707 feet.

The Story.

Jack Straw, ice man, falls in love with Ethel Jennings, daughter of a hard-working clerk. Her mother has a penchant for clothes and longs for social standing. The family becomes wealthy through investment in oil lands in California, and immediately moves out there. Jack Straw leaves a note for Ethel, telling her not to marry and that he will follow the family. In California, Mrs. Jennings rents an estate from Mrs. Wanley, then insults her by refusing to associate with her. Mrs. Wanley, a widow, has a friend, Holland, who vows revenge on the newly rich woman.

Jack Straw turns up as a waiter and is persuaded by Holland to impersonate a nobleman as a hoax on Mrs. Jennings, who is ever eager to get acquainted with such people. Straw, seeing a chance to be near his sweetheart, takes the job, introducing himself as the Archduke of Pomerania. He is invited to spend a week at the Jennings home. There Ethel and the "archduke" fall deeply in love, but Straw reveals himself to her. Mrs. Wanley and Holland lose their nerve and confess the whole affair to Mrs. Jennings. She is shocked and threatens to jail Straw, but is compelled to carry out the hoax because that evening she is giving a great social affair for the "archduke" and cannot disappoint her guests. In the midst of the reception the ambossador from Pomerania appears and bows low before Straw.

Next morning Straw's baggage is thrown out on the lawn and he and Ethel plan to elope, when the ambassador arrives with his aides and documents from the Emperor, promising to restore his revenue, if he will keep himself and his democratic ideas out of Pomerania. Mrs. Jennings tells the ambassador that Straw is an impostor, but the latter tells her she is wrong, and Straw admits he really is the archduke. Of course, Mrs. Jennings is filled with pride, announces the engagement of her daughter to the nobleman, and exclaims that she knew all along that he was the archduke.

"My Lady's Garter"

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE opening of the Paramount-Artcraft production "My Lady's Garter," which is an adaptation of the Jacques Futrelle story, turns backward a few centuries to the period of Henry III of England, and presents the engrossing incident from which emanated the famous Order of the Garter. The pretty Countess of Salisbury, a favorite of the king, drops her garter on the floor of the ball room, and on the following day is presented with a jeweled substitute for the lost article, which is appropriated by the king as a souvenir of the lovely lady. All of this period is well done, and presented with the dignity and conventionality belonging to that period.

The story proper plunges into a thrilling pursuit of the garter, which is now a matter for the museum, and continues with a pleasing rapidity of action. The hero's secret is splendidly concealed, affording a pleasant diversion of mental exercise not always supplied in film productions. Adventure, mystery and suspense characterize the picture; and what will linger longest in the minds of those who happen to see it is the impersonation of Bruce Calhoun, a secret service agent, by Wyndham Standing. This character is welded into the romance of the story in such a way as to excite the curiosity of the average observer. Sylvia Breamer is attractive as the heroine, and the supporting cast is an excellent one. The production is wholesomely attractive, and develops among its other attributes, a comedy vein.

Cast.

Helen Hamilton	Sylvia Breamer
Henry Van Derp	Holmes E. Herbert
Meredith	Warner Richmond
Dexter	Paul Clerget
Brokaw Hamilton	Warren Cook
Mrs. Hamilton	Louise Derigney
Keats Gaunt	Charles Craig

Story by Jacques Futrelle.
Scenario by Lloyd Lonergan.
Length, 4,823 feet.

The Story.

"My Lady's Garter" supplies a situation which arises in the pursuit of a jeweled garter given by Henry III of England to the Countess of Salisbury, a favorite at his court, the garter having disappeared from its accustomed place in an art museum. The owner of the article enters the employ of the secret service for the purpose of trailing the stolen garter, and is pursued by other secret service men as the "Hawk," a notorious thief, believed to have the garter in his possession.

In the meantime the real "Hawk" is occupying an enviable social position at the side of Brokaw Hamilton, whose spoiled daughter, in trying to stage an elopement wtih a would-be-poet, has dropped her jewels out of the window to the wrong party, and discovered too late the thief had cheated her of an elopement. By chance, she meets Bruce Calhoun when, at an unwise moment, she swims out too far, and is rescued by him and taken into his yacht. The rescue results in the establishment of friendly relations between the young woman's family and Bruce, forming the beginning of a romance which ends in the marriage of the pair after the mystery of the stolen garter is cleared.

The incidents of the revelation of Bruce's identity, the arrest of the thief and the consequent discovery of the jewels afford a series of thrilling moments.

"His House in Order"

In Which Elsie Ferguson's Beauty and Charm Are Effectively Exploited by Paramount-Artcraft.

Reviewed by Mary Kelly.

SIR ARTHUR WING PINERO'S story, "His House in Order," as translated for the screen, falls into the class of one-star vehicles and can best be judged from that standpoint. It is an artful frame-work for Elsie Ferguson, and by very reason of the enforced somberness of its scenes, it serves to enhance her scintillating beauty.

As the young irresponsible daughter of a poor English rector, transplanted to the home of Filmer Jesson, M. P., where she serves first as governess, later becoming Filmer's wife, Miss Ferguson has opportunity for versatile acting, and succeeds in making three distinct, interesting characterizations. It is her performance essentially, rather than the story itself or the surrounding cast, that makes the greatest appeal. Through some fault in the directing, there is an effect of slowness almost inertia, in the progress of events. The sub-titles lack punch and originality.

"Order! Order!"

Holmes E. Herbert as Jesson is not always convincing, but rises to the occasion in his emotional scenes. The sets have been attractively designed, with apparent disregard of expense.

Cast.

Nina Graham	Elsie Ferguson
Filmer Jesson	Holmes E. Herbert
Hilary Jesson	Vernon Steele
Annabelle Jesson	Margaret Linden
Geraldine Ridgley	Marie Burke

Story by Sir Arthur Wing Pinero.
Scenario and Direction by Hugh Ford.
Length, 4,942 Feet.

The Story.

At the sudden death of Nina Graham's father she is left penniless and accepts a position as governess to Derek Jesson, small son of Filmer Jesson, M. P. Annabelle, his wife, is secretly in love with an army officer and is planning to confess all to Filmer thereupon leaving the country with her lover. Before she can accomplish this she is killed in a motor accident. Nina continues in the capacity of governess and finds her only comfort in the gloomy household to be the companionship of little Derek. Geraldine, the dead wife's sister, looks upon her with disfavor, but Filmer, observing the child's fondness for Nina, asks her to marry him.

They go to Paris on their wedding trip. While there, Nina meets Hilary, her husband's brother who, like herself, is in love with life and bent upon enjoying innocent pleasures. She asks her husband to take her to a fancy dress ball. He refuses, reminding her that Annabelle would never have cared for such frivolity. Hilary offers to take her. She goes with him, and wears a striking costume which wins the first prize, thereby giving her some publicity. Filmer is enraged at this, and plans an immediate return to England. After returning he grows more and more critical and finally she overhears him telling his brother that he has made a mistake in choosing her as his second wife. Nina, now thoroughly unhappy, prepares to leave, but before she does, some old love letters betraying Annabelle's infidelity fall into Filmer's hands. He senses his mistake in disregarding Nina's true love for a mistaken illusion, and an understanding between them is effected.

For the Sake of Keeping "His House in Order" he Married Her, But Reserved His Love for His First Wife. Then Disillusionment Came, and He Found He Had Been Worshipping an Illusion.

Exploitation Angles: Elsie Ferguson, her beauty and versatile accomplishments in this feature, furnishes the best material for advertising. Several of her most striking scenes can be exploited, such as the solo dance number in the prelude, her appearance at the Paris ball, her emotional moments when she finds her husband's affection waning.

"The Mad Woman"

Universal-Jewell Two-Reel Subject Features Nance O'Neil and Stellar Cast.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS is one of the most satisfying, from a dramatic standpoint, of the two-reel subjects made by the Stage Woman's War Relief and released by Universal. It features Nance O'Neil in the leading role, and she is supported by a cast which includes Alfred Hickman, Mildred Holland, Paul Gilmore, Ben Grauer and Tyrone Power. The story is a tense and gripping one, written by Howard E. Miller.

All of the scenes are laid in Russia, the heroine being a peasant girl of unusual beauty. Nance O'Neil, who has had a long and successful experience on the legitimate stage in tragic roles, has no difficulty in registering the same passionate emotion on the screen. Her sensitive, expressive features photograph with unusual clearness, and in every scene she acts with ease and authority. Alfred Hickman also plays the leading male role effectively and Tyrone Power has a few moments of appeal.

Though somber in its general tendency, the story has a happy ending of an unexpected sort. It tells of a peasant girl who married a Russian nobleman against the wishes of her parents. A son is born to them and the husband takes it away from her in order that it may be reared in luxury. The wife spends two years searching for the husband, intending to kill him. She is known as the "mad woman," her mind being partially clouded by grief. But when she finds the husband a reconciliation follows his promise to restore the son to her.

Exploitation Angles: Hammer away on Miss O'Neil, and hook up with the fact that she is now enjoying considerable success on Broadway. It might pay to run a teaser campaign with "What made her mad?" "Who made her mad?" "Would it make you mad?" and similar phrases. In a small town get all of the local merchants who advertise to come in with the same phrase after it has run for a few days, not in a hook-up page, but apparently in an effort to steal your thunder, then get back at them good-naturedly and say that it would make you mad to have your thunder stolen.

"Tarnished Reputations"

A VERY entertaining subject is this five-reel Pathe release, by Leonce Perret, entitled "Tarnished Reputations," despite some rather abrupt transitions and some melodrama that approaches burlesque. While the treatment is not all that could be hoped for at times, it is satisfactory in a general way and the number has some good surprise moments. The stage rehearsal was cleverly brought in and this, as well as other developments, keep the spectator in a pleasant anxiety about what is going to happen next. Even the faults of this subject have a tendency to save it from the obvious, which is altogether in its favor.

Dolores Cassinelli has many charming poses and does some good acting. She appears as Helen Sanderson, a country girl who comes to the city and has some unlooked for experiences. One of these is being haled into the Night Court and sentenced to one month in a reformatory for women. This incident, while startling in the extreme, is rendered plausible by the manner of its presentation and has undoubtedly happened to innocent girls in real life.

The story is one in which a country girl falls in love with an artist. They are separated and years pass before they are reunited in marriage. The theme is familiar, but has been dealt with in quite an original way. The atmosphere of the picture, in spite of certain depressing incidents, is cheerful on the whole.

The Cast.

Helen Sanderson	Dolores Cassinelli
Robert Williams	Albert Roscoe
George de Wenbourg	George Deneubourg
Judge Princeton	Ned Burton

Story by Leonce Perret.
Directed by Mme. Alice Blache.
Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

Helen Sanderson, a convent-reared girl in "Tarnished Reputations," is living in a village with her aunt. She meets a young artist from the city named Robert Williams, and during the course of their friendship poses for a painting, called "The Saint of the Lillies." The two are strongly attracted to each other, but just as the painting is finished the artist is called to New York hurriedly.

Helen reads his farewell letter tearfully, thinking the parting is final. But her aunt dies and she reads in a newspaper of her artist friend's great success with "The Saint of the Lillies." She resolves to go to the city and appeal to him to help her. When she arrives at Williams' home a party is in progress, and after one look through the windows, she turns away with a sore heart.

Many incidents befall Helen. She finds work, but meets with a predatory manager who practically drives her from her place. Then she is arrested and sent to a reformatory for women, though innocent of the charges brought against her. Through the visit she makes a real friend, who helps her to get on the stage. In time she meets Williams again. She at first snubs him, but later they find happiness.

"April Folly"

Paramount-Artcraft Presents Marion Davies in a Cosmopolitan Production of Light Melodrama.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THERE is associated in "April Folly" a star of undoubted beauty and a novel that ran as a serial last year in the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Marion Davies pleases the eye with personal charm and excellent taste in dress. There is an added pleasure in the backgrounds and settings provided. Particularly true is this of such large ensembles as the mask ball and the animated scenes on deck of an ocean liner. It is undeniable, however, that few novels succeed as plays, just as most plays fall down when novelized, and "April Folly" is no exception. It aptly illustrates that while emotional possibilities in the two arts may have something in common as to purpose, they differ widely because of the manner of telling. The inability of some producers to fully discern this fact leads in many cases to hardship for star performers who deserve, and might otherwise attain, unqualified success.

The author of "April Folly" may have pleased many readers by a personally conducted tour over familiar ground by clever narrative and bright comment. The problem of Marion Davies is a far different one. It is to present a story of intense interest, or of tender pathos, or of bright humor by illustrative action and revelation of character. There is in "April Folly" less attempt to adapt it to screen presentation than to adapt the screen to the illustration of a novel. The idea that a girl of intelligence would crowd herself in her trunk aboard a steamer, have herself locked in by a stewardess, endure the cramped position while the trunk remains aboard, is put on the wharves and is transported to its destination, an African farm, may do for the printed story. An individual reader might swallow it, an audience never. "April Folly," without that farce-comedy incident, provides fair entertainment.

The Story.

The "April Folly" of April Poole, young authoress, is one described in a story she reads to her publishers by whom she is regarded as an unusually clever writer of fiction. She assumes the role of heroine in her story and meets and falls in love with Kerry Sarle, her publisher in real life, at a mask ball. At the same ball she recognizes Robert Kenna, an arch crook, and detects him receiving a note concealed in a match. She picks up this note when he has dropped it and learns that he is after the famous Mannister diamond being brought to the city by Lady Diana. She next boards Lady Diana's train, finds her and cultivates an acquaintance. Lady Diana confides that she wishes to marry a poor artist. Will April carry the diamond to her cousin Clive on a South African farm? April consents. On board the steamer for South Africa, April, now posing as Lady Diana, makes the acquaintance of her hero of the masked ball and of the noted crook who is following the trail of the diamond.

The hero confesses his love, but is distressed to see Kenna enter April's stateroom. The crook is after the Mannister diamond. The hero hears a struggle within and enters in time to throw the villain out. April now confesses that she is not Lady Diana. Her distress is intensified by the arrival of the Captain and several pasengers. The Captain openly denounces April for admitting a man to her stateroom. To the hero later on comes a note begging him to take April's trunk to its destination.

A search of the ship follows, but April is not to be found. The hero sadly takes her baggage to Clive on an African farm. During his absence from the room in which it is placed Kenna and his accomplice enter and unlock the trunk. The jewel case is there, but no diamond. Instead is a note from April saying he has been fooled. While he is reading it she rises from the trunk and puts him under arrest. Such is the story April reads to Publisher Sarle. The embrace at the end she omits to read, but gives it to him personally in a confession of love.

"The Devil's Riddle"

Five-Reel Subject Features Gladys Brockwell in Story of Fair Dramatic Strength.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE story interest in this five-reel Fox production, "The Devil's Riddle," is stronger than the production itself. The plot has a certain growing strength, which carries the interest along through a series of quite ordinary situations. The work of the actors also picks up as the tale proceeds and the subject winds up with some creditable dramatic moments.

There is a strong contrast of scenes in this picture, which opens in a solitary shack in a remote district in Montana. A young girl is alone in the place, except for a kitten and a dog, and the food supply is low. Her stepfather, a drinking man, has been absent some time and is likely to remain away indefinitely, as a hard snowstorm is in progress. During the storm a young doctor seeks refuge in the cabin. The girl nurses and feeds him until he recovers from the effects of his exposure. He then leaves to bring aid, but is once more taken ill and meets a second girl at the home of her parents.

Interest remains with the girl in the cabin, played by Gladys Brockwell. The stepfather returns and she revolts against his brutal treatment. She joins a show troop and eventually reaches New York. Two love affairs intervene before she is reunited with the young doctor.

The number as a whole is produced with only average skill, but is strong in plot and continuity.

The Story.

Esther Anderson, in "The Devil's Riddle," is alone in a cabin in Montana, her stepfather being absent on a prolonged drinking spell in the distant town. A heavy snowstorm is raging and the food supply is running low. During the storm a young doctor, Jim Barnes, falls before the cabin door. The girl takes him in and cares for him until he recovers his strength. She feeds him a greater part of the remaining food.

Jim is alarmed when he learns that but little food remains and he determines to go for aid, promising to return in 48 hours. But he is again overcome by exposure and remains ill for days in the town at the home of a banker named Potts. Mrs. Potts likes Jim and wishes to arrange a match between him and her daughter, Arline.

While Jim is at the Potts' home Esther's stepfather returns to the cabin, drunk. She leaves after a scene with him and visits the town, thinking Jim has forgotten her. She joins a theatrical company and wins the attentions of the manager and the hatred of the leading lady. The manager is square with her, but Jim is made to imagine otherwise when he appears. Later Esther has a second love affair with a young artist in New York City, but her heart is still with Jim and he arrives just in time to save her from an unhappy marriage with the artist.

"The Road to Divorce“

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is much in this five-reel Universal picture, entitled "The Road to Divorce," to appeal to the critical observer, for it has been wrought with a great deal of skill and fine feeling, despite the slender character of the plot. Mary MacLaren, in the role of Mary Bird, Edward Peil as Dr. Shaw and Bonnie Hill as Pauline Dallas, present the familiar triangle situation in a new and pleasing manner. Their playing in each instance is free from exaggeration or sensationalism and the little story drives its message home very skilfully.

The title of the story does not seem well chosen, giving an unfortunate and misleading touch to what is really a delicate and charming theme, entirely free from suggestiveness. The opening scenes depict the marriage of Mary Bird to Dr. Myron Shaw, both residents of a small community. Their early married life swing along in a happy, though prosaic, manner. Two children are born to them and the young mother finds her life filled with domestic cares. Then comes Pauline Dallas, of Boston, to visit them, dressed in the height of fashion and remarkably free from care or responsibility. The husband is attracted to her and the matrimonial craft seems likely to upset until certain dramatic developments bring the husband to his senses.

The Story.

Mary Bird and Dr. Myron Shaw, in "The Road to Divorce," are two young people living in a New England farming colony. The doctor is just beginning his practice and they have loved each other from childhood. They are married early in the story and the event is celebrated in a quiet, happy manner by their relatives and friends.

Nothing occurs to disturb their first years, during which two children are born to the young wife. She has an increasing load of family cares and has small time for the feminine charms her husband craves. Neither think much of this altered condition of affairs until they receive a visit from Pauline Dallas, of Boston, who had been Mary's bridesmaid.

Pauline, still unmarried, is a fresh, good-looking girl, who has known little of responsibility. Her appearance attracts Dr. Shaw, and much of the entertainment of the guest falls to him because Mary is constantly busy. He is really in the first stage of a new love affair, though his life with Mary up to this time has been a happy one.

The crisis comes when Dr. Shaw and Pauline return from a boat ride and discover that Mary is out alone in another boat, having followed them when her housework was finished. A storm comes up and Mary is thought to be drowned. Her re-appearance in an exhausted state later serves to awaken Dr. Shaw's consciousness of his own deep regard for her.

"The Sporting Duchess"

Vitagraph Presents Alice Joyce in an Adaptation from the Well-Known Drury Lane Melodrama.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

"THE Sporting Duchess" is a racetrack melodrama derived from an English stage product of the same name and produced by Vitagraph. Like most of its kind, it is dominated throughout by a villain of the deepest dye. The entire action springs from his misdeeds. There are some appropriate settings in "The Sporting Duchess," many of them giving an atmosphere of English society and sporting life, and there is an intention shown to be elaborate in these details. This is especially true of the exteriors. They are more imbued with the spirit of the picture than some members of the cast. Many of the latter seem affected by the artificiality of their roles.

Alice Joyce, so perfectly at home as an American girl, is rather languid as a sporty member of the English aristocracy. Most of her support seems to be in the same mood. More "zip" in their performance would not have been amiss. G. V. Seyffertitz, as the arch villain, Major Mostyn, looks and acts his important part in true English style. His performance and those of Percy Marmont and William Turner are consistent.

The general value of "The Sporting Duchess" depends largely upon the drawing power of a rattling good title and the fame of the melodrama from which it was derived. As shown at the Broadway Theatre it held the attention without applause. It might be justly estimated as a fair entertainment with good billboard possibilities.

Cast.

The Story.

Muriel, the "Sporting Duchess" of Desborough, is a happy young wife and mother when she entertains Major Mostyn among her guests. Mostyn proceeds to ruin the young Duke at cards, causing him to pledge the winnings he expects from "Clipstone," already a favorite at the Derby. Mostyn enlists the services of Mrs. Delmaine, former flame of the Duke, to upset the confidence of his wife. She is too loyal. She finds Mrs. Delmaine in his arms, but forgives him. The Duke is told that his wife pardons him readily because she needs watching herself.

Mostyn seizes an opportunity to accompany the Duchess to London at night, and has her husband informed of what appears to be an elopement. Mostyn goes with the Duchess to a hotel and registers there as man and wife while she is engagd at the telephone. She permits him to accompany her to her room, where he forces a way in and enters upon a struggle with her. The Duke arrives in time to get compromising evidence.

At a divorce trial great stress is placed on the false testimony of a caddish friend of Mostyn, and the Duke is granted a decree. Mostyn next forces a public sale of "Clipstone." An old admirer of the Duchess buys in the horse. Mostyn corrupts the jockey who was to ride Clipstone, but his villainy is revealed by a girl he has ruined. He now attempts to. win the race by having his jockey strike Clipstone a foul blow near the finish. For this he is ruled off of the track. The Duchess is a winner when the race is given to Clipstone. When she attempts to visit her child, however, she is repulsed at the door. The confession of the caddish friend of Mostyn, however, clears her name, and she is restored to those she has always truly and loyally loved.

"Who's Your Servant?"

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THERE is excellent screen material in the Julian Johnson play "Who's Your Servant?" It contains a situation which, with careful handling, should result in as thrilling a melodrama as one could wish. The Robertson-Cole adaptation of the play, while it measures up in some respects, falls down in others. In ordinary entertainment value, however, it stands fairly well. Its appeal would have been greater if certain discrepancies had not appeared in its make-up, if its subtitles had been more carefully edited, both with regard to wording and spelling, and if its interior sets had been neutralized to a greater degree.

There is little if any fault to be found with the work of the players who jointly interpret well an interesting characterization. Lois Wilson as Madeleine Bancroft betrays personal charm and ability and Yukio Aoyama as the servant, Ito Natsume has a fine conception of a crafty character. Others of the cast are equally well suited to the parts allotted to them. The climax of the story, which is thrillingly melodramatic, atones in a measure for slight inconsistencies which occur early in the picture.

Length, 4,950 feet.

The Story.

The principal events of the play "Who's Your Servant?" center about the home of rear admiral Bancroft and his pretty daughter, Madeleine. The admiral has plans for a new type of battle cruiser, and one day when he opens the strong box where they are kept he finds them missing.

It so happens that Lieutenant Bruce, Madeleine's sweetheart, has by mistake left a letter which she has written him among the papers on the admiral's desk at headquarters. In the lieutenant's desire to regain it before the admiral discovers that he has been making love to his daughter without his consent, he climbs in at the window. On his way out he is seen by the sentry, and when the question of the theft of the plans is taken up, the finger of suspicion is pointed at Bruce, and with other complications, which appear to strengthen the evidence against him, a case is framed up with the help of a rival.

Madeleine, in the belief that Ito, the house servant, has stolen the plans, takes advantage of the fact that he is in love with her, and decides to sacrifice herself so far as to accept an invitation to Ito's room that evening. Ito shows her the plans, which he says he will sell for big money, with which they may elope, and in a struggle which ensues, in which Madeleine gains possession of the papers while she tries to hold off Ito's embraces with a dagger, they both fall to the floor, and Ito is stabbed to death. The supposition that he has committeed "hari-kari" avoids any further investigation, the plans are returned to their owner, and Lieutenant Bruce receives the consent of the admiral to marry Madeleine.

"The Confession"

Reviewed by L. B. Skeffington.

A MELODRAMA of the thriller type, but with a theme that lifts it to the plane of a real feature, "The Confession" presents Henry B. Walthall to splendid advantage and is a production abounding in human interest throughout its entire length. That a priest cannot, under the most tremendous moral pressure, violate the secrets of the confessional is the theme around which the story revolves.

Mr. Walthall is cast as the priest, Father Bartlett. Attired in the black robe of his calling he stands out as a striking character. The simple, lovable qualities of the man are sensed rather than visualized by his acting or the sub-titles.

The interest is unusually well sustained. The audience is kept guessing as the story approaches the strong climax. The priest knows that his own brother is innocent of the murder, another man having confessed. Yet he refuses to speak. While the center of interest is Mr. Walthall in the role of the priest, other parts are well taken. Francis McDonald as Tom Bartlett and Margaret Landis as his sweetheart are excellent. Dumont is a good villain.

The Story.

When the story of "The Confession" opens Father Bartlett is in the rectory. The sexton is worried about Tom Bartlett, the priest's brother, as a storm is raging. He places a lantern at the gate to guide him, and Tom's mother waits for him with a light in the kitchen window. Tom is drinking with Jim Creighton, brother of his sweetheart, in a saloon. An argument ensues when Jim tells Tom that he has had enough to drink. They engage in a fight outside of the saloon. Tom drops his gun, which is picked up by the lurking Dumont, who shoots Creighton.

In the meantime Kate Creighton goes to the priest and tells him that she had broken her engagement with Tom because of his drinking. Her brother, she says, had told Tom that if he did not stop drinking he would break his neck.

Dumont then comes to the priest and confesses that he killed a man. He says he did so because the man wronged his sister. He swears to make reparation if the crime falls upon another man and is absolved. Tom comes to the rectory and says that he has been accused of the crime. Although the priest knows his brother is innocent, he does not make any move to prevent his arrest and on the stand refuses to reveal what Dumont told him in the confessional. Tom is sentenced to death.

The sexton organizes a party to get Tom out of jail, but the priest asks the men to leave the matter in the hands of a Greater Judge. They disperse. The priest visits his brother in his cell. Tom chokes him and succeeds in making his escape. He next encounters Dumont and a fight occurs, but Dumont knocks Tom senseless and flees. Tom escapes to the Canadian Northwest, and the priest follows. Before he finds his brother the latter is arrested by the Northwest Mounted and returned to the states.

The priest finds Dumont crazed with fear and saves him from drowning after he jumps from a cliff. The rescued man promises to tell the truth and the two start for the states. Tom's sweetheart and mother go to the governor, but he refuses to interfere. The priest and Dumont arrive at the jail just as Tom is led to the scaffold. Dumont drops dead before he can confess. The warden orders the execution to proceed, but just then two guards find the confession in the clothes of Dumont. Just as the trap is about to be sprung the confession clears Tom and he is freed.

"Silk Husbands and Calico Wives"

House Peters in "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives"; Made by Equity and Distributed by First National.

Reviewed by Elmer H. Mayer.

The story runs along smoothly in a simple manner and is easy to follow. It concerns the affairs and rise of a small town lawyer, who becomes famous in the big city as a result of his keen perception of human nature. His greatest source of worry is his "calico wife," who likes to remain old-fashioned and cook her own meals rather than waste her time with other women's husbands. How the husband is brought to the realization of his wife's true love forms the basis of a photoplay out of the ordinary and very true to life.

The production is exceptionally clean and free from sex problems, and the greatest punch comes in the sub-titles. The palace home and gardens are fine examples of scenic beauty. The only apparent drawback in the film is the poor photography, especially of the interior sets.

House Peters, as the lawyer, handles his role with skill. Mary Alden as the old-fashioned wife plays her part with a sympathetic touch that reaches the hearts of all who watch her. Vincent Serrano as the "spider" and Eva Novak as the "baby vamp" lend much to the success of the production. Mildred Reardon fills a small part well, and is very pleasing to the eye. All in all, the picture is an ideal photoplay production for almost any kind of a playhouse.

The Story.

Deane Kendall, the leading character of "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives," is a brilliant young dreamer who comes to the sleepy village of Harmony for the purpose of studying law. Among the remainder of Harmony's meagre population is Edith Beecher, a pretty court stenographer.

Kendall gets his chance when he pleads the case of a man who has killed an ardent admirer of his wife's, whom he had forbidden her to see. Through his masterful handling of the matter he wins the case. Before going to New York, where he thinks there is a bigger field, he weds Edith. They reach the city, but their love begins to wane. "Partners of the Night"

Goldwyn and Rex Beach Offer a Clever Detective Story with an Element of Social Criticism.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

ADAPTED from the story of Mary Ryan by Leroy Scott, "Partners of the Night" openly favors a humanitarian movement in dealing with criminals. A chance to reform is accorded them, not by the court, but by the police who arrest them. The story also places in melodramtic spotlight the collusion of police and criminals. The Chief of Detectives prefers to have graft handed to him in some public place, where no one will suspect. He therefore goes to a cabaret dance and sits down with a well-known gambler and a notorious con man for a social evening. This first product from the hands of "Eminent Authors" is, however, made interesting through an unusually fine selection of types, nearly all of them of distinct personality and of unqualified ability. Their performance and good taste in settings more than offset some obvious inconsistencies of production.

Top-notch interpretations are those of E. Corrigan, Chief of Detectives, Pinna Nesbit as Mary Regan, William B. Davidson as Robert Clifford, Mario Majeroni as Mary's crooked uncle and William Ingersoll as Police Commissioner. This strong group carries the story over through force of characterization. Flawless camera work and capable assembling finish off a satisfactory product. "Partners of the Night" has a humanizing motive and the sum of its values class it as good entertainment. It was so regarded by a large crowd at the Strand Theatre.

The Story.

"Partners of the Night" are successful criminals and Bradley, Chief of Detectives. This is discovered by Detective Clifford in the Mary Regan case. He has become interested in Mary during a voyage from Europe. He believes there is in her the makings of a fine woman. He traps her and her uncle in their apartment when they are about to get away with an enormous sum of money, stolen by a bank teller in love with Mary. Clifford holds them in duress over Sunday and meanwhile spots his chief trying to collect hush money. Clifford takes them, not to headquarters, but to the bank, where the young teller has opportunity to make restitution. Mary and her uncle are set free with something to think about. Clifford has refused a liberal offer to divide the spoil and has put them on their honor to go straight. The chief of detectives is infuriated.

Clifford is put in charge of a spectacular raid on a gambling establishment. There he is framed in a rough struggle, ten new notes of a hundred dollars each thrust in his pocket. He is accused of double-crossing by one of the gamblers and the money found on him in the presence of Police Commissioner Thorne. He is thereupon dismissed from the service. But Thorne is in sympathy with the young detective's methods and arranges with him and with Mary Ryan to crush the biggest crook of them all, Chief Bradley.

Bradley has arranged for Mary to pass Commissioner Thorne an envelope containing a bribe at a cabaret dance, and has promised the reporters a sensation. They get it. The envelope is passed by Mary and an accusation is made by Bradley, but the crooked chief is caught in his own toils. The envelope contains nothing but blank paper. His downfall is assured when Mary snatches a big cigar from the chief's pocket. It contains a large sum that had been just handed him by a notorious gambler. Now the Commissioner springs a spectacular arrest. All the crooks are caught. Mary completes her redemption by accepting Clifford as a partner of the day for life.

Detective Story with a Compelling Theme and Well-Known Cast of Players.

Exploitation Angles: Work hard on the fact that this is a Mary Regan story. Use the leads, but make the story your chief offering, for it carries a strong appeal.

"The Veiled Marriage"

Hallmark Presents Anna Lehr and Ralph Kellard in Production of Ordinary Merits.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IT is not necessary for a situation to be healthy in order to make it interesting. And we are even prone to become interested in plots that present false or overdrawn ideas of life. "The Veiled Marriage," one of the Hallmark Famous Directors Pictures, featuring Anna Lehr and Ralph Kellard, is based on a situation which, while it is not imposible, is at the same time rather improbable. At least it is far enough removed from the average methods of living to fail to be convincing.

Anna Lehr and Ralph Kellard do good work; and had the production been more carefully assembled; if more skill had been evident in the cutting of the picture, the general effect would have been much better. As the production nears the climax, however, the spirit of romance prevails, and the earlier shortcomings are apt to be forgotten.

Cast.

Margaret Fallon	Anna Lehr
John Browning	Ralph Kellard
Widow O'Hara	Dorothy Walters
Fred Peyton	John Charles
Jimmy Dolan	Frank J. Murdock
David Fallon	William Carr

Story by J. L. Burke.
Scenario by John Glavey.
Direction by Keanan Buel.
Length, About 4,500 Feet.

The Story.

The central figures in "The Veiled Marriage" are Margaret Fallon and John Browning, together with the busy villain Fred Peyton. The plot treats of a strange complication of affairs, in which fate shuffles two of its victims into the same channel.

Margaret Fallon lives with her father in a modest apartment, worshipped at a distance by Jimmy Dolan, "a thorn in the side of the police force." John Browning, a young man in easy circumstances and much addicted to the use of liquor, is a friend of Fred Peyton, a member of society usually mentioned in the list of "those present." Peyton, meeting Margaret Fallon by chance one day, becomes a frequent visitor at her home. One evening when they are returning from a dinner, a gas explosion overturns their automobile, and temporarily blinds Margaret. Her father, who has come to the door to look for her, is also injured.

One day when Jimmy Dolan enters the Fallon home he finds Peyton assaulting Margaret, jumps at conclusions, and exhorts from him a promise to marry her. Peyton schemes to get Browning under the influence of liquor, and erases the name of his bride to be from the marriage certificate which he has just procured, replacing it with that of Margaret Fallon. He then sends for Margaret and the marriage ceremony is performed, which makes the girl the wife of a man she has never seen. The next day

Peyton covers his tracks by telling Browning that he insisted on being married while he was under the influence of liquor.

At the death of Margaret's father she is forced to look for a position, and happens to find employment as John Browning's private secretary. Finally the matter is cleared up, and Browning finds that the wife from whom he is seeking a divorce is none other than Margaret. Peyton is shot and killed by a former mistress.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines:

A Story on One of Life's Strangest Problems—Marriage.

Exploitation Angles: Make most of your play on the stars, but use the director to work in with the "Famous Directors" idea. Offer it as "A story of the life you read about but never see," and make this the keynote of your exploitation, pulling up the forced marriage for your chief advertising appeal.

"The Silkless Bank Note"

First of William J. Flynn Detective Films for Republic Evidences Careful Preparation.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE first of the series of two-reel detective stories for Republic by William J. Flynn, former Chief of the United States Secret Service, and now Director of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, is an interesting, well-made production, carefully directed, capably acted, and subtitled with professional neatness. Wilson Mizner, in making the scenario, has encompassed the salient points of the story without bringing in unnecessary detail. It also contains a wealth of human interest, and fine character conception. The Irish terrier, whose canine faithfulness furnishes the clue by which the detective trails the body of his master to the bottom of the dock, is a pathetic figure which would go far toward assuring the success of the picture, even if the story had not been as carefully constructed as it is. Herbert Rawlinson in the role of Detective Arnold, or "Lightning," as he is known, does a neat piece of work, alert yet unobtrusive in his methods. The picture was directed by J. Gordon Cooper and Carl Harbaugh.

The Story.

"The Silkless Banknote" concerns the trailing of a counterfeiter to his haunts, and his eventual arrest. The story opens in the offices of the detective bureau, and shows the method by which headquarters keeps track of its men. The scene then shifts to a narrow street in the slums, where a man who tries to pass a counterfeit bill is given a run by the police, and is wounded and finally evades them, finding shelter at the headquarters of the master counterfeiter. When he appeals to the counterfeiter to go and get him a doctor, he is killed for his pains, placed in a barrel and dropped over the edge of the pier under the cloak of night.

The little Irish terrier who appears with patches of hair clipped from his coat, suggesting the origin of the hair used in place of silk in the counterfeit notes, scratches his way out of the den in search of his master. Detective Arnold, discovering the dog sitting on the side of the pier looking into the water, finally locates the body of the dead man in the barrel. He orders a truckman to drive out of sight with the barrel, and the counterfeiter's den is easily found by following the dog, who goes back to where he believes his master has returned.

Arnold gains admission while the counterfeiter is off his guard, arriving in time to save the dog from meeting the same fate as his master. The police, notified by messenger, reach the scene in short time, the counterfeiter along with Arnold is taken into custody. The next morning an empty cell greets the guard, who is then made aware of the fact that Arnold is a secret service man and not a criminal. The dog finds a home with the detective, who expresses the hope that he may be as faithful to him as he was to his former master.

"The Adventurer"

THE critical review of this latest William Farnum production appeared on page 1650 of the issue of March 6.

Cast.

Don Caesar De Bazan	William Farnum
Maritana	Estelle Taylor
Don Jose	Paul Cazeneuve
Lazarillo	Kenneth Casey
Queen Isabel	Dorothy Drake
King Charles II	Harry Southard
Captain of the Guards	Pat Hartigan
Marquis de Rotunda	James Devine
Marchioness de Rotunda	Sadie Radcliffe

Story by E. Lloyd Sheldon.
Suggested by Victor Hugo Drama.
Direction by J. Gordon Edwards.
Length, Six Reels.

The Story.

Don Ceasar De Bazan, in "The Adventurer," is a reckless young nobleman of Old Spain, proud of his title, the Count of Vencia, and loyal to his king, Charles II. Don Ceasar is penniless, but stout of heart and ready for any adventure. Early in the story he falls in with Maritana, a gypsy dancing girl, whose chief ambition in life is to go to Madrid and dance before the Queen.

Maritana is insulted at a wayside inn by a drunken brute, and Don Ceasar wins her love by the gallant manner in which he comes to her rescue. They proceed to Madrid, where the girl wins quick recognition and is summoned to dance before the Queen. She also attracts the attention of King Charles, who desires to win her love.

Don Jose, the prime minister, who secretly loves the Queen, desires to procure Maritana for the King. To accomplish this he schemes to marry her to a nobleman in order that she may enter the court. Don Jose selects Don Ceasar De Bazan, who has been imprisoned for fighting a duel in Holy Week, and is under sentence of death.

Don Ceasar agrees to marry the woman selected for him by the prime minister, though she is heavily veiled. After the ceremony he is led out to be shot by the guards, but escapes death through the work of a boy he had befriended. He is presumably buried alive, but escapes to revenge himself upon both the King and the prime minister. Later the King recognizes his services and he wins royal approval. Maritana, who was the veiled bride, now becomes his wife in fact.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines:

William Farnum in Another Powerful Role—That of Don Caesar De Bazan—a Penniless Adventurer of Noble Birth.

The Noblemen Do Their Best to Get the Penniless Adventurer's Sweetheart Away from Him—He Fought Like a Real Man and Even Though They Imprison Him He Wins Her in the End.

Exploitation Angles: Play up Farnum, but don't let your patrons overlook the fact that this story is based on the tale which gave "Don Caesar de Bazan" to the dramatic stage and "Maritana" to the light opera repertoire. Many persons will be interested in Don Caesar, who will not care for the non-committal title. Dwell upon the strongly romantic flavor of the story and upon the unusual opportunity it offers Farnum.

COMMENTS

THE MINT SPY (Fox).—A Mutt and Jeff animated, in which they play detectives, snooping around after violators of the prohibition law. They round up one offender with a barrell of booze in hiding. This will bring many smiles.

THE SOUR VIOLIN (Fox).—A Mutt and Jeff animated in which the pair run a music store. Jeff gets into a fight with two cats and a lady customer thinks the noises come from a new phonograph record. An amusing satire, full of the usual knockabout action.

..THE FIVE DOLLAR PLATE (Republic).—The second of the William Flynn detective stories, in which Herbert Rawlinson is starring, is almost as good as the first number. In fact, by some it may be considered better. It has a wealth of human interest, and affords Detective "Lightning" Arnold a fascinatingly heroic role. A man who has been imprisoned for implication in the manufacture of counterfeit money is totally blind when released from prison. His little daughter, through the kindness of the detective, comes to meet him at the prison gate, and becomes her father's helper at the newsstand, where he is placed by Arnold. Through his friendship for the little girl and her father, the detective is able to trace the gang of counterfeiters when they negotiate for the Harrison plate, the whereabouts of which is known only to the released convict. A spectacular raid occurs at the climax of the story.

MONKEY SHINES (Christie Comedy).—Eddie Barry, Earl Rodney and Helen Darling are the leading actors in a lively farce that shows the effects of the transference of monkey glands to the human animal. A decrepit old gentleman takes the treatment and gets so full of pep that he leaves his wife, goes the rounds of the cabarets and flirts with all the chorus girls. His better half also takes the treatment and becomes as full of youth and vigor as her husband. The comedy is amusing in a slap-dash fashion and is well acted.

LIGHT HEARTS AND LEAKING PIPES (Rainbow).—A two-reel comic, with a lot of amusing new business and some laughable situations. The "noodle" picture is a good stunt, though something similar to this has been done before. The plumbers' experiences are funny, and there is an exceptionally good climax, in which three characters climb a tall eucalyptus tree, which is brought down with an axe.

RAISE THE RENT (Rolin-Pathe).—A "Snub" Pollard comic number based on a situation that has a live interest just now. He and his young wife give up their bungalow and allow another couple to move in. Then it develops that they can't find another home, and must live in an improvised tent. One of the funny scenes in this is the general panic that results when a real estate agent puts a "For Rent" sign for a few moments on a vacant house.

THE BLACKSMITH (Arrow).—A Hank Mann comedy which is rather savory in spots. The daughter of the blacksmith elopes with the blacksmith's helper, and in the barber shop which she has inerited a series of amusing incidents happen through the incompetence of the barber. This comedy is capable of being trimmed into fairly acceptable shape. It contains a great deal of the kind of horseplay that the average audience likes.

DEAD EYE JEFF (Fox).—A Mutt and Jeff animated number. The scenes are in a circus, where Mutt becomes a lion tamer and Jeff has plenty troubles of his own. The subject is typically amusing.

HER PRIVATE HUSBAND (Sunshine).—A two-reel comic, featuring Chester Conklin, Alice Davenport and others. This opens with scenes in a restaurant and later moves to a theatre, where some amusing burlesque scenes are staged. The number contains some entertaining new business, though most of the action is the conventional sort.

Annette Kellerman in New Role.

Sol Lesser announces the Annette Kellerman picture will have a new type of heroine. "Annette Kellerman," said Mr. Lesser, "assumes the character of a fair athlete who can sprint, box, swim, dive, climb and is perfectly at home on any piece of acrobatic apparatus.

"In the role of Annette Van Buren Miss Kellerman is building up a personality which is bound to find favor with audiences. As a comedienne she has shown great promise under the direction of Chester M. Franklin. The story which she is producing embodies comedy, built on a framework of gripping drama. Gowns of the latest model, Parisian importations, will be utilized in arraying the star in her depiction of a daughter of wealth."

TWO kinds of electric current are produced commercially—the direct current and the alternating current. The direct current is usually found in the downtown districts of our larger cities: 110 or 220 volts, 2-wire; 220 volts, 3-wire (or Edison 3-wire, as it is usually called), and 500 volts, 2-wire or 3-wire.

By Edison or 3-wire is meant a circuit or 3 wires with, say, 220 volts between the middle (or neutral) and either outside wire and 220 volts between the two outside wires. This may be 550 volts across the outside wires and 250 between the outside and neutral wires.

In the case of the alternating current we have not only the various voltages of 110-220-440-500 volts, but in addition the current may be single, two or three phase and 60-25 or 40 cycles.

Voltage Too High.

These voltages are too high for the operation of the projection arc, which requires only 50 to 60 volts at the arc, and therefore some intermediate device is required to reduce this to the proper value for the operation of the arc. In many cities, however (and this is particularly true of the outlying districts), direct current is not available, and it is necessary not only to reduce the voltage available to that required by the arc lamp, but in addition it is also necessary to transform the alternating current before an arc light can be secured satisfactory for projection purposes.

In the early days of the motion picture when the electric current was first used for the arc lamp, the proper reduction in voltage was secured by using a resistance inserted in the circuit and either a direct or alternating current arc used, depending on the kind of current available.

This method was wasteful of energy and the alternating current arc was unsatisfactory in operation, being unsteady and of low candlepower. Since alternating current was the only kind available in many cases, the first efforts were directed toward reducing the energy losses existing in the rheostat and resulted in the design of the G. E. Compensarc.

The Type A Compensarc.

The type A compensarc is a transforming device by means of which it is possible to connect an alternating current arc projection machine directly to any alternating current source of supply, and obtain results which are comparable to those of the direct current arc.

This device consists of a transformer core and coils, rigidly supported in a cast iron frame, making a construction which is both substantial and convenient of operation.

Four cable loads are brought through the top casting. Two of these are connected to the source of supply—the other two to the projection machine.

By means of a switch handle projecting through the top casting, variation in the arc current through a considerable range is possible. At no time in the adjustment of this switch is the current to the lamp interrupted, and therefore lamp flicker is eliminated.

Will Not Burn Out.

The compensarc complies with the standards of the National Board of Fire Underwriters. Because of its design characteristics it cannot be damaged by overheating, even though the lamp carbons be left in contact with each other indefinitely.

This device is designed with low current densities, and the best grade of steel is used in its construction, insuring minimum loss and high efficiency.

Because of these features, the cost of operation is low.

Because of the high power factor of the device, power companies do not object to having it connected to their service lines.

Type A compensarcs can be built in any size and for operation on supply circuits of any voltage and frequency. Standard sizes are as follows: 2 KVA, 110 volt, 60 cycle, 30-40-60 amperes; 2½ KVA, 220 volt, 60 cycle, 30-40-60 amperes.

G. E. Motor Generator Sets.

The development of arc lamps for projection purposes proved that the direct current lamp was steadier and more efficient from a light-giving standpoint. Most of the current available was alternating, so it was necessary to provide some electrical device to not only maintain the proper voltage at the arc, but also to change from alternating to direct current.

Furthermore, most theatres of importance installed two projection machines in each booth, so that it was necessary to provide electrical equipment to operate one lamp continuously with reserve capacity to carry two lamps during the period of "change over" in order to prevent interruptions between reels.

To meet all these requirements the General Electric Company designed A. C. to D. C. And D. C. to A. C. Motor Generator Sets, consisting of: and A. C. or D. C. motor mounted on a sub-base with and connected by a rigid coupling to an especially designed direct current generator.

Design Based on Requirements.

The design of these outfits are based on certain specific requirements of the electric arc, modified by the limitations imposed by the alternating current supply. Briefly, the results desired are

(1) A steady arc; (2) a white light free from discoloration; (3) current must stay at set value; (4) current at arc easily raised or lowered; (5) arc strike and settle down quietly.

(a) The outfit must be as simple as possible; (b) must stand overloads without damage; (c) must be quiet in operation; (d) must successfully operate two arcs at the same time; (e) must be easily and quickly repaired in emergency; (f) must not be affected by changes in current conditions outside itself.

This new Motor Generator differs materially from the former type in that the lamps operate in series instead of in multiple when changing over or dissolving the pictures.

The new type of motor generator has been developed for two reasons: First, to improve the overall efficiently when operating two lamps, and second, to produce a machine which is more easily handled by an inexperienced operator, particularly on two-lamp operation.

General Mechanical Construction.

These equipments are built in three standard sizes, for 35-50 and 70 amperes, each machine capable of operating two lamps in series for a short period of time. These two lamp outfits are intended for use on two or more picture machines where it is desired to operate two machines for a brief interval, in changing over the picture from one machine to another to give a dissolving effect.

There is, however, no objection to putting a greater number of arcs in series so long as only one arc is burned continuously and not more than two lamps are burning at the same time. In this manner the two picture machines and the spot light could be operated from the motor generator with the understanding that only two of them will be used at the same time and the same current is taken by each lamp.

These standard sizes will meet the requirements of practically all picture theatres except, perhaps, the very largest, in which case the other requirements to be met would doubtless require the use of a special machine.

The smallest outfit for 35 ampere arcs is only suitable for the smaller theatres, as our experience over a number of years shows that the outfit for 2-50 ampere lamps is preferable, even though the requirements at the time the set is sold may be somewhat less than this.

A 100 ampere size is not listed, but several have been built and sold with entirely satisfactory results, so that this larger size can be listed if desired.

Electrical Characteristics.

These motor generators are built with special generators and standard induction motors. Those mounted on a cast iron subbase and connected by a rigid coupling, forming a three-bearing set.

These machines are designed to give an open circuit voltage of approximately 180 volts which drops to 60 volts when one lamp is burning. The two lamps are connected in series with the generator and without any steadying resistance.

Short circuiting switches are provided to close the circuit around the lamp that is not burning, and these being connected ahead of the lamp disconnecting switches allow the lamps to be trimmed without opening the circuit.

When the second arc is struck, the machine automatically increases voltage until there is generated a terminal voltage of approximately 120 volts when both lamps are burning.

The machine voltage accommodates itself to the length of arc drawn, so that it will give practically the same current

Announcing

THE NEW

AMERICAN PROJECTOSCOPE

MOTOR-DRIVEN

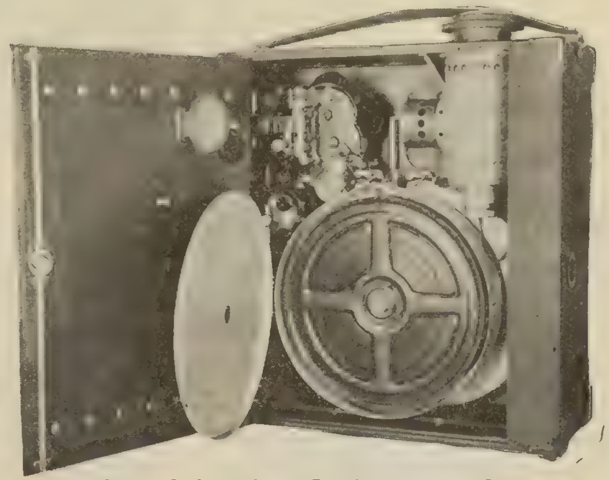
The American Projectoscope, known throughout the film trade as "The Portable Motion Picture Projecting Machine Without An Apology"—the most perfect type of portable projector yet put on the market, is now obtainable with a motor-drive. It is approved and endorsed by the foremost projection experts of the industry.

IDEAL FOR SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES

Here is the ideal machine for showing motion pictures in schools and churches. Small, light, fool-proof. Film can be stopped at any point. Run either forward or backward. No experience necessary. Anyone can operate it.

FOR SELLING MERCHANDISE

The American Projectoscope is perfect as a commercial projector. Equip your salesmen with rolls of commercial film showing your product in process of manufacture or in operation; provide them with American Projectoscopes and watch the orders roll in. "Seeing is believing." Your salesmen will be able to "show" prospects. They can demonstrate your motion pictures in a customer's office. Show pictures on a wall, window curtain, even on the ceiling. Thousands are in use for this purpose.



View of American Projectoscope Open

FOR FILM INSPECTION

Directors, film editors, etc., find the American Projectoscope without an equal for inspecting films in the laboratory. It permits you to stop the film anywhere. Run it backward or forward. No possibility of further mistakes in titles or scenes. Inspect any portion of a film at your leisure.

EASILY PORTABLE—RUNS FILM FORWARD OR BACKWARD

The new American Projectoscope, motor-driven, weighs but 25 pounds. In the hand-driven model the weight is but 20 pounds. It carries like a suitcase. The fact that films can be run either forward or backward, or stopped and held stationary on the screen makes the Projectoscope an especially desirable machine for demonstration purposes. Permits a salesman to lecture any point of a film, to turn back to any point desired.

BACKED BY GUARANTEE—REASONABLE IN PRICE

The strongest kind of a guarantee goes with each and every American Projectoscope. The thousands already in use have all given satisfaction plus. Houses that began with two or three Projectoscopes are now ordering enough to equip all their sales force. The Projectoscope is reasonable in price. Write for descriptive literature and prices.

"NEWMAN" Brass Frames and Rails

Read What Josiah Pearce & Sons Says About Our Goods

Gentlemen:

Now that you have completed equipment in our new theatres here in New Orleans, and Houston, Texas, we want to take this means of expressing to you our appreciation of the manner in which we have done business with you, also as to the character of your goods. You have, without exception filled our orders just as promptly as we could ever expect and probably quicker than we had anticipated, and the fact of your having supplied us with brass frames and various other equipment in our fifteen theatres is evidence that we are pleased with your goods, for they are the most attractive, durable and practical that we have as yet found.

We wish you good luck in the prosecution of your work.
Yours very truly,

from one very short arc to two long arcs in series.

Wiring Scheme Is Simple.

This results in a very simple scheme of wiring, since the panel containing the instruments and field rheostats can be placed in any convenient part of the booth, while the two individual short circuiting switches can be mounted conveniently on the stand of the picture machine.

The very flexible source of current behind the lamps tends to keep the arc quiet and at the same intensity which allows the picture to be faded in or out, without any change of the light on the screen.

The design is such that the current at the arc can be varied by the operator over a wide range by means of the field rheostat. This scheme of operation is practically foolproof, as the operator has only to remember to open and close his short circuiting switch when his carbons are frozen.

Since the motor is a standard Induction Motor, it can be supplied for any standard frequency or supply voltage.

The smallest size multiphase equipments require no starting device, on the two larger sizes motor starters are usually required by the local power companies and are supplied as a part of the complete equipment.

Method of Operation.

On open circuit this machine generates a voltage of approximately 180 volts. The first arc is struck in the usual manner. The second lamp is short circuited by means of a switch.

When ready to change over to the second lamp the carbons are closed together until they touch. The short circuiting switch is then opened and the carbons gradually separated, the machine voltage automatically increasing to take care of the added resistance of the arc maintaining the current practically constant.

To shut off the first lamp the carbons are gradually brought together until they touch and the short circuiting switch closed. Machine voltage will automatically decrease as the first lamp carbons are brought together and the current will remain constant.

TransVerteR

No Vibration in the De Vry!

YOU can balance a De Vry on a tea cup and it produces motion pictures as if shot from a stone wall.

You can put the De Vry on a table, a chair—on any non-rocking object with four legs or none, and it does perfect work. It's in a class by itself in this, as in all other respects. See it and know for yourself.

Preview with a De Vry!

A projector which stands up to that test is what professionals need for previewing.

To a Film Exchange, also, a De Vry is invaluable.

We ask that you let us give you a De Vry demonstration. Say the word and our representative from one of 60 cities will come and show you—in your own office.

There's nothing like the De Vry. So light! So handy! So compact! Remember, a poor projector kills a good film. So see the De Vry before you decide. It is endorsed by the best and most successful people in the motion-picture profession.

A letter, or the coupon below filled out and signed, lets you see for yourself. Why not send the coupon today?

THE MAN WHO DRAWS UPON HIS IMAGINATION FOR HIS FACTS HAS A HARD TIME WHEN HE TRIES TO BORROW MONEY!

The truth pays! It always has, and it always will.

The RITCHEY poster is the greatest motion picture poster that has ever been developed. That is the truth! The absolute truth, the plain truth, verbally unvarnished! We know that it is true, because we know that every detail that goes into its making receives the entire attention of the greatest poster advertising experts in the world. Their efforts, under a perfectly co-ordinating leadership, have made the RITCHEY poster what it is, the greatest advertising medium ever developed, the most persuasive ticket seller ever conceived!

They are as necessary to the exhibitor as a lens is to a fine camera. They attract the public, they convince the public and they sell the public.

These truths the exhibitor knows and he demonstrates them every time he counts the receipts that RITCHEY posters bring in.

For after all, money talks truthfully, and the financial returns from RITCHEY posters become an unanswerable argument for their constant use.

A William S. Hart Production

Why? Because it's the story he's wanted to do for three years. And now, producing with his own company, he has let nothing stand in the way of making "The Toll Gate" his greatest work.

A wonderful story, six months in the making, sixteen hundred miles for locations. No expense, no trouble, no detail, no time spared.

That's why!

A UNIVERSAL SPECIAL ATTRACTION

"This is the topnotcher of Western screen drama. It has enough pathos and human appeal to fill a dozen more reels. Star, director and story make it an irresistible attraction. Women will admire this picture; in fact, every one will like it—and want to see it."—The Billboard.

NEVER, in our recollection, has any Western drama, nor many dramas of any nature, received such absolutely unanimous praise from every well-known critic in the land as this marvelously human production by Jack Ford, starring Harry Carey. Here is a picture that is just as certain to please every single person in your audience as the sun is certain to rise tomorrow morning. Put on your hat, or 'phone, right now and nail this wonderful picture. This is real entertainment.

Dorothy Phillips

in

Three Proven Successes

THERE is a tendency among the smaller theatres of the country to believe that a so-called big production costs more than it is worth.

THIS may be true when the production has not been proven—but when a picture, no matter how big, has an unbroken record of successes in all the large cities of the country it is only common sense that it should succeed in exactly the same proportion in a small town. As a matter of fact, the small theatre has much the better of it, because it waits—and because it gets the benefit of all those big town exploitation methods which have been shown to be practical.

THIS fact is being proven every day in the case of these three Dorothy Phillips pictures, the first two having been directed by Allen Holubar, who directed that amazing triumph, "The Heart of Humanity," and the other by Rollin Sturgeon. Every small theatre in the land which has played these three, or any one of the three, has been tremendously successful. Ask us for our testimonials to this effect—they will amaze you. See your nearest Universal-Jewel exchange today for exploitation ideas that have brought in the money on these pictures.

UNIVERSAL

"The GREAT AIR ROBBERY,"

READ what "Observer" says in the Chicago Herald and Examiner:

"With the heavens for a stage and reckless gods and devils of the air for actors, Universal has gone far from the beaten path of pictures. No superlatives can describe the daring aeroplane feats in mid-air of Locklear in his fearless pursuits and battles with the Robin Hoods and Deadwood Dicks of the clouds."

Says Harry Hart, of the Princess in Milwaukee: "The receipts went higher than Locklear ever did. Send along twenty of this kind a year and we will be satisfied. I am so pleased that I want to go on record as saying that if any exhibitor has a doubt of the drawing power of 'The Great Air Robbery' let him wire me."

"THE FORGED BRIDE"

In which Mary MacLaren is seen as the daughter of a notorious convict who secures her happiness by his skill as a forger. Directed by Douglas Gerrard.

MARY MacLAREN is recognized as one of the most notable examples on the screen today where native talent has been polished by the friction of sincere and intelligent effort to the splendor of a star.

THAT'S why Showmen, knowing the irresistible power of her youth, beauty and ability to fill their houses with eager-to-return patrons, are sure to play every MacLaren release.

brings to the screen an exquisite creation.

The drama-world of two continents knows that Doris Keane is "Romance"—and "Romance" is Doris Keane.

The play, especially written for Miss Keane by Edward Sheldon, played a year in New York, a whole season in Chicago, a special engagement in Boston and three and a half years in London. And always the artistry, the charm, the rare beauty of Miss Keane made "Romance" a vivid memory-haunting creation.

Of all the plays of recent years, none has been more sought after for screen presentation than "Romance." United Artists Corporation is to bring it to motion picture audiences, with Doris Keane herself in the role that has made her beloved the world over.

Gentlemen:

Permit me to congratulate you upon the announcement that Miss Wanda Hawley is to be starred in pictures produced under the Realart Brand.

I am delighted also at the opportunity given Miss Hawley to star, for I feel that she has long since merited a stellar position in the film world.

In a number of my special productions, notably "Old Wives For New," "We Can't Have Everything" and "For Better, For Worse," Miss Hawley has evidenced the possession of more than ordinary talent, and of a whimsical, ingenuous charm which renders her work and her screen presence wholly individual.

I consider her one of the most promising young actresses in the entire motion picture field and I can only reiterate that I heartily concur with your judgment in engaging her for stellar purposes in Realart productions.

Very sincerely yours,

Cecil B. deMille.

VOL. XXI MARCH 13, 1920 No. XII

The Theme and Its Treatment

IT is a pleasure—as well as a policy—to record, on this page, the occasional picture which seems to us to mark a distinct and broad advance in production.

" Dangerous Days," the novel, is said to have been Mrs. Rinehart's best selling book; so the picture goes forth with this considerable advance advertising.

But this, to our mind, is not so important, not nearly so important, as the fact that the story was written with the picture clearly in mind, or else by a mind which naturally expresses itself in picture values.

So we have here, to begin with, a theme successfully created for the screen.

And the theme is a thoughtful one—not merely a story created to get picture effects. The author looked into and under our social, spiritual and economic life at the moment of this country's entrance into the war, and tells what she saw. The story makes you think; it aims at something.

The second big point is harmony in production. This, clearly, is a high type of an organization made picture—one in which several trained minds have successfully worked to a common end.

To express these results separately, we have:

* * *

FIRST, perfect continuity. We understand this to be a collaboration of Mrs. Rinehart and Charles Kenyon, supervised by J. G. Hawks. The task was not a simple one. We have the separate romances of the steel maker with a wife and the other woman he loves; the son, with his youthful problems of love and duty; the German born foreman of the works, and his daughter who loves the steel maker's son. There were grave dangers here of jerkiness and confusion; yet the story moves clearly, swiftly and logically along.

The subtitles. They are exceptionally brief, apt and strong: " wallops," every one. We are told that Mrs. Rinehart wrote them. Why not?

The acting by an all-star cast is so sincere, the settings throughout are so realistic that you forget you are viewing a picture.

Realism is the keynote clear through. There is lavishness only where it is truly expressive of the millionaire's home and entertainments. Dominant, always in the picture, is its locale, the smoky, thunderous steel city.

All of which mean that Reginald Barker has done an exceptional piece of direction. And direction here, as always in pictures, is of the utmost importance. Yet, we are sure, Mr. Barker will be the first to say that he could not have got these results without such a theme, and such preparation of a theme, for the screen.

* * *

WE are glad to cite this picture as a well-rounded example of the new kind of picture, the kind the screen calls for now, the genuine example of fewer and better pictures.

W have seen pictures as well and carefully made, but they may have lacked a theme suitable for picture presentation. And we have seen good themes carelessly produced, though there is much less excuse these days for poor production than for unsuitable themes.

It is the harmonious whole that counts: and such pictures will come only from a harmonious organization highly trained in picture creation and expression. This may be a very large organization; or it may consist of a very few people.

The theme is of the utmost importance. Without a theme stars and directors are of little avail.

The theme must be a picture theme—a story capable of expression, not in word values, but in picture values. This is the paramount point. Without this quality authors' names and books' names are inconsequential.

Then comes the adaptation to the screen. We are glad to note that an author like Mrs. Rinehart thinks well enough of pictures not merely to create for them, but to adapt her creation and write her own subtitles.

And we predict that many more authors will soon be similarly engaged.

W A Johnston

GOLDWYN PICTVRES CORPORATION
SAMVEL GOLDWYN President

TO OUR CRITICS:

We wish to thank you heartily and sincerely, not for your praise, nor your approval, nor the enthusiasm with which you have received "A MAN THERE WAS," by Henrik Ibsen.

All this, we assume, was done in justice to yourselves and in fairness to your readers.

We thank you for that which would appear unfavorable to us in your criticism.

After having declared "A MAN THERE WAS" one of the greatest photoplays shown in this country, you have unhesitatingly and in one or two instances, even harshly, announced that the wonderful effect of the drama, its absorbing charm and power, as well as its consummate art of action and direction, are hampered by the superabundance of poetry in the sub-titles.

This criticism of yours we found to be absolutely true and just, and we thank you for it.

For it gave us the opportunity to eliminate from the greatest play ever shown in this country a defect, which you properly singled out as the only one of "A MAN THERE WAS."

L. E. MILLER, President,
RADIOSOUL FILMS, INC.

VICTOR SEASTROM
The Great American Artist
Acclaimed in Europe "Prince of the Screen"
Who overwhelmed the American Press as a Great Actor and a still greater Director.

What the Leading Critics of the Motion Picture Press Said About "A MAN THERE WAS" After Its First (imperfect) Private Projection Specially Arranged for the Press: We quote them alphabetically:

L. R. Harrison in the MOVING PICTURE WORLD of March 6, 1920:

The performance of Victor Seastrom as an actor deserves abundant praise, but his handling of the subject matter as director awakens enthusiasm. . . . There is enough of it to show vivid flashes of potential genius. His handling of the spirited and realistic scenes of storm at sea is almost a revelation. "A Man There Was" is a picture of high intensity and tender pathos, a drama of the soul.

In looking at "A Man There Was" we cannot think of an American director who could have brought out its psychology or its realistic scope any better—perhaps not so well.

The picture keeps the spectator completely fascinated. In point of picturesqueness, story quality, interpretation and direction, it is an exceptional offering.

The star is Victor Seastrom, who is also the director. Fine as his performance is, his direction is better. The angles he has caught on the wreck are almost like animated conceptions of marine paintings.

As an actor he resembles William Farnum in countenance, but his performance is more finished. It is said that Mr. Seastrom is an American who is recognized in Europe as one of the foremost artists of the cinema. He should come to his native land and teach some of his rivals how to GET INTO CHARACTER.

In this picturization of "A Man There Was" there is revealed one of the treats of the season. As intelligent and carefully wrought as is the performance of Victor Seastrom, his direction is even better. His marine views resemble animated masterpieces. His entire work is highly realistic. Presenting, as he does, a powerful theme logically worked out and directed with infinite care and splendidly acted, "A Man There Was" may be called a real achievement.

Helen Rockwell in the EXHIBITOR'S TRADE REVIEW of March 6, 1920:

"A Man There Was" is presented with such simplicity and realism that its effect is twice as forecful as if moulded of the conventional melodramatic metal. The picture has been beautifully produced with exquisite views of the ocean in its various moods. The camerawork is excellent and the picture worth viewing if only for the marvellous glimpses of the sea, which are shown.

WID'S, February 29, 1920:

"A Man There Was" as a whole is a very powerful sea story. Direction—has handled the sea scenes wonderfully well and registered the drama effectively. Photography—generally very fine. The star renders a powerful characterization.

The drama unfolded is one of strict elementals. All the sequences are handled very dramatically. Viken's attempt to save his boat is pictured with a real thrill. Again, when Viken puts out to the rescue of the yacht which proves to be owned by his enemy the drama is swift and strong. Certainly no sequence of sea scenes produced in this country has ever equaled in sheer natural force the sequence that leads to the climax of "A Man There Was." The star, Victor Seastrom, is a splendid character actor and plays the role of Viken with feeling. His physique is admirable and his ability at makeup quite superior.

No telling what fame "A Man There Was" might achieve if properly subtitled.

Summarizing all, "A Man There Was"—not a moving picture, but a moving painting. Victor Seastrom—not a movie star, but a screen luminary of first magnitude. And both combined are "the treat of the season."

The Duchess, played by Alice Joyce is a character that will haunt our memories eternally. Our senses are ineffably gratified by the conquest performed by this womanly heart over the intrigues of nobility.

From the Famous Drury Lane Drama

NEW YORK EVENING SUN

SAID:

Alice Joyce as the star of "The Sporting Duchess," the picturized version of the famous old Drury Lane melodrama, at the Broadway this week, does some of the best acting of her long and generally happy association with the drama that overcomes its modesty in celluloid. Miss Joyce is one of the very best of our screen actresses, exhibiting a poise and freedom from affectation which produces excellent results upon the wide-eyed witness of the screen solution of dramatic problems. The plot of the Drury Lane melodrama lends itself excellently to the extravagance of the screen in pictorial settings, and the story is sufficiently absorbing to keep the temperature of the audience at 104 or thereabouts until the final happy moment when the villain is clutched by the eager hands of the law; the hero by the eager hands of the heroine and the final close-up by the eager hands of the movie director. "The Sporting Duchess" provides excellent entertainment.

DEMOCRACY

As announced recently in the trade publications, Lester Park and Edward Whiteside, producers of "EMPTY ARMS," have for a long period of time been working on the film

DEMOCRACY

By DR. FRANK CRANE

the foremost philosopher of the day whose editorials are read throughout the United States in thousands of newspapers and magazines. Dr. Crane has in collaboration with Charles D. Isaacson developed a powerful story and it has been acted by a very celebrated cast under the direction of Frank Reicher. The film takes its inspiration from Dr. Crane's magazine

(Established 1918)

This magazine is considered the popular successor to Elbert Hubbard's magazine, "The Philistine." The circulation is well into the hundreds of thousands and has rendered an important ground work for the exploitation of the film with the various other works of Dr. Crane's which have been before the public for many years.

DEMOCRACY

"EMPTY ARMS"

TO MR. Z——

THIS is to inform you that your territory has been purchased. "Empty Arms" is sold for 25% more than you offered to pay!

We take this extraordinary means to impart to you this information, because your experience might prove of value to other buyers across the continent.

You remember the first announcement on "Empty Arms." It told how we refused an offer of One Hundred Thousand Dollars guarantee from one of the big distributors. Then we sent you a copy of the "Hundred Thousand Dollar Packet" which told in detail of the tremendous box-office possibilities in "Empty Arms."

You remember that you wired us to hold your territory; that you made us an offer which we refused. You remember that you thought the price we quoted too high, but you had the opportunity to see the film and judge for yourself.

Then you saw the film. You said it was a powerful screen drama and ought to prove a great box-office attraction in your territory. But you procrastinated. You sparred for time, thinking we would reduce our price.

You remember that we wired you that other buyers in your territory were also interested. You thought we were bluffing. The picture is now sold in your territory for 25% more than you bid for it.

You have an opportunity to acquire these pictures for your territory, but we must admit that your competitor who purchased "EMPTY ARMS" has first call. He didn't procrastinate!

SUPREME ACHIEVEMENT OF MOTION PICTURE DRAMA

"DEMOCRACY"

THE VISION RESTORED

(Copyright 1920)

A ten-reel cinema epic of enthralling, world-wide interest, as announced in December, 1918. "DEMOCRACY" will find a welcome in all parts of the earth, because it is a dramatization of the everyday struggles and aspirations of humanity for Justice, Right and Freedom.

"DEMOCRACY" will grip and thrill millions of spectators with the ideas and emotions which in all ages and countries have made heroes of common men.

COMBINED EFFORT OF THESE THREE GREAT MINDS

LEE FRANCIS LYBARGER
Thinker—Historian—Orator

10,000,000 people in 46 states have heard this distinguished orator expound Democracy from the lecture platform during the past fifteen years. He retired as president of the International Lyceum and Chautauqua Association of America to produce this epoch-making photodrama.

"Torchy" Is a Success

Extremely funny two-reeler, featuring Johnny Hines, went over big at the New York Strand—and was immediately booked for Brooklyn next week—at top price.

JOHNNY HINES

is the best comedy bet since Harold Lloyd, but it took Mr. Lloyd—the best comedy bet on the market to-day—some time to get into New York's biggest and finest photoplay theater.

Read what "Wid's" says (every word):

> "Torchy"
>
> Yea, Bo! Want a good comedy—a good two-reeler—with the latest innovations in shimmying music captions? Then get to "Torchy."
>
> This is a new one. The "Torchy" comedies featuring Johnny Hines are being produced by Charles C. Burr, and if the rest of them come through as well as the first, shown this week at the Strand, it's a bet that they are going over big.
>
> And the titles! Some titles. One or two of them are too long, but otherwise they get across in great shape. Probably the captions really make this two-reeler a feature. Johnny Hines is good, of course, and the director has seen fit to let him alone so he plays his natural self. When he crosses himself after rubbing the countenance of a young Hebrew before he shoots crap, will get a giggle out of anybody.
>
> And his shimmying feet. If there is a girl who loves to dance who comes to your house who just won't rave over Johnny's dancing, and the way shimmy music notes are shown on the screen—well then—she just isn't a dancer.
>
> It is a good deal harder, so some say, to make a snappy two-reel comedy than a feature. If so the Johnny Hines organization doesn't seem to be afraid of the job. They've certainly got a knock-out in their first one.

We have to offer the best comedy proposition of the year.

THE EXPORT HOUSE OF SATISFACTION AND SERVICE

"TWO factors have served to delay and to render more difficult the task of those who have sought to bring about a solution of the perplexing international economic problems upon which depends the healthy continuation of foreign trade of the United States, and the stabilization of world conditions. The first of these, of course, has been the unavoidable delay in the conclusion of peace. The second has been the inexperience and lack of specific information in the country at large. Merchants and manufacturers who heretofore conducted a business largely confined to national boundaries, felt a certain strangeness when faced with the necessity of taking into account, in all their calculations, the conditions prevailing not here at home alone, but also throughout the world."

This is true not only of American motion picture producers who enter the foreign field, but of foreign producers who attempt to market their productions in America.

INTER-OCEAN FILM CORPORATION meets exactly this need for the American Producer. Its thorough and practical knowledge of the American market as related to foreign territories is at the disposal of all producers who seek intelligent and profitable foreign representation.

Making Real Progress

IF the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the State of New York in session at Utica accomplished nothing more than was achieved at the banquet held on Tuesday evening it would have established a record that will entitle it to rank among the most notable of state gatherings —or of national gatherings either. What was done on that occasion in a way was intangible; it could not be classed with the formulation of constructive legislation. The great value to motion picture exhibitors of the state directly and of the nation indirectly lay in the statements made by the men prominently associated with the making of the laws of the Empire State.

The toastmaster was James J. Walker, minority leader of the Senate. The speakers included Thaddeus C. Sweet, speaker of the Assembly, and George F. Thompson, majority leader of the Senate. These three men, most influential in converting bills into laws—or in consigning measures to oblivion—publicly went on record as being friendly to motion pictures and to motion picture men such as those at the head of the New York League. Supplementing these men in their advocacy of rational motion picture legislation were Sophie Irene Loeb, president of the Child Welfare Commission, the one person who more than another was responsible for the passing in 1913 of the bill shutting out unaccompanied children from picture theatres, and Mayors James K. O'Connor of Utica and George R. Lunn of Schenectady.

Mr. Walker praised the officers of the league for straightforwardness, for directness, for their recognition of the fact that legislators were human beings and also that they were compelled by reason of their responsibility to the whole public to consider all sides of a question.

Mr. Sweet referred to the agitators other than reds who beset members of the legislature to deny the public the things it wants and assured his hearers that "we are not moved by that hysteria."

"Whatever you think you deserve stand by and tell the people that is what you deserve and tell them why," said Senator Thompson. "Be just as free and open as is your picture when it attacks the problems of life. When you do that you will get everything you deserve." The Senator promised his help in all good things. He declared he did not think censorship necessary.

Miss Loeb made a strong appeal for the children, emphasized their "right to play," urged that every effort be made to give them greater opportunities of seeing pictures and promised her help in bringing this about. Also she expressed her antagonism to censorship.

The Convention a Success

THE convention of the New York State Exhibitors has been marked by a record-breaking attendance and by harmony. One of the indications of the oneness of purpose of the Empire State men was the action of the presiding officer on Tuesday in inviting to the platform Lee A. Ochs and Sam Trigger, both former state presidents, and the first named one time national president.

That the work of the past year has met the approval of the membership was indicated by the unanimous re-election of the entire roster of officers. Messrs. Cohen, Dillon, Mosher, Calihan, Elliott, Berman, Linton and Michaels are representatives of the best type of motion picture showmen. The members have proved that they can agree among themselves, and that is no minor achievement when we consider the outcome of many other conventions. The unanimous re-election shows that organization politics has no place in the league's counsels. And the words of the state legislative leaders at the banquet demonstrate that the body enjoys the confidence of the men who make the laws of the commonwealth.

New York surely has a healthy organization.

Mrs. Rinehart's Signal Success

MANY foolish things are written about the moving picture by otherwise wise persons who would know better if they stopped using snap judgments and applied themselves to an intelligent attempt to learn the truth in regard to the steady artistic advance of the screen. In one case we have the misleading but highly flattering statement in a book devoted to a technical description of the moving picture, the author believes that, "The photoplay of today leaves little to be desired: motion picture acting and story-telling technique and photography appear pretty nearly perfect . . . the attainments of today fulfill all that could be wished for—and more."

The reverse of this opinion is expressed by a writer in a New York daily after this fashion: "The cinema, following out its manifest destiny, attracts today that section of theatregoers who are opposed to anything but the least serious and the least elevating forms of the drama's art."

In refutation of the latter snap judgment is the editorial indorsement of the Goldwyn production of Mary Roberts Rinehart's story "Dangerous Days," which is reproduced on an advertising page of this issue of Moving Picture World. A writer of Mrs. Rinehart's standing and to whom goes the credit of having written the brightest and most entertaining of all screen comedies, it will cause little surprise that a serious story from her pen has achieved so signal a success. With authors of Mary Roberts Rinehart's stamp to elevate the screen there is no danger of the stage being left in sole possession of the higher forms of the drama's art. That the Goldwyn production of the Rinehart story is in keeping with the importance of the subject is a point that is easy to accept.

Shall the Majority Rule?

WHEN New Jersey exhibitors, other representatives of the moving picture industry and representatives of labor unions appeared in the State Capitol at Trenton on Monday, March 8, to plead that the people be given a chance to express through the vote their preference as to a conservative or a liberal Sabbath, they faced the most determined resistance on the part of the Lord's Day Alliance.

The question whether New Jersey people shall have the opportunity to vote for or against the privilege of attending moving picture theatres on Sunday, and enjoying other recreations on that day, was bitterly debated. It was a clash of two utterly different viewpoints. That was shown when a minister declared that sometimes God and one man may constitute a majority. The reply flung back at him was that one man

Quaker City Amusement Bill Is Nearly Million Weekly

As a result of his annual tour of the Philadelphia playhouses, Fire Marshall Elliot, announced last week that there are 160 picture houses and 56 theatres in that city. During the past two or three years few houses have been added, although plans are on hand for several notable additions to the amusement places in the central section.

An extraordinary attendance to all places of amusement has followed the war. Showmen and house managers have no cause for complaint. Records show that even a motion picture house has proved a ten-thousand-dollars-a-week producer.

For the first time the city has an index of its amusement-bill in the reports of Collector Lederer as to the amount of ten per cent. amusement tax collected in this revenue district. Although the district embraces more than Philadelphia and takes in many other counties in the eastern part of the state, the bulk of the collection is made in this city.

The total amount of the tax collected at the revenue office now indicates that the amusement bill in this part of Pennsylvania exceeds twenty million dollars a year. It is estimated that the attendance at all of the city's amusement places now amounts to nearly a million a week. Admission prices are higher than they have ever been, and although Philadelphia has not yet reached the scale of prices charged in New York, there are indications that the policy of charging what the traffic will bear will continue to stand as long as the amusement rush continues.

Pettijohn Declines Place on Americanization Committee

Announcement was made this week that Charles C. Pettijohn, vice-president of the Selznick Enterprises and well-known film official, had declined the offer of the secretaryship of the Committee on Americanism offered him last week by ex-Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane, but that he would if necessary do any of the detail work necessary to the progress of the committee.

The vacancy on the committee was caused by the death of Major Raymond Pullman, of Washington, D. C., and Mr. Lane later asked Mr. Pettijohn if he would serve as secretary of the committee. Although Mr. Pettijohn appreciated the honor, he expressed the opinion, in his reply to Mr. Lane, that the Selznick Enterprises were well-represented in the Americanization movement by Lewis J. Selznick, who is chairman of the committee on distribution of Americanization films.

Light-Absorbing Compound May Revolutionize Industry

When Robert Andersen, of the Universal Company, recently returned from his vacation abroad, he brought with him the story of a new German invention which, if developed, may revolutionize the film industry.

By means of the discovery of a new compound which absorbs light, German cinema scientists now assert they can show photoplays in broad daylight. The Germans use their new compound in making moving picture screens.

The first broad attempt to capitalize the new discovery is in the formation of a company to install miniature moving picture machines in private homes. German families, it is promised, will soon be able to see the latest features while eating dinner or pursuing other household activities. The home projection machine will take its place beside the piano and the phonographs.

As an adjunct of the new company's activities it is planned that the new home machine will be a combination projection machine and camera. Events in the home can then be photographed for future generations. The greatest good of this novel project, it is said, will be the doing away with the family album.

The new screen compound is called Petragaggan. It is cast in big flexible sheets and looks something like leather. Its make-up is zealously guarded as a secret. It also is expected to supplant the billboards, its makers say, since it can show moving pictures on the housetops in daylight.

Andersen has returned to Universal City carrying with him a long term contract to direct pictures as well as to act in them. He is now at work on his first production, which he says will bristle with new ideas in directorial art. His ultimate object is to produce a picture with no sub-titles.

May Ask Minneapolis Board to Oppose Daylight Saving

Preparations are being made by Minneapolis motion picture exhibitors to carry their fight against re-establishment of daylight saving to the city council, if the unofficial referendum on the proposed measure is carried this week.

Following conferences between a special committee of the Minneapolis Theatres Protective League with the special daylight saving committee of the Civic and Commerce Association, the association agreed to permit ballots to be counted in the referendum from residence districts. It had previously stipulated that polls would be conducted only in the downtown business and industrial sections. The offer of the theatre men to place special ballot boxes in all the theatres of the city for their patrons was rejected by the association.

The committee of the league, which was appointed by President W. A. Steffes, consisted of Daniel Chamberlain, Theodore Hays and Clyde Hitchcock. They will continue to function until the matter has been decided. Another committee composed of Mr. Steffes, A. E. Parks and William Koenig met with the Minneapolis Trades and Labor Assembly. The assembly representatives promised their aid in fighting the revival of daylight saving.

In case the measure passes in the referendum, the association plans to draw up a special ordinance for presentation in the city council immediately. The ordinance, according to H. R. Shepardson, chairman of the association committee, will provide for turning the clock ahead one hour from April 1 to October 1.

Quimby Arrives at Coast for Associated Exhibitors

F. C. Quimby, general manager of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., has arrived in Los Angeles. While Mr. Quimby declines definitely to state his mission among the picture folk of the West Coast, and while he has been in and around Los Angeles only a few days, it is known that already he has been in conference with many of the big stars, directors and other important persons connected with the production of pictures.

It is expected that Mr. Quimby will return to New York shortly. En route from the coast he may stop over at several important cities for conferences with his associates.

North Dakota Showmen Want Repeal of Sunday Blue Laws

With the state-wide referendum on Sunday theatre closing less than two weeks away, North Dakota exhibitors are preparing for renewed activity up to March 16 when the vote on the measure will be conducted.

Backed by the Independent Legion, a voluntary organization, which numbers among its membership of 30,000 some of the most prominent citizens of North Dakota, the exhibitors are confident of success. They are opposed by the North Dakota Ministerial Association and most of the Nonpartisan League officials.

For more than six weeks, the 300 exhibitors of the state, united in the North Dakota Exhibitors' Association, headed by Sam P. Cornish, Fargo exhibitor, have been conducting an active campaign to remove the Sunday closing legislation which has for years seriously curtailed their business.

Until the day of the election, every motion picture fan in the state will be greeted by the caption, "Vote 'Yes' to banish intolerance at the coming referendum election March 16," flashed on the screen. Trailers explaining how to vote to remove the Sunday ban will also be carried.

Thousands of circulars and throw-aways urging the repeal of the "Blue Sunday" laws have been given out to the public in the motion picture houses. These will be increased until the election takes place. Public sentiment throughout the state has been rapidly crystallizing in favor of removing the ban, the exhibitors declare.

At its recent meeting, the Exhibitors' Protective League voted to give its support to the North Dakota exhibitors in their fight.

Refowich Bros. to Build Another.

The Refowich Brothers, of Mahanoy City and Pottsville, Pa., have bought a plot of ground 60 by 150 feet on Center street near Main street, Freeland, and will soon build a modern motion picture theatre. The company now operates the Refowich Theatre in that town.

Resolution Asks Showmen to Hold Americanization Film

A RESOLUTION was adopted by the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association requesting all its members to refrain from showing the Americanization picture, "The Land of Opportunity," with Ralph Ince, until six exhibitors are appointed to the board which has undertaken to make and distribute the Americanization pictures recently requested by ex-Secretary of Interior Lane.

In explaination of the resolution, Secretary Samuel Bullock stated he had information that the picture was made for a sum of $20,000 and that the producers stood to receive $50,000 in returns from rentals, and that furthermore the exhibitors will not receive the proper credit from the government that they are entitled to because there are six producers on the board and only one exhibitor.

The Cleveland association recently protested the action of the board complaining that it was impossible for it to make a definite offer that these pictures would receive a universal distribution because the exhibitors of the country were not properly represented.

Cartoonist Pat Sullivan Signs Contract with Famous Players

PAT SULLIVAN, creator of "Felix, the Cat," and other animated comics, has signed a long-term contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to make cartoons for the Paramount Magazine. Outside of Bobbie Bumps, Sullivan's cat, Felix, is among the best known character of the motion picture comics and its antics have had a record run at leading houses throughout the country.

Sullivan hails from Sydney, Australia, but he left the Antipodes before attaining full majority to continue his art studies in Paris and London. Subsequently he came to American where he drew cartoons for leading publications, notably the McClure Syndicate and the Evening World, gaining added laurels to the name he had acquired through his drawings for leading Australian, English and American publications.

Palmetto Enterprises Buy South Carolina Theatres

A THEATRICAL deal of some magnitude was closed in Columbia, S. C., this week when George C. Warner, veteran Columbia Theatre owner, sold to the Palmetto Enterprises, Inc., his Ideal and Broadway theatres. The Palmetto Enterprises, Inc., was recently incorporated with a capital of $100,000, the incorporators being W. E. McNulty, J. P. Matthews, J. W. Thomas and John J. Seibels. The former named is president.

It was announced simultaneously that the new concern had engaged Laurence T. Lester, owner of the Rivoli and Rialto theatres there, to manage the Ideal and Broadway temporarily. Mr. Lester in turn announced that he had sold his Pastime theatre to the Lynch interests of New York, through their Atlanta office. While no definite figures were given out as to the consideration for the purchase of the Warner theatres it was understood to be in the neighborhood of $70,000.

The Famous Players-Lasky group in taking charge of the Pastime announced that they would send their own representative to Columbia to take charge of the theatre, and that it will be a first run Paramount-Artcraft house.

George C. Warner is the oldest motion picture exhibitor in Columbia, and as a coincidence, he sold his interests there exactly ten years to the day from the time he came to Columbia and took charge of the old Grand Theatre. In 1918 he bought the Broadway from J. W. Lambeth. Mr. Warner states that he will engage in other business in Columbia. He is president of the South Carolina Exhibitors Association, and was largely influential during the recent censorship fight in South Carolina.

Screen and Phonograph Will Aid Reconstruction Program

ALFRED E. SMITH, Governor of New York, will employ the newest developments of art and science in placing his reconstruction program before the people of New York State, with the assured result that within the next two weeks a majority of the men and women voters of the State will have seen the Governor in action and heard his voice lifted in a plea for sound and economical government.

Governor Hughes, on his famous "swing around the circle" when he was fighting for the adoption of his legislative program of reform, used trains and automobiles, the telegraph and the telephone, and the press, of course, in getting his message to the voters. In addition to these, Governor Smith will employ the motion picture and the talking machine.

Preceding the Governor's departure from Albany on Friday, March 12, it was announced that a motion picture showing the governor making a reconstruction speech had been purchased by Harry Levey, of the educational department of Universal, for immediate circulation throughout the state. At the same time, a talking machine record of the speech was made which will be used in connection with the appearance of the governor on the screen.

National Screen Service, Inc., Has Animated Announcements

THE seventh inning of every motion picture show is the time when the slides begin to advertise coming attractions. The people utilize that moment to uncoil their limbs and readjust themselves in the chairs, to tell Dolly some little bit of news about the new baby Molly forget to tell her. The exhibitor has for the moment lost the attention of his patrons. They walk out or begin to talk.

The National Screen Service, Inc., has an animated announcement service designed to prevent the audience from temporarily losing interest in the screen. This new organization has mailed descriptions of its service to exhibitors everywhere, whether they operate one, two or seven days of the week. It answers three questions in which exhibitors are interested: How the service operates, what subscribers have already been secured and what co-operation it will receive from producers.

Among the subscribers are such important exhibitors as the Stanley Booking Company, Keith's Circuit, and B. S. Moss. The company has contracts with producers which enables it to secure from them the main titles, close-ups and most dramatic scenes from their different productions for incorporation into the animated announcement. The producers are represented as anxious to see that their pictures are advertised in an artistic and effective manner.

WHEN is a copyright a copyright? That is the question which is puzzling the minds of the Pioneer general staff. Sometime ago Pioneer announced that it had given to one of its forthcoming productions the title of "Midnight Frolics."

Immediately following the announcement, Flo Ziegfeld, Jr., who owns the musical comedy which is running on the New Amsterdam Roof under the name of Ziegfeld's Midnight Follies claimed that his title was being infringed upon.

The Pioneer legal staff took an opposite view of the matter as the first and last words of the two titles differed, one being frolics and the other Ziegfeld's Follies.

When this point was put forward by the Pioneer in its answer to the charges of infringement, the Ziegfeld interest claimed that they had protected both words, frolics and follies.

It now develops that Ziegfeld is using both titles for the one show, and secured a court order enjoining the Pioneer from using the title until a verdict is rendered.

Exhibitors Talk Co-operation.

New Jersey exhibitors and other members of the industry met at a luncheon at the Hotel Astor, New York City, on March 4 and discussed the Sunday opening bill which was argued before the New Jersey legislature four days later. The speakers were Harry Buxbaum, president of the F. I. L. M. Club; Dr. Charles Hespe, president of the New Jersey Exhibitors League; Harry M. White, president of the Philadelphia Exchangemen's Association; Louis Innerarity, of Pathe and the national association; Henry P. Nelson, manager of the Capitol Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., and Joseph Stern, of Newark. Chairman Buxbaum appointed a committee of five to enlist the co-operation of the industry.

Taylor Out of Inter-Ocean.

Official notification is made to the trade by Inter-Ocean Film Corporation of 218 West Forty-second street, New York, and Inter-Ocean Film Company, Ltd., of 162 Wardour street, W., London, that John H. Taylor is no longer in the employ of either of the above-named companies, his relations with said corporations having terminated.

pretending to ally himself with God and attempting to dictate to the majority is now sawing wood in Amerongen.

The ministers replied to the charge that they are trying to inflict their will upon the majority with the counter charge that motion picture interests are seeking to "commercialize" the Sabbath. They termed the issue one of "conservatism opposed to commercialism." The industry's representatives admitted the existence of conservatism and denied the existence of commercialism. They claimed as high ideals as any citizens of the United States and resented being put into a class separate and distinct, being termed "money-mad."

One of the most dwelt-upon arguments of the ministers was that people outside of the state are trying to tell New Jersey what to do. The reply that 70 per cent. of New Jersey people favor a liberal Sunday was not refuted, but the ministers persisted in their claim.

Contrary to expectations, the members of the Lord's Day Alliance fought the bill as a straight moving picture proposition, practically ignoring the fact that it would permit horse-racing and other amusements especially obnoxious to them on Sunday. So confident were they of their strength, having defeated thirty-three attempts in thirteen years to have similar bills made laws, according to their own figures, that they let the question narrow down to whether or not New Jersey wants motion pictures Sunday and whether or not the state should have motion pictures on Sunday even if it wants it.

In thus clearly defining the question the opposition let itself into a trap, for proponents of the bill did not fail to point out that New Jersey must want a liberal Sunday, else the ministers would have no fear of letting the bill go to the people for a decision at the polls. That obliged the opposition to intimate that it preferred "the voice of God to the voice of the people."

Those in attendance at the hearing who were not carried away by the dramatic oratory of the opposition—there were many women present at the invitation of the Lord's Day Alliance—were impressed with the arguments for the bill as presented by the proponents, and it is a certain fact that their cause has been materially advanced.

WANDA HAWLEY is the new Realartist. She is to appear in a series of light romances. The announcement was made this week by Realart Pictures Corporation, following an extensive teaser campaign in the trade papers and from the company's home office to its branch managers.

The importance of the deal is emphasized not only because of the introduction of a new star, but as further evidence of extended Realart activities following other recent acquisitions by the company.

"Each day for the last three weeks," according to Morris Kohn, president of Realart, "we have been posting our branch managers, and through them the exhibitors, on the fact that a new star had been signed. Her identity was not revealed, but the number of replies expressing the hope that the new star was Wanda Hawley was very gratifying.

Record Includes Many Successes.

"Miss Hawley's record certainly indicates legitimate and proper preparation for stardom. As leading woman for Douglas Fairbanks in one of his best pictures, 'Mr. Fix-It," and at various other times for Charles Ray, William S. Hart, Bryant Washburn, Wallace Reid, Robert Warwick and others, Miss Hawley has had the widest and best possible introduction to motion picture fans.

"Her face and beauty are known to hundreds of thousands and her ability has again and again been the subject of favorable criticism. Her name has been featured often. These facts, of course, are matters of interest to the exhibitor."

Miss Hawley is a striking type of blonde beauty, with grayish-blue eyes and a fair, dainty complexion. She announces her age as "permanently eighteen." She made her screen debut with Fox. She then went to the Lasky studio and made her first appearance under the Paramount-Artcraft banner as leading woman for Douglas Fairbanks in his successful picture, "Mr. Fix-It."

Her next role was in Cecil B. DeMille's Artcraft production, "Old Wives for New." So excellent was her work that the noted director-producer selected her to play the leading role of Kedzie Thropp in his next production, "We Can't Have Everything."

Then followed, under her contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, numerous productions in which she played the leading feminine support to Paramount stars. The most notable role was that of "Beauty" in "Everywoman," which was considered to be a deserving tribute to her personal beauty and charm. She also had an important role in Cecil B. DeMille's, "For Better, For Worse."

Some of her most recent productions are "Double Speed," with Wallace Reid; "The Tree of Knowledge," with Robert Warwick, and "The Six Best Cellars" and "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," with Bryant Washburn.

Republic Has Special Staff to Handle Serial Publicity

FOLLOWING the announcement of last week that the Republic Distributing Corporation is to distribute the fifteen-episode serial, "The Whirlwind," another announcement has been made to the effect that a special staff has been engaged to handle this serial and to co-operate with the exhibitors booking it.

The Republic organization, of which Lewis J. Selznick is advisory director, has engaged George Ames to handle the sales of the serial and the press department has acquired the services of three writers familiar with serial publicity.

Campaign Book a Feature.

One of the innovations of this serial will be the campaign book and the press sheet. The campaign book, which is now in the hands of the printers, was made to conform with every requirement of the exhibitor booking the serial. Special stunts are outlined, advertising hints are included and many methods of exploitation have been carefully studied and set forth. From the press sheet the exhibitor can select not only his advance and current publicity stories and ads, but special newspaper readers as well.

Rowland and Clark Theatres Play William Fox Picture

THE Rowland and Clark chain of theatres, consisting of nine first-class houses of most up-to-date construction located throughout the best sections of Pittsburgh, are playing William Fox productions. Rowland and Clark are the best-known theatre men in the Smoky City and for some time past have been booking all Fox features in addition to the regular program releases. Very recently a record was established by their circuit, when more than 50 per cent. of the houses showed Fox productions on the same day.

Reports show that Buck Jones, the new screen star, scored heavily in his first Fox starring production, "The Last Straw," at the Savoy Theatre. "Lure of Ambition," with Theda Bara, played to big houses at the Plaza and the Belmar on the same day, while William Russell's latest success, "Shod With Fire," crowded the Arsenal Theatre.

Have Proved Big Attractions.

The Fox Sunshine Comedies have proved solid attractions in this field and are regular program balancers at the R and C theatres. Other Fox films contracted for include the full Mix series, the Farnum series, the schedule on Fox News Reel and Bud Fisher's Animated Cartoons co-starring Mutt and Jeff.

"Evangeline," "Checkers," "Should a Husband Forgive?" and other Fox specials also have fulfilled their box-office mission through the Rowland and Clarke chain, playing from one-day to three-day stands with large financial returns to the theatres.

Typhoon Names O. R. Brown as Southern Representative

O. R. BROWN, the well known motion picture supply man and partner in the A. & B. M. P. Supply Company of Raleigh, N. C., was appointed sole representative of the Typhoon Company for North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Mr. Brown is well qualified to handle this large territory for the Typhoon Company, having been for many years an exhibitor himself where he became familiar with the results obtained by the operation of Typhoons in his theatres.

In recent years, Mr. Brown has represented some of the largest supply manufacturers, and enjoys perhaps one of the widest acquaintances throughout this territory. He will make his headquarters, as heretofore, in Raleigh, where, within a very short time, he expects to carry a stock of Typhoon equipments.

Mr. Brown came to New York last week and conferred with President Glantzberg, of the Typhoon Company on the prospects of the summer season.

New York State Exhibitors Go on Record Against Percentage and Deposit System

Many Important Decisions Made at Biggest Convention Ever Held in State—League to Fight Illegitimate Screen Advertising—Urge Formation of National Organization—Sydney Cohen Is Re-elected

By C. L. GRANT.

Utica, March 10.

WITH the re-election of Sydney S. Cohen, of New York, as president for another year, together with the re-election of the other officers, the choice of Rochester for next year's convention, the most important and the best attended convention in the history of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League concluded its sessions late this afternoon.

The advance deposit system.

Illegitimate screen advertising of a thinly disguised nature, smuggled in dramas and comedies, without the knowledge of exhibitors.

Vulgar, salacious and so-called sex-pictures.

A measure now before the legislature of New York State, seeking to raise the age of admission of minors to motion picture houses to 18 years.

The league went on record as favoring the following:

In addition, the league started the ball rolling in what it is hoped will result in the present situation affecting posters being bettered in so far as the exhibitors are concerned. A movement was also started, accompanied by applause, which it is hoped will result in the present taxation on music in motion picture theatre houses being eliminated, and with the formation of a musical bureau in the New York office of the league.

President Cohen outlined a policy for the coming year that will include the formation of three service stations in as many sections in the state, one being located in New York City, the other in Albany and the third in Rochester or Buffalo, and each covering a zone. To these stations, exhibitors may take their grievances with exchange managers and other matters requiring a speedy action. President Cohen also stated that he would endeavor to employ a state organizer throughout the entire year, who would cover the state and keep in close touch with exhibitors generally.

In point of attendance, the convention smashed all previous records. Every section of the state was represented despite unfavorable weather conditions. A greater interest along co-operative lines was shown during the convention than at any time in the film history of New York State.

Mention that the league had a membership of 938, representing about 90 per cent. of the motion picture houses of New York State, was greeted with prolonged applause. The Capitol Theatre, of New York City, has recently joined the league.

Much of the success attributed to the convention is due to the efforts of W. H. Linton, of Utica, who handled the preliminary details in a most satisfactory manner.

One of the features of the convention was the dinner on Tuesday night at which the speakers were Thaddeus C. Sweet, leader of the Assembly; James Walker, minority leader of the Senate, who was toastmaster; Mayor James K. O'Connor, of Utica; James Vincent, president of the Motion Picture Directors' Association; George R. Lunn, mayor of Schenectady; State Senator George F. Thompson, Sophie Irene Loeb, head of the child welfare work in the metropolis and a well-known newspaper woman; I. E. Chadwick and President Sydney S. Cohen. An account of this dinner is to be found elsewhere. A ball was held on Wednesday evening, which marked the close of the social activities.

Tuesday's Session.

The session opened about 2 o'clock, when President Cohen introduced Mayor J. K. O'Connor of Utica, who welcomed the delegates to the city.

In the course of his talk, and it was a good one, too, Mayor O'Connor said that the motion picture had revolutionized the theatrical world, but warned those in his audience not to press things too far, and above all not to bring about animosity to the motion picture by attempts to overreach.

"Keep your hands clean, keep everything connected with your places clean," said Mayor O'Connor, "and produce and show nothing that will create feeling against you. Work along artistic lines. Produce and show that which will tend to uplift. You are educating the masses, for thousands attend the motion picture theatres who rarely read the newspapers, and so you become a valuable source of information, with your weeklies and such.

"Make your pictures good and better. Let nothing of the poor type be shown. Keep the indecent and the suggestive off the screen."

Cohen's Speech.

Mayor O'Connor's speech brought frequent interruptions in the way of applause. He was followed by Sydney Cohen, president of the League, who outlined the developments of the past year.

Mr. Cohen said in part:

"In submitting to you a brief record of the organization of the past year, I am glad to state that it is a record of achievement and realization. The credit for the success of the activities of the League belongs to no individual or set of individuals, but to all the League—to every single member thereof.

Many Cities Have Sunday Pictures.

"I need not acquaint you with the fact that through the efforts of our League and through the staunch support of our public, we have succeeded in repealing a law which had ceased to be an expression of the will of the majority. I refer to that section of the penal code which made it a criminal offence to keep the motion picture theatre open on Sundays. In place of this law, we now have a provision which permits the voters of every municipality of this state to pass on this question by a direct vote of the governing body. The league has prepared a table of statistics showing that the following municipalities have sanctioned motion pictures on Sundays since the enactment of the law: Cohoes, Binghamton, Hudson, Ithaca, Oswego, Saratoga, Mt. Vernon, Utica, Beacon, Watertown, Auburn, Schenectady, Amsterdam, Buffalo, Batavia, Corning, Dunkirk, Fulton, Glen Cove, Glens Falls, Hornell, Jamestown, Lockport, Lackawanna, North Tonawanda, New York City, Niagara Falls, Oneida, Olean, Rochester, Syracuse, Salamanca, Tonawanda, Troy and White Plains. As far as we know—and our information on the subject is derived from the best sources, from the press and from the public authorities—the effect of allowing the motion picture theatres to open on Sunday has been uniformly good—public order and decorum have everywhere been promoted.

"While on the subject of legislation I want to say that we are doing our best to modify the present law on the admission of minors to our theatres. The original law provided for the exclusion of minors from all places where liquor was sold and from all places generally which were held in bad repute. In 1909 the legislature included the motion picture theatre in the list of these presumably disreputable places. The very language of the amendment in which the motion picture theatre is described as a 'kinetoscope' shows that the motion picture was then truly in its infancy.

"In view of the passing good which the motion picture accomplishes in the mind of a child as an educational factor, does it not seem that the time has come for more efficient and enlightening, if less drastic, measures?

Under these circumstances I have every confidence that if the matter is presented to the legislature in the proper light we may look to such an amendment as will safeguard the morals of the child without doing an injustice to the motion picture theatre owner.

Coming of Screen Advertising.

"From the viewpoint of the organized exhibitor one of the most important events of the year has been the development of screen advertising and of using the revenue derived from it for the purpose of financing or helping to finance the state organization. I want to say at the outset that there are certain forms of screen advertising that are highly improper and offensive and that must be, and I hope will be, stopped by this convention.

"You have frequently observed that every one of the bigger producing companies has an art director. They now have added an advertising director, only they do not carry his name on the introductory chapters of their features. As a result of the pernicious activities of the advertising director very many of the features we are paying for so liberally have carried more or less thinly disguised advertising messages.

"Seriously speaking, gentlemen, we must check this fraud. Indeed, we must stamp it out before our patrons begin to show their resentment by staying away from our theatres. This practice to trespass on our screen and appropriate its advertising value without the semblance of any legal or moral consideration, is nothing more and nothing less than a violation of one of the best known of the Ten Commandments.

Advertising Nullifies Contract.

"The league has taken legal counsel in this matter and we have been advised that this fraudulent advertising practice renders every contract null and void, and that the perpetrators of it may be held to an accounting of their profits in a court of law, that every exhibitor has the right to cut out the offensive advertisements, that when we pay for enertainment we are entitled to entertainment, and that advertising is not entertainment. I trust that this convention will use every lawful means to protect both the public and the exhibitor against this form of deceit, and that other states will follow your example.

"The drama and the comedy are the pillars on which our whole structure rests and we cannot permit these pillars to be used for billboards by the greed of short-sighted producers. What would the public say if the rostrum from which Marc Antony addressed the mob of Rome were placarded with handbills and one sheets announcing the benefits to be derived from the use of a certain brand of cheese, or if the balcony on which the drama of young love makes its progress were covered with the announcement of a sale of neckties and corsets? Let us have an end of this vandalism on the screen.

Exhibitor Does Not Want Advertising.

"The screen having so often and so aptly been compared to the newspaper, it may be that there is room on it for honest advertising. As every exhibitor must ever be the sole judge of what is to go on his screen, he must be the one to decide this question. I do not believe that any exhibitor wants any kind of advertising either in his drama or his comedy at any time or any place.

"There have lately come into vogue, however, educational and industrial pictures. Skillfully made and properly supervised by the exhibitors themselves, many of these films have found great favor with audiences and have therefore a legitimate place on our screens. The making of gowns, to cite an example, the story of furs or other wearing apparel, an attractive and instructive depiction of household articles, their histories, etc., may in the judgment of many exhibitors be properly shown on the screen.

"If in the judgment of the exhibitor such films possess a genuine entertainment value and are not in any way offensive to the patrons, they may carry an advertising message, provided always, of course, that the entertainment predominates and the advertising message is a mere incident. Revenues derived from such advertising have in this state, and in others, been accepted in lieu of dues of membership in the organization and the organization has in every way been benefited thereby.

Strong Body Would Redeem Errors.

"Let me make it very plain, however, that no pressure of any kind will ever be exerted and that the league leaves it entirely to the option of its members how they want their dues paid to the organization. Once we have the state organization in good shape, led by good men with constructive ideas, I have no doubt that we will get a national body of exhibitors strong enough, intelligent enough to redeem the many errors and follies and worse that constitute the record of previous attempts, and really render service to the exhibitor, to the public and to the industry at large. Only with a strong national organization may the exhibitor ever hope for his just and proper place in the councils of the industry.

Charles L. O'Reilly

"In all matters and questions that call for the use of the screen as a medium of publication to the people of this country, leadership of right belongs to the men who own these screens and to no other branch of the industry. The sight of the great oratorical Screen Pledgers Association going about the country and parading in the public prints, when they are really without title to any screen or any part of a screen, is of course amusing, but it is getting the least bit tiresome. We owe it to ourselves, to our public, to our government, to proclaim the fact that the screens of the country belong to us, to us alone and to nobody else.

"I will not venture to predict how soon we may expect a national body of exhibitors such as at this hour we need more urgently than at any time in the history of the exhibitor. Acting under your authority and under the special instructions of your executive committee, I have communicated with many of the men who are active in organization matters in other states, and they tell me to give you this message: We are anxious for national organization. We are ready to join with you and any other state to bring about such a national organization. We want such a national organization to be absolutely free from the influence of producer or promoter, to be devoted wholly to the promotion of the interests of the exhibitor, to consist exclusively of 100 per cent. exhibitors. I am giving this message to you and I earnestly hope you will give it consideration on the floor of this convention, and by your action advance the cause of national organization in a practical and tangible manner.

"There are many problems of a national nature confronting us, not the least of them is the 5 per cent. tax, which was calculated on a scale of rental prices as they existed years ago. Figuring on that basis it was intended to bring a certain amount of revenue. Unfortunately, the rental of films has mounted sky high since then and we are paying about three times as much as the government expected from us. We cannot pass this tax on as it has been passed on to us by the producers. We have about reached the limit in prices of admission.

"A committee of our organization representing not only the state of New York, but acting under a mandate from many other states, registered this protest at Washington. We were fortunate enough to enlist on our side one of the foremost educators of the country who is now at the head of the Federal Bureau of Education, Dr. Claxton. Dr. Claxton believes that by reason of its great educational value, the film, like the press, should be exempt from taxation.

"In conclusion, I wish to give most sincere and earnest thanks to our executive committee which has met whenever necessary and whose members have gladly given of their time and money rendering service to the organization.

"I want to thank each member of our league for his interest in organization. The fact that we have this great convention here, easily the greatest on record, is due to the energetic work of your state treasurer and his associates and to your executive committee, and in no small measure to the motion picture press, from which we have received very generous treatment. I take this occasion of expressing my thanks to them.

"Gentlemen, the convention is in your hands. What is your pleasure?"

Charles L. O'Reilly was then chosen as chairmen of the convention, with Edward Weinberg of Buffalo as secretary. The session got down to business, Lee A. Ochs, former national and state president and Samuel Trigger, former state president, being escorted to the platform amid applause.

Good Resolutions.

Resolution after resolution followed in rapid succession, including those against forced percentage bookings, against screen advertising, in favor of a national organization of motion picture exhibitors, in favor of supporting the high standards of the picture, and waging warfare against the indecent and so-called sex pictures and against the advance payment system for films.

The convention gave an indication of what will probably be adopted tomorrow in connection with a bill now before the legislature at Albany, which if passed would fix the admission age of boys and girls to motion picture houses in this state at eighteen years, one of the most pernicious bills introduced this year, according to exhibitors.

The convention will oppose the bill, according to the resolution introduced this afternoon and which will be reported by the committee tomorrow. Other resolutions today included one seeking to bring about a uniform and equitable contract between the producer and the exhibitor, the support of Congress in the repeal of the daylight saving law, the disapproval of the Ford Weekly on the grounds that it is an advertising proposition pure and simple.

One of the pleasant features of the afternoon called for the exclusion of Messrs. Cohen, O'Reilly and Berman, officers of the league, from the room for a few minutes. As soon as they were safely out of hearing, a letter was read from the Buffalo Theatrical Managers Association, accompanied by checks aggregating $50, as the nest egg toward a present to the three men who have done so much for the league and the motion picture in this state. The letter gave the delegates a thought that resulted a moment later in the introduction of a resolution that proprietors of houses under 1,000 seating capacity contribute $5 and those with houses seating over 1,000 the sum of $10, the whole amount to go toward a more handsome token to the three men, to be presented tomorrow. The money was quickly forthcoming.

Ochs Pays Respects.

The M. P. T. League of the World, of which John A. Quinn is president, and which is working to raise the standard of pictures and plays, was indorsed in a resolution. The last resolution of the day was offered at 4.30 and gave the support of the league to O. F. R. Bruce and his Americanization pictures. These resolutions were later tabled.

Those present were interested when Lee Ochs was introduced, and particularly in what Mr. Ochs had to say in view of his differences with the league and some of its officers in times past. Mr. Ochs said that he had journeyed to Utica to pay his respects to the convention, but especially to pay a tribute to Mr. Cohen and his associate officers, with whom he said he had not always agreed, but whom he wanted those present to know, had accomplished wonders in the formation of the state body. Mr. Ochs was warmly greeted, his remarks being followed by a few well-chosen words in reply from Mr. Cohen. The session closed at 4.20 o'clock.

Wednesday Morning Session.

Although Wednesday morning's session was scheduled to get under way at 10:30 o'clock, the large amount of work before the respective committees resulted in the session opening about 1:30 o'clock in the afternoon, but from then until the closing it was a case of business every minute. The resolutions that had been introduced Tuesday afternoon and referred to the committees were reported back to the convention, one after another, with the delegates exhibiting intense interest in each. Some of the resolutions were adopted with applause.

The first to be adopted was in regard to that type of screen advertising which is now being smuggled into a considerable number of dramas and comics without the knowledge of exhibitors, but with considerable financial return to producers. The league unanimously adopted a resolution opposing this illegitimate advertising, the resolution calling for the league to take all lawful means to put a stop to it and furthermore to notify national advertisers to that effect, also that no producer has the right to notify advertisers that they can deliver the screens of this state to the showing of such pictures. All exhibitors in this state are to be notified of the league's action.

Favor National Body.

A resolution was adopted in favor of a national organization of motion picture exhibitors, those of this state joining with other states, a convention place to be named at an early date if the plan materializes.

The Ford Weekly came in for plenty of discussion and probably elicited as much interest in those present as any one subject. A resolution was adopted voicing the emphatic disapproval of the weekly under prevailing conditions offered exhibitors, it being the sentiment of the league that the exhibitors should be paid for running a picture rather than to be called upon to pay for the picture, the picture being treated as an advertising message from the Ford company.

The resolution called for the league to discontinue the reel unless some satisfactory arrangement can be made with the Ford company. Some of those present said that they had paid for the weekly for some months in advance and a count was made of those present who had so paid out their money. President Cohen urged a strong resolution being sent directly to Henry Ford as outlining the sentiment expressed today.

Samuel I. Berman
Re-elected executive secretary of League.

"Burglar's Licenses."

A resolution in favor of more uniform and equitable contracts in the purchase of pictures commanded the attention of the league, sample contracts being read. The whole matter was left to the officers of the league, elected for the coming year. William Brandt, of Brooklyn, read a couple of the contracts which were shown to be decidedly one-sided affairs and which he said a certain attorney had recently informed him were not contracts at all but rather a "burglar's license."

The repeal of the daylight saving law was favored in a resolution adopted without comment.

The advance deposit system called forth the protest of the convention, being characterized as "the greatest of abuses in the industry today," the league through a resolution going on record as being decidedly against the continuance of the system and urging exhibitors everywhere to assert themselves. If necessary, the league will invoke legislative relief.

A resolution was adopted to support the high standard of pictures and urging a warfare on vulgar, salacious and sex-pictures and asking exhibitors to withhold their patronage from companies distributing such pictures, also, to send out a list of pictures of a vulgar or salacious nature to members of the league in order that they can guard against showing such pictures.

A resolution was adopted of encouragement and support to independent exchanges and producers.

A resolution seeking the league's endorsement of the M. P. T. League of the World and its president, J. A. Quinn, as well as its objects, was placed on the table.

A resolution seeking to bring about some relief from the present law which fixes the age of minors being admitted to motion picture houses at 16 years, and likewise a bill now before the legislature which would place the age limit at 18 years, was adopted. It is expected that a new bill will be immediately drafted and presented to the legislature, President Cohen planning to meet with Miss Loeb and others interested in child welfare work next week. The present law placing the age of admission at 16 was adopted back in 1909 and is an amendment to the statute adopted two generations ago and intended at that time to keep children from resorts in which intoxicants were sold and which were notorious in other respects, and which had little or no bearing with present conditions and the motion picture.

A resolution was tabled pledging the screens of this state and the influence of the league to C. F. R. Bruce and his Americanization pictures.

Condemn Percentage Bookings.

A resolution was adopted against forced percentage bookings, which were condemned as being an indirect move on the part of producers to obtain the ultimate control of the motion picture theatres, it being asserted that forced percentage bookings were but a partnership with the risk almost entirely on the side of the exhibitor, and equivalent to surrendering the rights of the motion picture theatre to the producers.

A resolution was introduced by Samuel I. Berman, which it is hoped will bring about a better condition of affairs affecting posters. The resolution was referred to the executive committee with power to act.

William Dillon brought up the matter of the present taxation on music and as a result the league will give it its immediate attention and there is a probability of a musical bureau being formed.

In the course of the afternoon's session, Ira Mosher, of Buffalo, presented to President Sydney S. Cohen, on behalf of the league, a beautiful platinum chain; to Samuel I. Berman a silver holder for his eyeglasses, to W. H. Linton pearl cuff buttons and studs, to Charles L. O'Reilly a diamond and sapphire stickpin.

Cohen Applauded and Re-elected.

While both Rochester and Buffalo were out for the 1921 convention, the action on the part of Irving Salyeards, of Rochester, who has been so instrumental in organizing the exhibitors of New York State, was largely responsible in Buffalo relinquishing its claim and Rochester will be given next year's gathering.

It was announced that the zone grievance committee would be a permanent one, serving throughout the year.

A motion to re-elect Sydney S. Cohen as president evoked prolonged applause, being made unanimous by George Roberts, of Albany. Mr. Cohen, in outlining the policies of the league for the coming year made an excellent speech. Samuel I. Berman, of Bensonhurst, was re-elected executive secretary, Ira Mosher, of Buffalo, William Callahan, of Rochester, Fred Elliott, of Albany, and William Dillon, of Ithaca, being re-elected vice-presidents. Jules Michaels, of Buffalo, was elected chairman of the executive committee and William H. Linton, of Utica, was re-elected treasurer. Henry Cole was chosen sergeant-at-arms.

One of the new features of the league this year will be the organizing and maintaining of three distinct service sections, one being located and serving the exhibitors of New York City and vicinity, the second being at Albany and covering that section, the third being located either in Rochester or Buffalo. Mr. Cohen outlined his plans in connection with these service stations and said that they would work in close harmony with the zone grievance committees, and, furthermore, that the importance of the work could be comprehended from the fact that last year the league through its grievance committees had been able to compromise without service stations claims of exhibitors aggregating $100,000. This work will now be considerably broadened. President Cohen said that it was planned to maintain a state organizer, who will visit the exhibitors, hear their complaints and work to bring about a closer organization of the exhibitors of New York State.

Exchange Men Hold Meeting.

During the exhibition convention, the F. I. L. M. clubs of Albany and New York and the Buffalo Exchange Managers' Association held a joint meeting at the Hotel Martin, Tuesday afternoon.

Banquet of Empire State Exhibitors Notable for Flow of Wit and Oratory

By GEORGE BLAISDELL.

THE banquet of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York, held at the Hotel Martin, Utica, on the evening of Tuesday, was one of the more notable functions in the history of exhibitor conventions. About 400 were in attendance. There was a strong list of speakers. James J. Walker, minority leader of the Senate, was toastmaster. It was Mr. Walker's second experience in that capacity at a motion picture occasion, the former instance being the dinner given a year ago to Messrs. Cohen, Berman and O'Reilly at the Waldorf. Mr. Walker stands second to none among the many who have guided after-dinner motion picture ceremonials. He possesses a superabundance of Irish wit. Invariably his introduction puts a speaker on his toes to bring out the best he has in the way of goods.

The speakers included Thaddeus C. Sweet, speaker of the Assembly, and George R. Thompson, majority leader of the Senate. Then there were Mayors James K. O'Connor of Utica, and George R. Lunn of Schenectady. Sophie Irene Loeb, publicist and writer, greatly interested in motion pictures, came up from New York City. So, too, did James Vincent, president of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, and I. E. Chadwick, president of the New York F. I. L. M. Club. President Sydney S. Cohen of the league completed the list.

There were laughs aplenty throughout the two and a half hour program, in spite of the many serious moments when the speakers declared their opinions on vital motion picture topics. The toastmaster at times "kidded" those about to speak, and the comeback never failed to arrive.

Mayor Lunn expressed the hope that Sydney Cohen would not be inflated by the praise bestowed upon him, that he would not be like the hen strutting cacklingly about a small town. One of the townspeople explained to a stranger that the Methodists had just laid the cornerstone of a large church and the hen was laboring under the delusion that she was responsible for it.

When the mayor had finished Toastmaster Walker asked if any one could conceive of Syd Cohen bragging about laying the cornerstone of a Methodist church.

Senator Walker in Action.

"It is not often I have a chance to eat with Senator Thompson," said the toastmaster in introducing the majority leader. "You know during the day they keep thirty-five of the fifty-one members between us. When the curtain drops at the end of the day I want him to feel I have nothing against him. I do want to see him get along—on crutches—and I know there are many imes when he would be glad to attend my funeral. He is a man whom every one in the state admires—not his politics—him. He is wholesome and disgustingly honest. He has been a student of government. Sometimes he is ten years ahead of his time, but he knows what is coming and we don't. Like Mayor Lunn he never will pick out a man smaller than himself—there's no such thing. He picks out such little things as his own party or the traction trust. I never knew him to hit a poor man, but he loves to take a millionaire by the throat and shake him to death."

The foregoing is a sample of the introductions and the interpolations on the part of the toastmaster. Behind it all, however, was the big fact that the leaders of the state governmen are heartily in sympathy with any worthy aims of the motion picture men and that they pledged themselves to do everything consistently possible to aid the exhibitors.

Mayor Lunn made a deep impression on the diners. Like Senator Walker he declared his fondness for motion pictures. From the standpoint of speaking ability the program was notable and demonstrated that "up state" fully can hold its own with the lower part of the commonwealth.

Praises League for Forbearance.

W. H. Linton of Utica, treasurer of the league, following an address of welcome, introduced Senator Walker as toastmaster. The senator in opening praised the officers of the league for their straight-forwardness when coming to Albany seeking legislation, declaring that when they went home they left the members of the legislature grateful for their forbearance. He then introduced "the most distinguished citizen of Utica," Mayor James K. O'Connor.

The mayor's greeting was even heartier than that extended to him at the morning session. The mayor had made a hit with the film men. He expressed his appreciation to the League for bringing "these big time people to Utica."

"Your coming is the first big event we have had here since that fateful sixteenth day of January," continued Mayor O'Connor. "I assure you it is a matter of exceeding regret to me I was not mayor another year."

Speaker Sweet paid his respects to President Cohen, declaring he had made up his mind if the president was a fair sample of the membership of the league, he wanted to meet them all and know them better.

"You men are engaged in a most important work in this old world of ours," said the speaker, "work that is not only entertaining but wonderfully educating. The producers of the films which you gentlemen exhibit bring from the depths of the sea and the heighths of the air the everyday occurrences, give to the people an opportunity to see what otherwise without this wonderful achievement of the film would have been impossible for but a small minority to enjoy. The film brings travel within the vision of the great majority of people, takes their minds off the routine of their daily occupation and puts them to sleep at night with the thoughts of some great picure which has been made possible by the activities of the members of your association."

The speaker praised the work of motion picture men in reconstruction, "in putting the affairs of society back on a sane and normal basis.

"In Albany you know we frequently are beset by the agitator," went on the speaker. "I don't refer to the agitator known as the red, but the agitator who would disturb the orderly conduct of our civil life. We are not moved by that hysteria." Mr. Sweet said the men at the helm in the legislature desired to do all they could to help the exhibitors in order that the public which they serve might derive even a richer benefit than they do now.

Tribute to the Director.

The toastmaster described how after a busy week in Albany he always made it a point when home in New York to see at least two pictures every week end. "I love the movies," he said, "and go to them in preference to the spoken drama. I have seen them in the making in Hollywood. I have seen some of the most distinguished men and women in the profession make their pictures and I have learned something. I appreciate them much more after seeing them from the inside.

"Notwithstanding I was a confirmed fan I found there was something more in pictures than actors and screens, I found that there was a soul in pictures, the very soul of the director, the maker of the picture."

Mr. Vincent spoke interestingly of the work of the director and of the efforts made to create atmosphere so that the players may the better fit into the spirit of the story.

Chadwick Speaks for Exchangemen.

"There was a time not so many years ago," said Mr. Chadwick, "when a gathering of exhibitors as large and as representative as this would have been viewed with no small degree of alarm by manufacturers and distributors. I am happy to say under the competent and wise leadership of the state league no such feeling at this time exists and that there is no prospect any such feeling again will exist." Mr. Chadwick spoke impressively and well and to the credit of himself and the organization of which he is the head.

"I have come up here from New York with a message," said Miss Loeb. "I want to get it over because I feel the time is ripe for that message. I know that we have now in the state exhibitors association a group of men entirely unlike that of which Senator Walker spoke just now. They never could have been the men who had the holes in the wall. One of the things I am particularly interested in is motion picture legislation."

Situation in 1913 Not That of Today.

Miss Loeb reviewed the situation in 1913 at the time the store show legislation was passed, the measures that shut out unaccompanied children from motion picture shows. She said a half million children daily were visiting theatres without proper supervision being provided for them and told of her efforts to have the present law passed.

There was hearty applause when she declared that when it became necessary to take the other side of the argument she went to Albany and helped to kill a censorship measure. She told of how when money was needed for certain child welfare work Lewis J. Selznick promptly drew a check for $5,000.

"This industry is going to be the biggest thing in the world," Miss Loeb continued. "It is just beginning an era of education and entertainment, entering into civil and industrial life as is nothing else in the world. Really, you men are pioneers, but you don't realize it.

Pleads for Stories, Not Stars.

"The picture of the future is going to be the play and not so much the star. (Applause). I don't believe you ought to pay the enormous prices for stars you are doing. (Cheers.) 'The Birth of a Nation' and 'The Miracle Man' were made without stars. Effort should be made to get over stories, not stars. It is up to you exhibitors to say what you want and what you don't want. You must choose the things for your audiences that you think will be of the greatest benefit to them.

"I am intensely interested in the children of our state. Under a comparatively new law the state has appropriated a million dollars to aid widows with children. We are taking care of 17,000 children and 16,000 widows. I want to make it possible for every child to get to the movies just as often as it can. I believe the time has come when we can feel assured the children will be safeguarded.

Believes New Child Law Possible.

"I think if we could prepare some measure that would provide for segregating the children under the care of a big sister, say, so that the public would be sure the children were safeguarded, I believe you could get it through. I have just written a book in which I have laid emphasis on the right of children to play. I believe the mission of the motion picture, if developed to its logical conclusion, is to take the child into the motion picture house. I charge you, gentlemen, with seeing to it that you get the best things. In so doing you are safeguarding your own children and then there will be shown nothing no one else's children ought not to see."

Senator Walker, referring to a point raised by Miss Loeb in which she depreciated inconsistencies in pictures, declared: "My primary purpose in going to the box office is not to be educated—that is forced on me every day. There is one thing, however, to which I take exception and that is the proneness of directors to paint men who occupy public office as carrying a blackjack all the time. I say to you it is a libel and it is one of the things that is keeping good men out of public life. There are men in private life who will not take positions because they have families and don't want to be held up to ridicule as fatheads." The senator promised Miss Loeb his support of any bill giving the kiddies proper pictures under proper circumstances. "If exhibitors with children are satisfied, I am," he said.

Child Welfare Paramount.

"We had a discussion in Schenectady last fall as to whether motion pictures were fit to be shown on Sunday evenings," said Mayor Lunn. "The charge was made against me that I was not interested in the child. Now if there is anything in which I am interested it is in the welfare of the child. All my political philosophy is centered on the child. If every bit of legislation were based on how is this going to affect the children we would have the best kind of legislation.

"When we think of the child we are thinking of the very foundation of society, without which no nation can continue. No nation can become great that neglects its children, it can't go on after a certain time.

"I think there is nothing so pathetic to me as to go by picture house after picture house and see the little ones standing on the outside desiring to be on the inside. Of course, it is absolutely a commercial proposition, but I do believe there should be some kind of commercial development greater than we have at present, whereby on Saturday mornings, if feasible, special pictures for children might be shown under such supervision as would guard against danger from fire or riot.

"People are very careful as to where children go, but educating these children to the right kind of pictures from their youth up provides a splendid opportunity for service on the part of producers and exhibitors.

Not Believer in Censorship.

"I don't believe in censorship. No one can understand the situation as regards censorship so thoroughly as does the man in politics. If you exhibitors go contrary to a definite state of public opinion it is shown in your capacity houses. It is not well that everybody should agree with you. I am glad they don't. It would take the zest out of life. I like a fight. I love a fight. I sometimes express my sympathy for the exhibitor who has to satisfy his clientele."

The Schenectady mayor appealed for the picture with a bit of nonsense, declaring he enjoyed it. Also he spoke for the pictures that carry lessons that sink deep into the human heart. "There are productions that are not to the credit of the industry," he said, "but the exhibitors are by their combining, by their getting together, discovering and carrying out higher ideals."

Screen Goes Where Press Doesn't.

Mr. Lunn paid a tribute to the industry for its work in the war. "Continue to stand for America and all she stands for," he concluded; "her splendid institutions, splendid principles, as eternal as the skies; the processes of government, all orderly processes; these principles are as deep laid on the groundrock of democracy as can be. You can help the great populations to see them. You can reach the great populations the newspapers cannot reach. Your work will be greater. And may the blessings of an appreciative populace be more and more yours, and may the restrictions of a more or less captious minority be removed, that that minority may rise up to serve the people, as I know that is your object."

Senator Promises His Aid.

Senator Thompson remarked on rising that he had discovered the men and women seated at the speakers' table knew more about the motion picture business than the exhibitors and producers. The senator's talk was quaint and it was funny. He referred to Miss Loeb's dislike for slapstick. "One of the best pictures I ever saw was where a fellow hauled off and hit a policeman in the stomach," he said. "I don't know whether there was any message in that or not. You have got to have comedy, because you know if you don't like the feature you can stay for the comedy and forget.

"In Albany only the reputable goes through and only the needed gets by. You came to Albany with a message. Whatever you think you deserve stand by and tell the people that is what you deserve and tell them why. Be just as free and open as is your picture when it attacks problems of life. When you do that you will get everything you deserve." The senator promised his help in all good things and declared incidentally he didn't think censorship necessary.

Mr. Cohen read a letter from the governor. Turning to Miss Loeb the president of the league said the members were prepared to set aside a part of their houses for the children where they would be under the control and guidance of a matron. It was 12:30 when the dinner broke up.

Metro Purchases "Clothes" from Channing Pollock's Pen

METRO announces this week the purchase of the screen rights to "Clothes" from Channing Pollock, who, in colloboration with Avery Hopwood, wrote this powerful drama of high society. Mr. Pollock previously had disposed of the motion picture rights to "Clothes" to another producing organization, but he recently bought back the play and almost immediately afterward sold it to Metro.

This Pollock-Hopwood play, according to intimations, will not be made into a vehicle for any one star but will be done on the screen with an all star cast, and in all probability will come under the special attention of Maxwell Karger, Metro director general.

"Clothes" is the second play from the pen of Avery Hopwood, either as collaborator or sole author, that Metro has acquired. The first of the recently inaugurated series of "fewer and better" pictures produced by Metro was "Fair and Warmer," the farce comedy of cocktails and domestic complications in which Madge Kennedy, John Cumberland and Janet Beecher appeared on the stage. Metro chose "Fair and Warmer" for May Allison and released it in the first round of the "Perfect Thirty-Six" picturizations of big stage successes and best-selling novels.

Many American Salesmen Have Received Bonus Checks

UNDER the American Film Company's profit sharing sales plan the crackerjack "Flying A" salesmen are receiving substantial bonus checks. W. C. Huey and N. Meyer in the Boston territory, W. E. Wallouf and W. Hollander at New York, A. M. Bowles at the San Francisco branch, E. P. Briggs at Denver, F. McFarland at Spokane, William Bugle at Atlanta, J. C. Conners at Los Angeles, F. J. Leonard at Pittsburgh, W. Wickham at Oklahoma City, F. Normand at Salt Lake and Denver, have been the recipients of some extra money on "Six Feet Four" sales.

"This plan gives the boys a proprietary interest in each picture," says C. A. Stimson, general sales manager for the American Film Company. "Instead of dropping the older features and talking only the newest, they are willing to push such successes as 'The Hellion,' 'Six Feet Four' and 'Eve in Exile.'"

When a picture is completed the production cost is figured and each branch is charged with its share, pro rata. After collections are made which cover this pro rated amount on each "Special," the bonus begins to operate.

Utah Exhibitor Praises "The Helion."

H. E. Skinner, manager of the Alhambra, Ogden, Utah, a palatial theatre with a seating capacity of 2,300, says of "The Helion": "It has the title, and is filled with heart interest from start to finish. 'The Helion' thoroughly pleases. It went over great at the Alhambra." The picture features Margarita Fisher in a double role.

"Carmen" Road Show Has Premiere.

The road show sponsored by Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc., consisting of the film, "A Burlesque on Carmen" and "The Carmen Beauties Revue" had its premiere in Kingston, N. Y., recently and is reported to have been a big success.

The revue is a travesty on the opera "Carmen" called "Carmen a la Jazz." The operatic melodies are in jazz style; there is a beauty chorus and Carmelita, a Spanish dancer who dances a Spanish version of the shimmy dance, and there is a special song number, "Carmen," written for this revue.

By SUMNER SMITH.

CHARGES of hypocrisy were passed by motion picture men and clergy-members of the Lord's Day Alliance at a tumultous hearing held on March 8 in the senate chamber at Trenton, N. J., on a bill which would give residents of the state an opportunity to express their desires on the question of a liberal Sunday. Motion picture interests were attacked as seeking to "commercialize the Sabbath," and ministers were charged with attempting to inflict their will on a majority of the people.

One minister replied to the latter charge with the statement that sometimes God and one man constitute a majority. The reply flung back at him was that one man pretending to ally himself with God and attempting to dictate to the majority is now sawing wood in Amerongen.

Another point which the ministers sought to drive home in the minds of New Jersey people was that the motion picture industry as a whole is trying to tell New Jersey what to do. The reply that 70 per cent. of the people of New Jersey favor a liberal Sunday was not refuted by the ministers.

A delegation of twenty-nine motion picture men, including residents of New Jersey as well as New York, went from New York to attend the hearing. Their number was augumented at the capitol.

Introducing the array of speakers in favor of Sunday opening, Dr. Charles Hespe, president of the New Jersey Exhibitors Association, pointed out that the press and a multitude of organizations have come out openly in approval of his stand. He submitted a number of press clippings and letters from the Jersey City Chamber of Commerce and influential citizens of the state.

He declared the movement no spasmodic effort by special interests, but a general demand for a liberal Sabbath, telling how seven grand juries in Hudson County have refused to indict on the strength of the blue laws. He termed the blue laws bad because they encourage people in the belief that all laws on the statute books are not meant to be enforced.

Peter A. Brady, of New York, representing theatrical labor unions, introduced himself by saying that his organization has many members who are residents of New Jersey and that he attended the hearing to speak for them. He declared that the "movies" do more to unite a family than almost any other agency and that working people depend on them for recreation.

Pettijohn on Law and Order.

Charles C. Pettijohn, counsel for the legislative committee of the N. A. M. P. I., said that the most important question now occupying the minds of legislators in this country is the question of law and order. He found the present unrest partly attributable to the existence of laws which are not enforced and therefore are not respected by the people.

"The days of legislation against witches and bath tubs have passed," he said. "Even now it is unlawful in New Jersey to kiss one's wife."

"I said one's wife," replied Mr. Pettijohn, and there was a gale of laughter.

"Figures compiled by the New York State Conference of Mayors," he continued, "show that corner loafers have disappeared in those cities which allow motion pictures on Sunday."

Mr. Pettijohn quoted letters from chiefs of police in Buffalo, Niagara Falls and other cities to show that Sunday motion picture shows have aided law and order on that day. He filed the letters with the committee. Only one, a letter from Rochester, failed to praise the effect on people of Sunday picture shows, and this letter was vague in tenor.

Refutes Commercialism Charge.

"I have had the opportunity to visit many places in the country," said Mr. Pettijohn, "and I have noticed that in some fifteen or sixteen states there is a tendency toward wholesome recreation on Sundays. We motion picture men are not disregarding the church and we are not money-mad.

"We are even now engaged in an Americanization drive. We have invaded the educational field and we have even invaded the churches, if that is the proper word to use.

"We are helping the churches to foster a true community spirit. We want to leave here the impression that we have our ideals and that we stand for constructive things, but not things which stand still."

Ligon Johnson, counsel for the United Managers' Protective Association of New York City, appeared merely to testify as to the effect which liberal Sunday laws have had on residents of different localities. He pointed out that the regular theatres are not affected by the bill and that he was speaking solely on behalf of motion pictures.

Newark Mayor Pleads for Poor.

One of the most forcible speeches of the afternoon, from a New Jersey point of view, was made by Mayor Charles P. Gillen, of Newark. He proved himself a man of deep convictions as well as a real orator in describing the tenement house sections of Newark, where many poor families are crowded together in a small space.

He told of their limited means and how they want recreation on Sunday. They have no automobiles in which to ride and no golf clubs to visit, and most of them go to church and want some recreation out of church hours on Sundays. Working six days of the week, they must have some pleasure on the seventh day, he said.

The speeches had worked the gallery up to a high pitch of excitement when United States Commisioner John A. Matthews, of Newark, began to speak. His mingling of humor and sarcasm with facts brought down the gallery time and again, until it looked as though the interested visitors to the senate chamber were almost unanimously with him. It developed later, however, that the ministers had strong moral support present in the person of scores of women.

Matthews Charges Hypocrisy.

Mr. Matthews opened his appeal for the bill with the declaration that the bill is one to remove hypocrisy. He said that legislations of morals and religion is impossible and that it is up to the churches to fill themselves as much as it is up to the motion picture theatres to fill themselves. He declared that the ministers "do not preach in the terms of today, although the hearts of men are now craving the gospel as much as they did years ago." He said that one had to stand in line an hour after church hours on Sunday in order to get in a Newark picture theatre conducted lawlessly. He wanted it legalized.

As had been expected, the Rev. Johnson, speaking for the ministers, prefaced their attack on the bill with the statement that "it is unfortunate outsiders have to tell New Jersey people what to do."

The Rev. D. S. Hamilton, of Paterson, quoted an unnamed exhibitor as saying that there are many immoral pictures nowadays and "no fair censorship." He preferred the "voice of God to the voice of the people," declaring that "in every community there are those who must be protected against themselves." He repeated that "a large proportion of the people do not know what is best for them."

Quinn Voices Desires of Labor.

The Rev. Harvey L. Wyatt, of Jersey City, made counter charges of hypocrisy. He said it was a question of "conservatism opposed to commercialism." He feared that a $250,000 picture theatre to be built next door to his church would "undermine the church."

Dr. Hespe asked permission for President Arthur Quinn, of the State Federation of Labor, to speak as he had arrived late.

"These gentlemen are guided by the belief that the church is the only agency from which good can come," said President Quinn. "They have said that while labor is represented as favoring the bill, labor has never taken any definite action in favor of it. Such action was taken at the Atlantic Ctiy convention."

Speaking during the rebuttal, in favor of the bill, Commissioner Matthews said. "Almighty God and one may be a majority, but one man who said that is now sawing wood in Amerongen."

Big Delegation from New York.

"Etc." (By P. S. Harrison.)

You must have read some time in your life books in which vivid, colorful descriptions of springtime were given, descriptions painting nature 'n all its beauty —the fragrance of the atmosphere, the trees in full bloom, the petals of blossoms dropping in the gentle breeze, the birds, now perched on a bough and singing their happy carols, now flying from branch to branch, frightened by the sudden cry of the shepherd, etc.

You remember the feeling it gave you? Pictures the author described swarmed to your mind, and you felt that lazy feeling which is natural in that time of the year. You called them masterful descriptions, because the author, by skillful grouping of words, was able to make you feel what he felt.

These are the emotions this picture arouses, not because of the beauty of the outdoor scenery shown, but on account of the skilful combination of scenery and story.

Speculation of Sensational Character Features Western Theatre Developments

SPECULATION in the prosperous Middle West has turned from oil wells, farm lands and automobile tire factories to the motion picture theatre. Probably no part of the United States has more small investors than the rich corn-belt states of Iowa and Nebraska, and probably no part of the country has seen more sensational speculation on a numerous scale than have these two states. It is a rare citizen in the Middle West who has not ventured sums all the way from hundreds of dollars to hundreds of thousands of dollars during the last year. And now most of this spirit of speculation, it seems, has centered on the motion picture houses.

"I know of forty fairly prominent theatres in Iowa and Nebraska that have changed hands within the last three months," said Sidney Meyers, manager of the Fox exchange in Omaha. It is not likely that one manager would know of all the changes in ownership. Other exchange men frankly place the number of changes at at least 100, and several said it would be easier to furnish a list of theatres that have not changed owners than it would be to record those that have been sold.

Speculation Just Starting.

Film men are watching the situation with frank interest. They think it spells improvement for the motion picture theatre situation in their territory. For years Iowa and Nebraska small towns have muddled along, many of them with made-over stores, and most of the others with opera houses altered to a motion picture theatre or a small house with a timidly ornamental front and little else. Hopes are expressed that the era of speculation will develop into a wave of new building activities. The speculation movement is not more than four months old and appears to be just starting. No one will venture a guess as to when it probably will end.

Exhibitors, most of whom have plodded along for several years hoping for better days, have not sold their houses in order that they might quit the business. The financial inducement in almost every case was so strong that they felt they could not afford to refuse it. Without one known exception these sold-out exhibitors are willing and anxious to buy again, or to actually start a motion picture theatre somewhere. The field is being combed by them for motion picture theatre possibilities.

Two Reasons Suggested.

Film men attribute the speculation in motion picture theatres to two things: splendid, profit-making business and the building up of strings of houses. The third element of speculation—buying at the present price with the expectation of selling at a future higher price—is based upon the present and future prosperity of the business, and upon the hope that the house will be demanded at a name-your-own price by some syndicate.

The motion picture theatre business was never more prosperous in Iowa and Nebraska. The Dakotas, heretofore not considered a promising field, are also more prosperous than ever before. Increased admission prices are announced here and there constantly, without a falling off in business. Exploitation of big pictures and the booking of big features for longer runs have become the rule.

Hostettler Buys Three.

The development of strings of theatres is progressing as never before. Last week it was announced that J. E. Hostettler, who started by gaining control of three houses in his home town of Waterloo, Iowa, and who now has fourteen theatres in fairly large towns throughout the two states, had purchased the Lyric, Rialto and Liberty theatres from Joe Gorman in Lincoln, the capital city of Nebraska. The consideration was said to be not less than $150,000.

Many Mammoth Theatres Planned.

A. H. Blank, who at the present time controls the largest theatres in the key cities of the two states, and who has a string of sixteen of the largest houses in Iowa and Nebraska, recently bought theatres in Sioux City, Iowa, and in Columbus, Nebraska. Mr. Blank is planning to build another large house, costing nearly $250,000, in South Omaha, the big packing center of Iowa and Nebraska. There are constant rumors of his plan to build elsewhere. too.

The World Realty Company, which now owns the Sun, Moon and Muse, big downtown houses in Omaha, has announced its plans to build a mammoth motion picture palace at Fifteenth and Douglas streets, Omaha, at a total cost of nearly $1,000,000.

Huge signs are now displayed on the buildings to be razed, announcing that work on the new theatre will begin this spring. This house, it is expected, will surpass anything at present in Nebraska. The Rialto, a Blank house, is now the largest motion picture house in Omaha.

Larry Longnecker, wealthy young exhibitor of Sioux City, owner of the Sun Theatre in that city, announced last week his plans to build a 2,000 seat house at a cost of at least $300,000. "I have been holding a site that cost me $140,000 and I can't afford to hold it and wait for the price of building materials to come down," he said, when asked why he would build in the face of such high prices.

Moreland Is Adding to String.

A prominent exhibitor in a city not far from Omaha said he intended to build a large house this spring, at a cost of more than $250,000, with the expectation of selling it immediately after it is finished to a big syndicate that wants to enter that town.

K. Moreland, who for years contented himself with the Majestic Theatre in Missouri Valley, Iowa, has recently accumulated six theatres in some of the prominent Iowa and Nebraska centers, and frankly announces that he is far from reaching the end of the string of theatres he expects to control.

Wall Street Capital Not Needed.

The Adams Circuit, which has built up a string of more than a score of theatres in Southwestern Iowa, is understood to be in the market for more houses.

No Wall Street or big company capital has entered Iowa or Nebraska openly—it has not been needed. Apparently the middle western exhibitors are able to handle the local situation, and they are doing it at a startling pace. Not many plans for new houses this spring have been announced, but the announcements are expected daily, as things are happening fast.

COLMAN F. DAY'S story of the Maine forests, a story of love and faith packed with melodrama, has been made into a multi-reel production by Otto Bollman and Roy Clements, of Los Angeles, and W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has acquired the distribution of it, announcing the release date for April 18.

Mitchell Lewis is the star of "King Spruce," and is declared to enlist work of power and conviction. "King Spruce" has long been sought by producers as being one of the best stories of its kind still unproduced. In the face of spirited bidding several months ago Mr. Bollman and Mr. Clements, who control the Dial Film Company, obtained "King Spruce" from Mr. Day and began production of the story without flourish or publicity.

It is said the finished work bears the stamp of quality and sincerity and is one of the most satisfactory picturizations of a big novel that has been made in the industry in these past two years. The picture will be introduced to the trade by the Hodkinson organization.

BOSTON has a motion picture forum, an outgrowth of the open forum meeting. William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, dropped in at the forum during a visit to Boston. In an address from the floor he stated that the motion picture forum idea had made a deep impression upon him.

"The motion picture industry," said Mr. Brady, "will be glad to co-operate with you in this work. It offers a means of aiding public opinion in the consideration of some of the most serious problems of the day—problems as important to the welfare of this country as any which it faced during the war. To emphasize the importance of this forum idea I agree to furnish Ford Hall (where the Boston forums are held) with a modern film projector."

In the ordinary forum meeting a musical program is followed by a lecturer, who speaks for about an hour on a subject on which he is especially informed. Afterwards he answers questions from persons in the audience, who have other points of view or who wish to have certain points made entirely clear.

In the motion picture forum the motion picture is substituted for the lecturer. Since the picture cannot reply to questions, George W. Coleman, prominent Bostonian, founder of the motion picture forum and of the Open Forum National Council, gives the Ford Hall audience an opportunity itself to answer the questions raised. The possibilities of the new method of stimulating thought and discussion are very wide.

The evening when Mr. Brady attended the forum, the picture shown was "The Miracle Man." After the film Mr. Coleman framed these questions: Was it wholesome? Was it technically a well-made film? Was the story interesting, true to life or exaggerated? Was the moral lesson what it should have been? Were there any defects in the film?

The volley of cemments represented every point of view. Psychology, religion, economics and other questions were brought up.

David Picker Gives New Film Theatre to Upper Broadway

THE opening of the Rio Theatre at Broadway and 159th street, New York City, on Thursday evening, March 4, was marked by success. At 7:30 p. m. a crowd had congregated outside, which made it impossible for late comers to get near the doors. And when representatives of the press finally managed to gain an entrance by the stage door, it was found that a goodly number had already found their way into the building.

The Rio Theatre is equipped to seat comfortably about 2,700 persons, divided between its orchestra seats, boxes, loges and double balcony. The fittings of the theatre are arranged in a color scheme of which the predominating colors are blue and gold. The rest rooms and smoking rooms, carpeted and upholstered in peacock blue, are lighted from wall bracket groups of softly shaded yellow. In the main theatre an opalescent effect is used in the decorations and lighting in which different shades of red are evident. In every instance the hand of the artist is seen, even to the design of black on gold of the asbestos curtain.

When at last the program commenced under subdued lights, an orchestra of twenty-seven pieces was revealed against a back curtain of dark blue velvet, presumably. The parting of this curtain a few moments later brought into view the moonlit gardens of a fanciful palace.

To Francis A. Mangan is due the intelligent assembling of the program which consisted of an organ selection by Prof. R. H. Warren; "The Awakening of the Beautiful," an orchestral number dedicated to David V. Picker, manager of the Rio; "The Rio Grande" and "Ancient Spain"; "The Birth of the Rio," symbolized by classic dances by pupils of the Helen Moller Temple of the Dance; "Rio Review of World Affairs"; Serenade, "Sing, Smile, Slumber," by Gounod—violin, 'cello, flute; Comedy, "Teasing the Soil" (Carter De Haven); Prologue; Feature, "The Street Called Straight" (Goldwyn); "Star Spangled Banner." The orchestra was conducted by Saul Klein.

The entrance and mezzanine promenade were filled with beautiful floral tributes from the various film exchanges, and friends of Mr. Picker. This is only one more added to the chain of successful moving picture houses controlled by Mr. Picker.

THREE important events recently crowded themselves into one week in Los Angeles, and Louis B. Mayer took advantage of the fact to recognize them with a dinner served in the dining room at his studio.

The first of these events was the purchasing of the Kinema Theatre and the taking over of the First National Exhibitors Circuit in Los Angeles by Sol Lesser and the Gore Brothers. The second was the planned return to Minneapolis of Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Finkelstein. Mr. Finkelstein of Finkelstein & Rubin, has been visiting in California, getting acquainted with his First National brothers in the producing and releasing ends of the business. The third was the farewell appearance of Mr. and Mrs. Grosberg who left on an early train the next morning for Boston. Mr. Grosberg, who is allied financially with Louis B. Mayer, had made an extended visit to the Coast to see the Anita Stewart and Mildred Harris Chaplin productions in the making.

Among those present as the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Mayer at the dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Sol Lesser, Mr. and Mrs. M. Gore, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Grosberg, Mr. and Mrs. A. Linick of Chicago, Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Finkelstein, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jose, Col. William Selig, J. McCann, Miss Virginia Norden, Bennie Zeidman, Rudolph Cameron, Miss Florence Browning, Mr. and Mrs. William Furber, George Morris, George Stewart, Jack Neville and Charles R. Condon.

By WILLARD C. PATTERSON.

AS an exhibitor and in charge of Sig Samuels' theatre interests in Atlanta I want to give an immediate and absolute endorsement to the statement published this week from J. D. Williams, manager of First National Exhibitors Circuit, pointing out to independent theatre owners the need for an instant show-down with the producer-distributor concerns that are buying, leasing and building theatres with the certain intention of trying to oust the present-day independents and of establishing a theatre monopoly whereby they can control production sources.

I have always been an independent and I always will be. Here in the Southeast there is evidence galore that every word Mr. Williams wrote as a warning of the plans and intentions of the would-be-exhibitors among the producer-distributor factions is absolute fact. Make no mistake, whether you are a quick thinker and an observer, or just "content with things as they are," you have got to get aboard one of two ships immediately.

Independent Films Have Quality.

Either you are an independent exhibitor who will fight for independence, and do the things you can do, without loss of money, time or energy, to compel the producer-distributors to stay out of exhibition and stop their plans for a national chain to compete with independently owned and operated theatres, or you are going to find yourself one of the fatalities aboard the other boat, a victim because you slept. Wake up to the actual situation. Withdraw your busines from the combinations that are going to compete with you mighty soon. You don't need to worry about productions. There are plenty of excellent pictures on the market that have been made by independent stars and producers for independent exhibitors. No? I'll prove it.

I haven't shown a program picture in the Criterior Theatre for two years. I have depended entirely upon the independently made pictures to provide the quality and variety and degree of star and story value necessary to the profitable conduct of Atlanta's best known first run house. And the Criterior, so I am told, is far from being a failure. In fact, and I know this myself, it has a remarkable clientele of regular patrons.

Charges Highest Admissions.

Of equal importance to you as an independent exhibitor who must help to drive the producer-distributors out of the theathe field by supporting independent producers until the other fellows are willing to go back home where they belong, and be good, the Criterion Theatre, using only independent releases, is charging the highest admissions of any motion picture house in Atlanta.

Why should I pay out money in rentals every week, only to wake up some morning and find a new theatre across the street, built with some of the dollars that I spent in buying film service from the producer-distributors who bought or erected it? Not me. I want to stay in the business as an exhibitor. I don't propose to work for some combine of studio, cut-off sheet and box office as house manager, on wages, not salary. So I will not give my support to any proposition that will give competition to the Criterion.

What Will His Competitor Do?

There's a big house to open soon in Atlanta as the property of the concerns with multiple ambitions. They're going to use their own films in it, naturally. And what will happen to the independent exhibitor who has been using that particular service to compete with me as a first-run proposition. He'll either take second choice from the independent market, book in another program service until such a time as that program company decides to build there, or he will play the producer-distributor house or the Criterion second run, and perhaps third, because I think the present second run accounts will make a big fight before they consent to become third or fourth run exhibitors.

That is just one illustration. Mr. Willaims said there were many of them. He is right. The South has been stampeded in the last six months with rumors, reports and threats about what certain producer-distributors would do to acquire competing theatres if their present accounts did not "come across" as demanded. And the funny part of it is that a number of exhibitors foolishly lost their heads, saw disaster before them, and took their medicine. The same tactics are being tried, or will be, in other territories, according to what I have learned of the plans that sponsor them.

Won't Aid "Theatre Monopoly"

I am giving my entire support to the independent stars and producers. They are my salvation, and I don't propose to help along with Criterion money any proposition working for a theatre monopoly so it can subsidize these independent studio forces. I have found, as a week after week comparison, that the independently made pictures can more than hold their own with the best of the program specials and regular releases. You'll make the same discovery, if you don't already know it.

I have booked the First National attractions consistently, because there is not a star or producer releasing through that organization who is using any of the money he receives from Criterion rentals to come into Atlana, or any other city or town, and build theatre competition for me or any other exhibitor. They are independent in every sense of the word. They have still another great appeal to me. Each producing organization with a First National releasing contract is an individual unit, a separate organization, unaffiliated in any way with any other studio organization. There is no combination of producing talent, no one-man control of their work and releases which can make the strong carry the weak. Each of them stands on his or her own ability, and that is why they are delivering the goods.

Latest in Neckpieces

"Let's Have a Show-Down."

Were I a program exhibitor I wouldn't hesitate a moment to join in the demand for a show-down. I can't go any farther than I have in giving 100 per cent. support to independent producers, excepting to make public the fact that the Criterion has not needed program pictures to make it famous in Atlanta and the territory. I don't deny that program releases, of any brand, are not good, worthy booking propositions. But I do believe, with Mr. Williams, that they are not entitled to exhibitor patronage until the people who create them stop their attempts to dominate the theatre situation with the exhibitors' own money, or with any other money, recruited from any source.

Let's have a show-down. If producer-distributors want theatres, let them go get them, but not with your money. You know, as well as I do, that they cannot succeed in further encroachments into our domain without the financial strength they are receiving from film rentals to you fellows who are using their service. Drop them until they call quits. Then, when they promise to behave, get behind them again and let quality as between program releases and independently made productions decide to whom you will go for pictures. But compel a show-down.

If you don't the finish is in sight for a great many of you. Keep on paying over your money for rentals, part of which will go into the theatres, and it won't be long before the number and scope of the producer-distributor owned houses will be sufficient to enable them to reduce the number of independent stars and producers to a half, or less, of what it is now. They'll have the houses to absorb quantities of releases. They'll do it, even at a loss, until they've got everything you want and need, and until you have to close up and get out. Then they'll get back their losses at a handsome profit by squeezing tight the grip on production sources. And the stars and directors who get caught in the fight will find a stone wall cutting off all progress beyond the limits the controlling minds in the monopoly permit.

Pictures in Cutting Room.

The cutting rooms of the Fort Lee and Bronx studios of Lewis J. Selznick are both busy, according to a studio report. "A Fool and His Money," starring Eugene O'Brien, is one of the productions being worked on, as is "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes," the latest Elaine Hammerstein picture to be completed. Several of the screen versions of the editorials of Herbert Kaufman are now in the cutting room.

More Theatres Will Keep Times Square World's Greatest Moving Picture Area

IN his statement published last week in Moving Picture World, Adolph Zukor said that "the Criterion Theatre will soon be converted into a theatre for long run showings of Paramount Artcraft pictures with presentations arranged by Hugo Riesenfeld." This plan seems likely to very soon reach fruition.

The Criterion is in the Forty-ninth street end of the immense building originally built by Oscar Hammerstein and opened as Olympia. At the Forty-fifth street end is the New York Theatre, now conducted (in conjunction with the roof theatre) by Marcus Loew as a picture house, changing daily.

The Olympia property was recently purchased by interests controlling Famous Players-Lasky, and Marcus Loew will ultimately vacate the New York and roof theatres. Just across Forty-fifth street, at the Broadway corner, Loew is now razing buildings to make way for a new structure combining an office building and Loew's State Theatre.

Criterion's Last Stage Show.

Now running at the Criterion is the recently begun engagement of Lionel Barrymore in "The Letter of the Law," a stage production that will be the last dramatic show to play the Criterion. With nice spring weather here, the run of Barrymore's prosperity may be restricted, and it is safe to assume that Famous Players-Lasky will be showing pictures there by the middle of April.

Considerable reconstruction will be necessary to fit the house for pictures—a chief essential being an entrance and lobby suited to the requirements of screen presentations and the crowds attracted. The Criterion has always been a disagreeable place to reach, because the entrance was right on the sidewalk, at the corner, where street crowds added to the jam and confusion at the door.

When Loew will quit the New York is not stated, but it is safe to assume that Famous Players-Lasky will not let an established picture house like the New York get away from them. Presumably that firm will soon be operating two cinemas in the Olympia building. That seems logical, if there is any logic in show business.

Riesenfeld Will Be Busy.

Hugo Riesenfeld is now managing director of the Rivoli and Rialto, two well established cinemas known to be in possession of interest favorable to Famous Players-Lasky. With the third house to take care of, Riesenfeld will be called upon to test his ingenuity in diversifying triple presentations in close opposition to each other.

Subscribers to Moving Picture World who are constantly reading publicity and advertising references to Times Square as a moving picture section will be interested in these and other details of the greatest moving picture exhibition and exploitation center on the face of the earth. There are now within a stretch of street running through Times Square and extending from Fortieth to Fiftieth streets seven theatres exclusively devoted to pictures. The Capitol at Fiftieth street is the newest and largest of the Times Square cinemas. There is much gossip and many rumors centering around this place, and every rumor that races down street is denied at the Capitol.

What About the Capitol?

Because of its immense size, not everybody who sees the pictures is pleased. There is a diversity of entertainment—plus pictures—in the Capitol's arrangement, and those who go there for pictures and must remain through vaudeville and "girl numbers" before they get screen action do not come away entirely satisfied.

Figuring the Capitol in as a picture house while forecasting next season on Broadway may not be a safe proposition this far ahead. However, pictures are there now, in close opposition to the Rivoli (just a block away) and the Strand, still another block down Broadway.

The Rialto is the center of another group of close opposition—the Stanley half a block down Seventh avenue and the Broadway, at Forty-first street. The Saturday night and Sunday crowds "mill" up and down Broadway in such throngs that all of the moving picture theatres have capacity—and the picture that "breaks a record" must figure largely on how much wall paper can be torn from the side walls.

At Broadway, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth, facing directly onto Times Square, is the Putnam building, an office structure some time ago purchased by Famous Players-Lasky interests certainly with an eye to its ideal location for theatre property. Some of the present tenants have long leases and may hold up whatever plans were originally contemplated.

Still More to Come.

In this connection a sidelight of interest shines on the Shanley people, who run a popular and high-priced restaurant—popular, these days, because it is high-priced. The Shanleys had a five-year lease, dating from just before the Putnam building changed hands.

Prohibition became operative, and when the new landlords stepped into conference with the Shanleys it looked like a quick bargain and cancel the lease. The Shanleys, fortified with their lease, asked $500,000—just a hundred thousand cold for each year ahead of them.

Negotiations are still under way, it is said, with the Fiume, and Italy, and the Adriatic situation a kindergarten affair in comparison. The Shanleys are selling bread at $10 a loaf and ginger ale at $5 a "scuttle," while one or two more picture theatres on Times Square dance attendance.

Referring again to the Criterion, it was in this house that Vitagraph, in 1914, did some pioneering. They rented the house and were the first producing firm to lease a theatre on Broadway to show exclusively their own offerings.

Vitagraph entered into the deal as a publicity scheme more than in the hope of making great profit. They installed a $30,000 Wurlitzer-Hope-Jones unit orchestra and gave their productions an elaborate presentation. There was shown J. Stuart Blackton's "The Battle Cry of Peace."

Harper Brothers' Workers See "Huckleberry Finn" Picture

IN the historic old building on Franklin Square, New York City, that has long been associated with the name of Mark Twain, some 500 employes of Harper & Brothers, the publishers, saw the Paramount Artcraft production of "Huckleberry Finn" on the afternoon of Friday, March 5. The staff of the publishing house was out in full force—officers and directors, the council of the literary department and of Harper's Magazine, the bookkeepers, stenographers, clerks, printers and office boys.

With the booth for the projection machine towering over the educational department, and the screen, at the other end of the long hall, overshadowing the bailiwick of the magazine's advertising manager, the long rows of solemn roll top desks were pressed into service as seats for the "movie" audience.

Greenland Hooks Up with Rothacker Eastern Force

ALBERT K. GREENLAND, for the past four years advertising manager of Cine Mundial, has resigned his position with the Spanish Moving Picture World, effective March 13. Mr. Greenland on the following Monday will join the eastern sales forces of the Rothacker Manufacturing Company, under the immediate direction of J. A. Leggett, manager of the eastern department of that progressive Chicago concern.

The departure of Mr. Greenland will be a matter of real regret not only among his associates on the husky young monthly in the upbuilding of which on the business side he has had so conspicuous a share, but also on the part of the members of the staff of the Moving Picture World. Mr. Greenland from the beginning has been a strong believer in the future of Cine Mundial. He has seen it grow in a little over four years from nothing to a circulation of 12,000 copies each month. He has seen it firmly established throughout Latin America.

Following his graduation from the University of Cincinnati in 1910 Mr. Greenland entered the office of the Billboard and was immediately assigned to the Chicago office for training. The head of that office at that time is the present head of the Rothacker company. Mr. Greenland was sent to Chicago to observe the superior methods employed by Mr. Rothacker in the conduct of the branch. The friendship established there has continued through the intervening decade.

Mr. Greenland is an authority on film export and state right subjects, having paid a great deal of attention to these angles of the motion picture business. He has a host of friends in the trade at large who will join his associates at 516 Fifth avenue in wishing him a full measure of success in his new affiliation.

Dallas Evangelist Raps Sunday Closing; Fort Worth Exhibitors Win Over Clergy

DURING these windy days of March, North Texas is seeing a truly remarkable conflict in regard to Sunday amusements. Dallas and Wort Worth are the storm centers. The rest of the Lone Star State is looking on with the keenest of interest. The conflict is between the great force of public opinion and a clearly defined Sunday closing law which has been on the Texas statute book since the days of early statehood.

The early closing fight has spread from Fort Worth to Dallas. A meeting of the Methodist Pastors' Association which demanded the closing of moving picture theatres on Sunday was passed up to the Dallas Pastors' Association, which met March 1. A stormy debate followed the introduction of the question before the general pastors' meeting. The clergy were divided and no decision was reached. Another meeting of the pastors has been called for early next week.

The Rev. Randolph Ray, dean of St. Matthew's Episcopal Cathedral in Dallas, issued a statement, following efforts to keep Fort Worth closed on Sunday, to the effect that moving pictures provided clean and necessary amusement for the masses. He pointed out that picture shows in Dallas are properly controlled and are orderly and educational and improving in their nature. He strongly opposed the Sunday closing move.

Evangelist Denounces Closing.

The Rev. J. G. Seltzer, well known Texas evangelist, who is holding Sunday revival meetings in Dallas, from the pulpit denounced the Sunday closing movement, declaring that it was impossible to legislate Texans into the observance of Sunday contrary to the dictates of their own individual consciences. He told his congregation that man was entitled to recreation on the day of rest and that no law should force him to restrict his personal liberty during his days of leisure. He deplored what he styled efforts to link church with state through Sunday legislation.

Mayor Frank W. Wozencraft, 25 years old, who was elected mayor of Dallas after a brilliant military career overseas, has put his foot down firmly on the agitation for Sunday closing in Dallas. Mayor Wozencraft is the younger mayor of any major city in the country.

Mayor Is "Unalterably Opposed."

"The city administration of Dallas sees to it that the people secure only clean amusements," Mayor Wozencraft says. "There is no reason why thousands of Dallas people should be deprived of their Sunday recreation through moving picture theatres. The shows do not open Sunday morning. Dallas people consequently can go to church and later in the day enjoy themselves at a good wholesome picture show. I am unalterably opposed to inflicting ancient blue laws on Dallas. People can profit by amusements based on a high plane, such as are the Dallas theatres, more than being left to their own devices on Sunday."

Fort Worth was closed on the last Sunday in February. The theatres will open there during March and continue open. Public opinion in that city has forced a withdrawal of the bitter opposition on the part of certain of the pastors and of a kindred law enforcement association to Sunday amusements.

Planned to Enforce Law in Toto.

With the shutting down of moving picture theatres in Fort Worth late in February, business men, working men, professional men and people in all walks of life commenced an earnest movement to the end that the Sunday closing law, if enforced against theatres, should be made effective in regard to every industry. Street car men were seen and signed up to promise the non-operation of cars on Sunday, drug stores actually closed on one Sunday, printers were urged to stop the publication of Sunday papers, the restaurant proprietors' association was listed to close every eating place in the city if the theatres were discriminated against. A total paralysis of business was promised should the Sunday closing law be made effective against the theatres.

Promise No "Overt Action."

Business men of Fort Worth, seeing the harm that such law enforcement would do their city and cognizant of the fact that other Texas towns were allowing their amusements to run on Sundays, called a mass meeting. Preachers, amusement men and business men were present. It was succinctly agreed that while the pastors did not withdraw an inch from their declaration that the Sunday laws should be enforced, that no overt action should be taken against the theatres. The meeting was held on Saturday, too late for Fort Worth theatre men to order film from their exchanges or advertise their Sunday attractions. The theatres were closed on Sunday, February 29, therefore, but will be open on Sunday, March 7.

Dallas Situation Complicated.

It has been pointed out at the various meetings which have discussed Sunday closing that while the state law is clear on the matter, the selection of an unbiased jury in any law cases is practically impossible. Both defense and prosecution will exhaust their challenges since every talesman will have a fixed opinion on the matter. The jury when finally selected will invariably bring in a verdict of not guilty. Such has been the result of test cases in recent years.

The Dallas situation is complicated, since the city claims that under the home rule law of Texas, granting certain self-governmental rights to cities of over 100,000 people, Dallas theatres are entitled to keep open on Sunday. A vote on the matter was taken four years ago under the home rule law and the city of Dallas gave a majority for Sunday amusements of about five to one, with over 15,000 ballots cast.

THAT moving pictures are rapidly growing up, in so far as the presentation of programs is concerned, is further evidenced by the new trend of thought on the part of exhibitors in arranging the complete show around a central idea.

Now that the production of moving pictures includes reels of every nature, covering every sort of story known to mankind, it has been proved possible by representative exhibitors to build a program from overture to exit march that blends more perfectly than is the case when the feature is chosen independent of the short reels, or vice versa.

Probably some of the most significant cases of the new idea in presentation are those cited this week by Prizma in an announcement which tells of how various theatres have booked the whole show with the view in mind to have the program not alone harmonious, but hinged upon one idea throughout. These instances include programs in which Prizma Color Pictures have been used in conjunction with suitable five-reelers, comedies and news weeklies.

Rialto "Good Spirits Week."

One of the most emphatic examples of the success of the new idea, which shows signs of boosting the popularity of any house where it is followed out, was seen in the Rialto Theatre presentation in New York during the week of March 7. Managing Director Hugo Riesenfeld had decided to make the whole week a "Good Spirits Week," and with this in mind he selected each subject to dovetail into a unit instead of running the program in distinct units.

The show started with an overture whose name and harmony at once conjured thoughts of bygone days in the minds of the audience. "Good spirits" in connection here meant also "departed spirits" of more than 2.75 per cent. Then followed a news reel which had current views regarding prohibition, anti-prohibition and other things in connection with the spirits which are no more. With the last foot of this reel the curtains parted and a baritone sang a "drinking" song.

Going back to the screen, without breaking the theme, the audience was taken into the confidence of ex-beverage-mixers. The Prizma reel, "The Ghost of John Barleycorn," in colors so truly natural that every dry and parched throat in the house was drawn reluctantly toward the ice water cooler, went more deeply into the "good spirits" idea and completely warmed the audience up to the scheme. "The Ghost of John Barleycorn" shows how most of the best drinks were mixed and clever subtitles keep the interest at the highest pitch.

In the music for this was noticed "The Alcoholic Blues" and other airs familiar to all Sahara residents. Next came another song, by a young woman, which also had its proper connection with the "good spirits" scheme, and then the flicker sheet unreeled a comedy drama, "The Six Best Cellars," which needs no explanation in view of the title. The comedy, at the end of the show, also communicated with the spirits, and when it was over the audience, although feeling possibly dryer, was much in accord with the way the show had been arranged.

A Touch of Color Adds to Bill.

It is claimed that in working out a program on this central idea the touch of color aided by Prizma is a large element of the success of the presentation. The exploitation material available, it is cited, is also of the best and most pliable, while at the same time inexpensive.

Samuel L. Rothapfel used the Prizma reel "Gowns" in connection with an Elsie Ferguson picture in which the actress wore many wonderful creations. This was at the California Theatre in Los Angeles, and Mr. Rothapfel is quoted as saying that the presentation was one of the most satisfying he had ever arranged. The Prizma color reel, in addition to carrying out the central idea of the show, impressed its colors upon the eye of the spectator with the result that the color scheme was seemingly incorporated in the five-reel picture.

The State Theatre, Trenton, N. J., showed the Prizma reel "China" with "Broken Blossoms." This, as in the case of Rothapfel, proved successful mainly through the blending of pictures into one idea. The California, of San Francisco, used "Gowns" with "Everywoman" and reported success. Many other instances of the central idea in arranging programs are coming to light, and it is predicted that before long the majority of the houses in the United States will have tried it out with success.

Geoffrey Nye Seeing to It That Japan Sees Goldwyn Pictures

A LETTER has been received from Geoffrey Nye, far eastern representative of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, who has reached Yokohama, Japan, in the course of his travels. Mr. Nye left New York several months ago with a supply of Goldwyn pictures which he is distributing in the Orient and Australasia.

After commenting on the popularity of motion pictures in Japan, where there are about 700 theatres, most of which are building up a clientele on the strength of Amerison films rather than thost of European make, Mr. Nye referred to the difficulties to be met in handling pictures in Japan.

He writes: "The entry of foreign cinema prints into Japan is carefully watched by the customs authorities, the regulations calling for a high rate of duty. This duty must be paid before the prints are released from bond. No provision has been made for a rebate on sample prints when the same are taken out of the country."

Considering that Mr. Nye carries nearly 100,000 feet of sample prints for trade screening purposes, he found the stringent regulations a rather difficult problem to surmount. After many interviews with officials, however, each one with a man higher up, he arranged for the release of his prints under a guarantee and providing that they should be in charge of customs official.

Since his last visit to Japan, Goldwyn's far eastern representative finds a marked increase in the interest shown in photoplays and a broadening of the prospects for the American producer who cultivates the market.

Associated Exhibitors Will Soon Make Announcement

THE Associated Exhibitors, Inc., of which Fred C. Quimby is general manager, had expected to make formal announcement of their plans and policy in this week's issue of Moving Picture World. But the matter is delayed.

Owing to unavoidable mechanical delays in preparing the illuminated insert delivery cannot be made by the printer until next week. The announcement was issued that this week's editions of the tradepapers would carry this announcement, and this explanation is made in the interest of keeping faith with readers.

Offer Picture Rights for "Highways and Low."

Harry Chanlee and William B. Laub, film editors and exponents of a new sub-title technique, are in receipt of many offers for picture rights to their serial novel, "Highways and Low," now running in a popular monthly. This story, submitted as a scenario to several producers, was repeatedly rejected, yet upon publication under a new title, these same producers have eagerly sought it for production, according to a statement made by the authors.

Advertising for Exhibitors, conducted for Moving Picture World by Epes Winthrop Sargent, was the first department to be established by any trade paper to aid showmen with his publicity problems. It continues to be the Best.

"Non-Theatrical" Hurts Regular Trade, Washington Exhibitors Protest in Alarm

WASHINGTON, D. C., exhibitors and some of the exchangemen are beginning to take alarm at the growing proportions of the so-called "non-theatrical" business. Complaints are being made by the exhibitors that schools, churches, community centers and other like propositions are cutting deep into their business. Some of them have seen a marked dropping off in receipts and this is being emphasized during the Lenten season.

"I do not believe that the manufacturers and distributors realize the importance of this situation," said a member of the Grievance Committee operating in the District of Columbia, Virginia, Maryland and North Carolina territory, following complaints to the committee from exhibitors in Washington, Baltimore, Richmond and other places where the practice of giving community shows is said to be becoming a menace to the commercial motion picture business of these places.

One "Get-Rich-Quick" Plan.

"One of the cases brought to our attention some time ago involved a colored school. When the complaint was received we looked into the matter and found that there were eight schools in the District of Columbia alone that were operating picture shows. An employe of one of the exchanges undertook to manage one of the shows put on in a colored school. It is said that after paying all expenses—the pictures cost him only $15—he divided the profits with the organizers of the scheme, and he realized $159. That brought in the original complaint.

"To begin with, these schools and community centers can do business without being subject to the taxes that we must pay—they escape more than a dozen taxes. Generally there is no additional rent to pay and sometimes the services of cashiers, doorkeepers, ushers and even the orchestra are donated.

"There has been some talk of a combination of these interests. It is not at all unlikely that organizations of this character located in the various cities will at some future time get together in some sort of a chain system, and then will come a little bit of worry for the distributors. When this comes about, that combined organization will be able to go to Mr. Producer and dictate not only the kind of pictures it wants, but will be able to do a whole lot of talking about prices and the way in which the pictures are to be distributed.

"That organization can go further. It can make its own pictures. Some of our exchange managers are beginning to see what the future is likely to produce. The home offices will have to take cognizance of this growing menace. It is all very well to say these places obtain only pictures that have been run in the theatres—that is not necessarily so and it does not mean anything. They may be running films as much as six months old now, but when they attain the necessary power they will be able to demand first-run pictures.

"It is only a question of time when the exhibitors handling first-run pictures will have to say to the exchanges: "We cannot pay you $200 a day for your picture because our receipts have fallen off and we do not take enough in to warrant that payment.'

"The exhibitors have no desire to prevent the showing of strictly educational films in the schools and churches. But when they begin to enter the general exhibition field, minus taxes, rent and other overhead expenses which bear heavily on the exhibitor, it's time to kick, and the manufacturers should take cognizance of that and lay down a rule for our protection.

"I just want to call attention to this—large sums of money came from the saloons for use in fighting vice, and prohibition came. The manufacturers are furnishing films at low prices now—eventually they will face the situation of having no theatres to serve or able to pay the price that must be secured for each picture, and with these community organizations banded together and in position to dictate to them."

Rowland & Clark Theatres Now Control Strand in Erie

A DEAL said to involve the interchange of more than $250,000 has resulted in the Rowland & Clark Theatres securing control of the Strand Theatre of Erie, Pa. This deal, which is probably the most important consummated in picture circles in many months, had been hanging fire for several months. A. P. Gillespie, formerly a well-known real estate broker of this city, and now associated with the Rowland & Clark Theatres, assisted in the completion of the deal.

The Strand Theatre has the choice location in Erie and is one of the leading first run houses outside of Pittsburgh. It is the best established photoplay theatre in that city, and was one of the first to show pictures. It has a seating capacity of 2,000, first floor and balcony.

Bernhardi Becomes Manager.

It is announced that the interior and exterior will undergo a complete change. It is hoped to have the house rejuvenated in time for the gala opening under the new management by April 1. This will not necessitate a suspension of business, as the work will be done after closing time and during the early morning hours. The Rowland & Clark Theatres assumed charge March 1.

William J. Bernardi, for years associated as manager of the R. & C. chain and probably one of the most popular men in the show business, drew the Erie assignment as manager.

The gala opening week's feature will be "In Old Kentucky," starring Anita Stewart

Henry P. Nelson, of the Capitol Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., at the meeting of the legislative committee, held at the Hotel Astor, New York, March 4, said: "All exhibitors believe in co-operation. I was convinced of this when I gave an early Saturday matinee performance to the children of Elizabeth of Pollyanna at an admission of ten cents. My competitor co-operated with me by giving matinee to the children at the same time. I had an empty house but evidently the children didn't appreciate the free show. They broke the chairs and did other damages and I had a packed, jammed house at my regular matinee and all my other shows that day."

To Make Fair Women Fairer Scientists Would Solve Mystery of Actinic Ray

Seek Means of Quickly Determining Whether Subject Is "Photographic" or Not—Zena Keefe Under the Lens

IS your face in tune? Does your skin present a surface upon which the camera lens plays a symphony? If so, the movies are screaming for you. Whether you are in tune, or whether you produce photographic discords depends upon something which scientists call the actinic ray. You are attuned to the actinic ray if the chemical composition of your features is properly proportioned to become an affinity to light propulsion as it is diffused by the camera. If this affinity is established the certainty of your success as a screen star is assured.

There are certain flowers so constituted chemically that they absorb those rare tints of color that immediately establishes their beauty and rarity and removes them as far from the common garden variety of flowers as the orchid is from the sunflower.

The chemical substance that is created in nature's laboratory will attach itself only to the most delicate of nature's organisms. The same condition exists in the matter of a human being's susceptibility to photographic reproduction.

Who Said the Camera Never Lies?

The actinic ray is as elusive as love and as irregular in its habits. We know that more than beauty is required to make a perfect photograph. Most of us have only to gaze at our photographic insults to realize that something more is needed.

Under the camera's lens the most beautiful of women may become uninteresting and dull, while another with no particular claim to pulchritude comes forth radiant and charming. The fault, dear Brutus, is not with the photographer. He probably has no grudge against beauty nor is he desiring to deceive his less lovely subjects. His results are not purely accidental. The actinic ray turned the trick. The camera may not lie, but it comes close to it.

For centuries scientists have studied the subject of light. Long before Cleopatra seduced the gullible Antony there were Egyptian scholars who spent their nights under the blue Egyptian skies trying to get light on the subject of light. And they learned that light travels in a straight line.

This knowledge traveled into Greece and the Greek scholars carried it further. They determined that they ray of sunlight was the shortest possible path from the light to its object, and that well known geometric saying that a straight line is the shortest distance between two points was born and has stuck ever since.

The Greeks made other discoveries. The Platonists developed the idea of reflection, absorption and refraction. That is, that when light falls upon its victim it does one of three things—it is returned by reflection, as in the case of a shiny nose—it is entirely absorbed or gobbled up by the pigments, or it may be refracted and come back something quite different.

Pythagoras had a different idea. He thought vision and color were caused by the bombardment of the eye by minute particles projected from the surface to the objects seen. And other scientists brought forth other ideas. The Greeks made many observations on the subject, but with their philosophical minds they were more concerned with the reason for light than the possible uses to which it might be put.

Actinic Ray Still Puzzles.

And from that time to this, through centuries of thought, the subject of light and color have been studied. Artists have analyzed the rainbow and caught its color vibrations for their canvases. Lighting has passed from a mere matter of sunrise and sunset to an electric push button. The camera lens records the merest shadow. Bu tthe actinic ray is still unsolved. Just what chemical combination of the complexion will produce the perfect affinity with the camera—that is still a mystery. But it is the difference between a screen star's salary and yours and mine.

If the actinic ray could be reduced to subjection motion picture photography would become an exact science. For it would be possible for every applicant for screen honors to submit to a few simple tests and her susceptibility to the ray could be determined and her hopes raised or blasted accordingly. Or if the ray could be analyzed, it might be possible to produce the right complexion by chemical aid.

Zena Keefe

And that is exactly what photographers and chemists at the Selznick Fort Lee studio are trying to do—they are trying to solve the mystery of the actinic ray. A special studio has been inclosed in glass and fitted up with every invention and appliance added. And not only have the tools been provided, but pretty Zena Keefe, the 1920 star, has offered herself as a victim of science and is daily permitting herself to be the object of countless experiments.

Some days her face is daubed with a sickly yellow powder and she is subjected to the lens. Other times she is concealed beneath a blue preparation which would disguise her features beyond the recognition of her own mother. Orange colored liquids and powder and every shade of red from the most anaemic pink to deepest scarlet are applied to her skin. It is hoped that through these various experiments some secrets of producing the perfect affinity will be formulated.

The work is only started. But if the secret is ever solved it will save the motion picture producers millions of dollars annually. There will be no excuse for a poor film or a star who doesn't register well. It will be one of the biggest contributions of the age to science.

"Mystery of the Yellow Room" Acclaimed by Prison Inmates

THE mysteries of the mail service have nothing on "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," an Emile Chautard production, according to the entertainment committee of the Mutual Welfare League of Sing Sing Prison.

The production made a big hit, according to the chairman of the committee, who declared deep sighs were audible through the hall when the fourth reel had been shown and one man gripped his neighbor's arm in the excitement, but didn't get "bawled out" until later.

The chairman writes that he has viewed well over 2,000 features in the last three years, but has never seen one in which the interest was so well sustained as in "The Mystery of the Yellow Room."

"This is an additional test of the mystery in this picture," said J. S. Woody, general manager of Realart. "We have shown the picture to the best detective brains in the country, stopped the picture before the mystery was explained, and given them a chance to guess. In no case has the solution been given, and yet it is logical and probable, as they afterward admit.

"In numerous cities where 'The Mystery of the Yellow Room' has been shown, the exhibitor has given the local police a chance to solve it, and they have invariably failed. As a mystery picture it stands in a class by itself in this respect. It now has the unique record of having baffled the men who baffled the police and baffled the police who nabbed the men."

ON Friday afternoon, March 5, the first print of Tom Mix's latest vehicle, "Desert Love," arrived in New York from the William Fox studios in California. The film was inspected, wound and thrown on the screen in the new Fox studio projection room for the benefit of the entire executive staff, all department heads and the publicity department.

Considering the fact that "The Daredevil" with Mix in the stellar role has just been shown to the trade press and is scheduled for release this month, "Desert Love" is said to place Mix in a class by himself as a "stunt star."

Coincident with the arrival of the "Desert Love" print, the publicity department has received a sketch of one of the principal stunts done by Tom Mix in this picture. The sketch is in water-color and gives a view of exterior and interiors in an episode which runs 200 feet in the film with only one break in it.

Appeal Judge Hough's Refusal to Modify Injunction Decree Involving "Ben Hur"

AN appeal from the decision of Judge Hough in refusing to modify the injunction decree in the case of Henry L. Wallace and Harper Bros. against Klaw & Erlanger so that the plaintiffs may produce a screen version of "Ben Hur," was filed in the United States District Court of New York City on March 10.

In asking the United States Circuit Court of Appeals to review the case and reverse the decision the plaintiffs contend that Judge Hough erred in concluding that the owners of the dramatic rights to the play have complied strictly with the terms of the decree which provided that the play must be produced during each theatrical season.

The plaintiffs assert that the failure of Klaw & Erlanger to produce "Ben Hur" on the stage between October 12, 1918, and December 24, 1919, constituted a breach of the provisions of the decree under which it is alleged that the producers have forfeited any rights which they may have had under the decree.

Moreover, it is alleged that the dramatic value of the play has terminated and that the owners of the dramatic rights are merely seeking to produce "Ben Hur" for a limited engagement each year on the stage for the purpose of preserving their technical rights under the decree to an interest in the film rights and not with any prospect of securing profits from such performances. In short, the plaintiffs charge that the producers are taking an unfair advantage of the cross injunction in the original decree which was never contemplated by the court to prevent them from producing the play on the screen.

Moreover, it is alleged that the dissolution of the partnership of Klaw & Erlanger has changed the conditions formerly existing and by virtue of this dissolution of the producing firm it is contended that the injunction existing in the original litigation against Klaw & Erlanger and in favor of that firm is no longer binding.

The litigation revealed for the first time that the "Big Four" had been negotiating for the screen rights to "Ben Hur," having offered to produce the play on the screen with Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford in the leading roles on a "fifty-fifty" basis with a guaranty of $250,000 to the author's estate, the producers and the publishers.

The offer was not accepted for the reason that Mr. Wallace places a valuation of $1,200,000 on the film rights to the play and the executives of "Big Four" regard this as a high figure even for such an artistic and financial stage production as "Ben Hur."

KENNETH EARLE, of 185 Gates avenue, Montclair, N. J., son of President Edward Earle, of the Nicholas Powder Company, New York City, and Mrs. Earle, was one of three aviators killed on March 9 about twenty miles south of Palm Beach while making a forced landing in a hydro-aeroplane. Their bodies were found the following morning by fliers, after a lighthouse keeper told of having seen a plane falling.

One particularly sad feature of the accident is that, after the plane had apparently developed engine trouble, the pilot failed by but a scant 200 feet to reach the water for a safe landing.

Those with Kenneth Earle were Charles T. Sims, of New York City, and Maxwell Blanchard, of Chicago. Earle and Blanchard were pilots and had seen service in France. Charles Sims was a student aviator.

The bodies of all three men have been sent north.

California Theatre Men Meet.

About a hundred members of the Exhibitors Protective League, Inc., which is composed of Northern California exhibitors, met recently in San Francisco and discussed the accessory controversy and percentage booking. Some action will probably be taken at the next meeting.

It was voted to hold the charter open until April 15, after which date an initiation fee of $25 will be charged and the applicant for membership will be balloted upon.

A. S. Black Company Invades Cambridge with Playhouse for Harvard Students

A MODERN motion picture theatre catering to the thousands of undergraduates and faculty of Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass., is the latest venture of the new Black New England Theatres, Inc.

Alfred S. Black, president of the recently organized $10,000,000 company, announces that a long-term lease has been taken on a section of Harvard's famous College House in Harvard Square, just across the street from the college yard.

College House, a landmark of old Harvard, has been purchased by Edward A. Barnard, the millionaire reality man of Cambridge. Mr. Barnard will remodel the place into a 300-room hotel. A section of the property, beside the Charles River Trust Company's banking offices, has been allotted to the Black company.

Available for Harvard Plays.

"We are going to have a thoroughly modern motion picture theatre. It will be called the Harvard Square Theatre and will seat 2,000 persons. It will be ready for operation by early fall. As our patrons at Harvard Square will be mainly Harvard students, members of the faculty and residents of the exclusive neighborhood about the college, we intend to present the highest grade of motion pictures.

"Especial attention, of course, will have to be given to the musical end. Both in fittings and in photoplays this new theatre will be high-class in every respect. Architects are already at work on the plans. A feature will be a large stage, which will be something like forty feet deep and eighty feet wide."

Another addition to the Black chain of theatres is the Opera House at Westerly, R. I. Several other deals are pending and an announcement of them is expected shortly.

A LOT of things happen in the Spring besides the annual turning of the young man's fancy to thoughts of new silk shirts, as Tennyson once said in poetry. Take Cine-Mundial, growing, blossoming, burgeoning Spanish edition of Moving Picture World, for example. Spring has brought more commotion into its spacious office suite than if a regiment of choice Mexican bandits were to drop in to pay their respects to the sheet.

Frank Ortega, who wields the editorial pen, blue pencil, and typewriter for Cine-Mundial, glancing over the list of Spring affections and ailments, as listed in "Who's Who in Spanish," selected appendicitis as his most popular brand, and in spite of his doctor's pleas, "went right to it." True to form, Frank is recovering rapidly, at the same time making great strides in augmenting the membership of his newly-established "Brotherhood of Appendix Missers."

A. Obregon, circulation manager of the same Cine-Mundial, not to be outdone in Spring affairs, is shining up his medals as the proud father of a happy family, just lately increased to four. A boy, of course, and mother and child are doing well.

United States District Court Acts in Role of Producer

THE production of a cinema version of "That Woman," by Captain Sabine W. Wood, which was commenced by the Films, Inc., last December, is being completed under the supervision of Goldthwaite H. Dorr, who was appointed receiver for the film company on March 4 by Judge Learned Hand in the United States District Court, New York City.

The appointment of a receiver for the film-company was made by George R. Holmes, one of the creditors whose claim amounts to $1,300, and upon the consent of the film corporation which admitted its inability to meet its obligations, in the belief that this was the best solution of the temporary embarrassment.

The Films, Inc., was formed in the early part of 1919 with an authorized capitalization of $100,000 which was subsequently increased to comparatively $500,000, but the stock did not meet with a ready sale and only a comparatively small portion of the issue was floated. Consequently the corporation soon became handicapped on account of lack of capital to continue its operations.

The firm corporation engaged a large and competent staff to produce the photoplay last December and planned to make a super feature picture but the expense of producing the picture rapidly ate up the company's available capital. The expense of producing the picture to date has exceeded $60,000 and it is estimated that at least $15,000 more will be required.

Receiver Dorr is arranging to complete the photoplay and finance the company temporarily through the issuance of receiver's certificates which constitute a first lien on the receipts from the release of the photoplay, which it is anticipated will aggregate more than $150,000.

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

By GIEBLER.

I WENT out to Goldwyn this week. Never was a neck put to such a test; never was a pair of dark and passionate eyes so filled with sights; never a couple of shell-like ears so filled with pleasant sounds; never a pencil pushed with such persistency; never a mind so filled to the gunwales with dope and data.

The truth of the matter is that I saw so much on Mr. Goldwyn's vast lot that I will have to pass up telling you how much agog we are over the news of Little Mary and Owen Moore getting themselves unhitched from the marital ties that bound them.

Neither can I tell you how badly we were shocked at the news that Mark Larkin is not coming back to our fair city, but will hereafter reside in N. Y.

Cruel N. Y. There are several more of our press agents in your midst. Will you bedazzle them with your bright lights, vamp them with your vanities, and keep them from coming back to their native sage brush, as you have done with Mark?

We hate to give Mark up to Manhattan, but if it must be, it must be. But we don't want to lose any more of our publicists!

Lon Chaney, a "Perennial Cripple."

But to get back to Goldwyn's. I never saw so much movie making in one day before. And sets! They've got one set out there, representing an oriental palace, that is so big that they had to rent a ranch to build it on. And interesting sights—My! Oh My!

Do you remember Lon Chaney, who played the part of the Frog in "The Miracle Man," and "crippled" around as if he didn't have the use of his legs? Well, Lon's playing a part in a story out at Goldwyn's where he hasn't any legs at all!

Another sight was Mabel Normand in a rubber suit to make her look fat for her part in George Ade's "Slim Princess;" and T. Roy Barnes, of former vaudeville fame, who has to have an "extra" scratch his back all the time because he is playing in a Rupert Hughes story called "Scratch My Back;" and Cesare Gravina, who is working in the same picture.

Cesare cannot speak English, and Sydney Olcott, the director, has to use an interpreter to tell him what he's to put over, and my word! how Cesare does go to the bat with the stuff. Cesare is from Spain, where he was famous in comic opera, and the owner of his own theatre in Madrid for twenty years.

Mabel Looks Immense

An Opera in Staccato.

The King of Spain has made him a chevalier for his excellent work, and one time when he was presenting an opera and the royal family was in attendance, and the Queen sent word that the King wanted to go to San Sebastino on a train that left at ten bells, and the king didn't want to miss either the train or the ending of the show, Cesare speeded up the performance into three quarters of an hour less time than was intended without losing a note! Some stunt?

Some of the Goldwyn companies were out on location. Reginald Barker, who is directing Barbara Castleton and Russell Simpson, was up at Truckee getting snow stuff for "The Branding Iron."

"Blizzard" a Powerful Character.

Frank Lloyd was over at Santa Catalina Islands getting ready for "Madame X," with Pauline Frederick as the star; and T. Hayes Hunter was at Santa Barbara making Basil King's "Earthbound." Hugo Ballin and the Madge Kennedy company are in New York. There was plenty a-doing, however.

I watched Wallace Worsley making "The Penalty," by Gouverneur Morris, and the Gouverneur was right there on the set seeing how it was done. "The Penalty" is the play in which Lon Chaney has the legless part.

Beware the Tack!

Mr. Worsley was putting on a big mob scene with a hundred or so people and a lot of soldiers, and I watch the action until the sun slipped behind a cloud, and then went over to stage six, where Vic Schertzinger and Mabel Normand, with Tully Marshall, Hugh Thompson, Russ Powell, Lillian Sylvester and Harry Lorraine as assistants, were making the interiors for "The Slim Princess," a George Ade story of a country where no woman is considered fair unless she is fat.

Mabel, the princess, is slim, and to make herself lovely she gets a gown made of toy balloon material and has it blown up. She looks immense in the outfit, but God help Mabel if she ever sits on a tack while she is wearing the costume.

The big oriental sets, spoken of previously, a regular city with towers and spires and gold plated minarets and court yards with fountains, are to be used as background for Mabel's play.

Jimmie Helps Papa Rogers.

Will Rogers was working on the east end of the same stage where "The Slim Princess" interiors were being made. Director Clarence Badger was staging a court room scene for a play called "Seven Oaks," with a fine bunch of talent, including Will Rogers' small son, Jimmie, who has just recovered from the measles, Raymond Hatton, Lionel Belmore, Nick Cogley, Bert Sprotte, Sidney De Grey and Irene Rich, who is supporting lead. Irene is a happy girl—she has just signed a two years' contract with Goldwyn.

Tom Moore was making "The Great Accident," a Ben Ames Williams story under the direction of Harry Beaumont, on stage four, and Jane Novak, Andrew Robson, Willard Louis, Ann Forest, Philo McCullough, Otto Hoffman, Roy Laidlaw, Edward McWade, Don Bailey, Lillian Langdon and Lefty Flynn were helping him put the story over.

Goldwyn's Own Art Museum.

Over on stage two I found Director Al Green, with Jack Pickford and Marie Dunn, who is playing her first leading part, and James Neill, Edythe Chapman, and Manuel Ojeda working out interior action for O. Henry's story, "A Double Dyed Deceiver," a story that gives Jack a lot of fine chances for fine comedy.

While I was there somebody said something about Johnny Jones and Booth Tarkington's "Edgar" series. I asked where I could find E. Mason Hopper, who is making the series, and got a bad steer that made me wander all over the lot. It was a profitable trip, however, because it caused me to butt into the art department, where I got acquainted with Charles J. Schrieber, artist and sculptor for the Goldwyn studio, and he showed me a lot of interesting stuff: how artificial stone is made; a bust of Lon Chaney with horns; and a most wonderful piece of work representing the Crucifixion, seventeen feet high—a real work of art that is to be used in the Gouverneur Morris story, "The Penalty."

Walks Away with His Part

Does Lon Chaney, in spite of the fact that he seems short a few legs in "The Penalty," a Goldwyn.

Coming Up to the Scratch.

a big glass stage that I had not previously invaded, and went over there and ran into Sidney Olcott and the "Scratch My Back" company.

T. Roy Barnes, who has the lead in this story, is making his maiden movie, and if all signs do not fail, T. Roy is going to make as big a hit in the films as he did in vaudeville. Helene Chadwick has the feminine lead and a dandy part.

Here is where I met Cesare Gravina, who plays the part of Gehoda, the owner of a dance hall. Senor Gravina is a most interesting person, and I had a lovely conversation with him. His part of the conversation sounded very much like some of the stories in Cine-Mundial look, but I got his meaning almost as quickly as the interpreter, who translated his speech, because the senor acted out everything as he talked.

By this time it was time to close up the studio for the day, and I went away without ever finding hide or hair of Johnny Jones.

Otis Skinner Signed by Robertson-Cole to Appear in His Role of Hajj in "Kismet"

THE announcement that Otis Skinner is to appear on the screen in the vehicle that stands out prominently, in a decade of great stage plays, is pertinent with promises of something unusually big. Otis Skinner in "Kismet" is indelibly linked in the public mind as inseparable and so firmly established in remembrance, that it would seem as if this actor had never appeared in any other production.

To the public, Otis Skinner and "Kismet" are one and the same thing; and the announcement that Robertson-Cole has secured the combination for a special picture is of particular interest to every showman.

The play itself was acclaimed by the critics to be one of the most harmonious blendings of color and dramatic action ever presented on the American stage. It combines all of the pomp of a spectacle, all of the suspense of a tragedy, all the allurement of romance, and the keen subtility of philosophy.

With all of these elements in the action of the story itself, and the unlimited scenic possibilities of pictureplay construction added, it may confidently be expected that the screen version of "Kismet" will be a big contribution to the offerings of the year.

The production of "Kismet" with Otis Skinner in his famous role of Hajj will be commenced at once, but the picture is not expected to be finished until next September. The action of the play is set in Bagdad and therefore the picture will be produced in California where the topography of the country is ideally suited to the story's requirements and sets of any size may be erected and left standing as long as necessary. The director has not yet been selected.

To Have New York Presentation.

"Kismet" played for two seasons at the Knickerbocker Theatre in New York City, and was then taken to Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington and the principal cities of the East and Middle West for extended runs and was then taken to the far West where it repeated its eastern successes.

AN announcement of unusual interest is made in the news from the office of Robertson-Cole, that Dustin Farnum has been secured by that company for a series of special features to be offered during the 1920-1921 season.

The new contract was consummated a few days ago in Los Angeles, and its provisions cover a period of three years. Sydney L. Cohan negotiated the transaction and will be interested in the production activities.

Only a limited number of Farnum pictures will be made, but work under the new contract has already been started, and "shooting" on the first subject will commence in about ten days. The character of Mr. Farnum's work makes him fit perfectly into the array of stars and subjects that will be presented under the Robertson-Cole trademark.

Mr. Farnum's recent screen work, while gathering new friends, may have caused his former successes on the speaking stage to be somewhat forgotten by the exhibitors, but the public still recalls his triumphs as the star in such great plays as "The Ranger," "Cameo Kirby," "The Littlest Rebel," "The Squaw Man," and "The Virginian" and in portrayals of the character, Dustin Farnum stands supreme.

While the dispatches from the coast do not name the title of the first story to be produced, the information is to the effect that it is a tale of exceptional strength by a celebrated French author. Announcement will be made later of the selection of a director.

"Lifting Shadows" to Have Large Billboard Campaign

A BIG special campaign of advertising and exploitation has been arranged by the Pathe Exchange, Inc., for the Leonce Perret production, "Lifting Shadows," in which Emmy Wehlen is starred. The billboards of New York and Brooklyn will be used as one feature of this campaign which will, of course, be of great benefit to exhibitors in the New York area.

Manhattan and the Bronx with outlying boards will be billed on March 20 and Brooklyn will be posted on April 1. The showing will be for an entire month. Several hundred twenty-four sheets will be spread throughout the city, many of them in special preferred positions.

Pathe expects the production to create something of a sensation as a gripping melodrama. The story by Henry Ardel is a powerful tale of a Russian woman who marries an American. Her father had been involved in Russian revolutionary intrigues and his associates found the daughter in the United States and sought to use her.

Miss Wehlen is supported by a strong cast. Wyndham Standing is her leading man and Stuart Holmes is the leader of the band who are endeavoring to force the beautiful girl to do their bidding. Julia Swayne Gordon is also in the cast.

Wilson Visits New York.

Ben Wilson, star of the two Hallmark serials, "The Screaming Shadow" and "The Trail of the Octopus," arrived in New York on Tuesday, March 9, from Los Angeles. He will remain in the city a little over a week.

Hirsh Reports Sales on "Blind Love."

Nathan Hirsh announces the sale of Gerald F. Bacon's six-reel production, "Blind Love," starring Lucy Cotton, with George Le Guere in chief supports to Herman Rifkin, Eastern Features Film Company, Boston, for the New England territory, and to Equity Film Company, San Francisco, for California, Nevada and Arizona.

Price Secures Rights to a Billy Rhodes Feature

C. B. PRICE AND COMPANY, which has developed into a busy and very active factor in both the export and domestic market, recently purchased "His Pajama Girl," a Billy Rhodes feature, and is making elaborate preparations to also exploit a big feature production in which the Clark-Cornelius Company is interested.

This company also announces it has been found necessary to augment its staff by engaging an "appraising reviewer" who can judge the quality of a picture, appraise its value to the exhibitor and designate its appeal to the public. The results, so far, are announced as being very satisfactory.

PRODUCTION By C. S. SEWELL DISTRIBUTION

Arrow Reports Seventy-five Per Cent of Territory Already Sold on "Tex" Series

ARROW FILM CORPORATION reports that although only four weeks have elapsed since the first announcement that it would distribute the series of twelve "Tex, Elucidator of Mysteries" pictures, seventy-five per cent. of the territory of the United States has been disposed of.

Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of the company, holds that this is proof that a series released in five-reel episodes is not only practical, but to be desired, as evidenced by the quick sale of the majority of the territory, and is confident that the remainder will be disposed of shortly.

That there is a big saving in booking the entire series, by obviating the overhead and general expenses that booking twelve separate features would entail, is pointed out by Arrow, as after the initial investment, the independent exchangeman has only to look out for the receipt and distribution of the prints and accessories. At the same time, each story is complete in itself.

"In my opinion," says Dr. Shallenberger, "this is the biggest single thing for the benefit of the independent exchange that has been introduced in the industry, and its success is gratifying. This is but the first of its type that Arrow will market. Of course, we will continue to devote a great part of our time and attention to short subjects.

"Each episode relates an interesting story, replete with mystery, suspense and thrills, presented by experienced players. The general direction of the series is in the hands of William Steiner."

Johnny Hines Has Leading Role in "Torchy" Comedies

THE idea of transferring to the screen Sewell Ford's famous character, "Torchy," was conceived by Charlie Burr, who for five years was associated with the Famous Players-Lasky Company, and by arrangement with the publishers of the Ford stories, these subjects are being filmed by Master Films, Inc., a company formed for this purpose.

As the title character, Mr. Burr selected Johnny Hines, who will visualize Torchy, his advantures, scraps and antics on the screen. Johnny Hines is a well-known screen comedian, and is said to be the ideal actor for the part. One of the Torchy comedies was shown at the New York Strand, and Manager Eaton was so pleased that he induced the managers to book it in other houses of the chain.

DUE to the success which has attended Chaplin's "A Burlesque on Carmen," in conjunction with a road show, Victor Kremer has decided to present "The Champion" in a similar manner. "The Champion" is in two reels and its presentation in conjunction with a girl show marks an innovation in productions of this type, inasmuch as this style of entertainment thus far has been peculiar to feature films alone.

An Athletic Revue will be the added attraction. It will consist of a twenty minute diversion introducing a series of athletic novelties offered by a company of six girls and two principals. Boxing, wrestling, fencing and a series of artistic poses will be included in the revue, intermingled with singing and dancing.

New York Independent Masterfilm, Inc., Kremer's local exchange, will handle this attraction for New York and Northern New Jersey. Following the presentation of Chaplin in "The Champion" at the Rialto Theatre in New York for the week of March 21, the attraction will be offered to exhibitors, under the title, The Champion Girls' Athletic Revue.

Four Ten-Reelers Due from U. S. Photoplay Corporation

FOLLOWING the release of "Determination," the United States Photoplay Corporation will produce "The Soul of Man," "The Home of Man" and "Deception," all ten-reel feature productions.

The board of directors, at its last meeting, decided to build a studio and buy ten acres of ground for a studio large enough to work four companies at one time, so as to have four releases a year. Plans are now under way for the studio.

"Determination" will have an all-star cast and the following contracts have been closed: Richard C. Travers, as star; William H. Turner, Leslie Stowe, Irene Tams, Corene Uzzell, Lieutenant B. W. Maynard, the "Flying Parson"; Tod Sloan, the well-known jockey, and "Kid" Broad. Harry McRae Webster will direct this production, having associated with him John L. McCutcheon as co-director and Herbert L. Messmore, as technical director.

The E. K. Lincoln Studio at Grantwood, N. J., is under lease for two years commencing June 1. Production work on the building of scenery starts April 15.

Pioneer Inaugurates Big Campaign for "Bubbles"

IN "Bubbles," in which Mary Anderson plays the part of a tomboy, Pioneer officials believe they have a picture which is destined to be a great success. At Forty-seventh street and Broadway, New York, a large illuminated sign has been erected, and numerous twenty-four sheets have been posted. This will be followed by an extensive campaign in the newspapers of the United States and Canada.

Simultaneous with the release in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia and the Coast, there will be billboard advertising on a large scale. All of the other of the nineteen co-operative Pioneer exchanges will be given the assistance of the publicity department of the main office.

THE Character Pictures Corporation has purchased a studio and laboratory at Tampa, Fla., and thirty-six acres of land on Oriental Island, just outside of Tampa.

A still larger studio and an outdoor stage measuring 125 by 225 feet are to be erected there. Their present New York office will be maintained.

Character Pictures settled upon Florida as the most logical producing center, hitting the happy medium between New York and California, and feels that Tampa, Fla., combines the advantages of both places. Oriental Island is said to be one of the most beautiful spots in Florida. The scenery on the island is somewhat tropical and offers wonderful opportunities for scenic backgrounds.

The company will do practically all its production in and about Tampa, only traveling to other neighborhoods when the location calls for it.

Character Pictures production staff will leave for Florida shortly. The first production to be made in Tampa will be "The Isle of Destiny," by Mack Arthur. It will be a lavish production with an all-star cast, and it is estimated it will take over two months in the making.

Jans Pleased with Outlook on His Initial Sales Tour

HERMAN F. JANS, who with his general sales manager, F. E. Backer, is now on a trip to various state right exchanges throughout the country, reports from Chicago that he is gratified to see that all of the exchanges which he has visited appear to be in a healthy and prosperous condition, and he is pleased with the reception accorded the first Olive Tell feature, "Love Without Question."

"It is gratifying to see the manner in which this production is being received," says Mr. Jans. "The buyers realize that while we do not claim this feature to be a spectacle or something so big as to stand out in contrast to others, it is at least a strong attraction due to its mystifying story and the care with which it has been produced."

F. E. Backer, in charge of the selling end, reports that he expects to experience very little difficulty in disposing of the remainder of the territory for this production, judging from the rapidity with which the sales have been made so far.

Marion Kohn to Distribute Roger's "Illiterate Digest"

WILL ROGERS' "Illiterate Digest," an epigrammatic review of current events, will be distributed by Marion H. Kohn of Marion H. Kohn Productions, in accordance with the terms of an agreement with Will Rogers, with the consent of Samuel Goldwyn, president of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

This subject ran first in Goldwyn's California Theatre in Los Angeles. According to Mr. Kohn, it will be broadened in scope and placed on the market at once. Releasing arrangements are in the hands of Joe Brandt, who will shortly announce the method of distribution.

To further enhance the presentation of the combination road show, Chaplin's "A Burlesque on Carmen," with the Carmen Beauties Revue, two novelties have been added. Several hundred feet of tinted film showing picturesque parts of Spain have been secured; also a special motion picture of the Carmen Beauties chorus and principals, showing the company arriving at the theatre, entering the stage door and making up and in their various changes of costume. Close-ups of the various members of the company, together with scenes showing part of the comedy bull fight in the revue, are features of the film.

This will be used as an announcement in the various houses which play Chaplin's picture and the Carmen Beauties Revue, which is sponsored by the Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc.

W. H. Tooker Added to Cast of "Invisible Ray" Serial

THE Frohman Amusement Corporation have contracted with W. H. Tooker to appear in the serial, "The Invisible Ray." Mr. Tooker is an accomplished actor, his experience in motion picture work dating back to the earliest days of the industry. Prior to entering the field of silent drama Mr. Tooker appeared as leading man with stock companies in the principal cities of the United States, and also supported such stars as Madam Fiske, Olga Nethersole and Maud Adams. Mr. Tooker is supporting Ruth Clifford and Jack Sherrill, who are now being co-starred in the serial, "The Invisible Ray."

Appearing in Frohman Amusement's "The Invisible Ray."

The entire cast and studio staff of the Frohman Amusement Corporation left New York for Jacksonville Tuesday night, there to complete the last five episodes of the serial, "The Invisible Ray."

Arrangements have been made with the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce for the use of the X-Ray and operating rooms of the Jacksonville Hospital, and as well as for the use of surgical and medical appliances, as the tenth episode of the serial deals mainly with the powers of "The Invisible Ray" in biological and physiological work.

Co-operative Film Exchange Launched.

The Co-operative Film Exchange has been opened on Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, by Floyd St. John, for the past two and a half years manager for the World Film Corporation and the Republic Distributing Corporation. He states that the new exchange will be what the name implies, an independent film exchange for exhibitors operated on co-operative lines.

Mr. St. John has been succeeded as manager of the Republic exchange by Edward C. Mix, formerly with the local Select office. Arrangements have already been made by Mr. St. John for handling several features and he plans to go East shortly to get additional films.

Helen Keller in Vaudeville Duplicates Screen Success

HELEN KELLER, the star of the screen drama "Deliverance," which received great praise from the critics, has entered vaudeville, and once more proved to be a big success. At the Palace Theatre, New York, she was made the headliner after the first day's showing.

Miss Keller is a wonderful woman, and though she can neither hear or see, is heralded as a sensation in vaudeville. One vaudeville critic says she is the greatest vaudeville attraction discovered in the last ten years.

According to reports she is also proving to be a great screen attraction. World rights to "Deliverance" are owned by George Kleine, who is handling the film in the United States on state right basis, retaining only a limited amount of territory to be handled from his office in Chicago.

M. H. Hoffman on Tour of Pioneer Exchange System

M. H. HOFFMAN, general manager of Pioneer, left for Montreal recently, where he will begin a tour of some of the exchanges composing the Pioneer Co-operative Exchange System. From Montreal he will go to St. John, N. B., Toronto, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Buffalo.

If time permits Mr. Hoffman will also go to the Coast, touching at Portland, San Francisco and Los Angeles. While in the latter city he will visit the producing organizations making pictures for Pioneer.

On his way back Mr. Hoffman will touch at Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta, Washington, Pittsburgh, and Philadelphia, in all of which cities the Pioneer is represented.

Titling of Tarzan Cause of Delay.

The completed print of Numa Pictures Corporation's production of "The Return of Tarzan," arrived in New York late this week. There has been a delay of several weeks owing to the elaboration of the picture's illustrated titles. These have been made from clay originals and are said to be decidedly an advancement in the interesting field of picture-assembling and editing. The wide variety and locale of the Tarzan story afford scope for illustrated titles, and George Merrick, who supervised the production of the Tarzan film and who is in charge of its assembling, promises splendid testament to his realization of this opportunity.

Boston Likes Hank Mann Comedies.

Advices received by Arrow Film Corporation indicate that the Hank Mann Comedies are going over big in Boston. "The Blacksmith," after playing two weeks in a prominent downtown theatre, was immediately booked for the succeeding two weeks by another first run house, while still another first run house booked it for the next week, making five successive weeks in first run houses in Boston. The bookings were made by Arrow Film Exchange of Boston, of which Sam Grand is president.

Kohn's Stars Start on New Subjects.

Each of the three Marion H. Kohn Productions short-feature stars have commenced on the second of their series of twenty-six pictures each. Grace Cunard has started on "The Man Hater"; Polly Moran on "Dollars and Scents," and "Smiling Bill" Jones on "The Blow that Killed Father.'

National Director Has New Method of Filming Scenes

HARRY EDWARDS, dean of the five comedy directors employed by National Film Corporation, claims to have introduced an innovation in comedy direction. As soon as the script has been approved he reads the continuity to the cast, and then films the first set shown on the script. The other scenes as they will appear on the screen are then filmed in succession.

This method is said to do away with considerable negative wastage, and although the interiors must be left standing, there is an increase in morale and interest of the staff which more than compensates for the increased cost.

SALES MANAGER P. B. Dana, of the Arrow Film Corporation, left recently for an extended trip through the West in the interest of the "Tex, Elucidator of Mysteries" series of twelve detective and mystery stories. Chicago will be his first stop, as he has been called there on account of numerous letters and inquiries regarding negotiations for this series.

Mr. Dana is in charge of the general exploitation and sales for these productions, and Arrow points with pride to the fact that within about three weeks a large majority of the territory has been sold.

Hugh Fay in "Hall Room" Comedies.

"Oh, Baby!", the first Hall Room Boys comedy to be produced under the direct supervision of Harry Cohn, of the firm Jack and Harry Cohn, introduces a new comedian, Hugh Fay.

Like Neely Edwards, the original Percy Hallroom, Fay is a recruit from the stage, where he played in many successful farces and comedies. He and Edwards, formerly of Flanagan and Edwards, will continue to be featured in this series.

McCutcheon Praises "Black Is White."

"Black Is White," the latest Ince-Paramount picture, starring Dorothy Dalton, to be released and which is being shown this week at the Capital Theatre, won high praise from George Barr McCutcheon, author of the book on which the picture was founded, when he attended a private exhibition at the executive offices of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Director, star and cameraman came in for laudable comments from the well-known author as the reels flashed upon the screen.

Accidental, But Kept in Picture.

The speed with which comedians grasp a new "gag" was demonstrated during the filming of the latest Montgomery and Rock comedy at the Vitagraph studios. A necktie salesman was working among the extra men. Earl Montgomery grabbed his samples and draped them about the belt of Joe Rock. The former then picked up a ukelele and strummed on it while the latter did a burlesque hula-hula with the necktie skirt. The onlookers laughed so much that it was put in the picture.

Claire Whitney Has Prominent Role in Wistaria's Melodrama "Why Women Sin'

THOMAS DE VASSEY, secretary of the Wistaria Company, announces Claire Whitney as one of the principals in the all-star production of the melodrama "Why Women Sin," which has just been completed by Burton King, the director general of the company.

Miss Whitney is well known to followers of the screen, having appeared in numerous productions, including "The Man Who Stayed at Home," "You Never Know Your Luck" and "Mothers of Men," and also in the stage production, "The Net," in which she received the praise of the critics. While she is said to be a born comedienne, she has almost invariably appeared in screen productions in emotional roles in which she has proved very successful.

Her work in "The Net" was followed by a prominent role in "An Innocent Idea," and Wistaria Productions feel gratified in being able to secure her services for this production. Miss Whitney's work has been compared with that of Marie Tempest in her younger days, and she is also said to bear a striking resemblance to Sarah Bernhardt in her youth.

Secures Rights to Griffith Film.

The Twentieth Century Film Company, of which A. Luchese and E. Marcus are in charge, have secured the rights to D. W. Griffith's "Fall of Babylon" for Eastern Pennsylvania. This company reports that "Tillie's Punctured Romance" has been booked for week stands at several of the big theatres, and a total of 110 days secured on "The Hawk's Trail" serial prior to its release in that territory.

"The Transgressor" Is Sold for Brazil by Inter-Ocean

INTER-OCEAN reports the sale of the Brazilian territorial rights to "The Transgressor," the second offering of the Catholic Art Association, and for which Inter-Ocean is exclusive world distributing agents.

The story of "The Transgressor" is one which is said to possess an appeal for everyone. A love theme with an international background furnishes the basis for the plot. This naturally makes the production suitable for almost any territory.

"The Transgressor" is said to have been sold for a big cash consideration immediately after the buyer had witnessed a special showing of the production.

F. Shoninger, of the foreign film sales department was responsible for the sale of the Brazilian franchise.

J. ROBERT PAULINE and the company supporting him in Reeve and Grey's psychic serial, "The Mystery Mind," now being produced by Supreme Pictures, Inc., left recently for Jacksonville, Florida, where the last few episodes of the serial will be taken. Fred W. Sittenham is serving in the double capacity of director and actor, since he is playing an important part calling for a few "stunts." He recently injured his foot while testing a set for a "stunt," by demonstrating it himself. A smear of wet paint caused him to slip and twist his ankle, but the slight injury in no way prevented his leaving with his company for Florida.

Territorial Reports Many Sales on Jester Comedies

THE Territorial Sales Corporation reports that the Mid-West Distributing Company, of which Ralph Wettstein is general manager, has purchased rights to Jester Comedies for Wisconsin, while rights to Mississippi, Louisiana and Arkansas have been secured by J. Eugene Pearce for the Pearce Film Co., New Orleans.

C. W. Budwell, of the Magnet Film Exchange, 418 Harrison street, Davenport, Iowa, has secured rights to these comedies in Nebraska and Iowa.

Novelty the Keynote of "The Superman."

"The appeal of a novelty—something different—has been illustrated by the success of 'The Superman,' the five-reel melodrama now being distributed on the state right market," says the Tower Film Corporation. "'The Superman' is a melodrama of thrills, adventure and suspense, all woven together in a production that has a universal appeal because of its novel construction."

Fine Press Book for Jans Film.

For the first Jans production, "Love Without Question," a special campaign book has been prepared. The art work has been designed by a competent artist, and is said to be attractive as well as helpful. It has been Mr. Jans' idea to compile a book which would be ornamental as well as beneficial, and aside from displays of posters, cuts, etc., there are also suggestions for lobby displays and unique exploitation stunts.

McDonald to Star in Northwestern Story.

The next National Film Corporation of America's production starring Francis McDonald will be a Canadian Northwest story. Mr. McDonald, who was ill shortly after "The Kentucky Colonel" was finished, is now reported on the road to recovery.

Hap Ward, recently in support of Gale Henry, has been engaged to do characters with Grace Cunard, in the two-reel comedy dramas the National Film Corporation is producing for Marion H. Kohn.

BYRON PARK, general manager of Photoplays Libraries, Inc., selling agents for the Lester Park-Edward Whiteside productions, has returned to New York after a tour in the interest of "Empty Arms," starring Gail Kane and directed by Frank Reicher from Willard King Bradley's screen story.

Mr. Park visited Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Salt Lake City, Denver, Dallas and Kansas City. "I am delighted with the results of my trip," says Mr. Park. "In every city I visited I found the majority of buyers and exchangemen intensely interested in the picture, its unusual theme and box-office drawing power, so it only remained for me to screen the print to convince them that we possessed a picture that measured up to everything we have said about it.

"In the various cities I visited I found that public officials, the clergy and prominent men and women are heartily in sympathy with the picture's theme—the glorification of motherhood. They have signified their intentions to do all in their power to bring it before the public. My trip has shown me that there is a need for meritorious box-office productions. For the next ten days I expect to be attending to inquiries for prices and screenings which poured in while I was on the road, and in projecting 'Empty Arms' for the buyers who made it impossible for me to continue my trip further east than Kansas City. Besides having the picture screened for him, every prospective buyer will be shown reproductions of the lithographs, banners, slides, stories and cuts for publication in local newspapers, which our advertising and exploitation experts have prepared for 'Empty Arms.'"

Tower Film Corporation report a great deal of interest by exchangemen and exhibitors in the special exploitation and publicity campaign in connection with the reissue of "Tillie's Punctured Romance," the six-reel Mack Sennett comedy. During the week of April 4 it will be shown at Fennevessey's Theatre in Rochester and Sucknow's Theatre in Albany.

The Gardiner Syndicate, who control the rights for upper New York, advise they are planning to put over unique advertising stunts in connection with these showings.

Louis Burston, producer of "The Hawk's Trail" serial, with King Baggott as the star, announces that it is scoring heavily in all sections, and that in it King is again achieving his former popularity. He also believes that the success of this picture points a lesson, as it avoids the ordinary paths of serials and cuts out a method of its own. There is an absence of collisions and other picturesque disasters and stunts, but has a consistent, tense story evolved from character and incidents.

WARNER BROTHERS, who are rapidly disposing of the territorial distribution rights of Selig's wild animal serial, "The Lost City," announce that the negatives and sample prints of the final episodes have arrived from California and will be ready for the state right buyers during the coming week.

The last three episodes are said to be even better than the first three. Harry Warner is enthusiastic over the serial, and is confident it will prove the greatest box-office attraction in serial history.

"Reports indicate pre-release booking records have been broken," says Mr. Warner. "Many of the largest first-run theatres that have never offered a serial have booked 'The Lost City.' Box-office logic tells the shrewd exhibitor that a serial of this magnitude with the African jungles for a background, with its uncivilized natives and the wild beasts, will appeal to the masses. Sensations are crowded into this story with such rapid sequence that the spectators are hardly allowed to recover from one gasp before another is forced upon them.

"'The Lost City' will grip and hold an audience, as it possesses that element of curiosity as well as sensation that makes one anxious to know the outcome of each episode. To assist in exploitation, circus methods have been followed. Every sheet of paper has a wild animal in tense situation. In addition there is an advance reel of 350 feet showing sensational scenes from the early episodes."

Jans Sells Exchange to Give Time to Producing Specials

HERMAN F. JANS, president of New Jersey Metro Exchange, announces that he has disposed of this exchange and has sold it to the Metro Pictures Corporation. Regarding his reasons for giving up the management of the exchange, Mr. Jans stated that owing to his production activities he had little time to devote to the exchange and consequently felt that it would better conditions all around if he would relinquish holdings in the exchange. In this way he stated more time and energy could be devoted to his producing features for the state right market.

It is further stated that Mr. Jans will sill remain an active force in the independent exchange field. "It is my purpose to supply the independent exchangeman and the state right buyers with big attractions," said Mr. Jans. "We are going to specialize in productions that are out of the ordinary. By becoming specialists in this line I feel that we can serve the independent exchange to better advantage and will enable me to devote more time to producing the special Olive Tell series which are now in the process of making."

The disposition of the New Jersey exchange, according to Mr. Jans, will not interfere with his future plans, as he is going ahead in establishing representative heads in every "key" city in the United States, so that he will be in touch with every section of the country. Mr. Jans states that he will have further announcements to make as to his future activities as soon as he returns from his trip through the West.

Argus Enterprises Finishes Second McLaughlin Picture

ARGUS ENTERPRISES, INC., has finished its second McLaughlin production and titled it "Hidden Charms." Mr. McLaughlin adapted and dramatized the story from the immortal poem by Thomas Moore, "Believe Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms."

The picture is an exposition of drama recorded on the screen. It has a theme that it at once emotional and full of dramatic possibilities. It is built squarely upon the proposition: "Is a woman beloved for beauty of body or beauty of soul?" While it does not attempt to preach or proselyte, it tells a fascinating love story.

Robert W. Priest, sales agent for Argus and McLaughlin, states that the method of distribution of the new production has not been decided upon as yet. "Hidden Charms" was directed by Samuel R. Bradley, who has since organized his own company with a capital of $250,000 to produce from four to six big specials a year.

"Look Out! I Think It's a New Movement in the Film Business!"

McCormick's Sunday Color Displays Show Unusual Skill in Art Work

S. BARRETT McCORMICK was not only the first to use two colors and black in a Sunday space, but he is the only one to get art effects every week instead of merely by chance. The displays will not reproduce because the colors photograph black, but these three key plates will give some idea of the layouts and are unusually interesting. It will be noticed that in two of these three uses are made of the orchestra along the lines of Harold B. Franklin's Hippodrome advertisement, though the handling is different. In the display for "Even as Eve," the artist has not made the error of suggesting a Garden of Eden locale. Instead he has gone in for new art and handled it effectively. In color there is a red background to the top, outlining the theatre in white. The benday circles print brown with green and red, and the white space through the center is a continuation of the circle idea in red and green with slashes of red across the bottom space and green desks for the orchestra. Without the circles the space is somewhat bare, but the splashes of color give life to the entire space. The same ornamentation is suggested in the space for "The Greatest Question," but here more black is used in the circles to work with the red and green, and the circles are smaller. In the center the color is used in the circle around the head and for the cloak. It will be noticed that Mr. McCormick follows the fashion in selling Miss MacDonald's beauty, but runs into the story after the first few lines.

Pennsylvania Theatre Specializes in Serials

SERIALS seem to make a special appeal to the children, and the Globe Theatre, Clearfield, Pa., runs a different serial every day except Saturday, keeping five going all the time. The current list includes "The Great Gamble," "Perils of Thunder Mountain," "Mystery of 13," "The Trail of the Octopus" and "The Tiger's Trail." And to make a special bid to the children, a special price of five cents is made at an after-school matinee daily, which keeps the children out of the night house and at the same time sends them home to tell the older folks about the show. Serials may be inartistic, but they assuredly help the bank account.

TAKING larger spaces, but working along the lines of Harold B. Franklin, the Loew theatres, Cleveland, or, more properly, the Euclid, has offered a succession of unusual open displays; but about the best of the lot so far is this cross page elevens for "Pollyanna." It is not merely laid out; it is composed. The artist has studied his effects and has obtained results. The half-tone cut to the left is not clear in the stone proof. It probably showed up better in the printing, if they got any results at all, but it balances the line head on the other side and holds the space together more surely than the border does. Here the border is merely ornamental. It is not needed to act as a boundary line. The cuts serve this purpose far better. And it will be noted that, apart from the signature and title, type is employed for the lines, a light italic, which works well with the hand work, and which comes out much better than some of the other all-hand lettering displays. It is not only artistic, but it has selling copy, based on the success of the previous week; which is about as good an argument as you can get for an expension.

Katherine MacDonald Advertisements Make Best Appeal Through Portrait

HERE are two displays for Katherine MacDonald. Both are good and both make appeal in the same manner though they look very different. The Strand has more space and could use more pictorial matter, but the Fairbanks got almost as much display with a single cut, though this cut has not the value of the halftone in this case. It is a better attractor, but not so good a seller, for the halftone does justice to Miss Mac-

Porto Rico Keeps Up With the Procession

Donald's beauty, which a line cut cannot do, and Miss MacDonald is still best sold through the appeal of her beauty rather than through the production; and this without predjudice to the production, for her name stands sponsor for that. But a MacDonald picture means an unusually beautiful woman in a sumptuous setting and is best sold through the appeal to the love of beauty rather than through any story angle. The story angle helps, of course, but the beauty of the star and the lavish production are the chief selling points and should be emphasized as is done here. The larger space is 175 lines across four columns while the other is a four tens. Both are excellent.

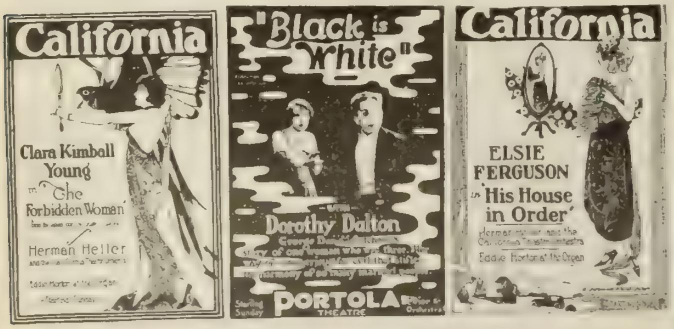
Open Spaces Always Show Up Better Than Heavy Black and White Designs

THREE displays from the California and Portola, San Francisco, sister houses, give emphasis to the fact that the open space almost always shows up better. Take the end displays and they look far better than that in the centre. The letter is used to advertise "Black Is White," which probably accounts for J. A. Partington's design, for the "Black" is white and the "White" is black, but there is too much black to let the message get over and in the lower portion there are lines of black and white letters that make you wonder if you have 'em again in spite of prohibition.



Three Displays from San Francisco.

The lighter spaces for the California, designed by Eugene H. Roth, come up much better, adapting plan book material to the needs of the house very acceptably. They make a pair of very pretty displays and show what can be done with planning. Somehow those far western theatres seem to lay all over the east and middle west for advertising and general hustle, and yet the hustlers are never brought east. Ruffner came, but he came to a production office, though he has had a couple of good house offers since he arrived.

J. W. SAYRE, of the Jensen and von Herberg theatres, Seattle, gets into the class of Oscar A. Doob by a recent stunt. Lately he got one of the kneeling stills of Constance Talmadge, sent out, we believe, with "A Virtuous Vamp." It was so much out of the ordinary that instead of using it in his newspaper space (for which he had other good material), he set it aside until after all of the theatrical supplements had gone to press. Then he pelted down the street to the office of the Post-Intelligencer, one of the largest of the coast publications, and offered it as an art study. It landed as a three column cut in the first news section, top of column and all the rest of the trimmings, and it did not cost a cent.

How J. W. Sayre Broke into the News Section with a Publicity Still

Hundreds of managers have used this picture, but Mr. Sayre seems to have been the first to realize that it was sufficiently out of the ordinary to be worth something as plain press work, and yet the average editor will "eat up" a picture of a pretty woman to dress his columns with and probably many more editors through the country would do the same if they had first chance on it. That is press work as opposed to the routine handling of cuts and copy and Mr. Sayre can go to the head of the class until someone beats him—and it will take some beating.

HERE'S another very pretty drawn design from the Grauman houses, Los Angeles. It announces the personal appearance of Lewis Sargent, the announcement appearing in the smoke of the fire. Apart from the title, which is clearly lettered, the announcements are all in type, mortises being cut to let the material in. The Grauman Theatre announcement takes the rest of the five fulls and is mostly given to a fashion show, the announcement of Elsie Ferguson, in "His House in Order" being appended apparently as an afterthought. Think about a fashion show for yourself. This is the season and it will pay you as well as it pays the big cities.

Camouflaged His Advertisement

BOOKING back "Male and Female" because of its initial success, Will D. Harris, of the Grand, Columbus, Ohio, felt that something better than "Return engagement" could be worked to interest the public, so he bought a page and then camouflaged it as a dramatic page with almost a half page layout of cuts. It fooled a lot of people into reading the material who might have passed over the regular advertising style, and it sold most of those it fooled. These were the people he was reaching for; the people who had not seen the picture the first time, and who would have passed over the advertising because they had seen it before had it been a full page regular display, but the cut layout was interesting and they read on and decided to go. It was good work.

Porto Rico's Handsome Weekly Program

PORTO RICO does not seem to be far behind when it comes to hustling. The Rialto Theatre, San Juan, sends out a weekly program of thirty-six pages and colored cover. One thirty-two page form is printed on news print with the remaining four on surfaced paper to handle cuts. The cover is a Hennegan offset. Most theatres here in the states would regard this as an accomplishment for a monthly, but the Rialto issues the booklet weekly, carrying a heavy merchant patronage and even some national advertising, but it holds enough space to give some real magazine features as well as programs and house chat. The program is printed on facing pages in Spanish and English.

Hutchinson Exhibitor Can Proportion His Half Pages

OUT in Hutchinson, Kansas, there is a man who runs the Royal Theatre, and who knows that he does not have to write a book every time he buys a half page space. He wrote part of a book, but he handed it to the editor for a reading notice, where it belongs, and he got most of the rest of the page free, including another cut. But in his space he knew that if he tried to tell too much he would tell nothing. He knows that in a half page you do not tell more about your film, but merely tell it louder, so he got up what would have made a nice four threes and had it set in larger type. And he tied up each bit of talk with rule, so you could get one statement without running it into the rest. There are times when it pays to say a lot in a half or full page, but as a rule the best use of a half page is to give larger display to what you might have told in a three twos. The Royal has the right idea.

H. A. Albright Now Shines As a Snappy Copy Writer

POSSIBLY the fact that Ralph Ruffner got out of Butte and into New York is giving cheer to H. A. Albright, of the American, Butte, for he is asking what sort of office furniture they have in the Capitol. We hope he lands, though we would advise him first to write Ruff for his views on the high cost of New York. But something is putting jazz into Mr. Albright, and he is due to land. When he started in, his drawings were better—very much better—than his copy, but he has turned himself into a first class copy writer. Look at this for "Double Speed":

This lad whipped out of New York for the West Coast hell-bent-for-'lection! A million dollars, a speed-boat and oodles of pep to start with. Up popped old man "fate"—left him robbed, frisked, cleaned, broke. He walked into Los Angeles without even a monkey wrench—nothing left but his high-powered PEP! That's the start—now multiply by two and you'll have "Double Speed," Wally's second, sizzling automobile picture!

It is not "dignified," but dignity will not sell as well when the picture itself is speedy, and Mr. Albright hits just the right note in his selling talk. He frames it with border and caps it with an adaptation from the pross book with a portrait and:

Tonight
Sunday
Monday
Tuesday

which is a great deal better than "four days only." We hope that Mr. Raleigh manages to make New York, but we warn him to bring his own house with him unless he wants to sleep on a sofa in the property room.

Now Jensen and Von Herberg Turn to Birds for Mascots

BIRDS seem to be in fashion. Ralph Ruffner and Harry Wendland each pinned their faith to parrots, and now Jensen and Von Herberg defy superstition and make their newly reopened Palace, Portland, "The House of Peacocks," which explains the decorative scheme in the two full pages they ran in the Oregonian on Saturday and Sunday. It would be poor advertising to take all this space for decoration for a film subject, but the idea was more to get over the house opening and the new slogan than to get publicity for Miss Pickford, the opening attraction. The first shot was an unusually elaborate drawing, marred to some extent by hand lettering not clearly done, yet we think that the display will attract sufficient attention to make people puzzle it all out to know what it is all about. The house was reopened on Saturday and this was the shot for the opening day. It is largely crayon work, apparently, and will not show up as well in the reproduction, but it will give an idea of the intricacy of the design. For a follow they took a similar space on Sunday. This is a prettier display from most angles, and is more legible, type being used for much of this announcement. The peacock design is here apparent at first glance, and gets the idea over even more clearly. It announced the opening of the house "January 31," though the advertisement appeared the following day and "now open" would have been better. Two pages on succeeding days is something of a run, but we think that the cumulative effect was worth the double cost. It certainly seems to set a record for house openings.

H. A. Chenoweth Moves Back to Milford, Mass.

H. A. CHENOWETH seems to have completed his "See Massachusetts First" tour and is back in Milford, at the Opera House. Right away he got busy for "Auction of Souls," which is still cleaning up in the small towns. He ran it with 45 cents top, plus the tax, and got away with big money merely because he made his people realize that it was a big story. He started in advance to tell about it as an underline, as shown in this four sixes. Both sides of the frame carried a talk on the coming attraction, with special emphasis on the advance sale. Then he plugged in with special spaces, got out two different throwaways and a tie card. He played it all over the lot and made just as much money as though it had been a first run. The campaign made the town realize that it was something really big and they all wanted to see it—so they did. Mr. Chenoweth is keeping right up to schedule, but he has sent in no poetry lately. We wonder if he has reformed in this direction.

Uses the Newspapers Only to Drive in Programs

CHARLES BEAHAN, of the Driggs, Clearfield, Pa., in telling of his advertising display of that house, writes: "We do no splashing in the newspapers unless it is for something very special, like 'Male and Female.' We find it more profitable to give the stories in the program and then drive the production home through the newspaper space. We use a mailing list of about five thousand names, having a number of smaller towns to draw from. What do you think of the idea?" We like both angles of the scheme. The newspaper space can be used to better advantage to drive home the big selling point. Unless the price of space makes it possible to take enough to tell all the stories and virtually print the program in the newspaper, it does not pay to clutter up the space with the story.

Another Study of Crowded Full-Page from Oklahoma

HERE is another angle to the crowded full page in a display from the Rialto, Tulsa, Okla. This time the page is crowded, but it is so handled that you do not have to read it all, and so there is a better chance of the idea getting over. To the right and left of the upper of the two cuts are double columns of press comment and the reports of exhibitors. This served to fill in, but we think that it performs no useful function. About the only endorsement worth while is the endorsement of persons locally known. It is possible that in Tulsa people still care about the opinions of the New York papers, but we question the fact. Most portions of the country know that the press notice is no safe guide to amusements or patent medicines and this form of appeal is in most places relegated to the times when all advance men wore fur collared coats and silk hats. Cutting this out, placing the cuts on either side of the page, with the prices of admission in between would have given room for a better display to the personal statement of Manager Smith, which alone of the matter on the page carries real weight. They know Smith. They will believe him, but they will not care that the announcement of the engagement of the film in Portland, Maine, was "the best of news to local motion picture fans." It is better to take large type in order to get one good selling statement over than to take a lot of bunk press stuff and try to sell with that just because an entire page has been chartered for the day. If we had the remaking of the page we would have thrown out all but the signed statement, setting that double column in eighteen point light face. We would have swung this so that the star and title would have been slightly above the centre of the page. This and the house signature would have been the only big lines on the page, and the big lines would have sold to those who merely glanced at the page. They could have gotten the message without reading. As it stands there is too much to detract from the essentials, and what is used is unimportant and unconvincing. The number of words in an advertisemet has nothing whatever to do with the selling quality. It is the short, compelling argument which sells the best, and it can run in a three nines or a full page. The space merely helps to impress with its suggestion of size.

Line and Crayon Drawings Cannot Well Be Excelled

THAT line and crayon drawings cannot be improved upon for newspaper work is pretty clearly shown in the campaign for "Pollyanna" from the Sun and Muse theatres, Omaha. The stuff runs from four sixteens down to a single five for the last day and there is not a muddy cut in the entire lot. Mostly they used the press book ready made drawings, specializing in the crayon picture, reproduced here from a four elevens, but they varied the display without losing effect.

This was a joint engagement at the two houses, so that they could take larger spaces and divide the cost between the two accounts, and it was not until the engagement was nearly over that they began to cut down the spaces. We like very much the Sun signature, the seal reading "There is a place for U in the Sun."

Why Not Better Balanced Bills?

DESPITE the oft-repeated phrase, the business of exhibiting motion pictures is no longer in its infancy and it seems about time that this fact was realized and an effort made to balance programs. Before us lies the very nearly fill page display of a southern theatre where a lecture on the old Chinatown of San Francisco is used to supplement the showing of "The Greatest Question." This is almost as bad as the joining of Chaplin and "Broken Blossoms." The two do not fit. "The Greatest Question" deals with spiritualism and appeals to those who seek light on this great question, interest in which has been given an extraordinary impetus through the deaths in the war. It will attract to a house a class of thinking people to whom the cheap sensationalism of an alleged expose of Chinatown will not appeal, and the lecture will draw many to whom any phase of spiritualism will not offer attraction. Both classes of patrons will leave the theatre feeling that the show is incomplete. Few will leave satisfied. We have gone past the stage, where anything in the way of a picture will get over merely because it is a picture. It may not always be possible to offer a well blended bill, but it assuredly is possible to avoid bringing into contact such widely different classes of attraction.

—P. T. A.—

Display Is Not Attractive; But It Will Sell Many Seats

ALTHOUGH this five twelves from the Strand, Toronto, cannot be called artistic or even attractive, it is something better than that. It is a ticket seller. In some ways it is a poor looking advertisement, but it is an advertisement all the way through, and it probably worked better for the house than artistic layouts would have done. There is a strong star name and title, wtih a few punch lines on the left and a resume of the story on the right, and either side will get and hold interest, which is the big idea in any advertisement. A companion display is a four fourteens with a better layout, yet it probably will not sell as many tickets. This large cut splits the space so that two big statements can be gotten over with a punch. The other is not as clearly marked because some of the talk drops below the title and cut. It is a good display, but not so good as this one from a selling angle. The cut makes about half of this display, but the copy backs up the cut and gets it over. In a special for the submarine pictures the chief bank is a three line "Submarine Murder Pictures" in a four line letter that fairly barks at you. That line will sell several times as many tickets as would "German Submarines in Action," used by many exhibitors. That "murder" is as good as a ballyhoo, and yet it belongs.

A Corking Good Idea for Circus Pictures

Bombed the Town to Tell His Patrons That Mabel Normand's "Pinto" was There

UNLESS the townsfolk rise up and slaughter him in his youth and enterprise, Louis Landau, of the Washington, Granite City, Ill., is going to make advertising history. He is on his way and he has lasted through one stunt that would make a fine excuse for a lynching bee in most parts of the country.

It all began when Laudau booked Mabel Normand in "Pinto." He liked the title, so he ordered a thousand tack cards. A thousand tack cards will cover Granite City like the Liberty Loan posters covered the country, and when the press man says that "Granite City was covered with the cards" it might be taken literally.

You might think that Laudau would be content to rest on these laurels, but that was just preparation for the event, as the literary professor tells the would-be fiction writer. Most people thought that Laudau had shot his bolt when he did all that, but he alone knew better.

He went right on and bought space in the daily papers (2—count 'em—2) to tell that "Pinto will be here soon." People didn't care about that. Laudau has as good a reputation for truthfulness as any man can enjoy who runs a picture theatre. He had told them on the tack cards, and they were willing to take his word for it.

And Still He Talked.

Then he saw the lobby had a few spare inches of space, so he told them there that "Pinto will be here soon," and they replied, "Yes, yes. Go on. Go on." But he stopped there—for a time.

Night descended upon the fair town of Granite City. That happens pretty regularly, but this is a particular night. By half past ten the last belated theatre-goer had slipped out of the all night lunch wagon and had wended his way homeward. Only the lunch man, the sation agent, waiting for the 12:30 to roll in; the night operator in the telephone office and Landau were still awake.

On the back-yard fences of such yards as had fences, the midnight cat prowled and yowled. All else was quiet, save for the snores that rose from the Granite City domiciles and made the blue vault of heaven tremble.

Midnight came and the telephone girl yawned and phoned the girl in the next town about the new dress she was building. A quarter hour passed and the station agent yawned and gave thanks that the twelve-thirty was on time and cussed the schedule heartily.

Fifteen minutes more were ticked off by the clocks and the train rolled in, the express agent depositing upon the truck a tin box addressed to Landau.

Then It Happened.

Two minutes more passed and Bill Hicks, who wears two gold service stripes on his sleeves, dreamed that he was out winning another medal in the face of a new Hun onslaught. Bill slept on and dreamed his gory dreams, but the rest of Granite City was getting goose pimples on its shins beating it for the telephone, while the sylvan quiet was torn to shatters by a series of deafening detonations. If you started with the first there were twenty-four of them.

Then Si Spivins got the girl at central and the rest formed on the right and rang and rang, and a busy telephone girl went down the switchboard plugging each hole in turn to give the answer. She had been posted by Landau only five minutes before and the answer was

"Pinto Is Here!"

That was the answer. It was Landau firing a salute of twenty-four aerial bombs 32 minutes past midnight to tell a frightened populace that the film had arrived.

Next morning the entire town petitioned the United States Railroad Administration not to turn the roads back to private ownership until the train schedules had been re-arranged so that the night trains arrived in the daytime or went through without stopping.

But they all knew that Landau spoke the truth when he tack-carded the announcement that "Pinto is coming soon."

And a Kid Parade.

Just as a side bet Mr. Laudau offered prizes for the best entries in a miniature circus parade hinged upon the amateur circus in "Jinx," the preceding Normand showing in Granite City. This did not make as much noise as the bomb stunt, but it made a lot of talk and created less disturbance. The "animal cages" contained a white cat, called a polar bear; a pigeon, called an American eagle, and a rabbit with "hippopotamus" for an alias. The photograph does not give a clear picture of the novelty cages, but you can get the idea. There were forty-four entries and they were paraded around town with a brass band. The contest was announced by means of slides and by handbills distributed at the schools as they were dismissed for the afternoon. It was a stipulation that each cage should contain a "wild animal," and considerable cleverness was shown in forming the stunts.

Used "Soldiers of Fortune" to Help Army Recruiting

TYING-up with the Army and Navy recruiting services has been worked many times and always with advantage to both sides. In Philadelphia the U. S. Army Recruiting Headquarters got behind of "Soldiers of Fortune" at the Victoria, a large truck parading the streets with a sign reading "Soldiers of Fortune at the Victoria Theatre, Market street at Ninth, all week. Enlist in the U. S. Army and become a Soldier of Fortune." During the showing hours the truck anchored in front of the theatre and worked the crowds entering and leaving the house. No figures are given, but the officer in charge declared that it was a valuable angle of approach and brought good results, appealing to the adventurous, just as the school feature of the army appeals to the more sober minded.

A Constance Talmadge and Pictorial Review Hook-up

BECAUSE the April issue of the Pictorial Review will contain a stunning portrait, in colors, of Constance Talmadge, by Haskell Coffin, a hook-up is being arranged. The magazine will appear on the stands March 20, and the traveling representatives of the Pictorial Review have been instructed to collaborate with exhibitors having Miss Talmadge on or about that date for window hook-ups. The First National exchanges are collaborating with these representatives. In case you have a Talmadge picture booked and the advertising man does not get around, arrange your own hook-ups with window displays of the magazine showing the picture and properly lettered cards.

Used Live Bulls to Boom the Chaplin-Carmen Revue

BUILDING up on the usual publicity stuff, George Gildersleeve, of the Kingston Opera House, Kingston, N. Y., used two bulls, which were led through the streets by men costumed as Chaplin in the Carmen Revue. They were taken all over town with banners telling about the Carmen burlesque and the beautiful young girls who were members of the revue cast. And after the opening matinee the girls were cinematographed, in costume, out in front of the theatre by George Bunny, son of the late John Bunny, and that was done for a couple more items—one for the girls and one for Mr. Bunny.

Every time a local newspaper carries an advertisement concerning your theatre, have a "reading notice" go with it in another column. Get the full value of your investment. Reviews printed in Moving Picture World are valuable as "readers." Copy them when you play the film they refer to.

Climbing Aboard the Band Wagon.

Is not a difficult task when the band wagons are as small as in this miniature parade stages by Louis Landau for Goldwyn's "Jinx."

Newest Stunt Uses Old Songs for Pheggers

Broke His Theatre Record with Only a Legitimate Publicity Campaign

BREAKING his box office record, playing to an extra night performance and calling the police to protect his front doors from being bulged in were accomplishments scored by Edward L. Hyman, of the Strand, Brooklyn, with "The River's End." And he did it with straight publicity instead of working stunts. That's the interesting part of it.

A full week before the showing at the Brooklyn house, Mr. Hyman started in with a quarter page in the New York American, telling that the show was coming. At the same time he got the book stores to hook in with displays of the story. This was the only approach to a special stunt he used.

His billing covered the street car fronts and subway stations, but this is a part of his regular advertising scheme and was not peculiar to this attraction. He also used to advantage the electric sign on the side of the theatre.

Has a Preferred Position.

The Strand is on Fulton street, facing the elevated structure used jointly by the Fulton street and Brightton Beach elevated lines. At night the sign flashes into eyes of the theatregoers on their way to and from the New York houses, and in the morning the trains fairly creep past the theatre, due to a block getting into the station just above where the heaviest transfer to the subway lines is made. As a result this sign is one of the best located in Brooklyn.

In addition to this Mr. Hyman took space in both the New York and Brooklyn papers, using a larger number of lines than many of the Broadway houses, so that every one knew what attraction he was offering. As a result the show started off with a rush Sunday afternoon and there was not the usual falling off on Tuesday, usually accounted the worst day of the week at the Strand. To the contrary it was on Tuesday that it became necessary to ask for a couple of policemen to help handle the crowds.

And an Extra Show.

The police helped out the rest of the week and on Saturday they had their hands full. Mr. Hyman planned to give three evening performances on Saturday instead of the usual two, but he had for his special feature the Prison Scene from Faust, which cannot well be cut, and the picture was of extra length, so that it was nearly eleven o'clock before he could run the picture for the third time, but the house was as full as though it were a regular performance.

It was a big end to a big week and when the count up was made a new record was hung up that is going to tax extra performances to beat. Mr. Hyman has won out on a straight advertising proposition without any special stunting. He proved that even in New York with space at fifty cents a line and a dozen papers to be cared for a picture can be put over profitably with advertising—if it be a good picture to start with.

Horseshoes Replace Cans in Time-Tried Scheme

REMEMBER the hit the old one-ticket-for-tin-cans used to make and how the kids used to provide a Saturday afternoon ballyhoo? Elwyn M. Simons, of the New Family, Adrian, Mich., remembered and he offered free tickets for ten horseshoes presented at the first performance of "When the Clouds Roll By," in which Fairbanks suffers from superstition. He not only got a lot of publicity, but he gathered in about 200 shoes, and had an interesting session with the junkman after they had served their advertising purpose. He was not hard-hearted about it and a gid who could only win eight or nine without robbing a horse got in anyhow, but it had to be eight or better. For a full week he has been advertising with black cats and other delights of the superstitious and the shoes merely gave the clincher.

And he followed this up with a money prize free for all contest on "The Gladdest Moment of My Life" for Pollyanna, and gave a special showing to the good little girls in the local Industrial Home, cleaning up both stunts in the newspapers.

Here's Another Display "Heff" Grabbed.
As told last week, he can still make the ten-cent stores help out, but to do so he works the plugger song a week in advance of showing.

FRANK STEFFY, of the Coliseum, Seattle, worked a new one for the engagement of Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna." There was a line of waiting patrons almost all day during the engagement. Anticipating this, and knowing that the wait in the cold might induce grouches, Mr. Steffy called his house staff together before the opening, told them of the "glad" theme of the play and instructed them to cheer up the waiting line. It was not easy to make them see the idea, but hey finally got it, and when the line grew long a couple of nimble-tongued ushers went up and down the line adapting the precepts of gladness to the immediate situation and made so much clever fun that the patrons at least partly forgot their discomfort and caught the spirit of the production. The ticket seller handed out quotations from the play along with admission slips, the doorman oozed gladness and Mr. Steffy said glad things when he counted up the cash.

HARRY POMEROY, of the Strand, Ottawa, played up the racing angle of "Vagabond Luck" with sporting phrases in his advertising and a horse race in the lobby. For this lobby feature five cut-out horses were mounted on endless belts, actuated by a small motor. In front the mechanism was masked in by a low fence and a judge's stand, while behind was a grandstand filled to overflowing. The lobby itself was built up with grass mats and white fencing to suggest the entrance to a race course. It put the picture over in great shape and introduced Albert Ray and Elinor Fair to Ottawa theatregoers.

BECAUSE Charles Ray's first picture for Arthur S. Kane Pictures Corp., to be distributed through First National, will be Cohan's "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," a hook up will be made with the revival of the songs made popular by Fay Templeton and her associates. The most popular of these are "So Long Mary" and "Mary is a Grand Old Name," which will carry the bulk of the publicity, though it is announced that "Give My Regards to Broadway" will be included. This last was used in "Little Johnnie Jones" and not in the dramatization of New Rochelle. With plugger songs so generally used these days, the result of the revival will be watched with interest. Certainly it cannot be claimed that "So Long Mary" is machine made.

Advertising is the yeast that raises your dough. M. D. Selph.

Offers Passes for Names of Non-Attendants

WAYLAND H. TAYLOR got behind the exploitation of "On with the Dance" for its first western showing at the American, Bellingham, Washington, and devised a series of stunts, most of which will aid others in putting this picture over.

The opening gun was purely local; an open letter to the Mayor, telling that this was the first showing of the picture; that Bellingham was seeing it ahead of New York and inviting him to attend the opening performance. This F. B. Walton, of the American, ran on the first page, following this up with a series of large displays for several days before the opening. It was an appeal to local pride which interested the readers and put them in a receptive frame of mind.

At the same time all of the local stores were given stickers, of the sort technically known as "gummed labels," bearing a cut and the house and playing date. These were 2½ by 4¼ and were designed to be used in place of the gummed tape for sealing packages. A sufficient number were used to supply all of the leading stores, so that not one but many of these found their way into every household. They were also affixed to the menu cards at the hotels and restaurants. They could also be used on the backs of envelopes intended for local delivery.

For the Business Man.

An ample supply of desk blotters of good quality were also sent. The blotters had a tint front and were printed up with a cut of Miss Murray in the abbreviated costume she wears in the dance. The face carried calendars for February and March for such tired business men as did not care for the picture, but no one came down to the theatre to complain of the scantiness of Miss Murray's attire. And it was a good enough blotter to stick around on the desk until its absorbent qualities were exhausted.

There were cut-outs from the ones, sixes and 24-sheets for use on stage, in the lobby and in store windows. The paper lends itself to cutting out and there were some stunning figures staring the Bellinghamites in the face for several days before the showing.

Yama-Yama costumes were sent down for the ushers from a costumer in Seattle, and a local agency supplied a large touring car, in which the girl ushers toured the streets in the morning before the house opened. They enjoyed the ride and helped jazz things up with streamers and balloons. Large banners on either side of the car and at the rear told who they were. The girls were all masked in copy of the masked dancer.

Windows Were Easy.

Window grabbing was easy. "On with the Dance" lent itself to several angles and the cut shows the window of the leading store with a tastefulness display of evening wear. The same idea stole windows from the department stores for evening gowns and cloaks, while drug stores hooked in with beautifiers and the larger groceries and caterers appealed on the food angle. It was easy to get windows, and it was easy to supply good attractors.

One thing which made window getting easy was the appeal to local pride, and this "first-time" angle is going to grow more popular as the scheme is developed, but almost any merchant will come in on a display if he can get as much attraction to his goods as he gives the house for its feature.

Dressed Up the Lobby.

The lobby was dressed to carry out the carnival idea. Wires were strung across the upper portion and over this streamers were thrown in profusion, while here and there blown balloons were hung which swayed in the slight breeze created by concealed electric fans run on the slowest speed. Potted plants were added for floor decoration, completing the gala touch which is but poorly suggested by the cut, which gives no hint of the riot of color.

Further carrying out this idea, a dance prologue was staked before the showing of the feature and further served to get the spectator into a receptive spirit. As a result the picture ran to huge business for four days, and the run was an event rather than the showing of a motion picture.

Works in South Carolina, Too

NOW it is L. T. Lester, of the Rivoli, Columbia, S. C., who has cleaned up on the graveyard stunt for "The Greatest Question." He followed the lead of the Saenger theatres, New Orleans, with a newspaper hook-up which brought from a half to a column of pure reading daily in addition to the house stuff. And it helped business for the shows running at the Rivoli while the story is breaking—which is another angle of a special stunt in that it works for the house generally while it works for a special show.

Offers Free Pass for Names of Any Ten Who Have Never Visited His Theatre

BECAUSE he had just booked up Paramount-Artcraft for the year, Charles Krebs, of the Cherokee, Louisville, felt that it was up to him to get a hustle on. His house is a suburban theatre and he hit upon the scheme of offering a free ticket to any person who would bring in the names and addresses of ten persons who had never been inside of the Cherokee. Now there is not a kid in the section who does not devote his spare time to looking for ten delinquents. Now many are making up a complete list, but Mr. Krebs is getting the names of some who do not know his house and to these a letter and a pass are sent that they may see the error of their ways. It's one of those simple little stunts that work better than many elaborate campaigns, for there is not a man, woman or child in reaching distance of the house who does not know of the Cherokee. "Have you been to the Cherokee" is locally more famous than the soap "Good Morning!" Everyone is using it and it has become a catch-phrase.

Two Newspaper Hook-ups Which Came Easy

DOUBLING up with the Atlanta Georgian, H. Wayne Pierson, the Paramount publicity man for that district put over "On with the Dance" at the Rialto in jig time.

The hook-up took the familiar form of an essay contest on the question of a clothes budget for women, prizes being offered for the best letters of 300 words on the subject as follows:

How much should she spend on each of these items: suits, coats, hats, gloves and the rest?

And if her clothes budget is not enough for her tastes, should she curb her desires for fine feathers or, like Sonia in "On with the Dance," coming to the Rialto next week, earn more money as a masked dancer with which to buy clothes?

WHO IS RIGHT?

The prizes were one yearly pass to the Rialto, one for six months, one for three, ten passes for that week, sixteen pairs and thirty singles.

It would seem that any woman who could put so important a matter in 300 words should be given a prize if she did not add a P. S. without regard for the winning quality of the letter, but the prizes were held to the first fifty.

And a Dancer.

Ostensibly to advertise the contest, there was a masked dancer, dressed as "Sonia" in the play, who made four appearances daily in the show window of one of the largest stores, at 12.30, 2.30, 3.30 and 5.30. The window was dressed to suggest a cabaret stage and carried announcement of the prize contest, the paper contributing a daily news story on the dancer and the contest. She was announced to appear at the Rialto the following week without her mask.

The novelty of seeing a woman in tights in a store window instead of on the stage drew throngs to the store at each performance, and was good business since, being that far, many women went in to make purchases. The daily story kept the interest framed and the crowds continued throughout the week.

Meanwhile the paper kept plugging away on the contest with a daily story that made letter writing secondary only to the masked dancer and the replies poured in. Of course every woman read all she could about the play to help her get that angle to the reply, and the theatre saw to it that no one went without the facts.

Large Returns—Small Cost.

The idea was accepted by the newspaper as a circulation scheme and no charge was made for the handling. The theatre contributed the ticket prizes and, of course, swelled its usual advertisement, but the larger spaces did not come anywhere near costing what that much reading matter would have done, for the story started and ended on the front page and in the interval it ran so large on one of the inner pages that it could not possibly be overlooked.

Early in the week the masked dancer was nicknamed "Miss Somebody" and the name stuck, so her appearance at the theatre was advertised under that name when she appeared as a prelude to "On with the Dance." And what might have been a very ordinary act was given real distinction through the hook-up with the window stunt, and she was worth the price of a star act to the house at the cost of a fill-in.

But the best angle of all was the fact that the discussion created a real interest in the problem and the story alike, for nothing lies closer to a woman's heart than the size of her clothes allowance and this interest was real and lasting.

St. Louis Paper Co-operates with Hall Room Boys Comedies

THE latest big daily to become a cooperator in the publicity project started by Jack and Harry Cohn to exploit Hall Room Boys Comedies, is the St. Louis Times. This newspaper, which has featured the Percy and Ferdie Hallroom cartoons for several years, is urging its readers to watch for the adventures of these two boys in the movies, in return for which the Cohns use the newspaper's name in each release distributed in that territory.

To call attention to its co-operation with the Standard Film Corporation, which is handling the Hall Room series in that territory, the St. Louis Times ran advertisements, calling the attention of its readers to the fact that the adventures of Percy and Ferdie Hallroom were now in the movies.

The characters Percy and Ferdie Hallroom are depicted by Neely Edwards, "the boy with the winnning smile," and Hugh Fay.

Cinderella Feet Employed to Interest in Trilby

OAKLAND, California, photographers recently went from one end to the other and specialized in foot photographs in response to a demand created by Eugene L. Perry, of the T. & D. Theatre, who offered $50 for the prettiest pair of feminine feet photographed and submitted in the contest, which was organized in the interest of "Trilby." The Mayor, a court official and the publicity director of the Chamber of Commerce were the judges and the size of the prize and assurance of fairness brought out a big response.

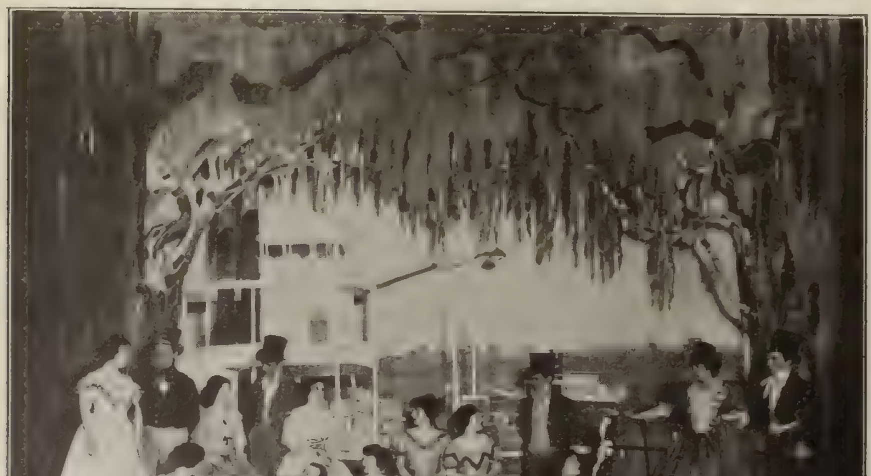
GUYON'S Paradise, a Chicago dancing academy with an average nightly attendance of about 1,800, staged an "On With the Dance" contest lately in conjunction with Daniel Roche, the local Paramount publicity man. Two Thursday nights were set apart when a photograph of Mae Murray was given every lady attending, these being supplied by the exchange at a cost of $60. In return Guyon spotted 500 one sheets on the elevated lines for the two weeks the play ran at the Randolph and hooked the theatre up with the contest, which is cheap publicity at $60. In addition several lobby frames were displayed and minor publicity stunts put into practise, for it was to Mr. Guyon's interest to make the stunt as big as possible.

Plantation Prelude Used Before "Huckleberry Finn"

TAKING advantage of the Mississippi river scenes in "Huckleberry Finn," Dr. Hugo Reisenfeld, of the Rivoli and Rialto, used a levee scene for the opening of this production at the Rivoli, but instead of using colored singers, as is usually done when levee and plantation stuff is shown, he employed the Rivoli chorus in white face and got a dainty and effective setting, as shown by the cut below. This offers a new angle and a change from the inevitable blackface.



"Steamboat Comin' Round de Bend—Toot! Toot!"
The New York Rivoli's prelude to "Huckleberry Finn" was a series of old time songs, with the chorus in ante-bellum dress.

The Old Potato Matinee Still Works Hard

Grauman Specializes in Odd Offerings to Give Variety to His Film Program

CONSTANTLY on the alert for some special attraction to give variety to his film programs, Sid Grauman, of Los Angeles, has offered many odd attractions at his million-dollar theatre. Between Revues and Fashion Shows and prologues, the day of the straight film presentation in large picture theatres seems to have passed. Almost all of the progressive managers now offer something in addition to the feature film, following the lead of S. Barret McCormick, who was the first to establish an actual production department.

Mr. Grauman has the instinct of the true showman and many of his productions have attracted more than passing comment. Lately he discovered in San Francisco an Arabian orchestra. They were about ready to sail for the Orient, but he persuaded them to drop down to Los Angeles for a week and made them one of the features of his bill.

Just before the showing the house orchestra was stopped and the lights were dimmed. The curtains slowly parted to show the eight players seated upon tabourets before an Arabic exterior with a characteristic arched doorway in which swung a lantern of hammered brass and red glass; the one touch of color beyond the violet lights with which the players were flooded.

For a full minutes the house was silent as the spectator took in the details of the picture, the players sitting motionless. Then they broke into some of their native airs, or rather native airs made suitable to the American clientele, for to European ears the Arabic and Syrian music is even more trying than the Chinese. The instrumentation was stringed guitars of modern design with a huge 'cello-like guitar with plucked strings for the bass. They started playing very faintly and again at the end of the last selection the music decreased almost to nothingness, heightening the effect.

Their program ranged from native love songs to undeniable American jazz and the odd arrangement of strings, heightened by the native costuming, made a pronounced effect.

A masked dancer was employed in a production on the same bill, it being announced that she was a society girl who did not wish to reveal her identity, and much was made of the mystery feature, though masked dancers are becoming too common to excite the comment they were wont to elicit. For this another special setting was used and the star was supported by secondas in two selections, "The Spirit of Water" and "At a Woodland Pool." The cut shows the setting and also the disposition of the orchestra in this new house, the organ console showing at the right, just below the pillar of drapery.

To Eliminate Competition.

It would seem that the larger houses are employing these special stunts to eliminate the competition of the second run houses. By waiting it is possible to see the same pictures in a week or two at much less cost, but the special productions are limited to the house of origin and must be seen there or not at all. The picture is still the chief entertainment factor, but the production makes it possible to offer something different from any other house, and in the west the Grauman productions more than hold their own with the eastern offerings.

In New York the Broadway is practically the only Broadway production house, if we except the Capitol, which does not seem to have as yet decided as to whether it is a vaudeville theatre with pictures or a picture theatre with vaudeville. The Strand and Rialto and Rivoli place their dependence upon the orchestra and singing with now and then an interpretative dance, but the Broadway goes in for revues and fashion shows, and cleans up.

George Dembow, Philadelphia Fox manager, who was confined to his home by illness, has completely recovered and is back at his desk again.

Ancient Potato Matinees Still Work Like a Charm

ALTHOUGH the potato matinee has not been mentioned of late, it is evident that it still works as well as ever. Harry Kress, of May's Opera House, Piqua, Ohio, is the latest to swing it and he reports that it is still in good working order. Lately the Memorial Hospital issued an appeal for potatoes. Mr. Kress was doing well with the Griffith-Artcraft "True Heart Susie," with a longer than usual run, but he figured the local advertising and announced that on a stated day one or more tubers would be the admission price to the matinee. The papers took up the stunt and gave the house and the attraction a lot of publicity, and when it was all over several bushel baskets of potatoes were sent over to the hospital, for many of the kids brought more than one. Mr. Kress lost a matinee, but he more than made it up on the run of "True Heart Susie" and with plenty of good will to spare to boot.

Louise Glaum's Personal Appearance Helps Business

PERSONAL appearances are only for the lucky few, but the Newman, Kansas City, profited largely through the personal appearance of Louise Glaum in connection with "The Lone Wolf's Daughter." Hearing that she was on her way East, the Newman management got into touch with the Hodkinson offices and arranged for a stop over. Announcement was made of her arrival and as the train came in during the noon hour, a mob of stenographers and office workers besieged the star, while the motion picture editors of the local papers looked on and got material for their stories. But the Newman did not stop there. Several window hook-ups were secured with modistes and one with a sporting goods store just across from the theatre, while quarter page advertisements were regularly run and the Chamber of Commerce weekly carried her portrait on the cover page. The work was done by Milton H. Feld, aided and abetted by Ben Blotcky, the local Hodkinson man.

A woodland nymph and an Arabian orchestra were the added attractions on one week's bill to give patrons something they could not find at any of the other houses.

WHEN the next theatrical season opens in New York there will be nine theatres exclusively devoted to moving pictures in the heart of the city—the Times Square district. Marcus Loew is building an entirely new house to be called the State; Famous Players-Lasky will have the New York and Criterion theatres operating in the Hammerstein's Olympia building; the Capitol, Strand, Rivoli, Rialto, Broadway and the Stanley are all strung along the great white way within a distance of ten blocks.

Bert Lytell's first appearance in a motion picture theatre was in a spoken play, "Under Cover," in his own stock company, then giving performances in Wailuko, on the Hawaiian island of Maui, in 1916.

Rubye de Remer is appearing opposite Eugene O'Brien in his latest Selznick picture, "A Fool and His Money." Miss de Remer is credited with possession of the largest collection of kimonos this side of Japan—and she will wear most of them in support of O'Brien.

Considerable Joy is taken out of life for Leatrice Joy every time her name gets into print as Beatrice Joy. Sometimes it is printed "Teatrice"—and other variations include most of the twenty-seven wrong ways to spell it. Because she is playing in "Blind Youth" the printers think she cannot see their errors.

Vitagraph is in a hurry to make known its screen version of the James Oliver Curwood story, "Courage of Marge O'Doone." It is being advertised in flaring billboard "screamers" before it has been released for circulation. That's enterprise in advance.

"A Full House," Fred Jackson's farce which, under the title of "The Velvet Lady," with a musical score by Victor Herbert, was presented on the stage last season, has been purchased as a starring vehicle for Bryant Washburn.

Jack Holt and Mabel Julienne Scott are announced to head the cast of the new George Melford Production, "The Translation of a Savage," a screen version of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of that name.

While making a picture in Canada Zena Keefe learned to ski. The name of this sport is pronounced "she." Hence she learned to she. If Miss Keefe were a male screenite he would learn to she—which would be a real accomplishment.

Augustus Thomas's greatly successful stage drama, "The Witching Hour," in which John Mason starred for several seasons, has been purchased for screen presentation by Famous Players-Lasky.

Adding to her labors as the impelling vampire in "Aphrodite," at the Century Theatre, in New York, Dorothy Dalton has just begun work on her next screen feaure, "This Man and This Woman," for Famous Players-Lasky presentation.

George Stewart, nineteen-year-old brother of Anita, will play the juvenile lead in Doug Fairbanks' forthcoming screen comedy, "The Mollycoddle."

Believe it or not: Billie Burke, having missed her train to Atlantic City, traveled by motor thirty miles to Mineola, Long Island, and flew to the seashore resort in the airplane she will use in producing "Away Goes Prudence." That's what the gang cried when Miss Burke left the Mineola aviation field.

Since 1878 "A Celebrated Case" has been played by all sorts and conditions of dramatic companies in America and England. Whenever one of the traveling repertoire organizations needed a play they inserted "A Celebrated Case" as the "grand Saturday night bill." It always scored a hit and was worth seeing time and again. Famous Players-Lasky will now present it on the screen, and this revival will take it into the R. F. D.'s of screendom.

Making out his income tax recalled to Al St. John that five years ago he was earning—and working hard for the money—$3 a day at the carpenter trade. Now he is a screen celebrity contracted to draw $50,000 in 1920. The loss of income on booze would not be missed by the Government if there were enough first class carpenters like St. John.

For the first time since she has appeared in motion pictures, Marie Shotwell in playing "opposite" Thomas Meighan, the new Paramount screen star, will NOT wear her famous diamond pendant. Miss Shotwell will be otherwise and more decorously costumed.

Seena Owen, leading woman of Owen Moore's "Sooner or Later," has the feminine lead in the newer Selznick screen drama, "The Gift Supreme."

Edith Hallor will be supported in "The Blue Pearl—screen version of the stage play —by Florence Billings, Lumsden Hare and Faire Binney. Lawrence Weber is making the production.

Metro is preparing for the screen a version of "The Penalty," story widely read because Gouverneur Morris wrote it. Lon Chaney will play the role of Blizzard—a different role from his impersonation of the hypocritical lame man in "The Miracle Man."

"Mystery Mind" (Supreme).
"King Spruce" (Hodkinson).
"Mother Suffers" (First National).
"Honey Bee" (American).

While the fact may have no connection whatever with Mary Pickford's further ventures in matrimony, her divorce from Owen Moore was obtained in Minden, county seat of Douglas County, Nevada.

The once-famous farce, "What Happened to Jones," will be brought to the screen by Paramount with Bryant Washburn in the leading role.

Cecil B. DeMille has been appointed a member of the Southern California Committee on Olympic Games. As Mr. DeMille always has his photograph taken in a "sport shirt" this is considered a highly appropriate appointment—especially by his press agent.

William Johnson's novel, "The House of Whispers," will be brough to the screen by J. Warren Kerrigan.

Peggy Hyland has completed "At the Mercy of Tiberius," the novel of years ago that is still so well remembered, and has begun production of another screen play, "Desert Dreamers."

ZaSu Pitts has under way a screen-drama entitled "The Heart of Twenty," in which she will be starred by Brentwood Productions.

Johnny Hines has been employed by Master-Films to play the star part in translation of Sewell Ford's character, "Torchy," to the screen.

Hobart Henley has delivered to Pathe his latest screen production, "The Miracle of Money," and has gone to Palm Beach for a vacation.

Sooner or later the screen gets 'em—both play and novels. Now comes the news that the Christies are going to make into a feature comedy "So Long Letty," the successful Morosco farce.

The Sultan of Turkey has "gone into pictures." Not as an actor, however. He was recently "shot" by a news weekly camera and now we can all satisfy that life-time longing to see how he looks and "how he got that way."

Olive Thomas has become a futilitarian. She is organizing a society of women whose object will be to prevent motor accidents.

The Goldwyn organization recently turned the roof of the Hotel Walton, Philadelphia, into an impromptu moving picture studio, and before an audience of fans and motion picture showmen numbering more than a thousand demonstrated how the "movies" are made.

Clara Kimball Young will bring to the screen "Mid-Channel," the stage play by Arthur Wing Pinaro, in which Ethel Barrymore made one of her greatest personal successes.

Metro is preparing a screen version of Jack London's "The Mutiny of Elsinore," with Mitchell Lewis playing the featured role.

Regardless of everything or anything to the contrary nothwithstanding, Jack Dempsey is going ahead with the serial he is producing for Pathe, and has now reached the tenth episode of "Daredevil Jack."

Blanche Sweet has just begun production in Los Angeles on her next screen offering—"Leona Goes A-Hunting," under direction of Henry King. The picture and not the hunting is last referred to.

LOS ANGELES
NEWS LETTER
BY A. H. GIEBLER

Lesser Executive Offices Transferred to Los Angeles

WITH the arrival of Max Roth, general manager of the Sol Lesser Enterprises, from New York, the transfer of the Lesser executive offices to Los Angeles from New York has been completed. Los Angeles is to be production, distribution and exploitation center for Sol Lesser, who has previously conducted his international distribution from the Longacre Building, New York.

Lesser will temporarily conduct production activities at the Brunton and the former Griffith studios. Annette Kellerman's picture is being filmed at Brunton, and George Beban, the other Lesser star, is cutting "One Man in a Million" at the Griffith studio.

The executive staff for Sol Lesser includes Max Roth, general manager; Harry Hammond Beall, publicity director; F. Rubenstein, executive secretary; Irving Lesser, western representative, and E. H. Mosser, auditor.

Film Exporter Leaves.

F. C. Shaw, film exporter, left for Santiago, Chile, on March 2, carrying with him as excess baggage 1,100 pounds of advertising matter and posters for films, which he will distribute throughout South American countries. Mr. Shaw went by train to New Orleans, where he will take a ship through the Panama Canal for Santiago, this being the only arrangement he could make for transportation out of Los Angeles. During his stay of several months in Los Angeles, Mr. Shaw acquired the South American rights to a large number of new productions.

Arranges for "Comedyart" Distribution.

H. J. Roberts, general sales manager of the recently formed Special Pictures Corporation, has returned to the home office of the company in Los Angeles after an extensive trip in the eastern territory. According to Roberts, exhibitors are in a most receptive frame of mind to receive the "Comedyart" release of Special Pictures Corporation.

While on his trip, Roberts arranged for the handling of "Comedyart" releases with the Criterion Film Company, Atlanta; Major Film Company, Boston; Gardinier Syndicate, Buffalo; Ascher Brothers, Chicago; Masterpiece Film Company, Cleveland and Cincinnati; Arthur S. Hyman, Detroit; Henry Dolvan, Indianapolis; Ruben & Finkelstein, Minneapolis; Alexander Film Company, New York; Twentieth Century Film Company, Washington, D. C.; Supreme Photoplays, Pittsburgh; All Star Film Exchange, San Francisco and Los Angeles; M. Rosenberg, Seattle.

New Releasing Company.

John J. Hayes, general manager of the Sphinx Serial Company, and the J. B. Comedy Company, has returned from New York with the announcement that he will consolidate with George Le Roy Clark, general manager of the Paragon Comedy Company, for the purpose of opening exchanges all over the country to distribute pictures produced by independent concerns as well as their own output.

The new organization is to be known as the Paladium Cinema Syndicate, and part of the plan of the concern is to finance certain independent producers.

Miss Marian Pickering will be featured in two reel comedies to be released by the Paladium exchanges.

Staff of Special Pictures Corporation.

The developing of negatives will be handled through the Clune Studios, and the release prints will be made at the Morosco Studio, according to a statement made by Louis W. Thompson, president of the corporation.

Mrs. Seymour Tally Dies.

Mrs. Minnie Tally, wife of Seymour Tally, son of T. L. Tally, of the Broadway Theatre, died suddenly at her home in Los Angeles on February 28. Mrs. Tally seemed to be in perfect health all day of the 28th until about four o'clock in the afternoon, when she was taken suddenly ill. She only lived three hours, passing away at seven o'clock. She leaves her husband, Seymour Tally, and a small son.

Founder of "Camera" Dies.

Elmer W. Robbins, who edited and published the film magazine called "Camera" for the past two years, died at Laguna Beach on March 3, following an illness of long standing. Robbins was well known to the Los Angeles film colony, was associated with the Griffith studios in an editorial capacity for a time, and prior to that was a photographer and newspaper man. He was 30 years of age, and leaves a wife and a young son.

Monkeying with the Irish Question.
Joe Martin starts a March 17 parade at Universal City.

Film Cowboy Killed.

William McPherson, 30 years old, a film cowboy employed in the Grace Cunard unit of the Marion H. Cohn Productions at National, was killed on March 1, when an automobile in which he was riding to location with four other cowboys, collided with a Pacific Electric freight train near Los Angeles. Practically every cowboy employed in the films attended the funeral of McPherson.

To Visit Daughter in London.

Mrs. May Mason, mother of Shirley Mason and Viola Dana, has left for New York on her way to London to visit another daughter, Edna Flugrath, who is now appearing on the stage in England.

J. D. Williams Arrives.

J. D. Williams, member of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, came to Los Angeles from New York last week, on an important mission for First National, the nature of which will be announced in a few days, he said.

Producer Directs Big Feature.

G. B. Samuelson, British film producer now taking films at Universal City, will personally direct the picture, "David and Jonathan," with Madge Titheradge, C. M. Hallard and Campbell Gullan, English players, in the leading roles.

New Wing Building at Brunton's.

The foundation for a new wing to the administration building at the Brunton studios was laid last week. This new addition will be 60 by 120 feet, and will provide office space for ten new companies when completed. Construction is also progressing on the new paint shop that is going up on the Brunton lot.

Kathlyn Williams has been engaged by Benjamin B. Hampton for his all-star photoplays of famous novels.

Matt Moore, who has been playing with Enid Bennett in "Hairpins," has finished his work in that picture and has gone back to New York.

J. Warren Kerrigan has begun work on his ninth Brunton production, "The House of Whispers," from the William Johnston novel.

Charlie Chaplin spent three days at Catalina Island making scenes for his current First National comedy, which is said to be nearing completion.

Peggy Hyland, the G. B. Samuelson star, has completed "At the Mercy of Tiberius," and has started on "Desert Dreamers," under the direction of Fred Leroy Granville.

Vivian Rich will star in a series of society dramas for the Fox company.

Brentwood has begun production on another ZaSu Pitts picture under Director Henry Kolker entitled "The Heart of Twenty."

Eugene O'Brien, Selznick star, is expected from the East this week to begin work in "The Figurehead."

March, "Brunet Month," Going in Like a Sales Lion; Will Come Out the Same

WITH the closing of the first week of March—"Brunet Month" in the annals of Pathe Exchange, Inc., during which exchange managers and salesmen are competing for prizes valued at $6,000—Pathe reports the greatest volume of business ever recorded in any similar period of time. Judging by returns for the first six days, Pathe officials predict that all previous "high spots" in the sales records of the organization will be far surpassed.

Feature business nearly doubled that registered during the last week in February, one of the biggest in the history of the organization. Pathe has been long established as the premier distributors of successful serials; yet, right now, figures of sales on the continued subjects are setting a new high water mark.

Effect of Sales Drive.

The effect of intensified sales efforts placed behind the Mrs. Sidney Drew comedies, in an effort on the part of the field force to win the stimulating prizes offered for the biggest business recorded on the two-reel subjects, is very apparent in the flow of contracts pouring into the home office. The Harold Lloyd series of $100,000 two-reel comedies, are maintaining the impetus they gained with the initial release, "Bumping into Broadway."

Spurred by the tributes paid by the foremost exhibitors of the country to the Pathe News, on the occasion of its recent beat in the Lexington lynch riots, Pathe's field representatives are endeavoring to place the news reel in every theatre in their territory. Strong selling efforts are also being placed behind the Pathe Review and Topics of the Day, and, in fact, not a single subject distributed by Pathe is being overlooked during Brunet Anniversary Month.

"I never was more deeply impressed with the popularity of Universal pictures," he said, "and especially did I learn what great opportunities our Jewel productions offer exhibitors for increasing their box-office receipts. It is highly gratifying.

"Everywhere I go I find that Jewels are reaping rich harvests for exhibitors. In Minneapolis 'The Great Air Robbery' established new box-office records. The same was true in Chicago and in Omaha, where it recently was shown. It is one of the most popular Jewel productions Universal has put out.

"The success of 'The Great Air Robbery' is due in no small extent to the special exploitation it received. I am thoroughly sold on the value of thorough exploitation. The best possible exploitation for a picture means increased business for the exhibitor and, of course, greater sales for Universal.

"Other Jewels which are establishing new box-office records are 'The Right to Happiness' and 'Blind Husbands.' These two pictures are enjoying continued popularity in the East, West and South."

The popularity of Universal pictures, and especially of Jewel productions, throughout the Southern States is reported by William Oldknow and Herman Fitchenberg, of the Consolidated Film and Supply Company, which has exchanges in Atlanta, Memphis, Dallas, Jacksonville and El Paso.

These two film men have been in New York during the past ten days conferring with Mr. Berman. They report that every theatre in their territory has a first-run theatre in which Universal pictures are shown. Corroboration of their enthusiasm for the Universal brand also comes from Ned Depinet, manager of the Dallas exchange, who attests to the popularity of Universal Jewels in the Lone Star State.

WITH the adoption by the council of the new film exchange fire prevention ordinance, every exchange in Buffalo, about ten in number, faces the necessity of early moving because of the provision which requires a fifteen-foot space on all sides of exchanges. There is not an office in Buffalo, it is said, which meets this requirement, and moving is the only resort. Managers are given until June 1, 1921.

Two new buildings are now under construction which will take care of about seven exchanges. The new Famous Players-Lasky building will be ready April 15 and the other Franklin street structure May 1. In this latter office will be housed the Metro, Universal, Vitagraph, United and Republic. It is rumored that Rearlart will occupy part of the F. P.-L. building.

The fire prevention ordinance was adopted by the council, Friday afternoon, March 5, and met with the approval of all the local managers. The situation is reviving talk of a film building.

Chamber of Commerce Honors Goldwyn's Philadelphia Head

IN appreciation of his untiring efforts in furthering the interests of the organization, the motion picture group of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce at a luncheon recently presented Chairman Harry M. White, manager of Goldwyn's Philadelphia exchange, with a solid silver and copper inlaid cigarette case.

The object of the luncheon was a complete mystery to the majority of exchange members, and none knew what they had been assembled for until the presentation speech was made by John Clark of the adjustment committee.

Several officials interested in the Liberal Sunday bill, including Dr. H. Charles Hespe, president of the New Jersey Exhibitors League and F. H. Elliott, secretary of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, were also present at the luncheon.

Aside from the essential details of production furnished by press departments to all trade papers there is more exclusive matter of importance to the picture showmen published every week in Moving Picture World than in any other class publication.

PROJECTION

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Maybe a Spark Did It

FROM the Vitagraph Exchange, Detroit, Michigan, J. M. Duncan, manager, comes the following:

Attached hereto find letter we received today from the Myrtle Theatre, Detroit, Michigan. with reference to a fire in the projection room of that theatre, which burned up three reels of film.

Mr. Stocker's letter is self explanatory. In my opinion the only possible cause of the fire would be a spark caused by dropping the steel reel into the metal receptacle of the storage vault.

You will note there is no other damage, except to the three reels burned in the one vault.

What Stocker Says.

The letter in question is from J. E. Stocker, manager of the Myrtle Theatre. He says:

Replying to your request for information as to how the fire occurred, will say that we have two film cans which are supposed to be fireproof. These set side by side just back of the projectors.

One of these cans has a capacity of six reels and the other five. Each reel has a separate compartment, the lid of which is pulled down by the weight of the reel of film. After having dropped the reel of film in, the projectionist turned his attention to the projector which was running, but in a few seconds he smelled smoke, same coming from film can into which he had just dropped the reel.

He was afraid to raise the lid, not being sure which reel was on fire (He did right there. Ed.), also from fear of possible consequences of raising the lid. Soon the fumes forced him from the room.

About ten minutes later is was possible to re-enter the projection room, and we found all three reels in the can burned to a crisp. Several reels in the other can were unharmed.

Resumed Show.

Within a few moments we resumed the show as though nothing had happened, using remaining reels. As to cause of fire, it is a mystery. The projectionist does not smoke. That the cans are to a great extent fireproof was amply proven by the result.

All things are possible in this vale of sin and sorrer, so it is possible a spark generated by friction started the fire, BUT some things are so improbable that they are pretty nearly impossible.

Any spark generated by such friction as there would be would not, in my opinion, fire film, even though it fell directly on the celluloid. I am of the opinion that there was fire in that can, or the head of a match was therein when the reel dropped down into the compartment. I would say that most likely a bit of hot carbon did the trick, but unless it were a pretty large piece it would have cooled off while the rewinding was in process. So I am inclined to the view that a match, or the head of one got into the compartment somehow. It might lie there for days, or even weeks and then get caught just right and be set off.

Projectionist Innocent.

Probably no one will ever know how that fire started, unless the projectionist himself knows and is hiding something, which we have no right to assume. In fact, from the way he describes things I think him entirely innocent of anything in connection with the fire. He is probably tellig the exact truth, even to the fact that he let a motor run the show while he did odd chores around the room. Has anyone had similar experience which would offer explanation?

Notice to All

PRESSURE on our columns is such that published replies to questions cannot be guaranteed under two or three weeks. If quick action is desired, remit four cents, stamps, and we will send carbon copy of department reply as soon as written.

For special replies, by mail, on matters which, for any reason, cannot be replied to through the department, remit one dollar.

QUESTION BOOKLETS.

We have two paper covered booklets containing 150 questions designed as a guide to study. They indicate what the projectionist should know.

Either booklet, postpaid, twenty-five cents; both, forty cents . United States stamps accepted; cannot use Canadian stamps.

THE LENS CHARTS.

Are You Working by "Guess," or Do You Employ Up-to-Date Methods?

You demand that your employer keep his equipment in good order and up to date. He owes it both to himself and to you to do so, but you ofe it to him to keep abreast with the times in knowledge and in your methods.

The lens charts (two in one, 11x17 inches, on heavy paper for framing) are in successful use by hundreds of progressive projectionists.

Manager Appreciates Efforts

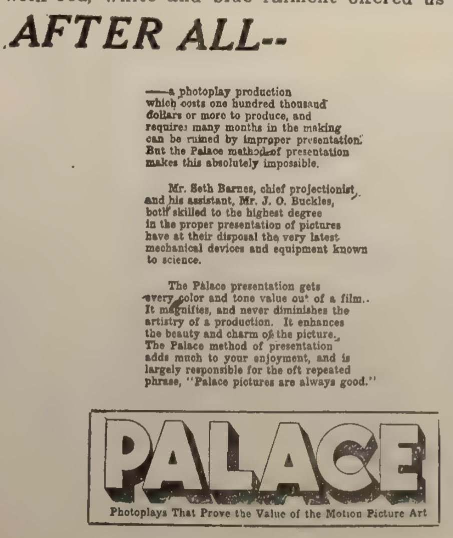
Reason why I've not written our department lately is just this: Everything was running along smoothly when a gentleman with red, white and blue raiment offered us a job acting as target at a great deal less coin then we were getting.

But the proposition looked good at that, and anyhow those who didn't accept would be grabbed by the neck and introduced to the new job—as they should be—so one fine day we found ourselves on board a boat bound for a place called "Sunny France."

Sunny France! Huh, show me the guy who named it that! Show 'im to me, that's all. Why, man, it rained nearly forty hours out of every twenty-four we were there! But we got along pretty well, and I kept up a bit on projection too, for I installed and ran a Pathe projector and a motor generator for the Red Cross; als worked on a Gaumont projector two nights a week.

The real object of this letter is to tell you that there actually are theatre managers who appreciate the efforts of the projectionist. Mr. Chambers, manager of the Princess and Palace theatres, is a gentleman in all that word implies.

He supplies everything we need, but certainly does expect results—and what is more he gets them. Attached find one of his advertisements in a local paper.



AFTER ALL--

—a photoplay production which costs one hundred thousand dollars or more to produce, and requires many months in the making can be ruined by improper presentation. But the Palace method of presentation makes this absolutely impossible.

Mr. Seth Barnes, chief projectionist, and his assistant, Mr. J. O. Buckles, both skilled to the highest degree in the proper presentation of pictures have at their disposal the very latest mechanical devices and equipment known to science.

PALACE

Will Match Pictures.

I was in New York City a few hours last summer, in August. Visited the Rialto and Rivoli and will put our pictures up against theirs any old day.

We are enlarging our projection room and installing a third projector. Will send photo as soon as it is done.

Equipment consists of the following: A room eight feet by nineteen, with a seven foot ceiling. Two fresh air inlets near the floor, each 8 by 16 inches. A window three by four feet, which is kept closed in daylight. Two thirty inch vents in ceiling, all of which insure good ventilation and healthful conditions. We have three motor driven, late model Simplex, a dissolving stereo and a spot lamp.

Use half size Gundlach lenses, projecting a seventeen foot picture 107 feet to a Minusa screen. Have lens system lined up as per lens chart and get excellent results. Current is taken from 3-phase, 220 volt lines, through a 75 ampere double arc G E motor generator, delivering seventy amperes to the arc.

Also have a 110 volt D C line for emergency. Use National 7/8 cored and 3/8 silver tip. Have an enclosed, motor driven rewind, geared down to twelve minutes to the 2,000 foot reel. It is equipped with an Ideal film cleaner and an automatic cut-out switch.

Have three-way push button switches on each projector motor; also adjustable observation ports as per page 220 of the handbook.

When room is finished will have lavatory and toilet, and the best equipped projection room in this neck of the woods. In fact, it will be the only three-projector installation in this state so far as we know. Mr. Buckles and myself both wish the department the continued success which it deserves.

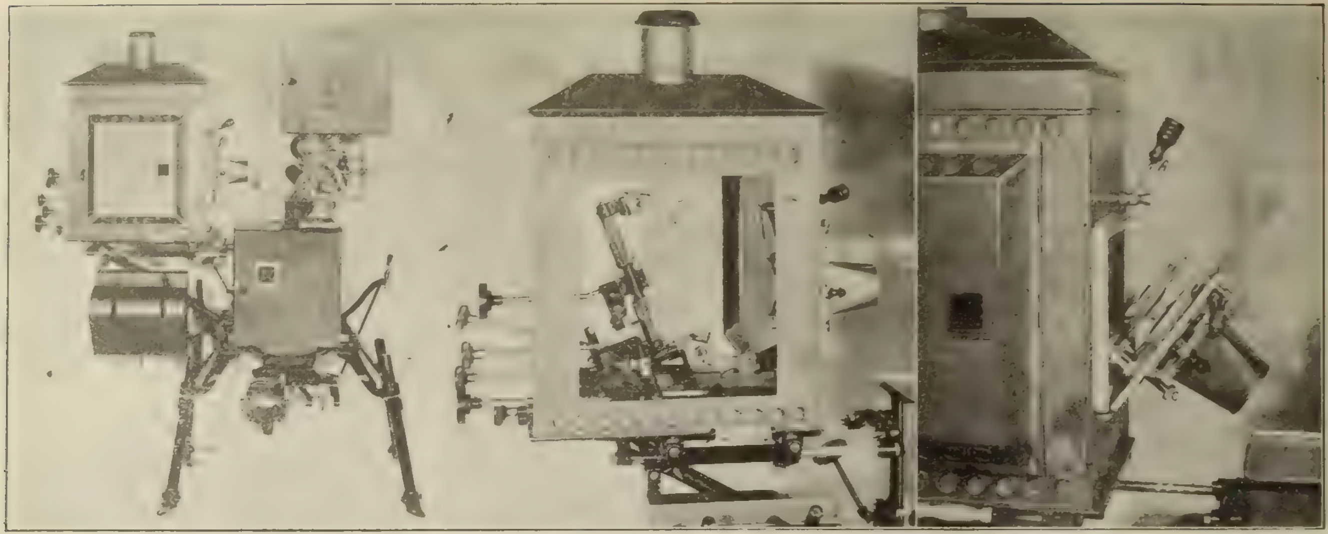
Judging by your remarks France must have been damp. Real managers, who appreciate careful, painstaking work, and who realize the fact that beauty and artistry of the best production may be ruined by improper projection, should receive due credit.

Their tribe numbers too few, though it is slowly increasing. Glad to have the photo.

Lens Charts With Power's Projectors

The Nicholas Power Company has purchased a large number of lens charts, and hereafter one will be sent out with every Power's projector as a part of the standard Power equipment.

This is a progressive step which is deserving of commendation. Demand the chart with the projector. You are entitled to it and if it is not in the lamphouse or the new projector some one has purloined it somewhere between the factory and your theatre.



New Power's 6-B Equipment and Details of Same.

New Power Equipment

For quite some time the editor has been peeved at the Nicholas Power Company because it did not produce something of more importance than comparatively minor improvements in their justly celebrated Power's projector. But we now take it all back, for down at No. 90 Gold street we have been introduced to what will, after the latter part of this month, be and become a part and parcel of the standard Power's Six-B projector equipment, to wit, a lamphouse much increased as to size and embodying unique and excellent improvements. In fact, so radical is the change that it is entitled to an extended description.

Ventilation is accomplished by means of twelve 1-inch holes at top and bottom, on either side, plus a 4-inch vent flue, which may be used as an open chimney, or may be connected with the outer air or the projection room vent flue by means of suitable piping. If the latter is done the ornamental top is slipped off, leaving just a straight pipe to connect to.

The Lamphouse.

The lamphouse is of heavy Russia iron. A new and very convenient type of door-latch is used, with a handle of bakelite composition. The top is in the form of a hip, or peak, which makes it impossible to lay reels of film or other articles thereon. The cable slots are 9/16 of an inch by 1.5 inches long.

The standard base of the old lamphouse provided for a maximum distance of a little more than 20 inches from center of condenser to aperture. The new base, while it does not place the lamphouse any further back, provides for a maximum distance of 21 inches from center of condenser to film, all that will be required under any condition of practical projection.

The added distance is made possible without placing the lamphouse further back because the condenser itself is set back inside the lamphouse.

Just under the lamphouse roof, on either side, is a metal pocket, extending into the lamphouse proper and open at the back. One pocket is 10 inches deep and the other 5. They are intended as drying ovens for carbons—a most excellent idea and one which will make a decided hit with projectionists.

The added size of the lamphouse gives the whole projector a dignified, well balanced appearance and reduces the interior temperature, which in turn adds to carbon capacity and reduces condenser breakage.

The dowser is of the interior type, cast from gray iron, and is operated by a lever projecting from the front lamphouse wall just over the condenser cone. It comes down between the arc and lens and stands about a quarter of an inch from the latter. This should operate to protect the hot lens when the lamphouse door is opened to trim the lamp. So much for the lamphouse proper.

The condenser mount brings the Power's folks up to date in that respect, and maybe a jump or two ahead. In the front of the lamphouse is set a substantial casting measuring 9.5 inches square. Its holding flange attaches to the interior wall, which is reinforced to receive it.

The front of this plate is deeply recessed to receive a second square casting, which carries the condenser, and is hinged at its lower edge to the holding casting. By releasing a conveniently located latch, with non-heating handle, the carrying plate is allowed to swing outward, as shown in the illustration, in which position the whole condenser is accessible.

The condensers are carried in a heavy metal receiver of peculiar shape, into which they are clamped by a threaded ring—one point with which I am not sure I agree. Perhaps this is really the best procedure, but I am inclined to think a heavy ring of metal which the projectionist could spring into place would perhaps serve the purpose as well, and serve it more conveniently.

Of this, however, I am not sure. Time will tell and the change, if found advisable, may be easily made. At any rate, the arrangement as it now is is very excellent.

The Lens Holder.

The lens holder rests in a milled groove, so that the lenses are held accurately with relation to each other. The front lens holder is a part of the main holding plate, but the holder of the arc lens rides on two substantial rods which pass through holes in the main plate.

Just below the condenser cone, on the outside, is a large milled thumbscrew, by means of which the arc lens holder may be moved ahead or back so as to alter the distance between the holders to accommodate lenses of different thickness.

This is a decided step in advance, as with it there will be no possible excuse for the projectionist not keeping his condenser lenses the proper distance apart.

We would, however, respectfully suggest to the Power Company that the spacing screw be made with a very coarse thread—something like the one now used to move the lamp backward and forward.

Our reason for this recommendation is that where a combined moving picture projector and stereopticon is used, it is often found impossible to use the correct condenser combination for moving pictures and at the same time get a clear stereopticon field.

This condition may be remedied, if the projectionist is able to space his condenser lenses further apart, and do it quickly, as he shoves over to the stereo. The greater spacing of the lenses provides exactly the condition required to clear up the stereo field. The suggested change is a slight one, and there is no good reason why it cannot be immediately incorporated. We trust it will be done.

The Lamp.

Only a brief description of the lamp is necessary. It is heavily constructed, with rack bars three-quarters of an inch square, held by clamps which have a spring arrangement allowing the clamps to "give," which takes care of expansion and will prevent the bars from "freezing" under any condition. The hand holds of the various lamp controls are of ample dimensions.

They are spaced in such way as to prevent any possible interference of one with the other, no matter what position the lamp may occupy.

The carbon contacts are V shape and have a contact surface a trifle more than 1¼ deep, or long. The bottom holder will accommodate carbons of any diameters from 5/16 to ⅝ of an inch; the upper holder will take anything from ⅝ to 1⅛ inch. New carbon contact blocks can be installed at any time at slight cost.

The capacity of the lamp is 150 amperes. The wire contacts are unusually excellent. They are designed to do away with terminal lugs. The clamps are so made that a series of interlocking corrugations give both perfect electrical contact and a positive grip. The contacts accommodate anything from a No. 6 to a No. 1 wire and are protected from the heat of the arc by an asbestos shield which extends out over the lower and under the upper one.

Another excellent feature of the new lamp is that all adjustments are made with the lower carbon arm, the upper remaining stationary. This has the effect of not disturbing the crater with relation to its position on the axis of the optical system when it becomes necessary to alter the position of the two carbon tips with relation to each other.

The new lamphouse marks a decided improvement in Power's equipment. It has, in all its details, the unqualified indorsement of this department.

Cameramen Should Wake Up

Harold E. Davis, Old Town, Maine, who evidently is a live wire and an enthusiast, says:

Although I have read every copy of the World for four years past, this is my first letter to the Father of all good projectionists, and when I say "Father" that is precisely what I mean, because it is through you and the World that we are able to put a good picture on the screen and keep it there, always presuming the producer gives us the right stuff to work with.

Mighty Good Suggestion.

On the wall of our projection room we have what we call a 'Trouble Card," or rather two of them, on the wall back of each projector. The projectors are given a number, and the card bears that number and the name of the projectionist handling the machine. On these cards we record any and everything which is wrong with the screen result, together with exact time and date, the cause and, in case the screen is dark, the length of time it was dark. RESULT: You may gamble we are right there on the job sixty seconds every minute because we do like a nice, clean, white card. Why? Why because the darned thing hangs right there in plain sight, where anyone (including the boss) can see—that is to say, anyone who has any business in the projection room. Mr. Johnson, our head projectionist, evolved the idea. It is great.

Hand Drive.

We have two Simplex, hand driven projectors, taking 45 amperes through a Hallberg Economizer, with a 137 foot projection distance to a metallic surface, eighteen foot screen.

We have trimmed down our master blades as much as possible—won't say how much because we don't care to start an argument. Some of them here say they are too narrow to be practical, but just the same they are delivering the goods.

Make our shutter blades of cardboard. They last six months or more. Johnson has a new shutter he is trying out. It puts a brighter, whiter light on the screen than anything I have ever seen. Trimmed to same dimensions as our present ones we run as low as fifty-eight without flicker.

Will put them on both projectors as soon as they are perfected. Cannot say more now.

Out of Focus.

I certainly do wish something could be done to stop producers making out-of-focus pictures. Last Friday and Saturday we ran a production, nearly one-third of the scenes of which were out of focus. Directors and cameraman complain that we ruin their artistic work. Well, I wonder how they think we can do artistic work with such stuff. I wonder if they ever bother their heads about what they do to OUR artistic work when they hand us such stuff. Of course, our people like real well to pay an admission to see a production, one scene of which is sharp and beautiful and the next just a blurry, fuzzy mess—I don't think! And the trouble is that they lay the blame for the fault on the projectionist. And then their eyes hurt and they lay it to "moving pictures," whereas it is really due to "fuzzy" pictures. And you are the one to get this thing remedied, if any one can. And I think you can, provided there be enough kicks. So this crank twister is starting the ball rolling.

G. WALKER

Wanted to Heave a Brick.

Yes, friend Davis, I've sat in the Broadway houses and wanted to heave a brick at the screen, with hope that it would bounce far enough to dent some cameraman's solid ivory dome.

But the cameraman is not always to blame. There is the director who demands what he calls "softness" in focus, which, rightly named, is just plain blurr, and is hugely injurious to the eyes of the audience and should not be allowed at all.

The eyesight of a community is of much more value than a director's mistaken idea of "art." Nine out of ten of the average audience will agree with me that such scenes, however "artistic," are just a plain nuisance and an aggravation.

Mind you, this criticism does not necessarily hold good if the central objects, on which the eye inevitably focuses, is sharp. Under this circumstance there is no objection to the background being out of focus. In fact, there may be, under some conditions, distinct advantage in this, since it helps focus attention where it belongs. But the fuzzy-all-over picture is several degrees worse than bad.

"Trouble Card" Good.

That "Trouble Card" listens mighty good. Wonder how many projectionists will be willing to have your faults bulletined that way?

As I understand it one man handles each machine. But that would not be necessary, since one card could be made to do for both projectors, the notation of faults being supplemented by name or initials of man in charge. The trouble card plan should serve to promote healthy rivalry between the men—a thing we heartily approve of. Glad to have details of the new shutter when you are ready, BUT—you will have to show us.

As to Text Books

F. A. Reynolds, Brooklyn, New York, asks for list of books which will be of use in preparing to take an examination as moving picture projectionist. He wants the "most direct and practical" and those which bear directly on the motion picture projection machine. "Do not," says he, "include Richardson's handbook as I already have that, but I want something even more simple, and less difficult, if possible."

There are other books which I can and do recommend to the projectionist, because they contain knowledge which will be of real value to him. But for the beginner the Handbook is plenty. If he combines its study with an apprenticeship he should have no trouble getting by, but he may well add Hawkins, Electrical Guides, Theodore Audel Company, New York City, and then, afterward, "Optic Projection."

But I am afraid you, like so many others, are starting out with a wrong idea. You seem to be looking for an easy path to a profession. There is no such path.

Take my advice, go somewhere where the law has sufficient intelligence to allow you to serve an apprenticeship, serve such an apprenticeship combined with study, and finally pass an examination by reason of the fact that you really do understand your business. That is the only real way to enter the profession of projection.

Among Busy Exchangemen

Frederick Resigns as Pathe Baltimore Chief; Whittle Up

AFTER having been associated with Pathe Film Exchange for two years and made quite a record for himself as their representative in Baltimore during that time, Louis J. Frederick resigned his position as Baltimore representative of that company on Monday, March 1, to become the general sales manager of the Baltimore State Rights Film Company with offices in the Palmore and Homand Building, 420-22 East Lexington street.

Mr. Frederick is well known in the Baltimore territory. He will cover the territory including Maryland, Delaware, Virginia and the District of Columbia for the Baltimore State Rights Film Company. All of the productions put out by Jans Pictures, Inc., will be handled by the company Mr. Frederick now represents. George C. Easter, who is secretary and treasurer of the Jans Company, is also president of the Baltimore State Rights Film Company. His offices are also in the Palmore and Homand Building.

Allan F. Moritz

Mr. Frederick will be succeeded by Jack L. Whittle, who will cover the Baltimore territory for Pathe. Mr. Whittle is well able to handle their output as he has a wide knowledge of the conditions existing here and is well known to the film men.

Mr. Whittle will be succeeded by Myer J. Wolfert, who for the past five years has been connected with Universal and is a hard working young man. Simon Feldstein will take Mr. Wolfert over the Maryland and part of the Virginia territory and introduce him to the trade.

J. R. Thomson is the new manager at the Pittsburgh branch of the American Film Co., Inc., succeeding B. F. Hubbard, who has taken charge of the American branch at Philadelphia. Mr. Thomson comes from the Buffalo American office, where he did efficient work and was very popular with the exhibitors.

Manager McGurty, of the Republic Distributing Corporation's Pittsburgh branch, has the sympathy of all exhibitors and exchangemen in the territory, as a result of the death of his wife, which occurred Saturday, February 21.

Moritz Manages F. P. L. in Buffalo.

Allan F. Moritz, veteran film man, has come to Buffalo as manager of the local Famous Players-Lasky exchange, succeeding Richard C. Fox, who recently resigned to accept a position with Fox in London. Mr. Moritz is a former advertising man, having once been associated with the firm of Kiernan in New York City.

Leaving the advertising business he took over the management of the Top Top Theatre in Chattanooga and later the Lincoln Theatre in Montgomery, Ala. After a few years in the exhibiting end of the business, Mr. Moritz assumed the position of salesman with the Fox exchange in Washington and later in Philadelphia.

His next jump was to New Orleans, where he was manager of the Fox exchange for a period of three years, resigning in July, 1919, to go with the Famous Players-Lasky Company in Washington, where he remained five months. When the Buffalo position of manager became vacant he was chosen to fill the vacancy. Since arriving in Buffalo Mr. Moritz has gained many friends in the city and territory, which he has toured thoroughly.

Mr. Moritz announces that the new Paramount exchange will be ready for occupancy April 15. The exchange will be located in the Film Row at the corner of Chippewa and Franklin streets.

L. W. Wingham, Seattle Robertson-Cole manager, is back on the job after a two-week attack of the flu. Mr. Wingham announces the engaging of three new salesmen for the Northwest territory. They are A. B. Cleland, Ralph Pielow and C. B. Beale.

Adda Boy, Eddie.

Landrys Visit Taylor.

L. Landry and Mrs. Landry visited C. A. Taylor, Pathe Buffalo manager, Friday, March 5 on their way to visit Niagara Falls. Mr. Landry is assistant general manager of Pathe. While in Buffalo he gave a brief talk to the local sales staff.

"Bob" Lynch, Philadelphia manager of the Metro, has been ill in bed during the past few days. The "boys" all hope for his speedy recovery.

Big Noise in Philadelphia.

C. S. Trowbridge, Philadelphia manager of United Artists, has leased the Metropolitan Opera House in that city for an indefinite period. Plans have been arranged for the Philadelphia presentation of Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna" beginning Saturday.

J. Hebrew and J. P. Bethel Promoted.

J. Hebrew, former Philadelphia manager of the Vitagraph, has been promoted to district special director, of Pittsburgh, Buffalo, Albany, Boston, Washington and Philadelphia territory exchanges. J. P. Bethel, formerly assistant manager, has been made the Quaker City manager and R. E. Binns assistant.

F. W. McClellan, Philadelphia publicity exploitation manager for Paramount-Artcraft, has had wide experience and is extending much valuable assistance to the exhibitors.

Saul Meltzer, salesman for the Pittsburgh Select exchange, is back on the job after a long siege of pneumonia. Saul spent two weeks at Lakewood, N. J., and afterwards made a trip to New York, where he met the various Selznick stars.

Koerpel Moves Up in Goldwyn.

J. A. KOERPEL, for the past seven months manager of the Seattle Goldwyn office, was this week appointed West Coast division manager to succeed A. S. Aronson, who leaves San Francisco March 16 to open Goldwyn exchanges in the leading cities of Australia. Mr. Koerpel has appointed as his successor at the Seattle office F. A. Bernardo, who, as salesman, followed his chief from World to Goldwyn.

Mr. Koerpel is probably one of the best known film men in the United States, having been recognized in many quarters for his ability as an organizer and efficiency expert. At the Seattle Chamber of Commerce, of which he is a member, he is known as "The Business Doctor." He is also a member of the Foreign Trade Bureau of Seattle and he has been a close student of the language and business conditions of South America for the past six years. It is rumored that he will be sent to that continent in the not very distant future to establish Goldwyn branches.

Capt. J. B. MacKay, managing director of the Anglo-Canadian Picture Plays, Ltd., Montreal and London, has returned to Montreal after a succesful trip to England, where he formally presented the plan which has been arranged for the distribution of the productions of fourteen British enterprises in Canada through the Specialty Film Import, Limited, Montreal and other cities. The first feature released through this company will shortly be presented in Montreal, it is understood.

Paul J. Swift, formerly of Washington, D. C., has succeeded E. A. Peavey as manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange in Omaha, Nebraska.

Fred Solomon, for years booker and assistant manager of the Select exchange in Omaha, Neb., has joined the A. H. Blank Enterprises, the Omaha, Neb., exchange for First National releases.

Pathe Omaha Force Plans Clean-Up.

The force of the Pathe exchange in Omaha, Neb., has been greatly increased in anticipation of record breaking business with the Pathe specials and the Dempsey serial. Stuart Gould, formerly exploitation expert with the Famous Players-Lasky exchange in Omaha, has accepted a position with the Pathe exchange as exploitation man and representative in the field for the Pathe specials. S. A. Galanty, formerly Paramount manager in Denver, has joined the Omaha Pathe force to handle Pathe features in Iowa and Nebraska. George M. Cohn, of Chicago, Louis Frieborg and Don Moore, of Omaha, have also joined the Pathe staff. Eight field men are now representing Pathe from the Omaha exchange, of which Harry Graham is manager.

Stern Tells 'Em Why.

Manager Stern of the Pittsburgh Universal in his weekly talk, Saturday, February 28, to the sales force on exploitation and other subjects announced that he was going to try to have it arranged to offer prizes to the salesmen who think out the best ideas on picture exploiting.

He made it plain to all once more that this is particularly the age of exploitation and also dwelt at length on the fact that the sales force should do all they can to help the exhibitor in this respect.

His pithy discourse was punctuated with a number of references to instances where exhibitors have been greatly helped by ideas that he advanced and he said he was going to keep "harping on this subject" until it became a veritable habit with the "sellers" to think about this important factor in showing pictures.

Andy Sherry, Universal "Ace" salesman, has recently broken all records selling film for the Pittsburgh branch.

Dine Buxbaum on Becoming New York Exchange Head

EXECUTIVES and employes of the Famous Players-Lasky gave a dinner Friday night, March 5, at Reisenweber's to Harry H. Buxbaum, in observance of Mr. Buxbaum's recent appointment as manager of the Famous Players-Lasky New York Exchange.

Fox in Fine Quarters in Omaha.

The Fox exchange in Omaha, Nebraska, has moved from 315 South Sixteenth street to new quarters at 1408 Harney street that furnishes the best exchange room in the Middle West. The new Fox quarters in Omaha have 6,000 square feet of floor space. An exhibition room has been installed, with desks for spectators. The exchange is equipped with other modern arrangements. M. H. Golden, home office representative, was in Omaha to aid Manager Sidney Meyers and his force to make the move.

Cohen Added to Realart's Sales Force.

Maurice Cohen, formerly connected with Universal and the Gardiner Film Syndicate, has been added to the sales force of Harry E. Wilkinson, the Buffalo manager of Realart Pictures Corporation.

Berman Visits Baltimore.

Leonard L. Berman, who has been in the film business for seven years and is manager of the Arrow Film Exchange in Philadelphia, Pa., and also connected with Korson & Amsterdam of that city, spent several days in Baltimore during the week of March 1, looking over the territory for the productions he wants to sell the state rights on. Prior to joining the Arrow company, Mr. Berman was associated with Pathe. At one time he was connected with the United Film Exchange in Baltimore.

Screenart Offices Filling Out.

The office and sales force of the Baltimore branch of Screenart, which is under the management of Michael Siegel, is now being completed. Richard Harrison has been taken on as traveling salesman and is now taking a trip over the Virginia and Eastern Shore of Maryland territory. Miss Rosa L. Breen has accepted the position of Mr. Siegel's secretary. Miss Breen was formerly with the Quaker City and Hatch Film companies of Philadelphia, and has been in the film business for over a year.

Some Smith!

P. H. Smith, manager of the Buffalo First National office, has returned from a week's trip downstate, during which he visited Syracuse, Binghamton, Johnson City, Endicott, and other towns, closing contracts for much big business.

Building R-C in Cleveland.

M. A. Levy, manager of the Cleveland branch of Robertson-Cole, has added to his force of salesmen. H. L. Beecroft, formerly of Pathe; D. Miller, formerly of Universal, and W. A. Hoffman, recently of Hodkinson, are the new members.

Paul Tessier, Cleveland Pathe manager, recently returned from a visit to the home office, New York, and reports an announcement will soon be made of big plans now formulating.

Fred Slater, Eastern District Manager of Robertson-Cole, was a recent visitor at the Cincinnati branch office. Mr. Slater and Charles Casanave, resident manager, devised plans for conducting an extensive publicity campaign for the "Beloved Cheater," which will be shown in this district shortly.

H. A. Ross, Paramount manager in Detroit, has returned from a three weeks' sojournin the south, where his family is spending the winter at St. Petersberg, Florida.

Kent Goes From Detroit to Toronto.

William A. Kent, former assistant manager of the Select exchange in Detroit, has been promoted to manager of the Toronto office of Select and has already left to assume his new position. He will be succeeded in Detroit by Frank Stuart, former bookkeeper and cashier, and who has been connected with the Fox and former General film exchanges. Mr. Kent is a brother to J. O. Kent, Detroit manager for Select, and has been with Lewis Selznick for the past four years.

Cincinnati Third Film Center.

Harris P. Wolfberg, district manager for Famous Players-Lasky, said in an address before the Cincinnati Rotary Club that Cincinnati is the third largest motion picture distributing center in the world, being exceeded only by New York and Chicago. In one year Cincinnati jumped from eighth to third place. Mr. Wolfberg has been retired as president of the Associated Film exchange managers of the Chamber of Commerce because his work takes him to Pittsburg.

Hoyt Ricketts, from the home office, has been appointed as assistant manager to George Dembow at the Philadelphia Fox exchange and Louis Burnstine, his predecessor, has been promoted to the management of the Pittsburgh branch. Captain Howard Boyle, the much mentioned "Ace" of the English Flying Corps, is now representative for Fox in this territory. A special effort will be made by Mr. Dembow to have his salesmen in this territory secure a big portion of the $10,000 being offered in the national contest beginning March 8 and ending in April.

Frank S. Hopkins, manager of the Buffalo Universal office, was visited last week by Fred Schweppe, of the Colonial Theatre, Elmira, and C. W. Landers, of the Opera House, in Fredonia N. CHICAGO NEWS LETTER

Plans of Independent Exchangemen's Association Shown in Committee Report

THE most important work of the recent convention of Independent exchange men held in the Capital Film Company's offices, in Chicago, was the report of the permanent ways and means committee, which was submitted Saturday morning, February 28.

On this committee are: Chairman, R. D. Lewis, R. D. Lewis Film Company, Oklahoma City; R. C. Cropper, Bee Hive Exchange, Chicago; Al. Kahn, Crescent Film Company, Kansas City; D. J. Chatkin, Consolidated Film Corporation, San Francisco and Los Angeles; E. J. Farrell, Major Film Company, Boston; J. E. Pearce, Peace Film Company, New Orleans, and H. A. Kyler, Supreme Photoplays Corporation, Denver.

Considerable discussion, care and thought were bestowed on the draughting, which was purposefully engaged in after the convention proceedings had practically ended, when the members of the committee had been fully impressed by the desires and aims of those assembled. The report follows:

"The purpose of this organization is for the mutual benefit of the independent exchangemen and to secure for themselves the benefits of a combined purchasing power.

Exchanges to Buy Capital Stock.

"The affairs of the organization are to be conducted as a corporation, with non-assessable stock, and its capitalization will be $100,000, fully paid in. The capital stock will be subscribed for by the individual exchanges operating in the various territories throughout the United States—exclusively subscribed for.

"The United States is to be divided into a certain number of exchange centers, to be agreed upon later. Each one of these centers shall have the opportunity of purchasing an equal amount of the capital stock and each and every division or exchange center, which is fully paid for, shall receive one vote.

"The purpose of the moneys derived from the sales of the capital stock is to enable the home office to bind contracts with the producers to pay for productions thus purchased.

"The affairs of the corporation shall be conducted and supervised by a board of directors of at least five members. The board of directors shall include the president, secretary and treasurer. The duties of the board of directors, or their direct representative, will be to get in touch with the members and ascertain the nature and class of productions desired and get into touch with producers of such films and obtain them, and arrange with producers for prices on accessories, on the best possible terms; to keep in touch with the various producing organizations and submit to the members of this organization such data as will enable them to know intelligently what is going on and enable them to protect their mutual interests.

Membership to Vote on Contracts.

"The board of directors, or its direct representative, shall not have the right to close contracts with producers for any production, or productions, until such contracts have been submitted to a vote of all the members and have received a two-thirds vote of the membership.

"The board of directors, or its direct representative, on receiving an offer from a producer, shall submit a copy of such contract, with complete information regarding the class of the production, to each member.

"The members shall then vote on the proposition as submitted and the corporation shall be bound by such vote.

"As an example: For a production costing the corporation $25,000, a distributor in a 5 per cent. territory would be assessed 5 per cent. of $25,000, or $1,250.

"The home office shall be maintained by assessments on each exchange office, in the nature of a 5 per cent. addition to the cost of all productions to its corporation.

"All purchases contracted for by this corporation for its members shall be paid for on a C. O. D. basis.

During the convention proceedings it was decided by vote that the number of votes necessary to accept a picture, or pictures, from a producer must be 75 per cent. of the vote cast.

It was also decided by the convention that if an exchangeman has been a member of the organization for a certain time and finds it impossible to continue business owing to financial difficulties or for some other vital reason, the organization will buy his stock, if deemed advisable. If not, the exchangeman can then offer it to some other exchange in the organization. The organization, however, must be given the first chance to buy such stock.

The members of the committee on territorial rights and percentages, appointed at the convention, were: Chairman, Dave Warner, Warner Films, Cleveland; special advisor, Joe Brandt, National Film Corporation, New York; H. E. Coffee, Empire Film Distributing Company, Washington, D. C., and C. C. Hite, of C. C. Hite Attractions, Cincinnati. Mr. Brandt was selected as representative for the producers.

Following are the Independent exchanges and their owners, which were represented at the convention: San Francisco, D. J. Chatkin, Consolidated Film Corp., Milwaukee; W. A. Baier, W. A. Baier Film Company, Oklahoma City; R. D. Lewis, R. D. Lewis Film Company, Syracuse; T. W. Dooley, Dooley Film Exchange, New York; E. W. Hammons, Educational Film Corporation, St. Louis; Sam Werner, United Film Service, Omaha; Max Waintroub, Fontenelle Film Company, Boston; E. F. Farrell, Major Film Co., New Orleans; J. E. Pearce, Pearce Film Company, Washington; H. E. Coffey, Empire Film Distributing Co., Philadelphia; A. A. Millman, Capital Film Exchange, Kansas City; Al Kahn, Crescent Film Company, Denver; H. A. Republic's Super-Specials Eagerly Awaited by Trade

NORMAN H. MORAY, assistant sales manager of the Republic, with headquarters in New York, spent two days in the city the week of March 1, on a trip through the Central West.

He had visited Buffalo, Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit before Chicago was reached, his mission being to acquaint exchange managers with the forthcoming, big releases of Republic and to open a sales campaign on the new serial, "The Whirlwind."

He found business conditions very favorable in Cleveland, Cincinnati and Detroit and the outlook very promising. Buffalo was rapidly recovering from the effects of the great blizzard, which seriously affected business in all the big cities in New York state.

Exhibitors in all the cities visited are looking forward eagerly to the release of Republic's first super-special, "A Girl of the Sea," which will take place in the near future. Mr. Moray closed for the first run of this picture in all the cities mentioned. Great interest is also being centered on the release of the first episode of "The Whirlwind," a Republic serial that is being eagerly awaited by exhibitors.

Mr. Moray left for Kansas City, Mo., Wednesday, March 3, and will visit Omaha, St. Louis and Pittsburgh. He will then revisit Cincinnati.

Paul Busch, who has just completed his sixth week as manager of Republic's Chicago office, informed me that all the leading exhibitors here are waiting patiently for "The Girl of the Sea," "Mothers of Men," Julian Eltinge, in "An Adventuress," and "Children of Destiny," all super-specials, of six reels or more.

Universal's Chicago Manager Celebrates Fiftieth Birthday

I. L. LESERMAN, manager of Universal's Chicago exchange, was the pleased victim of a real surprise party, March 2, at the Winter Garden, Consumers building, in celebration of his fiftieth birthday. Morris Hellman, of the Chicago staff, was the host and a merry time was spent.

Louis Laemmle, a brother of Carl Laemmle, made an appropriate address on the occasion and, at its close, Manager Leserman was presented with a handsome traveler's lunch set by the Chicago office staff. The following were present:

Mr. and Mrs. Leserman and their children, Ruth and Carl Leserman; Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Sampson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Meredith, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hyland, Louis Laemmle, Mr. Anderson, editor of International News Service, and Messrs. Charles Miller, R. C. Smith, Lipton Astrachan, Harold Gallos, Calahan and Platzman.

The Rothacker Film Company Buys Legget-Gruen Concern

J. ALEXANDER LEGGET has been appointed manager of the Eastern industrial division of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, his appointment having followed the acquirement of the Legget-Gruen Corporation by the Rothacker concern. Mr. Legget came on to Chicago to sign the agreement of transfer late in February.

The Legget-Gruen offices in the Candler Building, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, will be retained by the Rothacker company for its eastern industrial division, and Mr. Rothacker plans to include in this division the branch offices in Philadelphia and Boston, and others that may be established later.

Secretary in His Cabinet

Margarita Fisher and Harry Hilliard in the American feature, "The Dangerous Talent."

Mr. Legget is one of the pioneers in the industrial and advertising moving picture field and he has engaged in prominent and successful campaigns for Swift & Co., the American Tobacco Company, the Waterman Fountain Pen, the Bell Telephone Company, etc.

Express Strike in Chicago Not to Affect Film Shipments

AN express strike was called in Chicago, Saturday morning, March 6, which crippled shipments in and out of the city. About 3,000 employes, including truckers, assorters, billers, carloaders, collectors, etc., quit work at the time mentioned and it is said they will be joined by the railway expressmen, Sunday, March 7. The strike is for higher wages.

Ben W. Beadell, Chicago manager of Select, who is chairman of the transportation committee of the Chicago F. I. L. M. Association, informed the writer that all film shipments to tributary territory around Chicago will be forwarded by parcel post, as he had made arrangements with the Chicago post office authorities to handle such shipments.

All film exchanges in Chicago were notified to that effect.

"Comedyart" Pictures in Big Demand.

E. C. Davies, Chicago manager of Special Pictures Corporation, with quarters in Chicago's First National office, in the Orpheum building, 110 South State street, advises the writer that hundreds of letters are being received daily at the Los Angeles home office concerning "Comedyart" productions and numerous telegraphic inquiries are also made. Mr. Davies says that his business in Chicago is excellent and that distribution of the company's product is being made through the First National office here.

Mr. Weiss has been widely known in the film business, in the middle west, for many years. In 1913 he was Chicago manager for the World Film Company and later was promoted to the position of district manager.

In 1917 he was Chicago manager for Metro and returned to L. J. Selznick in 1918, when Mr. Selznick formed an amalgamation with the Central Film Company. He remained Chicago manager until First National absorbed the concern.

On March 1, 1920, he was again elected manager of First National's Chicago office and, on the same date, disposed of his interest in the exchange and sent in his resignation, which takes effect March 20.

Mr. Weiss has made no announcement of his future plans, up to the time of writing. He can be reached at his home address, 568 East Fifty-first street, Chicago.

Arthur S. Hyman Resigns.

Arthur S. Hyman, formerly vice-president and general manager of the Arthur S. Hyman Attractions, with offices in Detroit and Chicago, resigned about a month ago, severing his connections with the organization both as official and stockholder. Business will be continued, however, under the old firm name, but the policy will be changed to some extent. Announcement of this change will be made later.

Rothacker Again Off to West Coast.

Watterson R. Rothacker, who returned from Los Angeles late in February, again left for the Coast City March 12. He will return to Chicago about the middle of April and will leave for Europe some time in May to secure a site for a London laboratory.

He will be accompanied by David P. Howells, the well known film exporter.

Eckhardt Makes Health Trip.

C. W. Eckhardt, Fox Chicago manager, is extremely happy these days. He is on the eve, at the time of writing, of taking a recreation trip through the South, during which he will combine business with pleasure.

Around Chicago Picture Theatres

By Mary Kelly

Special Films for Kiddies Educate, Amuse and Impress

POLLYANNA" amounted to an epidemic at the Woodlawn on a recent Saturday morning, when 1,000 juvenile fans gathered to see Mary Pickford in this role. For about three months Managing Director Karzas has been presenting these morning matinees, weekly, for the benefit of the younger generation. And popular affairs they are proving to be, as is easily seen by attending one of these hilarious gatherings, especially when the instigating cause of the rendezvous is the glad maid and her infectious personality.

But long before Mary's face smiled from the screen, and, in fact, long before any sort of entertainment began, there were enthusiastic demonstrations among the young participants. The house was a veritable bedlam of chatter and laughter, which was unsquelched by the management, except in cases where the expressions of joy mounted to rowdyism. Then the mere appearance of an usher worked wonders.

If appreciation is dear to the heart of any manager let him get the children's matinee habit. It will convince him of the popularity of his shows. For these careless youngsters bring no prejudices with them, but come eager to laugh at the slightest pretext.

At the Woodlawn this weekly event is fast becoming an important feature. Careful attention is given to selecting suitable movie-fare for the little folk. Their craving for fairy tales is being satisfied through the medium of the film as never before. The favorite characters of fairyland that have hitherto existed only between book pages, or have come to life for a brief period on the dramatic stage with is insurmountable limitations, are now from the screen satisfying and fascinating the child's imagination. It is this type of photoplay which is customarily presented Saturday mornings, but "Pollyanna," the well-beloved, can vie with any of Grimm's or Anderson's fancical folk for exciting interest.

It was interesting to observe the readiness with which the children accept a lesson in history or geography from the screen. A Bray Pictograph (distributed by Goldwyn) revealed a tribe of Indians at Taos, New Mexico, a subject which they hailed with delight and with a certain familiarity as if greeting persons often read of but never seen.

Specialties Seldom Needed Says the Crystal Manager

VAUDEVILLE or vocal specialties should be introduced in a picture theatre only rarely, and then only because of an apparent necessity for a stimulus." This is the opinion of Thomas J. McKenzie, house manager of the Crystal, who was speaking for Schaefer Brothers, owners of the theatre.

The Crystal is maintained for the most of the time on a strictly picture basis; but occasionally introduces soloists who serve, as Manager McKenzie says, to assure the patrons that the Crystal management is endeavoring to keep them amused by varying any supposed monotony. This theatre is the second largest ground floor house in Chicago, seating 1,830 persons, and is situated in the northwestern part of the city. It is attractively lighted and artistically decorated, and cost approximately a half million dollars.

One of its most advantageous features is the splendid view afforded from any seat in the house. This is due to the superiority of the screen, on which the figures never appear distorted or out of proportion, no matter where the spectator sits.

May Be Seated.

The daily matinee policy is being successfully carried out, owing to the location, which is in a busy section, where trades of various descriptions flourish. Evenings the music, furnished by an eighteen piece orchestra conducted by Nate Leavitt, is very popular. The Crystal was one of the big five de luxe houses seriously affected by the recent disagreement between union operators and theatre owners.

Parkside Has Novel Aim; Seeks to Dodge Publicity

MOTION picture managers, it seems, have differing conceptions of just what constitutes a fool (all intensifying adjectives are omitted by women reporters). Most of them will agree that the term applies to the man who doesn't get out his trumpet and blow for himself and his theatre.

But Manager W. A. Dietze, of the Parkside, will have nought to do with trumpets. He scorns even the teeniest tin horn. When the Moving Picture World representative called on him to say "good evening," Mr. Dietze said "good-night!"

"A manager who goes in for publicity for himself and theatre by talking to reporters is a ——— fool," he asserted. "If he's any good he doesn't have to blow."

The Parkside (if we dare) is a well patronized, splendidly located house on North Clark street, a stone's throw from Lincoln Park. It has about 600 seats. No elaborate presentations are given. Picture programs change about six times a week, and matinees are given daily.

Some of Mr. Dietze's ideas about getting business are very good—but he's too modest!

"In Unity There's Sense," Says Chateau Manager Menzing

GET the good-will of your employes and you're sure to win that of your patrons," is one recipe for managerial success as practiced by C. F. Menzing, whom Ascher Brothers have recently selected to preside at the Chateau.

And Mr. Menzing, whose big, breezy personality waives all formality so that in five minutes' time new acquaintances are calling him "Charlie," has a "line" in handling his employes that is extraordinarily successful. Not only for policy's sake, but because he's a natural mixer, he behaves as one of them and issues his commands and reprimands with a pleasant buffoonery. It is only necessary to glimpse the genial faces of the Chateau personnel in order to see that this style of discipline is popular. Stage Manager Herbert Green and Musical Director Lynn Hazzard readily admit that they don't mind this kind of bossing—in fact, rather delight in it. And it's a method that is far-reaching in its results. It is creating a house-spirit of "we're here for all the fun we can get," a spirit that is contagious, and to which patrons are irresistibly susceptible. A checking desk maintained without charges and strictly without tips further expresses the idea of willing service.

The primal Ascher injunction to managers of their houses is to be on hand while people are entering or leaving the theatre. No theatre owned by this firm is characteristic unless this is so. Manager "Charlie" says this is the most fun of all—this process of getting chummy with your patrons. His free-and-easy manner provokes frequent overtures on the part of Chateau visitors. They are continually approaching him with comments on the merits or demerits of the show—which is precisely the sort of interest which every alert exhibitor values. If the remark is a favorable one he answers "Good. Be sure to let me know when you aren't pleased as well." This attitude not only wins confidence, but wins out-and-out boosters for a theatre.

Harry I. Day

The Chateau, owing to strenuous competition was placed on a vaudeville-movie basis about sixteen weeks ago. Formerly it was exclusively a picture house. It has been equipped in a really palatial style and has a reputation for class that is not equaled in any other theatre of its type. Located in the "gold coast" district, on the northeast side, the Chateau can boast of catering to a discriminating clientele with decided ideas about the sort of entertainment preferred. After some difficulty a franchise was lately obtained for securing Western vaudeville acts, and many of the best performers engaged in the large loop houses play here. Meanwhile the standard of pictures exhibited has not been allowed to drop, the past week's feature having been May Allison in "The Walk-Offs."

ERECTED about ten miles from the "loop," on the northern rim of Chicago, in a "green but growing" district and thereafter doomed by casual onlookers to fail, flunk and fossilize, the Howard Theatre has made a pioneer fight for existence—and is winning. Two years ago, when C. W. Furgeson put it up, at a cost of about $300,000, members of prominent motion picture firms shook their heads ominously. "It won't pay," they said, "out there in the woods. It's a wild venture. There's no one there but the squirrels and the mosquitos."

A recent Sunday brought 6,000 persons to the Howard, which is an example of the business which this theatre is now doing. This day was not a "record" day either, according to Henry E. Newell, who, with Vernon C. Seaver, is joint manager of the Howard.

"How do we do it?" Mr. Newell repeated. "By giving folks as good as they can get anywhere and at lower prices. We tried it the other way, had cheap music, etc. But that was the wrong basis for successful competition. Now we have a de luxe orchestra composed of twenty picked musicians, some of whom are from the Chicago Symphony Orchestra. We have a gifted conductor, Jacques Beaucaire, who devotedly studies each picture and arranges a suitable accompaniment by resorting to his ample musical library, valued at $5,000.

"We have formidable competitors—two of the finest theatres in Chicago—within fifteen minutes' ride from us, but we are getting on. And so is North Chicago. Within two miles of us are 500 apartment houses and two hotels. Across the street is Evanston. There are now plenty of residents here to keep the Howard going.

This theatre has a set policy of presenting everything on schedule, of running four shows a day, two afternoon and two evening. These begin regularly at 2, 4, 7 and 9 p. m., and are never curtailed for the sake of getting in an extra show. Admission prices, inclusive of war tax, are 25 cents for adults and 10 for children, regardless of picture.

During the week of February 28 the following films were exhibited at the Howard: Dorothy Dalton in "A Gamble in Souls," Dustin Farnum in "The Corsican Brothers," Marguerite Clark in "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy" and Mary Pickford in "Pollyanna."

Buffalo Bulletins

Pastor Uses Film Play.

THE Rev. Frederick Cortland Wagner, pastor of the East Presbyterian Church, 497 South Division street, used a five-reel motion picture feature entitled "As a Man Thinks" to supplement his sermon on Sunday evening, March 7. This is the first time in Buffalo history that a minister has used a regular film feature to emphasize his pulpit message and the Rev. Mr. Wagner is to be congratulated upon his step forward. The move shows a new use for the clean film play. A capacity congregation was in attendance, which shows that this is also a new way to revive interest in the church services.

Theatre Owner Fined.

Bernard Vohwinkel, 555 Humboldt Parkway, owner of the Oriole Theatre at Genesee and Mortimer streets, was fined $15 by City Judge Maul on Thursday, March 4, when he pleaded guilty to permitting John Fritz, 17 years old, to operate a motion picture machine wtihout a license. Fritz, who was charged without operating without a license, was fined $10. The law provides that operators must be at least 21 years old.

Elk Theatre Sold.

A PRIVATE showing of the initial production of Jans Pictures Incorporated, "Love Without Question," starring Olive Tell, was held in the ballroom of the Southern Hotel on Tuesday evening, March 9, for the stockholders and their friends. Many Baltimoreans who are interested in the company attended the screening which was arranged by George C. Easter, secretary and treasurer of the company, who has his office in Baltimore. H. F. Jans, president, and F. E. Backer, vice-president, respectively, of the Jans Company, attended the event.

Screens "Air Robbery" for Flying Club.

The Universal feature, "The Great Air Robbery," featuring Lieut. Locklear, was screened before the American Flying Club of Baltimore, on Tuesday night, March 2, at a meeting and annual election of officers held by that organization on that evening. The showing was arranged for by Louis H. Bell, Universal salesman.

Sunshine Girls Appear in Person.

Blue Bell Changes Hands.

The Blue Bell Theatre, 1713 Harford avenue, which was owned and operated at one time by William Emmerich, has been taken over by Elmer Hutchins and John L. McDonald, who also operate the Teddy Bear and Pictorial theatres.

Show Baltimore from the Air.

The harbor facilities and industrial improvements of Baltimore and the McCoy Hall fire as it was raging, taken from an airplane 6,000 feet up, were graphically shown by motion pictures taken by F. H. Zeigfeld and Herman E. Tate, of Baltimore, when exhibited at the Builders Exchange on Wednesday, March 3.

Films at Y. M. C. A.

Motion pictures are to be a feature of the new series of meetings which are termed industrial evenings, which began on Thursday night, March 4, at the Baltimore branch of the Y. M. C. A. and will be continued on Thursday night of each week for sometime to come. "The Use and Abuse of the Twist Drill" was the subject of the first film screened.

Cincinnati Chat

To Have Community Theatre.

A PROPOSITION to turn the motion picture house on Ludlow avenue in Cincinnati, the only theatre in that suburb, into a garage has been defeated by a committee of citizens who expect to make it a community center.

Steps have been taken for the launching of a holding corporation, the stockholders being 100 residents of that suburb, 85 of whom have already agreed to take one share at $100. The company, temporarily headed by George M. Berger, chairman, and Henry Vogel, secretary, is to have a capitalization of $10,000. Under tentative plans the present management of the theatre will continue. The stockholders of the holding company, instead of accepting their interest in money, agree to take admission tickets to the theatre.

Exhibitors Raise Defense Fund.

George Talbot, secretary of the People's Theatre Company, has been named chairman of a committee of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association which is to raise $5,000 for the defense of I. M. Frankel, motion picture theatre owner, who has been sued by the Composers' and Publishers' Association for alleged infringement of copyright on music played in his theatre.

Pittsburgh Points

Seitz to Build.

HARRY A. SEITZ, who owns the Opera House, Freeport, has plans at Harrisburg for a new theatre to be erected on the opposite corner of his present location. The building will face Fourth and Market streets, and will be constructed of brick and stone. The estimated cost of same will be in the neighborhood of $25,000. His present opera house is an upstairs house and has been in use for quite a number of years.

Gould to Erect Another.

Sam Gould, the well-known Pittsburgh exhibitor, who controls the Gould, Arcadia and Atlas theatres on the North Side, has purchased property on East Ohio street, measuring 48 by 120 feet, on which he expects to erect a model photoplay theatre in the near future.

Celebrates Anniversary.

The Grand Theatre, Fifth avenue, Pittsburgh, will play two feature productions during its second anniversary week commencing March 15. They are Dustin Farnum in "The Corsican Brothers" and Douglas MacLean and Doris May in "What's Your Husband Doing."

Building in Cumberland, Md.

The Strand Theatre Co., a stock company of Cumberland, Md., is erecting a $275,000 photoplay theatre, to be opened about May 15. The house will seat 2,300 persons. Power's Cameragraphs will take care of the projection.

An Advertising "Agency."

J. D. Palmer, manager of Palmer's Theatre, Black Lick, Pa., is another of those enterprising exhibitors. He, his father and brother operate a printing plant next door to their theatre, and get out all kinds of special advertising on almost every show.

Comedyart in Pittsburgh.

Harry E. Reiff, who has been with the Hodkinson Pittsburgh exchange for the past few weeks, has resigned that position to take care of the Comedyart Pictures, which opened an office in Pittsburgh Monday, March 8. The company is located with the Supreme exchange on the fourth floor of the Seltzer Building. Manager Joe Bloom, of the Hodkinson exchange, states that he is sorry to lose the services of Mr. Reiff, as he has done remarkably well with the Hodkinson service, and wishes him the best of luck in his new proposition. Harry invites exhibitors all to call and learn of the excellent line of films he will have to offer.

The Fifth.

Manager Frank Niggel, of the Apex exchange, Pittsburgh, is the proud father of a fifth child, this time a daughter.

Cleveland Producers Visit.

B. A. COLLINS and D. W. Corbett, of the Collins Motion Picture Studio of Cleveland, O., visited this city the last week in February with a party of sixty-five members of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce which is touring the Pacific Coast on a trade-extension excursion. The visitors were armed with official reports of the United States Weather Bureau, showing that San Francisco has by far more clear days per year and less fog than Southern California and expressed surprise that more studios were not in operation here.

Theatre Plans Bettered.

Knox, Blumenfeld & Gordan, proprietors of the Empire Theatre, Napa, Cal., have secured another site for their proposed theatre and are having plans prepared by Architect Reid Bros., 105 Montgomery street, San Francisco, Cal., for a house with a seating capacity of 1,800. The new house will be known as the Orpheus and will be erected at First and Randolph streets.

News in Brief.

George Mann, owner and manager of the Rialto Theatre, San Francisco, has returned from a business trip to New York.

Paul Sprague has remodeled his moving picture theatre at Quincy, Cal.

C. O. Davies has remodeled the Wigwam Theatre at Reno, Nev., enlarging the house, moving the stage and redecorating the theatre throughout.

The Loyalton Theatre at Loyalton, Cal., McKenna and Squires, proprietors, is closed, owing to the uncertainty of securing electric lights, but will be reopened soon as the owners are installing their own power plant.

W. R. Claman has sold the Orland Theatre, Orland, Cal., to W. D. Kesselring, who plans to replace it with a 1,000-seat house. Mr. Claman has purchased the Palace Theatre at Dixon, Cal., from W. A. Rattenbury and will build a 600-seat house there.

Wright Leaves Northwest Exhibitors.

H. B. WRIGHT has resigned as manager of the Northwest Exhibitors' Circuit and no new manager will be appointed for the immediate present, according to James Q. Clemmer, president of the circuit. An important meeting of the members, however, has been called for next week. That Wright's resignation came about in an entirely friendly manner was the statement made by both Wright and Clemmer.

Stillwell Settling Plans.

C. E. Stillwell, of the Stillwell Amusement Company of Spokane, spent several days in Seattle this week rounding out his plans for the $700,000 theatre that he will build in Spokane this summer.

Kelsall to Handle Powers'.

Ray R. Kelsall, of the newly organized Theatre Equipment Company of Seattle, has been appointed exclusive representative for Power's Cameragraphs in Washington and Alaska. The deal was consummated last week after several conferences between S. S. ("Dick") Cassard, assistant general manager of the Nicholas Power Co., and Mr. Kelsall, which took place in San Francisco, Seattle and Portland. At the same time Mr. Cassard appointed A. L. Aporton, of the General Repair and Supply Co. of Portland, as Oregon representative.

Mr Kelsall has already established the Theatre Equipment Company in temporary quarters at 1919 Third avenue. Work will soon start on a new building for him just three doors farther up the street. Mr. Kelsall is one of the most popular young men ever engaged in the supply business in Seattle, having made friends with the trade during his long service with the H. A. Johnson Company, and his exhibitor freinds will no doubt see to it that his new venture is a success.

Unreasonable Censor Demands.

On account of the unreasonable demands being made by the Censor Board of Portland, Oregon, all Northwest motion picturedom is helping in the fight. One of the latest and most formidable recruits among the exhibitor defenders is Melvin G. Winstock, pioneer exhibitor and film man, as well as champion lobbyist. Although Mr. Winstock is now employed out of the Seattle Pathe office he is spending all his time for a few weeks in Portland, so as to be constantly on the job.

The censor board is demanding that the pictures be shown, at a cost to the exhibitor of fifty cents a reel, in the civic auditorium; and it is understood that anyone who is interested may come to see the pictures at this showing. The exhibtors are asking at least that the pictures be reviewed at their own houses, so that they will get the benefit of the advertising that these free admissions will give.

Big V Branch in Portland.

In order to serve its Oregon exhibtors in a quicker and more efficient manner than is possible from the Seattle exchange the Vitagraph Company is opening a branch in Portland.

Seattle Personals.

S. S. Schubach, manager of the New Grand Theatre, Portland, Oregon, was shopping in Seattle this week.

E. K. LaChappelle, manager of the Mineral Theatre, Mineral, Washington, was another infrequent Seattle visitor.

W. H. Winters, manager of the Seattle Stage Lighting and Equipment Company, is starting on a business trip, calling on Simplex dealers in Portland and Spokane.

Davis Amusement's Birthday.

AN Anniversary Week was conducted during the first week in March by the Davis Amusement Enterprise, an independent moving picture exchange having offices at Toronto and Montreal. The company celebrated its first birthday on that occasion, and the sales forces of the two offices made a special effort to have bookings during the week for every release available.

The success of the Anniversary Week stunt shows that a film exchange can stage a special drive.

Exhibitors Like Dempsey Serial.

That the new Pathe serial, "Daredevil Jack," in which Jack Dempsey, the heavyweight champion, is starred, has positive attractiveness was indicated by the manner in which a crowd of exhibitors and their friends turned out for a private screening of the first three episodes of the story at the Dominion Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, on Monday evening, March 1. It was intended to show the reels to a few of the local exhibitors, but after the word had been passed around there was a rush of practically all moving picture men in Ottawa to the theatre. The showing was conducted under the directoin of Arthur Larente, of the Montreal head office of the Specialty Film Import, Limited, which controls the release in Canada.

Announcement has been made at Toronto, Ontario, regarding the developments in connection with the establishment of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, to the effect that "Lord Beaverbrook is understood to be a heavy investor in the Famous Players Canadian Corporation. He was slated for a place on the company's board, but felt that it would not be good policy to appear as a director."

Kaufman Secures "Husbands and Wives."

H. A. Kaufman, of Toronto, general manager of the Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation, has announced that his company has secured "Husbands and Wives," starring Vivian Martin, for Canada. Mr. Kaufman closed for this release during his recent trip to New York.

Exploiting "12:10."

The Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation, Limited, with head office at Toronto, Ontario, has secured the Canadian distributing rights for Herbert Brenon's special feature, "12:10," starring Marie Doro and a British cast. To introduce this attraction to exhibitors throughout Canada arrangements were made for trade showings in seven important centers of the Dominion, four of these exhibitions taking place on Monday evening, March 8, in cities extending from Montreal to Calgary, Alberta. The four cities and the theatres at which they were revealed to the theatre men included Toronto, Allen Theatre; Montreal, Strand Theatre; Winnipeg, Province Theatre, and Calgary, Regent Theatre. This is the first time in the history of moving pictures in Canada that a subject has been privately introduced to the trade in a string of cities thousands of miles apart simultaneously.

The Exhibitors' Distributing Corporation has offices in each of the above cities except Halifax. Last year this exchange literally cleaned up all over Canada with "Mickey." The company officials are making special emphasis of the fact that "12:10" was produced in London and Paris.

Phoenix Increases Stock.

THE Phoenix Amusement Co., Lexington, Ky., recently increased its capital stock from $200,000 to $600,000. This was done in order to take care of a merger whereby that company is said to have taken over control of the Lexington Opera House and the Ben Ali Theatre, in addition to the Strand.

Jackson Loses Paper and Theatre.

Jackson, Ky., recently lost its only picture theatre as well as its only newspaper in a $30,000 fire, which destroyed the Jackson Times office and Jackson Theatre.

Theatre Changes.

At Midway, Ky., the Amuse Theatre has been sold by William Campbell to Lucien and E. H. Childers for $15,000.

The Savoy Theatre, Nicholasville, Ky., has been sold by J. A. White, of Portsmouth, O., by H. S. Sparks, who has been operating it for two years.

Theatre Incorporations.

With a capital of $5,000, the Dixie Theatre Co., Owenton, Ky., has been incorporated by Frank Fullilove, R. B. Mason and Alonzo Watson.

The Audubon Amusement Co., of Louisville, has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000 by L. P. Durrett, D. S. Sesmer, Hollis Edmonson and others to operate a moving picture theatre in the vicinity of Audubon Park.

Loew in Louisville?

Col. Fred Levy, the big noise in local theatrical circles, including moving pictures, is interested in a deal whereby Marcus Loew, of New York, and others are considering plans for a large new house in Louisville, probably to run vaudeville. Nothing definite will be given out by the Colonel for the time being.

New House for Danville.

Danville, Ky., reports that M. G. Weisiger, proprietor of a picture theatre in that city, is planning a new house with a seating capacity of 1,500 and costing $100,000. The report appears to be more or less of a pipe dream, as Danvile, Ky., could hardly support a house seating eight hundred people even during the college season.

Louisvliel Theatres to Help.

The Alamo Theatre and Rex Theatre, of Louisville, recently offered to give one-half of their returned dividends on original purchases for Camp Taylor, to a fund being raised for a Cincinati to Louisville roadway. Theatres and merchants raised $200,000 during the war to purchase land for Camp Taylor. The land was later bought by the Government, and finally the business men received a part of their money back.

Paducah Comes to Front.

A report recently received from Paducah, Ky., stated that plans were being made for the erection of a $150,000 theatre in the down town district. Names were not mentioned. However, Paducah, Ky., can support a good house and is badly in need of a modern, high-class theatre.

New Crab Orchard House a Success.

Brown & Goodwin recently completed a new theatre at Crab Orchard, Ky., which has been running for some weeks with fair success.

Bowling Green Booms.

Bowling Green, Ky., reports that plans are under way for a modern house with a seating capacity of 1,500, costing $100,000. Bowling Green is growing fast, and is constantly crowded, due to the oil boom, with the result that a good show house should make headway.

Gloverport May Rebuild.

Plans are being discussed at Gloverport, Ky., for rebuilding the Bushman Theatre, which was burned on December 26, just after the night performance ended.

Paris Minister on Rampage.

Paris, Ky., has the following bit: "Four local churches have leagued to make war on Sunday movies, and one of the pastors, the Rev. Arthur Fox, is assailing the silent drama as an institution, 'destructive of womanhood,' and a divorce breeder."

Put Shutter on Market.

The Perfect Projection Shutter Co., Louisville, capital $20,000, has been incorporated by Virgil Winters, J. Levi, J. C. Watson and others, to manufacture and market shutters and appliances for moving picture machines. Winters has been working for several years on shutters, in the meantime having been a well-known machine operator. He has brought out one or two shutters before that proved satisfactory.

Jensen-Von Herberg Contract Among Many Closed by Select

SELECT branch managers, spurred by an extension of two weeks' time on the Selznick series sales drive, report from the branch offices a continuance of the rise in bookings for Selznick productions. The extension of two weeks was caused by the general effect of the influenza which swept the country last month, during which time several salesmen were unable to make their regular calls.

The sales drive, according to Charles Rogers, sales manager of Select, has been one of the most fruitful of any ever held within the organization. The Select branch at Seattle reports the signing of contracts with the Jensen and Von Herberg circuits for Portland and Tacoma. The signing of these contracts is considered by the Seattle office as one of its best accomplishments of the year.

Manager Henry Siegel, of the New York Select exchange, began a local campaign last week for the selling of past screen successes, having had several new prints of the productions made. Among these subjects may be named those in which Norma Talmadge, Alice Brady, Constance Talmadge and Clara Kimball Young took the leading roles. The prints, it is said, are offered at an attractive price and Mr. Siegel reports that the circuit and individual bookings have been quite large to date. Mr. Siegel believes that a screen success can be repeated the same as a stage production.

ADOLPH ZUKOR was re-elected president, and other officers were re-elected for the regular one-year terms at the organization meeting of the directors of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, held on Thursday, March 4, at the corporation's home offices, 485 Fifth avenue.

Other officers re-elected are as follows: vice president, Frank A. Garbutt; treasurer, Arthur S. Friend; secretary, Elek John Ludvigh; assistant treasurers, Emil E. Shauer and Eugene Zukor; assistant secretaries, Ralph A. Kohn, Frank Meyer and L. S. Wicker.

The board declared the regular quarterly dividend of $2 a share on common stock, payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 16.

Thomas Ince Offers Columbia Students $2,000 for Photoplays Suited to Needs

THOMAS H. INCE offers a prize of $2,000 to any Columbia University student writing a photoplay suited to his needs. This does not mean that he will pay that sum for the best story submitted to him, but the reward will be received by as many of the students as create purchasable material.

In addressing the cinema composition class as well as students in short story-writing and dramatic construction last week, Mr. Ince touched upon various angles of writing for the screen.

"It is a difficult subject," he said, "and there are no hard and fast rules to guide the beginner. Through experience such as I have had, however, certain facts have been made clear to me which may be of help to others. Producing pictures for nearly nine years is apt to have taught one what to avoid, at least.

"Of paramount importance in the construction of a play for the screen is the human appeal of your subject as well as the way you develop it. Just as the best actors are the most natural ones, so the best stories are those which are closest to real life.

Cites Charles Ray as Example.

"Of course an uneventful sequence of humdrum incidents does not constitute a story merely because the characters and their actions have really lived and had their being. There must be intrigue, conflict, suspense and climax no matter what characters are involved or what expedients are employed. And they must be natural.

"My success with Charles Ray is proof of this. It was my aim in making him a star to present to the public a young man such as everyone had known at one time or another—in direct contradistinction to the tailored and curled favorites who occupied the screen. I chose him because he had the shyness, the awkwardness, the simplicity of thousands of our American youths, and I felt certain that the time had come to give the public a star who was closer to them than the forced masculinity and obvious good looks of those who were popular before Charles Ray became a favorite.

Natural Situations and Clean Stories.

"And in providing plays for him I bore in mind something that everyone writing for the screen should not overlook. It was to place him in natural situations always. No one has ever seen him as a forced character and no one has ever seen Charles Ray do an unnatural thing. It would be well for students of the photoplay to realize this.

"What! the Rent Lowered!"

"Clean stories, too, are what the public wants. Most producers realize this. Certainly the better ones do. The day of the salacious or suggestive story has passed and writers for the screen can do nothing better than to keep this fact before them. A story which is first of all clean and has the necessary elements of drama in it, stands a far better chance of being produced than the most exciting, most cleverly constructed story which does not measure up to the moral standards of average audiences. Of course there are exceptions among producers, but my advice is to let them order such stories from those writers they know. The beginner stands a small chance in attempting a daring story, or, if I must be frank, a filthy one.

Idea Is What Counts.

"In fact, the idea is what counts with a producer. If your synopsis contains the fundamentals of a story, you can rest assured it will be bought with alacrity—if, of course, it meets the needs of the producer to whom it is submitted. Study the screen. Learn what the various companies are doing, watch the star you have in mind for the story you are creating, and you will profit."

Answering various questions put to him by the students, Mr. Ince said that it was not expected of the outside writer to develop the continuity of the story submitted, that a synopsis as brief or as elaborate as the theme was worth, answered all requirements. He stressed the importance of a worth while idea, however, or the pivotal thought of the story. That, he said, must be brought out clearly, irrespective of the length of the narrative.

The unhappy ending as opposed to the "kiss and clinch" for the final scene, he is not opposed to if it is the logical conclusion of the story or if it teaches something. Substantiating this, Mr. Ince mentioned "Behind the Door," which ends with the death of the principal character. His spirit is seen to leave his body and meet the soul of his wife, whose death had motivated the drama of the picture.

Despite the vogue of the book or play on the screen, and the fact that staff writers are maintained by all the large producers, Mr. Ince assured his audience that the market for original stories from free lance writers was never better. Answering the inquiry of a student as to the best way of becoming a staff writer, Mr. Ince put it succinctly, "Write a good story and I'll wire you to come to Culver City and work for me."

THE New Barth Theatre in Carbondale, Ill., opened its doors on March 1 with an elaborate program. The house is owned by the Barth Theatre Company, and is to be known as "The Theatre Beautiful."

Capacity audiences attended the opening to inspect the new house and witness the Realart feature attraction, "Soldiers of Fortune."

Numerous floral wreaths sent by friends of the management were displayed in the lobby and about the house. A special musical program was arranged for the occasion with Miss Jacobs, of Chicago, at the orchestral organ as the principal attraction.

AN interesting feature of visual education in schools is a series of informal conferences which are being held in connection with the department of visual instruction in the New York City schools, of which Ernest L. Crandall is the head. These conferences, which are merely opportunities for discussions of ways and means to an end, are the forerunner of something more definite. Through them a clearer idea is being gained of the film situation as it stands in the schools of the metropolis.

One of the facts learned is that there is not a penny appropriated for moving picture films and their equipment by the Board of Education of New York City. Shall we say "Shame upon them!" or shall we accept the old excuse that they are from Missouri and have to be shown? It is hard for progressive persons to understand the fogyism of such manipulation, and we wonder how much longer the public will be called upon to bear it with patience.

Another Obstacle.

We find also another bugbear standing in the way of more modern methods of visual instruction in the schools of New York City. This is the underwriter who persists in placing every obstacle possible in the way of the use of the moving picture film in the school. The struggle of teachers and pupils to secure moving picture equipment with funds raised through their own efforts has been met in many cases by a ban placed on the use of such equipment through more or less exaggerated ideas of fire hazard.

In one high school that we know of, for instance, a standard machine bought with funds raised by teachers and pupils three years ago is still in disuse on account of the insistence of fire underwriters that the machine is unsafe. This machine, we understand, is enclosed in the regulation booth in the auditorium.

Suggest Investigation of Danger.

While we agree that proper care should be taken with regard to the fire hazard in public buildings, would it not be a good idea for some of those in authority to spend some ime on sane investigation of the thing to be feared. Why not call in disinterested projection experts, get at the root of the trouble and try to devise some means of standardizing moving picture equipment to be used in schools, and this, by the way, without shutting off the avenue to available good material, the majority of which is to be found on the standard width film.

There is much food for thought in the above suggestion. The relation of the moving picture film to modern education is too important to be longer ignored. A suggestion made at the last conference to demonstrate the possibiliy of making use of the film in classroom work, first in the study of biology, seems a good one, for the reason that it is one subject which the screen is thoroughly prepared to handle. This may be a means of convincing the incredulous of the value of animated visual instruction.

While no publicity was requested on the conferences referred to we feel that all the encouragement that the press can give to those who are striving further the cause of visual instruction is none too much.

Reclaiming Everglades Shown in Film Magazine

SOME of the pictures which will be released under the title of "Reclaiming the Everglades" in the Paramount Artcraft Magazine of March 14 show the work of reclaiming 4,000,000 acres of land for civilization. Already as a result real estate which a year ago was worthless is now reported to be selling for $25 an acre, with a heavy drainage tax to boot. The process differs from western reclamation work where irrigation has to be introduced, because in Florida the need is to drain water already flooding the property. In addition to a searching study of this scientific work, there are also included scenes among the Seminoles. A boys' barber shop is also a feature of this number of the Paramount Magazine under the heading of "Haircuts on Horseback" and covers the subject in a thorough manner. "Three Minutes of Wit and Wisdom" from the Smart Set Magazine and "The Bone of Contention," an animated cartoon by Paul Terry, close the reel.

Modern Song Writers in Film Magazine.

The Famous Players-Lasky's cameraman recently invaded the workshops of the leading popular song writers and made a picture of their activities. The methods of the old-time composer who sat and dreamed are discarded in the modern era when the creators of popular melodies grind away on schedule time to produce "hits" by the dozen.

Another incident in this release is a brief trip to the land of the Rising Sun. The Nipponese Empire has a few little known pastimes and pursuits that are revealed to th general public for the first time. The universal outdoor sport of Japan is shown. The secret of who rings the temple bells and feeds the sacred deer, trivial but important incidents in the empire's life, are given general publicity in the Paramount Magazine of March 28.

Ford Weekly Shows the Making of Silverware

THE Ford Educational Weekly No. 192, "With Every Meal," distributed by Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, deals with knives, forks and spoons, and sandwich trays, casseroles and meat platters. It shows not how these eating utensils are used, but how they are made.

The picture reveals the method through which the metal for a spoon is cut out, placed between great rollers that it may be broadened for the bowl and handle, then cut into the proper shape and curved by machinery. The process of making a knife is also shown, how the design is stamped on the handle, the two hollow portions fastened together, the blades shaped and fitted into the handles and how they are sharpened and polished.

Another part of the film deals with the manufacture of casseroles and sandwich trays, their shaping and perforation in lacy designs. It also shows how the tinning is put on the inside of a chafing dish and how the covers of meat dishes are made.

Roosevelt Dam Presented by Prizma Color Method

PRIZMA'S release for March 9, through Republic Distributing Corporation, is "The Roosevelt Dam." This project is considered one of the seventh wonders of the world, and it is probably the first time exhibitors have had the opportunity to show it to their patrons in colors.

An announcement in connection with the release says: "This reclamation project is one of the greatest engineering achievements ever accomplished. Great difficulties were overcome in placing this monster dam across the Salt River in Arizona. Once accomplished it created a lake thirty miles long and four miles wide. It stores enough water to supply 200,000 acres if no rain fell in five years. The masonry of the dam is 284 feet high and the cataracts from the spillways are 60 feet higher than those of Niagara."

Canada Urges Pictures and Municipal Theatres to Fight Educational Problem

AT the National Educational Conference in Winnipeg, Manitoba, a few weeks ago, it was urged that moving pictures should be used for the nationalization of the great foreign population of the Canadian West, where the problem of languages is acute. It was felt that official Canadian scenics, industrial, farm and other subjects would have the effect, when shown, of building up admiration for the Dominion and that they would tend to stabilize the situation. A proposal to have pictures shown in the schools was also discussed at length and this plan received considerable favor.

During the recent convention in Ottawa, Ontario, of the Teachers' Institute, the definite suggestion was made that the Canadian Capital should erect a municipal theatre where geography and other subjects could be taught by moving pictures to school children at specified hours each day. The construction of such a theatre would make it unnecessary for the use of portable equipment in the different schools, and it would also insure the best projection, it was urged.

In connection with this proposal it was urged that geography is of such importance that wars may be won or lost through a knowledge, or lack of knowledge, regarding the natural phenomena of a country. With the erection of a special theatre, it was urged that opportunities could be provided for the presentation of special film subjects to adult gatherings. This extension of the work would enable many parents to learn of many modern developments.

The Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire recently arranged to secure the use of moving picture theatres in various cities, so that Canadian educational pictures can be screened at special children's shows for which no admission fees will be charged. The first of such performances were held recently at the Regent Theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, when more than 4,000 children availed themselves of the opportunity to see Canadian views which had been prepared by the Department of Trade and Commerce. In the opinion of D. W. Johnson, lecturer of the department, these pictures gave the children the best possible geography lesson.

A few weeks ago moving picture shows were held in the penitentiary at Kingston, Ontario, at the Provincial Prison in Quebec and at the penitentiary in Manitoba, when various educational, industrial and scenic pictures were presented to the inmates. A number of the prisoners had never before seen a presentation of moving pictures. This was intended as an educational feature, and the undertaking proved so successful that it has been decided to continue the experiments.

These developments are of a national character in Canada and do not take into consideration the actual presentation of pictures in schools, colleges and churches on odd occasions, or the screening of appropriate subjects at farm institutes in rural centres, at fall fairs and at club meetings.

Red Cross Offers Producers Use of Scenes Taken Abroad

THE Bureau of Motion Pictures of the American Red Cross through Director W. E. Waddell announces that it has a large stock of original negatives embracing shots which might be of material use to feature producers as atmosphere.

This film was taken by Red Cross cameramen of experience, thoroughly familiar with feature requirements, and includes scenes in France, Belgium, Italy, Russia, Montenegro, Serbia, Albania and that part of the Rhine territory occupied by the American army, as well as other parts of the world where Red Cross operators have been and are now located.

While the Red Cross bureau is not in the film business commercially, yet it is conducted as nearly upon a self-supporting basis as possible, and directors are invited to correspond with the bureau when in need of such material, which will gladly be furnished at commercial rates.

Some Things Worth Knowing

That a moving picture of about forty feet in length has been produced by Harry Levy, the Baltimore moving picture man, for the Safety and Welfare Bureau of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company, which gives a warning to motorists and people generally about crossing and walking on railroad tracks. J. T. Broderick is the head of this bureau of the B. & O. and it is proposed to use the strip of film in the moving picture theatres in towns all along the railroad system. It is now being shown in the Baltimore City theatres and has been passed and approved by the Exhibitors' League of Maryland.

* * *

That the Ohio State College of Agriculture has decided to introduce motion pictures as a means of recreation and information.

* * *

That steps are being taken to begin the use of motion pictures in the public schools of Beatrice, Neb.

* * *

That $95 was subscribed by those present at the informal conference on visual education held on the evening of February 25 at Cleveland, Ohio, toward meeting the expenses of the "committee of nine."

* * *

That the study of detective methods which was to have appeared in an earlier issue of the Paramount Magazine has been postponed until March 21. This picture shows the method of using the Bertillon system in identifying criminals by finger prints.

* * *

That the April 4 issue of the Paramount Magazine will contain moments in the life of Jacques Suzanne, a famous painter and Arctic explorer, in which he trails the frozen north in quest of subjects for the canvas. "A Storm at Sea" is also a feature of this issue of the Paramount Magazine.

* * *

That the Fox News boasts some startling scenes taken from an aeroplane over the city of New York. In this picture the cameraman came in closer touch with some of the skyscrapers than he probably ever cares to come again.

* * *

That Kinograms for March 9 records the birth of a new oil gusher in California, in addition to scenes at the water and ice carnival at Banff, Canada, chemical warfare demonstrations at New Orleans, and winter frolics at St. Moritz.

* * *

That the International News Reel No. 9 has scenes photographed in an aeroplane flight over the Alps, perhaps the most startling of the kind that have been made. Other well photographed events are the Fifth Cavalry in action on the Mexican border, making seamen for the merchant marine at the Virgin Islands, and the Giants training in the southland.

Synchronization Is a Feature of Pictograph

A GENUINE novelty, created by J. F. Leventhal, of the Bray Studios, is the leading subject in the Goldwyn-Bray Pictograph B 7030, which has for additional features "Through the Guiana Wilderness" and Jerry on the Job in "The Tale of a Wag." The opening subject, called "Prof. B. Flat," is a marked step in advance in the attempt to synchronize the action of figures on the screen with music. Mr. Leventhal has combined the action of a cartoon figure with notes of music. The leader, as pictured with baton in hand, leads the orchestra, while the musicians read the notes as they are flashed upon the screen.

"Through the Guiana Wilderness" presents the first motion pictures ever taken in a little known part of British Guiana. The cameraman journeys up the Essequibe river, meeting odd types of people, many of whom still adhere to curious customs. The dangers and hardships of travel in the strange native boats are portrayed.

Burton Holmes Reveals Kingdom of Yellow Robe

THE subject of the Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Picture of March 14, "The Kingdom of the Yellow Robe," is a study of Siam. In a recent camera tour Burton Holmes discovered the reason for its colorful name in the fact that every male subject of the kingdom must, at some time or other, enter one of its many monasteries and become a mendicant monk. The religious garb of these monks is yellow, emblematic of the robes worn by the great Buddha when on earth. In contrast to the many occidental nations where military service is compulsory, this little nation makes its citizens retire to the simple life of the monastery for a certain period. Other interesting contrasts are shown, such as the modern traffic cop in his picturesque watch tower to control traffic, a custom that has adhered in Siam for years. The picture teems with delightful customs of this ancient kingdom.

Exploitation aids and suggestions printed by Moving Picture World in conjunction with reviews of new productions, will guide the picture showman aright. They are practicable and easy to put into execution.

Metro Gives New Advance to Screen by Production of "The Right of Way"

By EDWARD WEITZEL.

AN unusual picture is "The Right of Way." With more melodramatic situations than are found in the ordinary unadulterated melodrama and a love interest which seems destined for a happy ending, the screen version of Sir Gilbert Parker's story sets convention at defiance by showing that its physical action and romance are secondary to its character development—the spiritual birth of one man.

The makers of the picture were so impressed with this condition that they have given the story two endings. One follows the original work, and Steele dies from the bullet wound received while battling with the thieves that are after the cure's money; the other ending brings to the atheist the purifying influence of a woman who truly loves him.

The week "The Right of Way" was shown at the Capitol Theatre, New York, the original ending was used. The unselfish devotion, sweetness and personal charm of the young girl who finally comes into Steele's life are brought out with unmistakable clearness, and his own readiness, through suffering and an honest attempt to find God, to accept her love is also fully indicated, but the death of Steele was received by the spectators, the afternoon the writer was present, with no signs of disapproval.

The Monocled Atheist—
Bert Lytell as the mocker in his Metro, "The Right of Way"—

Upon inquiry it was learned that this attitude had been general throughout the week. And there is the experience of the exhibitor in Cleveland who ran the picture and gave the happy ending and the death finish an equal number of showings with equally satisfactory results to his patrons!

The Rays of the Searchlight.

The explanation of this ready acceptance of that which may be regarded as a radical departure from the established order of moving picture plot technique is not hard to find. The Metro company having started out to reproduce the Parker story on the screen and having accomplished this purpose with commendable fidelity, their picture was subject to the same law which governed the original work—the author used a number of highly dramatic situations merely as the means to an end. A fascinating figure by force of his intellectual brilliance and the carefully concealed stratum of good in his nature, the mental struggle going on within the soul of the man born of the novelist's imagination is by far the most absorbing thing in "The Right of Way." Being a skilled workman and knowing the value of physical action, Sir Gilbert has told his story objectively, and put it in three melodramatic divisions that render the vastly overworked and much abused term, "red-blooded," a fitting adjective to apply to the tale.

But beyond all the physical excitement of Steele's encounter with the lumbermen at the roadhouse, his branding with the cross by the fanatical Frudel and his desperate fight with the safe breakers, and rising above the romantic interest of his marriage to a woman who becomes his wife for social reasons solely, his reported disgrace and shameful death and his meeting with the disinterested and deeply affectionate Rosalie, are the arresting rays of the searchlight that are turned upon Charley Steele as he and his conscience grope their way toward the eternal light.

It is this struggle that is the big issue of the story. Both endings serve to illuminate the spiritual triumph of the good within the soul of Steele. And that is why either ending can be used with success. The demonstration of such a possibility marks a distinct advance in the worth of the motion picture, and is a fresh sign that the intellectual drama will attract and entertain the screen public, provided its makers are masters of their craft.

Hearty Commendation for All.

Of the production itself and the individual work of director, star and scenario writer words of hearty commendation are in order. It is hardly necessary to state that each of these important positions must have been filled with a high degree of proficiency or the picture would not have achieved even a partial success. Where the emotional appeal of a story is subservient to a truthful development of character and every incident challenges the closest scrutiny, it is self-evident that there must be no inept efforts on the part of any one connected with its building into picture form.

Director General Maxwell Karger, of the Metro forces, by selecting Jack Dillon to direct "The Right of Way" has been able to have his intellectual test carried out under the most favorable circumstances. The sets and locations are always adequate, and the atmosphere of the Canadian forest, the haunts of the rivermen, the social and professional life of Montreal and the simple ways of existence in the little village of Chaudiere are treated with a compelling sense of their realism. The human factors, from star to extra people, are guided by a skilled hand, and the tempos of the different scenes are invariably correct.

June Mathis, who prepared the scenario, has shown keen judgment all along the line. Forced to reject certain portions of the Parker story, and to draw several of the situations closer together for the sake of greater dramatic effect, she has accomplished her task without disturbing the author's intent and completed a screen version of a widely read tale that should satisfy all reasonable persons familiar with the original.

Although by no means a one-part story, the character of Charley Steele so dominates "The Right of Way" that there is scarcely a moment when his presence is not felt. Arrogant in the extreme and aglow with the pride of intellect and deep disdain of the common herd, his unbelief in a Supreme Being sincere and outspoken, he remains a fascinating figure even when giving way to his evil passions and abandoning himself to his craving for strong drink. The spark of good that is said to be in every man has but small chance to be seen in Charley Steele until near the close of the story, when he begins honestly to question his unbelief.

The actor that embodies such a personality must bring with him as his native gifts the distinguished appearance, polished manners and knowledge of human nature that belong to the brilliant lawyer that pleads the cause of a murderer and refuses the man's gratitude when his eloquence has set the guilty man free.

—And the Honest Believer

To claim that Bert Lytell responds instantly and naturally to so complexed a compound of good and evil and plays the part with quick sympathy and evident enjoyment would credit him with a versatility he does not possess. Only an actor of the Mansfield type could do this. Mr. Lytell's impersonation is that of a thoroughly schooled actor that understands every shade and highlight of the character, and makes them crystal clear to the watchers at the play. He first satisfies the eye by his counterfeit presentment of Steele, and reveals the soul of the man by painstaking and sure set steps that are never at fault. It is an intellectual tour de force for Mr. Lytell, and an important gain for the screen.

CO-OPERATION has been offered by the Minneapolis Film Board of Trade to exhibitors throughout the Northwest in rearranging their bookings, which were disrupted during the recent epidemic of influenza causing the enforced closing of many theatres. All exhibitors affected by closing orders have been notified of this action by the board. A letter directing the handling of films and booking rearrangements was sent each of the exhibitors.

The board has just isued its rules for the year. The rules, which have been agreed upon by all the film exchanges of the city, cover the following points and are expected to unify the film business standards of the Northwest: Transportation charges, payments, contracts, changes in bookings, holding films, circuiting, returning films C. O. D., and bicycling or sub-renting.

An analysis of the differences between exchangemen and exhibitors during the year discloses that most of the trouble arose from misunderstandings, the board said in its circular. Because of this no verbal agreements will be considered.

Following are the exchanges that signed the notice as members: American Film Company, B. N. Judell, Inc., Elliott Film Corporation, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, First National Exhibitors Circuit of the Northwest, Friedman Film Corporation, Fox Film Corporation, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, Hallmark Pictures Corporation, W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, Merit Film Corporation, Metro Pictures Corporation, Pathe Exchange, Inc., Realart Pictures Corporation, Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, Republic Distributing Corporation, Select Pictures Corporation, Triangle Distributing Corporation, Theatre Owners Corporation, United Artists Corporation, Universal Film Exchange, Inc., Vitagraph, Inc., and Westcott Film Corporation.

The board is in its second year and has a membership of 100 per cent.

"The Lion Man," New Serial for Universal, Completed

THERE was much rejoicing at Universal City a few days ago when Albert Russell, directing the serial production, "The Lion Man," shot the final scene of the eighteenth episode of this chaptered melodrama, bringing to a close a production that has been eight months in the making.

When Jack Perrin and Kathleen O'Connor, stars of the serial, finally met in the leafy bower, with their troubles and tribulations things of the past, their enemies thwarted, and the future bathed in a roseate hue, it marked the first peaceful scene in thirty-six reels of whirlwind action.

"The Lion Man," which is based on the novel by Randall Parrish, "The Strange Case of Cavendish," is said to be one of the most thrilling episodic melodramas produced in a long time. It engaged a cast of unusual distinction, including Kathleen O'Connor, Jack Perrin, Barney Sherry, Gertrude Astor, Henry Barrows, Leonard Clapham, and Mack Wright.

"OVERLAND RED," a picture of real heart interest, with virile western plot, in which Harry Carey is starred, is the special attraction on the Universal release program for the week of March 22. The picture is taken from the novel by H. H. Knibbs, and is replete with thrills and troubles of the open western country.

The story opens with Carey as Overland Red, a tramp who still retains the gentlemanly instincts of better days. The film has all the spectacular dash that has marked the cowboy star's other work in Universal productions. Lynn F. Reynolds is responsible for the direction. Included in the cast are Harold Goodwin, Vola Vale, Charles LeMoyne, J. Morris Foster, C. Anderson and Joe Harris.

The serials for the week are "The House of Mystery," the seventh episode of "Elmo the Fearless," featuring Elmo Lincoln and Jack Perrin, and Kathleen O'Connor in "When Hell Broke Loose," the thirteenth episode of "The Lion Man."

"The Rattler's Hiss," a breezy western, featuring Hoot Gibson and Mildred Moore is another entertaining two-reeler on this program. Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are presented in another one-reel star comedy, "Oiling Uncle." Another comedy offering is a Century Comedy, "A Lion's Alliance," featuring the Century Lions.

The program is rounded out with current issues of Hearst, International, Universal Current Events and New Screen Magazine News reels.

The western on the March 20 release bill, "When the Cougar Called," has been withdrawn from the program and will be replaced by "Held Up for the Makin's," in which Hoot Gibson and Mildred Moore are featured.

Finds The World a Source of Inspiration

INCLOSE check for my sixth yearly subscription. The inspiration received from reading your very valuable publication has enabled me to run the finest picture show in the world for a town of 1,700 population. My policy is two shows a week. I have managed to play only the cream of the film production of each year. This year I booked ninety of Paramount-Artcraft's best and am running United Artists and the best of First National and any individual super that comes along. I have oe of the finest violinists in the country, and once a month I put in an eight-piece orchestra, and on my special nights I put in an orchestra of twety pieces.

On April 17 of last year I put over Douglas Fairbanks in "Arizona," with a twenty-five-piece orchestra, directed by Patrick Conway, of Conway's Band. This was the biggest thing ever put over in Onondaga County (Syracuse not excepted).

I not only run the finest releases, but I run them new. I get many of the big productions before they get their first run in Syracuse. In conclusion I will say that I have made a huge success of the picture game, and I give the Moving Picture World all the credit. It is the only trade paper I take.

Sincerely yours,

Skaneateles, N. Y. C. H. HUXFORD.

Softly Cooing As the Old Cradle Rocks

We Glance at the Infant Industry Ten Years Ago

GLORY be to R. H. Cochrane! It was he who left a trail of "pep" to be injected into this oversad history of the life of a struggling infant. List to his Laemmle Film Service advertisement, the "follow up" of "Old Mamma Ten Per Cent's" demise. "Hep! Hep! Hephephep!!!" was the caption over a cut of a hearse, followed by four mourners marked "certain licensed exchanges," in issue of Moving Picture World dated March 19, 1910.

"Old Mamma's Last Joy Ride!" was the underline and Mr. Cochrane, in following phrases, said, among other things: "She's off! Old Mamma Ten Per Cent is about to be converted into predigested worm-food. The exhibitors finally gave her the hook . . . the worm finally turned, and turned her to the worms.

"Alas! Likewise gadzooks and ods bodkins!

"No more will Old Mamma spank the lowly exhibitor on his cash box!

"No more will she do the Cancan quickstep on his batter frame.

And Laemmle Smiled!

Herbert Miles, Three-Ply Pioneer.

Entirely surrounding a goodly-sized cut of a smiling and classy looking young man was type telling, in effect, that Herbert Miles was three kinds of a pioneer in a game destined to grow into quite an industrious industry. We quote from the editor's musings:

"Here we have Herbert Miles in three pioneer capacities—as an early one to use the moving picture camera for exhibition purposes, as in his Alaskan exploits; as an early man at the exhibition game and as one of the earliest, if not the earliest, in the renting business." Mr. Miles is still in town, located now in the Coca Cola Building. Times have changed—but Herbert Miles hasn't.

Concerning Raymond "Hitcheykoo."

The Chinese Theatre, in Doyers Street, Chinatown, New York City, had been closed for several months. Raymond Hitchcock, while on a slumming tour, discovered the house, noted the fact and leased the building for moving picture purposes. William Cavanaugh was put in charge.

Pictures were supplied by the American Vitagraph Company. "The Chinese," said our sedate editor, "call it 'Vitaglaph'."

Slummers were charged 15 cents. Everybody was a "chink" except the manager and operator of the Powers Cameragraph—everybody on the pay-roll, we mean.

Discovering Palm Beach.

Harry Schwalbe, of the Electric Theatre Supply Company, Philadelphia, had just returned from an extended tour through the South. He spoke highly of a fine, sandy beach he had discovered on the Florida coast. The natives called it "Jellyfish Shore," but Mr. Schwalbe thought a better name would be "Palm Beach"—and so it has been to this very day.

The Philadelphia film-renter took along his rod and reel. His skill is witnessed in a picture of Mr. Schwalbe holding at arm's length an alligator—taller than "his own self," by several inches.

"Advertising Via the Moving Picture" was an article copied from Printers' Ink, written by James H. Collins. There were great prospects for advertising via the screen, according to Mr. Collins.

Ditto according to Alfred S. Black, Sydney S. Cohen, et al, according to these later days. The article might have been written in 1920, instead of ten years ago.

Some Short Subjects.

E. W. Townsend's latest contribution to Edison films was announced for March 25, 1910. It was a dramatic subject entitled "The Suit Case Mystery." Forerunner, perhaps of Enid Bennett's "The Girl in the Suit Case," ten years further along.

Pathe Freres are outfitting the Nelson-Wolgast fight pictures. Five Pathe machines are to be used for these pictures on their tour through the country. Was this the first film "presented as a theatrical attraction"?

The Lubin automobile has proved such a convenience to the production department that the charter of a power boat is contemplated for the summer season. News breaking in the publicity!

The Nestor Stock Company, that has been operating in the vicinity of New York, leaves for the West this week to make a series of cowboy and mining pictures.

"Discovering" the West Coast.

"Up Popped the Devil!"

"The Cost of Living Is Getting Higher Every Day" was the catch-line to a slide advertisement inserted by Lincoln Transparency Exchange, Chicago. Nobody heeded the warning; nobody expected sufferage, nobody expected prohibition—and before the Infant Industry is out of its half-sox here they are!

(Inserting a prediction: Within another ten years publicists will be allowed to send news instead of "pufflicity" to tradepapers. May sound strange and foolish and impossible, just now—but you watch!)

What Were YOU Doing?

Ten years ago Epes Winthrop Sargent had just married Evelyn L. Lease, of Brooklyn. Some other low-brow might make a quip about "signing a Lease for life"—so we'll beat 'em to it! Sargent was then editor for Lubin, the Philadelphia film magnate—and was compelled to live in the Quaker City.

Ben Grimm was doing everything a boy of nineteen could do on the New Rochelle Standard—advertising solicitor, city editor, reporter, financial authority, sport writer, Wall Street expert, etc., etc., etc., ad lib. The experience gained in New Rochelle fitted him for service to his country in the world war and guided Fred C. Quimby into the perfect choice of a man to advertise and publicize the Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

What were YOU doing ten years ago?

THE cablegram, published in the New York Times of March 3, reporting the beginning of a movement championed by M. Honnorat, minister of public instruction at Paris, to establish a school to encourage and promote the science of moving picture making, has created much discussion among American producers and exhibitors. Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has expressed himself as being heartily in accord with M. Honnorat's ideas.

According to the Times, M. Honnorat provides for the establishment of a school, the main object of which will be to give instruction to motion picture actresses and actors, to perfect apparatus, to provide a course in scene setting, to train directors, etc. In other words, the school will do everything for the motion picture aspirant that the business college does for the stenographer-to-be. Competent instructors gathered from the film field are expected to offer their services gratis, while the combination of producing companies are to divide the expense of maintaining the establishment.

Would Improve Directorial Work.

"Nothing of this kind has ever been attempted in this country," said Mr. Laemmle, "but the movement is one to which I have been giving much thought lately. Certain it is that the motion picture field, enormous and wonderful as it is, is still a struggling infant in comparison to what it will be a few years from now. Splendid as are the productions of all the big companies, there is certainly room for improvement in most of them.

"Today the star and director are everything. The day of the star is waning, while the director's importance is getting to be the biggest item in the moving picture field. A school such as M. Honnorat advocates would be much more advantageous to the producer than is the present method of training men and women in the studio.

"In a school of this type the technical end of production could be taught as well as the actual acting end. A school for directors could certainly train young men along the proper channels in a quicker and more competent fashion. The director turned out by the school would know his trade from the inside. He would start work at the studio with a thorough fundamental knowledge of the really important things in photoplay directing. Naturally he would eclipse his studio-trained brother in a short time.

"Extras" Would Benefit Greatly.

"This same thing applies to the actors and actresses. The average 'extra' at the studio today has as much idea of what's in movies as a boiler maker has. I do not mean this as a reflection on 'supers.' Every actor has to make a start some time. I want to emphasize the fact that a school of cinematography would train these extras in such a way as to make their progress much more rapid because of a knowledge of the game.

"The field is in great need of original stories for scenarios. The school could train writers along this line and eventually the buying of a story from a magazine for moving picture production would be unheard of.

"I only mention these few things to show what advantages would accrue to the producers were such a school established. M. Honnorat's plan is a splendid one and should have its counterpart in this country. The leading producers should be glad to enter into such a project and support it. The talent they would draw from it would more than pay for its upkeep."

Marshall Neilan Company Is Now Established in New Home

THE Marshall Neilan Company has removed its picture equipment and business headquarters to the Hollywood Studios on Santa Monica Boulevard, and work on a new production will start soon. The Neilan organization has taken over one entire unit of the new plant, which was constructed in 1919 under the supervision of John Jasper, formerly studio manager for Charles Chaplin. The unit consists of a convertible stage, a number of individual dressing rooms, an individual projection room, an individual camera vault and a complete set of private offices for the carrying on of the business affairs of the company.

In addition to this, a new building adjacent to the Neilan unit is being erected to house additional members of the company, and when this is completed Mr. Neilan plans to expand both his producing and business force.

Besides an elaborate double office occupied by Mr. Neilan, Mr. Jasper has furnished private offices for Henry R. Symonds, director, Tom Held, assistant director, the business manager, and the publicity department. In addition to this a separate building has been furnished for Ben Carre, technical director of the Neilan productions, in which the sets of future pictures will be designed.

Hope Hampton Back from Trip to Europe; Closes Contracts

HOPE HAMPTON, screen star whose first production, "A Modern Salome," is being distributed through Metro Pictures Corporation, has returned from a flying trip to Europe. The star brought back interesting news of her experiences on the other side of the Atlantic.

First of all she mentioned the foreign distribution contracts which were consummated with Sir William Jury, of Jury's Imperial Pictures, Ltd., for the British Isles. Another important foreign buyer who will distribute "A Modern Salome" abroad is the Mundus Film Company, whose destinies are presided over by Mme. Schuepbach, of Paris. With these two important firms acting as foreign distributors, Miss Hampton's picture is assured a wide European circulation.

Another interesting tribute to Hope Hampton's screen possibilities was the five year contract offered to her by the repsentatives of the Cines Film of Rome. Nothing could induce her to remain away from the United States for any protracted length of time, so she declined the invitation.

Miss Hampton while abroad gave private showings of "A Modern Salome." It met with enthusiastic approval and its release in Europe will be simultaneous with the first showings in this country. Miss Hampton also visited Nice and Monte Carlo.

Toronto Exchange Employes Strike for Wage Concessions

SOMEWHAT of a sensation was caused in Toronto, Ontario, film exchange circles on March 2, when various employes of a number of local exchanges declared a strike for the purpose of securing wage increases and other concessions. This decision was reached when about sixty employes held a meeting of protest in the Labor Temple. It was stated that the workers were asking for wages ranging from $18 to $25 per week. For the most part, the strikers include shippers, stock room assistants and clerks, and they are not classed as skilled artisans.

Announcement was made that the strike would not tie up the moving picture business locally because the moving picture projection machine operators intimated that they would not walk out in sympathy and that they would continue to observe the agreement which they hold with exhibitors. A short time ago the employes of the local exchanges became interested in a move to organize a union for themselves and the outcome has been the strike declaration.

Cosmopolitan Plans Great Publicity for Marion Davies in "April Folly"

EXHIBITORS will doubtless remember the big advertising campaigns that launched into public favor Cosmopolitan Productions' Paramount Artcraft Pictures, "The Miracle of Love," featuring Lucy Cotton, and "The Cinema Murder," starring Marion Davies. They were considered by many exhibitors and publicity and advertising men the last word in exhibitor co-operation. It was asserted then that motion pictures had never enjoyed a more thorough and far-reaching exploitation.

But with the announcement of the release early in April of Marion Davies' latest starring vehicle, "April Folly," a Cynthia Stockley story, directed by Robert Leonard, comes also the announcement from Cosmopolitan Productions that an even greater campaign of exploitation will be given "April Folly."

This campaign will embrace every known legitimate means to bring to the attention of the public the merits of "April Folly" and its charming star, Marion Davies. It will be more complete than either of the two preceding ones and will cover more territory, is the promise.

To Have Phenomenal Publicity.

The advertising and publicity schedules are already completed and provide for the insertion in key city newspapers of full-page, half-page and quarter-page smashes of advertising copy. Famous artists have drawn their artistic conceptions of "April Folly" and famous writers have written special feature articles, among them Penrhyn Stanlaws, Batchelor, Nell Brinkley, Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, Mrs. Vandewater, Fay King, Ada Patterson, Alan Dale, Nellie Bly, Harry Herschfield and Beatrice Fairfax.

Eleven newspapers in eight key cities will be used. The newspapers are the New York American, New York Evening Journal, Chicago Herald and Examiner, Chicago American, Atlanta Georgian, Los Angeles Examiner, Boston Advertiser, Washington Times and the Wisconsin News. Their combined circulation is approximately 2,500,000 and it is estimated that they are read by over 12,000,000 people.

Stanlaws Did Lithographs.

The whole country is being plastered with lithographs in all sizes and several styles. The twenty-four-sheet and the flat one-sheet are the product of Penrhyn Stanlaws' gifted brush. This is the first time he has ever done any lithographing, and his reason for so doing is because it enables him to do a "head" of Marion Davies, whom he considers a beautifully typical American girl. This "head" adorns both the twenty-four-sheet and the one-sheet, which are done in five colors, as are the three-sheet and the six-sheet.

In addition, the special exploitation experts of the various Famous Players-Lasky exchanges through which "April Folly" is being released will give exhibitors playing this special production the benefit of their experience and showmanship and will assist them in every way to put it over successfully.

To Open at Capitol.

Toledo Newspaper Editorial Eulogizes the Americanism of "The Copperhead"

A TRIBUTE to the motion picture, and in particular to the Paramount Artcraft Super-Special, "The Copperhead," as a production inspirative of patriotism, is embodied in the editorial captioned "Real Americanism," which appeared in the Toledo Blade of February 25. It is, in part, as follows:

"It is peculiarly fitting that, during this week, when our thoughts have been directed to reminiscences of the first great American, whose birthday anniversary we have just celebrated, we of Toledo should be given an opportunity to view such a real Americanism as has been evolved in 'The Copperhead,' first seen here as a stage play a year ago, now shown on the screen in what is undoubtedly one of the greatest pictures ever made.

"It is a strange combination of forces that went into the making of this great American play. That noted American playwright, Augustus Thomas, author of what was perhaps the first typically American play, 'Arizona,' dramatized 'The Copperhead' from a story by Frederick Landis, an ex-congressman of the United States.

One Scene Shows Roosevelt.

"Dominating the drama and inspiring it is that noblest of all our great Americans, Abraham Lincoln. In one of its scenes appears, for a brief moment, that great American of a latter day, Theodore Roosevelt. And appearing as the interpreter of the play's chief character, Milt Shanks, reputed 'copperhead' but especially chosen for the secret service by President Lincoln, is the man who is considered by many the greatest American actor of the present day, Lionel Barrymore.

"Yes, after all, it is the play itself that breathes the very spirit of real Americanism, for its theme is a patriotic devotion so great that, not the sacrifice of wealth, but a far greater agony, the endurance of a long lifetime of ignominy and ostracism, was the gift which one man laid upon the altar of his country at the behest of Abraham Lincoln. 'We, who only fought, beg your forgiveness!' is the cry of his old neighbors in the coats of blue, when forty years of misunderstanding has been cleared away at last. Humble in the presence of a soul that could endure so greatly for love of country, stand these men who have scorned and shunned him as something vile.

"A Tremendous Preachment."

"A tremendous preachment of Americanism, this play! A revelation of the true meaning of service as that which seeks not glory, but quietly and simply gives all, without question, without reward, without hope even of justice. In its pictured form it is moving whole audiences to tears. It is sending them back into the workaday world very humble, with thoughts too deep for words.

"No more perfect teacher of patriotism, of real Americanism, could have been found for our boys and girls, for the foreigners who have come to this country to make their future homes. Splendidly acted, wonderfully picturized, sprinkled with sentences great enough to live through the ages, the picture of 'The Copperhead,' as did the stage version, is fulfilling a mission second to none—that of imparting to the great masses of the people the spirit of real Americanism."

Canadian Exchangemen Want Federal Censorship Board to Displace Provincial Ones

THE agitation for Federal censorship for moving pictures in Canada has broken out afresh—and this time from new quarters. The subject was discussed at length recently, until a declaration was made by Sir Henry Drayton of Ottawa, the Federal Minister of Finance, that moving picture censorship was a matter over which the various Provincial Governments had control unless a general re-arrangement of statutes affecting the situation were secured.

Clair Hague, of Toronto, president of the Canadian Moving Picture Distributors' Association, has come out in favor of one censorship board for the whole of Canada in place of the present seven Provincial boards, all of whom must examine a release. He believes that all exchangemen in the Dominion are strong supporters of the idea for one Federal board.

Agitating for Federal Censorship.

Several exchangemen of Winnipeg, Manitoba, are pressing for a general campaign to secure Federal censorship, it is reported, because of the manner in which the Manitoba Board of Censors has been condemning moving picture comedies and various other subjects. The stand taken by the Winnipeg men is that what is good for one Province is surely good enough for another and that there is no need for a repetition of examination across the country for one film.

The suggestions have been made that difficulties could be overcome by the establishment of a Federal Board at Toronto, which could comprise a representative from each of the Provinces. It is also urged that these censors should be elected by interested organizations or persons, in which case the moving picture interests would have a little to say, at least, in the selection of the men or women who are to judge the moving picture offerings.

Federal censorship has been discussed in Canada for years, however, and no progress seems to have been made with the demand for the feature.

New Rollin Comedy Is "Cut the Cards."

"Cut the Cards" is the title of the new Rolin comedy, released by Pathe March 21. The story deals principally with a most amusing poker game. "Snub" Pollard, the "pint sized" comedian, is the star and he is supported in his endeavors by Marie Mosquini, Eddie Boland, and "Sunshine Sammy," the diminutive colored Thespian. The story deals with the tribulations of a landlady who has the misfortune of having Pollard and Boland as her non-paying boarders.

J. E. Ince to Continue as Metro Director; Denies Plan to Leave

JOHN E. INCE, of the staff of directors at the Metro studios in Hollywood, has personally repudiated a recently published statement to the effect that he was going to leave Metro to direct the productions of another company on the Pacific Coast. Official announcement is made from the home offices of Metro in the Longacre Building, that Mr. Ince will continue to direct for Metro.

The recent report, which appeared in a trade paper, had it that Mr. Ince had already affixed his signature to a contract with a rival producing organization. This, of course, the director explicitly denies.

Mr. Ince was directing a dream sequence in which 150 dancing girls were appearing for June Mathis' picturization of "Old Lady 31" when he was shown the report that he contemplated severing his connection with Metro.

"I was offered a three-year contract and my own company," he said. "But I did not sign a contract; and I have definitely decided that I will continue to direct for Metro."

"The Devil's Pass Key" Now Undergoes Finishing Touches

EVER since "Blind Husbands" was produced some months ago and pronounced a masterpiece the public has been awaiting the second production by Eric Von Stroheim, who directed that story of the mighty Alps. The long wait will soon be rewarded, for "The Devil's Pass Key," the second of Von Stroheim's Universal-Jewel productions, is now being put through the finishing touches.

Again Mr. Von Stroheim goes to Europe for his locale, but not to the Alps. This time he has taken Paris—the city of love, life and gayety—and has painted a series of convincing pictures and created a photodrama which is said to charm by its exotic atmosphere and thrill with its dramatic intensity.

Von Stroheim has taken for his basis the story by Baroness DeMeyer, "Clothes and Treachery," and adapted it for his use. He has made the leading characters Americans living in France and placed them in the hands of trustworthy players. The Parisian types, too, are handled by expert actors. Sam De Grasse as the American playwright, Una Trevelyn as his extravagant wife, Clyde Filmore as the American philanderer in Paris, Maude George as the Parisian modiste, Ruth King as the indiscreet countess, Mae Busch as the Spanish dancer and a host of other clever people in well-drawn roles move in and out of the story.

Mix Finishes "Desert Love" and Starts New Production

WORD has reached the new Fox studios in West Fifty-fifth street, New York, that Tom Mix has completed the final scenes for his newest rough-riding vehicle at the Fox western studios. The name of this latest picture is "Desert Love," and from the description of story and the role of the daredevil star it would appear that those responsible for the selection of vehicles for the cowboy actor have decided to test him to the utmost, so far as stunts are concerned. It will be released early in April.

The last scenes of "Desert Love" are described as containing the most hazardous feats of skill and strength which Mix ever has undertaken. These scenes were shot on location at an old deserted mine mill, which was blown up by the director, Jacques Jaccard, with permission of the authorities.

Sullivan Coming to New York.

C. Gardner Sullivan, prominent scenario writer, will be in New York within a fortnight, according to plans wired to Louise Glaum from Los Angeles. Sullivan leaves for Europe on a tour of the world about April 10, and he intends talking over a proposed story with Miss Glaum before embarking.

Three years after Epes Winthrop Sargent established in Moving Picture World his department of Advertising for Exhibitors, other trade papers took up the idea—but they have never equaled in real service and efficiency the work of the originator.

Hope Loring Heads Serial Division.

Miss Loring's association with the company and her achievements before she joined its organization, make it a foregone conclusion that she will win success in her new undertaking. Few screen writers are as well qualified for such a position. This young woman combines literary skill, a knowledge of the world gained by several years of globe trotting and an executive ability that has been proved on several occasions.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe La Rose Go West with C. L. Chester

JOSEPH LA ROSE, familiarly known to Broadway as "Joe," has accepted a position as assistant to C. L. Chester, head of the C. L. Chester Productions, Inc., and will have, by the time this is read, have shaken the gold dust of Broadway from his feet, turned his back upon the Great White Way and taken his departure toward the setting sun to assume the duties of his new position in Los Angeles. He will be accompanied by Mrs. La Rose, who for years has held position as private secretary to Samuel Rothapfel, later taking a like position with Hugo Riesenfeld, managing director of the Rivoli and Rialto theatres. Mrs. La Rose will act in the capacity of private secretary to Mr. Chester.

It is only a statement of plain fact to say that both Mr. and Mrs. La Rose leave behind them many warm friends, for besides being very capable in their respective fields, they both are "reg'lar fellers" in all that term implies.

In 1915 La Rose was a musician, traveling with a musical act of his own. He was also an expert in stage effects, and it was his ability along the latter lines which first attracted the attention of Mr. Rothapfel when he was staging a production in the old Academy of Music in that year. Mr. Rothapfel made La Rose an offer, which was accepted, and soon Joe La Rose became right hand man to Rothapfel, which position he held up to the time Mr. Rothapfel finally relinquished control of the Rivoli and Rialto.

La Rose did not like the idea of leaving either Mr. Riesenfeld or Broadway, but Joe figures that with the salary attached to the new job he will soon be able to buy a little Broadway of his own.

Cinema Press Association Is to Publish Annually "Who's Who in Motion Pictures"

A NEW enterprise in the motion picture world is announced by the Cinema Press Association, Inc., i. e., the publication of an annual illustrated volume, "Who's Who in Motion Pictures." It has the indorsement of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Motion Picture Directors' Association. Its board of governors is made up of Adolph Zukor, J. D. Williams, Norma Talmadge, Anthony Paul Kelley, James Vincent, president Motion Picture Directors' Association, and Benedict M. Greene, president International Press, Ltd.,—the counsel for the company is Henry O. Falk.

The offices of the company are at 141 West Forty-fifth street and branches already have been established in Chicago, Los Angeles, London, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

The book will be illustrated, and, being revised and brought up to date annually, is designed to furnish an authoritative reference book for all whose business brings them in contact with the industry.

The association has at its disposal the services of a large editorial staff comprising a number of well known dramatic and motion picture reviewers and critics. It will be the task of this staff to prepare special articles on the leading stars, directors, producers, exhibitors and executives, and it is part of the function of the Cinema Press Association to send out these articles, illustrated, to the trade papers, newspapers and periodicals.

The association is hard at work getting the necessary facts for the first issue of the book. The task comprises practically an entire census of the motion picture field and will be some months in coming to completion.

Reynolds, Globe Trotting Author, to Write for Fox

CONSIDERABLE significance attaches to the recent announcement of the increase in the scenario staff of the William Fox studios on the Pacific Coast, in the fact that among the four new faces to be found in the "brains" department on the Fox lot is the kindly countenance of "Major" Steve Reynolds, author, artist, linquist and globe-trotter.

Stephen Chalmers, Arthur Jackson, Julius Furthman and Stephen Allen Reynolds make the total of new Fox writers on the west coast. "Major" Reynolds brings to the scenario department a literary knowledge and experience which encompass the life and habits of the peoples of the world, a vast experience among all the races of the earth, an inexhaustible store of stories gleaned from life in the open, from life in the armies of the world, from the solitary life of that far Alaskan snowfields to the crowded tenement existence of cosmopolitan cities.

Some great work is expected of Mr. Reynold in view of the wealth of material from which he has to draw.

Geuringer to Be New York Head for Saenger Company

W. H. GEURINGER, assistant manager of the Saenger Amusement Company of New Orleans, will remain permanently in New York as the representative of his concern in the purchase of theatre supplies, equipment of every nature, and of special state rights productions and short length subjects.

This action is taken, it is said, as a necessity caused by the expanding theatres interests of the Saenger Amusement Company. That organization is buying, and will build, a number of theatres in its southeastern territory this spring and summer, and the great amount of equipment needed to equip the new houses, as well as the regular supply of accessories required by the present properties controlled by it, needs the personal attention of one of the concern's executives.

King Names Cast for First Picture.

Production is now under way on "The Road to Arcady," by Edith Sessions Topper, Burton King's first independent production at the Mirror studios at Glendale, Long Island. Virginia Lee will be the star of this feature. Harry Benham is Miss Lee's leading man. Roger Lytton and Julia Swayne Gordon have character roles. Hugh Huntley, the English actor, is the juvenile, and Mildred Wayne, the ingenue, and Stephen Grattan complete the cast.

"Unlimited Exploitation Possibilities in 'Dream of Fair Women,'" Says Garsson

From this number of entrants the most beautiful girls were given an opportunity to display their talents before the camera and several of them have proved highly successful in some of the best known pictures of the year.

Blanche McGarity, Virginia Brown, Anita Booth and Anetha Getwell, conceded to be the most beautiful of the entire list who entered the contest, portray the most important roles. All of these girls have created much favorable comment through their excellent work in recent productions.

The announcement that the picture will be distributed on a state right basis has brought inquiries from all parts of the country owing to the interest created in the contest and in the picture by the various fan magazines.

"Many first class pictures that should prove highly successful fail every year because of the fact that they do not lend themselves to proper exploitation," said Mr. Garsson. In 'A Dream of Fair Women' the exploitation possibilities are unlimited. Enough interest already has been created throughout the country to insure the success of the picture, if for no other reason than the publicity it has received through the fan magazines which conducted the contest.

"But we are going ahead just as if it had never before been mentioned. Every possible publicity and exploitation angle that lends itself to the picture will be carried out—not only for the benefit of the state right buyer, but for the exhibitor as well."

The Greatest Thrill of All.

Gene Pollar, playing Tarzan in Numa Pictures Corporation's production of "The Return of Tarzan," has battled with lions, elephants, apes, a wild boar, and some of the most argumentative surf noted in California in many years. But recently, in the wee sma' hours of a new day, and in a room in his own home up in the Bronx, the greatest thrill of all came to the screen's newest ape-man. It lay in the faint pull of an hour old baby's hand as the five fingers uncurled long enough to find the fingers of that baby boy's dad. Or, in the words of these white-paper-shortage days, Mr. and Mrs. Gene Pollar announce the birth of a son on Wednesday, March third. He is the first child.

WORK on the John Frederick story, "Bullet Proof," under the direction of Lynn Reynolds, in which Harry Carey is starred, has just been completed. The increasing popularity of Carey and the growing demand for his productions have caused Universal to exercise the greatest care in the selection of his stories, in the choice of supporting casts and the appointment of directors to supervise his features.

Ontario Censors Reversed On Condemnation of "Log of the U-35"

THE Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors saw fit recently to condemn "The Log of the U-35," the official German Government film record of the sinking of British merchantmen and, naturally, there was considerable comment regarding the stand that had been taken by the board. An appeal was made by the Canadian Exhibitors' Exchange of Toronto, which controls the Canadian rights of the release, with the result that the Ontario Board of Appeals reversed the decision of the lower body. The picture was then given its first run at the Strand Theatre, Toronto, where it made a big hit.

So great has been the demand for the "murder reel" that Manager Allen, of the Canadian Exhibitors' Exchange, ordered five more prints of the release, making eight in all. This exchange is controlled by the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario. No reason was announced as to objection taken by the Ontario Board of Censors to the picture, which is guaranteed as authentic.

S. Rankin Drew Post Has "Best" Meeting; Plans for Big Benefit Well Under Way

IN the early hours of Wednesday morning, March 3, the S. Rankin Drew Post of the American Legion, New York City, concluded the most interesting and liveliest meeting of its career. This is the post comprised of the men of the theatre, the motion picture business and their allied interests.

The meeting was held at Keen's Chop House and began with a dinner at which over 100 members were present. It is the custom of the post to hold its gatherings once a month with a "feed," some speeches and then a business session. The guests present at this meeting were Acting Mayor F. H. La Guardia and Ferris Powell Merrit, an authority on service decorations and medals. Wells Hawks, president, presided.

The acting mayor had much to say about profiteers who collected while they shouted patriotism, and he also paid his respects unsparingly to people who are trying to exploit the soldier and the sailor and use the legion for their own advantage.

Recites Gumpertz's Citation.

An interesting talk on U. S. Army Intelligence work in Siberia was given by Frederick F. Moore, a member of the post, who served in Russia as captain in the army. Mr. Merritt gave a most informing talk on medals, with many anecdotes. He created much enthusiasm by repeating the citation for bravery given to Sydney G. Gumpertz, a member of the post, who wears the Congressional Medal of Honor.

The third speaker was "Jack" Francis, who was introduced as the newspaper man who discovered the Tenderloin and who was the first of the old reporters to "cover" Times Square when it was a farm. Mr. Francis spoke on "Great Untruths."

Songs were sung by Jimmy Flynn and Sollie Cohen, of the Leo Feist house, with Abe Baer at the piano. D. C. Soderquist, a Post member, sang several ballads. Mr. Owen, of the War Camp Community, furnished the instrumental music. Twenty-four new members were introduced by Victor M. Shapiro, chairman of the membership committee. The post now has a woman's auxiliary with about fifty members. Mrs. Sidney Drew is president.

The benefit performance for the S. Rankin Drew Post Gymnasium will take place on Sunday night, April 11. A remarkable bill is being arranged.

Numa Officials Return East; Signed with the Beckwiths

Interesting information comes from Mr. Weiss in the announcement that Mr. and Mrs. Walter Beckwith, noted lion-trainers, have been placed under a five-year contract by this corporation to go into effect May 1.

Mrs. Beckwith and two assistants are now en route from California to New York in charge of a special seventy-foot baggage car containing fourteen lions and 4 cubs, billed to Numa Pictures Corporation.

Kohler in Cunard Two-Reelers.

Fred Kohler, who played the part of MacDowell in Alan Dwan's "Soldiers of Fortune," and who will be seen in the National Film, "The Kentucky Colonel," has been cast as "heavy" for the Grace Cunard newest two-reeler, "The Man Hater."

Cost of Film Censorship in Toronto is Raised From $2 to $3 a Reel

EXCHANGE managers of Toronto, Ontario, have been advised by the Ontario Provincial Government that fees for examination of pictures by the Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors had been raised from $2 to $3 per reel.

At the same time, announcement was made that the license fee of fifteen cents per reel per month, which has been collected by the Ontario Government, had been cancelled, thus saving a considerable amount of office work for the exchange branches in the Province. The exchanges seem to be quite willing to pay the increased censorship fee in lieu of the monthly reel tax because of the considerable amount of work that will now be avoided.

The Government has also intimated that the proposed annual tax of $150 for the censoring of posters, still photographs, press books and other printed matter will not be collected in view of the increased tax for picture censoring. This, too, has met with considerable favor on the part of the exchanges.

Metro Rushes Repairs on New York Studio; will Resume Eastern Production in April

EXTENSIVE alterations now being made at Metro's New York studios at 3 West Sixty-first street, preparatory to a resumption of production in the East on a large scale, will be completed by the last of this month so that motion picture-making can start April 1, according to announcement made by officials of Metro Pictures Corporation. The work is progressing rapidly under the personal supervision of M. P. Staulcup, Metro art director, and technical expert, assisted by Frank Namczy.

The studios and Metro offices occupy the sixth and seventh floors of the Sixty-first street building, running through to Sixty-second street. The stage on the seventh floor has a floor space of 150 by 73 feet. All the old flooring has been torn up and an entirely new concrete floor is being built. A new lighting system is also being installed.

Paint Glass Roof Black.

The glass roof is being painted black, as Metro, from its experience with its Pacific Coast studios in Hollywood, has become convinced of the necessity for "no daylight" interiors. New Cooper-Hewitt lights will be used.

Maxwell Karger, director general, will have his offices on the seventh floor, on the Sixty-second street side. He will have George McGuire, formerly Metro's chief cutter, as his assistant. Mr. Staulcup and Mr. Namczy will have their offices on the Sixty-first street side. The scenario department wil adjoin Mr. Karger's offices. On this floor will also be the electrical department, under William Meyerhof.

Mr. Staulcup intends to use the natural "backings" that the studio affords for New York scenes. The front of the building, overlooking Columbus Circle, gives a long view of Broadway and of Eighth avenue. On the east is a fine view of Central Park.

The entrance to the studios is on the sixth floor, where Joseph Strauss, studio manager, has his offices. The bookkeeping and business department will be on this floor.

Metro has not used the New York studios since the fall of 1918, when, because of the demands of the war, principally on account of coal restrictions, the company transferred its producing activities to the Pacific Coast. Since that time other companies have sub-leased the New York plant.

War Department Has Pictorial History of Army Doings Taken by Signal Corps

SOME of the outstanding features of the War Department's moving picture work during the war have just been made public by the signal corps of the army. More pictures were taken by the government than by any private producer, it is declared. Eighteen months have been devoted by a corps of clerks to the filing and indexing of the films produced, and the work is but half completed. Three million feet of film were used as educational matter for the training of troops; this, however, was but one phase of the photographic work of the signal corps.

During the war, for the first time, the war department made use of films for the recording of events which will in future years comprise part of the history of the United States. Before 1917 hardly any use had been made of the motion picture camera, the most important film taken up to that time being a short picture of one of the first aeroplane flights of the Wright Brothers, taken at Fort Myer in 1907. Immediately upon our entry into the war, however, the moving picture camera was adopted as an integral part of the work of the signal corps, which was entrusted with the task of making a complete pictorial history of the activities of the army, both at home and at the front.

Just as the infantry needed careful training before entering a campaign, so did the motion picture photographers require special instruction in their new duties before going on the battlefield as recorders of history. A school for training motion picture photographers was started at Columbia University, New York City, and a call sent out, to which there was a ready response, for men skilled in the production of motion pictures to act as instructors.

"The Superman" a New Type of Film.

The six-reel melodrama, "The Superman," being released by Tower Film Corporation on the state rights market, is said to introduce a new phase of motion picture melodrama, and to be a thrilling narrative, replete with suspense and hair-raising stunts.

It also has humor and pathos, and reports indicate its popularity.

Broadway Theatre to Give Premiere of "Deadlier Sex"

THE premiere of "The Deadlier Sex," featuring Blanche Sweet, will take place at the Broadway Theatre, New York City, beginning March 14. As a pre-release showing, it has been booked for one week. It will be released March 28, and advance reports from all parts of the country indicate a heavy demand for the picture. B. S. Moss believes it one of the strongest of the year.

In booking the production Mr. Moss gives evidence of his satisfaction with the previous Blanche Sweet offerings. He booked the famous Bret Harte story, "Fighting Cressy," in which Miss Sweet is featured, for pre-release and established it as a distinct success. The popularity of the star and the unusual story by Bayard Veiller should make "The Deadlier Sex" a magnet for patrons of the Broadway Theatre, in the opinion of Mr. Moss.

Prints of "The Deadlier Sex" have been sent to all branch offices of Pathe and at the first showing in the branch offices the picture met with the strongest approval of the sales force. At ensuing showings for exhibitors this opinion was reiterated.

The picture marks the culmination of the steadily growing popularity of the Blanche Sweet pictures released by Pathe. "Fighting Cressy," the dramatization of Bret Harte's famous story, solidified the strong impression created by "A Woman of Pleasure," and today both of those productions are in big demand.

Pearl White Company Makes Record Despite Cold Spell

PEARL WHITE, Fox Star; her director, Charles Giblyn; his assistant, Bert Siebel, and the company supporting Miss White in "Tiger's Cub" have returned to New York after a stay of two weeks at Port Henry, N. Y., where they set a record for a day's work by taking thirty-eight script scenes. This record was made during one of the coldest spells that the little town on the shore of Lake Champlain has known this season.

Thomas Carrigan, of "Checkers" fame, leading man for Miss White, J. Thornton Baston, the heavy; Miss Ruby Hoffman, Frank Evans, John Woodford, John Davidson, Albert Tavernier and William Armstrong made up the remainder of the company.

The interior sets, exact duplicates of the interiors of cabins in Alaska, were awaiting the company on its arrival in New York, and the director and the star immediately set to work with these. They hope to establish a speed record as well as a production record in the filming of this story, which scored heavily in London and which will be offered to the American public by William Fox as a Pearl White special production.

Kokomo Exhibitors Trip the Fantastic as None Molest Their Sunday Opening

MOTION picture theatres were operated in Kokomo, Ind., last Sunday afternoon without molestation from officers of the law for the first time in several years. At all of the eight theatres audiences were entertained from 1 until 7 p. m. At the last named hour all of the theatres closed their doors.

The police department acquiesced in the decision that was handed down in city court the day before by Judge C. H. Wills at the trial of the theatre managers who were arrested on Sunday, February 22, for attempting to operate their shows. Judge Wills' decision, in brief, was to the effect that he did not wish to assume the responsibility of bringing about a regime of the Sunday "blue laws" which would surely and inevitably "hang the crepe" on Kokomo as a commercial and industrial center.

After the theatres opened Sunday the police officers were instructed to make no arrests unless persons outside of the department swore out affidavits. No affidavits were filed, and it looks as if the theatre men have won a sweeping victory.

As to what, if anything, is to be done in the way of further effort to prevent the giving of Sunday shows, no definite information is available. Prosecutor Brock says that if there are any who are not satisfied to let the controversy rest on the decision of Judge Wills all they need to do is to come to him and make affidavits against the theatre men.

Police Check Up On Evidence.

The only activity of the police in connection with the opening of the Kokomo theatres on Sunday was going around to the different shows and obtaining the name of the managers and operators. This was done at the suggestion of the prosecutor to the end that the information might be available in case any affidavits were filed. Prosecutor Brock said he took this step after he had learned that the police had decided to acquiesce in the decision given by Judge Wills.

The attendance at the various shows was large, but at some of the theatres was not up to expectations. This was due, the managers explained, to the fact that hundreds of patrons feared they would meet with the same disappointment experienced on the previous Sunday. No announcement had been made prior to the opening of the theatres that the police would not interfere. A much larger attendance is expected next Sunday.

To say that the exhibitors of Kokomo are proud of their victory is putting it mildly. And those who desire Sunday entertainment are pleased.

Neilan Finishes Second and Starts on Third Production

WITH "The River's End," Marshall Neilan's first independent production breaking box-office records everywhere, announcement is made from his New York offices that the second production has just been finished and work has already been started on the third. The title of the second release will be announced shortly.

For the third production Mr. Neilan has just engaged Daredevil Campbell, who it is said, will give the screen one of its greatest thrills by dropping from an aeroplane on the roof of a fast-moving Pullman. "Bull" Montana, who first gained fame in Douglas Fairbanks pictures, has also just been engaged to play an important part in this film.

The entire company has left Hollywood for Riverside, Cal., where the big scenes will be staged. Upon their return they will take up the production for the first time at the Jasper Hollywood studios where a complete unit has been engaged on long-term agreement by Mr. Neilan.

Ready for the "Follow Up."

At the New York offices of the Neilan organization it was predicted that the second offering, to be released within the next few months through First National, would even far exceed the success of "The River's End," which has set a high water mark of quality for this organization.

Harry Revier Active in Film World.

Harry Revier, who recently completed the direction of "The Return of Tarzan" for Numa Pictures Corporation, and who is now in New York, bears the distinction of having written twenty-six original stories now in the course of adaptation for the screen. One of them is being dramatized by Von Sexamar for production on Broadway, very shortly. Mr. Revier's plans for the immediate future are indefinite owing to the strong likelihood of his play receiving a New York premiere and his desire to be in this country at such a time. He has had two flattering offers for picture production abroad, one in London, the other in Torrino, Italy.

Bulls-Eye Featuring Bill Franey.

With Bill Franey in the leading roles, Nat Spitzer, studio manager for the Bulls-Eye Film Corp., is making a series of one-reel comedies for the state rights market. At least three comedies will be made before any attempt is made to market this series, according to Mr. Spitzer.

Cast of "Blind Youth" Is Named.

The cast of "Blind Youth," second production made for distribution as a National Picture Theatres, Inc., subject, was made known this week for the first time by Lewis J. Selznick, head of National.

Walter McGrain is cast as Maurie Monnier, Leatrice Joy as Hope Martin, Ora Carew as Clarice Chandoce, Clara Horton as Bobo, Colin Kenney as Henry Monnier, Joseph Swickard as Pierre Monnier, Buddy Post as Tubb, Claire McDowell as Mrs. Monnier, Leo White as Louis, Helen Howard as Mitilda Packard. The National Picture Theatres, Inc., subjects will be distributed through the Select branches.

The Moving Picture World carries a message to exhibitors in small towns by the hundred where salesmen seldom, if ever, visit in their travels. It is to benefit this great prosperous exhibitor element that the World is compiled—as much to help the little fellow as to help the "first run" man in the larger cities.

Grand Jury to See Films of Recent Louisville Riots

THE motion pictures of the riot at Lexington, Ky., will be used as evidence in the grand jury investigation of the recent disturbances in the Kentucky city. Governor Edward Morrow, of the Blue Grass State, saw the film in Cincinnati recently and expressed astonishment at the picture. The photographer evidently disregarded all danger of being shot, as his "close-up" views are remarkable. The picture will be shown for the first time publicly in this city next week.

Christie Flays "Cinema Temples" That Make Comedies Appear Like Footraces

"WE have heard a lot during the last few years about short subjects being necessary to theatre programs, but evidently the managers of some of the finest moving picture temples in America still believe that short stuff is a necessary evil, to be gotten rid of as quickly as possible," says Al Christie, well known moving picture director and producer.

"The managers of some of these so-called temples of the silent drama evidently believe that they have to run a comedy because they know a few of their patrons like them and therefore the comedy is a thing to be sluffed over as quickly as possible while people are changing their seats and then forgotten. They give the patrons a beautiful organ recital before the comedy goes on and get everybody into a Sunday-go-to-meeting frame of mind and then wonder why nobody laughs.

A Comedy or a Footrace?

"A lot of people are afraid to laugh because the main title was run on a curtain, or run so fast that the audience doesn't know whether it is a comedy or a picture of a footrace. It is a well-known fact that all main titles are cut off the film or run while the beautiful and expensive silk curtains are being manipulated or while the audience is changing seats; the poor boobs who are misguided enough to want to see a comedy don't know what they are looking at, and perhaps by the middle of the first reel of the comedy attraction they gradually begin to learn what it is all about.

"A glaring example of a typical showing of a comedy in one of these 'cinema palaces' was recently at a California theatre where the first 200 feet of the comedy was shown on the curtains while the orchestra was tuning up and then blaring forth like the big band does at a circus while the crowd is going out.

Not Good Showmanship.

"Nobody ever saw a successful circus in which the aftershow or concert was started before the big fellow in the silk hat had well announced it and the people who paid 10 cents extra had gotten into their seats. That wouldn't be show business. Yet the trade paper interviews with the big fellows who run the cinema temples maintain that they are showmen, and I suppose they are. If they still want comedies to drive people out of their theatres quickly, I suppose that kind of comedies are still being made. I don't want to make them myself.

"The fellows who run small neighborhood theatres which please their regular customers regularly can teach the 'big fellows' a good deal about satisfying their patrons. They figure that people come to see pictures and they give them pictures complete and the audience does appreciate knowing what the pictures are all about.

"Laughs in a comedy pile up, starting with a small bubble of merriment. If one person laughs it may start a whole house rocking. But let a big, high-priced orchestra in a cinema temple tear its lungs and arms out playing as loud as it can during a comedy, as it frequently does, and it defies anybody to laugh. Such theatres are not cinema temples. They are Main Street Mausoleums and the managers are crepe-hangers."

James Oliver Curwood Urges Necessity of Care in Preparation of Continuity

THE day of 100 per cent. stories for the screen will not arrive until producers come to a realization of the vital importance of the need for ample time in the careful preparation of continuity, according to James Oliver Curwood. The famous author, whose novels and picture dramas rank among the most popular in the country today, working on this theory, has left New York for the wilderness of Michigan, where with his director, David Hartford, he will adapt to the screen his latest story, "Nomads of the North."

In a little log cabin fifteen miles from the nearest railroad, Mr. Curwood is now working out to its finest detail the continuity for the production, which will be his second personally supervised release through First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Before leaving for the woods, Mr. Curwood made strong criticism of what he termed "the impetuous haste of producers to whip a story into continuity without apparently giving a thought to the probable result." Failure on the part of many producers to even consult with authors on the manner of adapting their stories to the screen he described as "one of the crowning errors of the motion picture industry." Mr. Curwood said:

Continuity Writers Seriously Handicapped.

"A producer turns a novel of some well-known author over to a continuity writer, saying: 'Take this story and get busy on it right away. Make it a five-reel feature and have it finished by Saturday. You'll have to speed up, because you have only three days left to do the job.' Such methods as these account for the weak type of picture now seen so often on the screen. That is the chief reason why the day of 100 per cent. screen stories has not yet arrived. That is also one of the reasons why under no conditions will I allow my 'bags of tricks,' earned through fifteen years of experience among the wild things of the forest, to go into the hands of a continuity writer."

Mr. Curwood asserted that in preparing the continuity for "Nomads of the North," he would take as much time and painstaking care as he would in the preparation of one of his novels, for publication in magazine or book form.

Patience and Care Produce Classics.

"The author who takes any pride in his work realizes that the greatest benefit and triumph lies in rewriting over and over again and giving ample time to the study, expansion and improvement of plots. None of the really great authors ever rush their work. Some of the most eminent rewrite their novels ten and fifteen times before they are satisfied with the finished product. One great writer has been known to spend weeks concentrating to find a single word or expression that would fit a situation, never quitting until the inspiration came.

"Patience and care combined with ability made the classics of other days. The exercise of this patience and care, I feel, is the only way for an author to preserve his reputation, and this applies to screen dramas as well as matter for the printed page. Yet it is a fact that very few authors today are given time or even opportunity to properly adapt their stories to motion pictures. In each case the result is often no credit to the picture, and certainly it does not add to the prestige of the novelist, though he may have had nothing to do with the continuity."

"Nomads of the North" will be the next Curwood feature to follow "Back to God's Country" and "The River's End" through First National, and it is expected that it will be four months in the making.

Carr to Play in Coming Pathe Serial.

Tommy Carr, fifteen years old, who began his career as a screen actor twelve years ago with the Lubin Company is now working with the Seitz Company and will appear in a prominent part in "Velvet," a Pathe serial now in production. Tommy joined the Seitz organization after his return from Florida, where he was working in a Griffith production.

Americanization Trailers for Films.

Select Pictures Corporation, of which Lewis J. Selznick is president, announced this week through General Manager Sam E. Morris that Americanization trailers are being distributed to the exchanges, to be added to the latest Selznick releases. These trailers were prepared by the Department of the Interior, Committee of Americanization, of which Mr. Selznick is chairman of distribution. The messages are described as being short, pithy and patriotic.

Seitz Changes Title of New Serial.

George B. Seitz has changed the title of a serial now in production at his studio in New York for Pathe from "The Velvet Hawk" to "Velvet." The story is by Bertram Millhauser. Mr. Seitz is directing and will star in the serial.

Taylor Holmes Built Up Own Strength Like Character He Plays in New Film

THE character of Gilbert Goodhue, which Taylor Holmes portrays in his latest screen comedy, "The Very Idea," released through Metro, is singularly like an earlier phase of the actor's own life. As those who are familiar with the story of this William Le Baron stage success know, Goodhue is a young man none too strong physically and his wife undertakes the task of getting him to exercise.

When Mr. Holmes was about the age of 16 and living in Chicago, he was in the same predicament, though it should be pointed out here that at that time he was, like the average youth of 16, unmarried. He was inclined to be frail, however, and taking the matter into his own hands he sought a way to build up his health.

Without the financial resources to afford a gymnasium course, Holmes nevertheless would not be denied the chance to build himself up physically. He daily haunted the premises of a gymnasium in Chicago and in time became known to the instructors there. Not long after he was asked if he would like to take charge of a class of little boys and he gladly accepted.

This was only the start of the comedian's self-taught course of physical culture. When he came east he took up residence as soon as circumstances would permit at Forest Hills, L. I., where the West Side Tennis Club is—a gathering place for the best players in the country at one time of the year. During his residence there Holmes had the opportunity to play against the best of them, thus keeping himself always in superb physical condition.

"The Very Idea," adapted for the screen by S. E. V. Taylor from the satirical comedy success by William Le Baron, was directed by Lawrence Windom. The picture was made by Taylor Holmes Productions, Inc., and is distributed exclusively by Metro.

Transfers Technical Department.

To advance the art and technical progress of the new big feature production to be directed by William P. S. Earle, and other productions as well, Bert Rothe, technical director, has moved his valuable collection of drawings, prints, photographs and research library to the Selznick Fort Lee studios. Mr. Rothe's draughtsmen and technical aides will also be employed there and the Fort Lee technical department will be in charge of George G. Grenier. Paul Dodge, A. Agostini and Harry Neppele have been assigned permanent positions there. The entire technical department of the two studios in the Bronx and Fort Lee will be under the supervision of Mr. Rothe.

Pathe Director of Exchanges Reports Great Increase in Feature Business

HAVING educated the public up to the point where only the biggest features will bring more than the average number of persons to his box office, the exhibitor today finds his crying need is for productions of assured ticket selling merit. That the market is eager to assimilate any picture of more than ordinary value, is clearly evidenced by a report just issued by Pathe, showing the remarkable success which has greeted its special releases in January and February of this year.

Elmer R. Pearson, director of exchanges of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has just reported to General Manager Paul Brunet, showing an unprecedented increase in the Pathe feature business during the first two months in this year, over the biggest eight consecutive weeks in the previous annals of the great distributing organization.

Half of Quota in Four Weeks.

The strides taken by Pathe's features can be attributed, according to Mr. Pearson, to the merit of the product it is now handling. He cites the following examples of high-class attractions Pathe is now distributing: Edgar Lewis' "Other Men's Shoes;" Jesse D. Hampton's "Fighting Cressy," starring Blanche Sweet, and "My Husband's Other Wife," J. Stuart Blackton's biggest Pathe winner to date. These are among the 1920 releases.

"Other Men's Shoes" gives every evidence of becoming Pathe's most successful feature, according to Mr. Pearson, for in the first four weeks of its career it has reached more than half of the high quota established for its sales.

Her Popularity Increases.

A most prominent factor in the record-making figures for January and February is the increasing popularity of Blanche Sweet, whose brilliant position among the luminaries of filmdom is now more than ever firmly fixed. When "A Woman of Pleasure," her first Hampton special, was released, Miss Sweet had been in retirement for about a year. Yet the tremendous following she gained prior to her deserting the studio was soon recruited again with the issuance of "A Woman of Pleasure." The host of her followers was materially increased with the release of "Fighting Cressy."

Mr. Pearson is firmly convinced that "The Deadlier Sex," which will be Miss Sweet's next attraction, will show a substantial business increase above "Fighting Cressy." He bases his opinion not alone on the popularity of Miss Sweet but upon the high class of the production The story was written by Bayard Veiller, author of "The Thirteenth Chair" and "Within the Law," and was produced by Jesse D. Hampton.

Hampton Studios Announce Completion of "Parish Priest," Founded on Dan Hart Play

AN interesting announcement is the statement from the Jesse D. Hampton studios that "The Parish Priest," a Hampton production of the wel-known Dan Hart play, is cut, titled and a sample print ready for shipment to New York.

"The Parish Priest" is said to be one of the most interesting plays to reach the screen in recent years. Few, if any, playgoers in America have missed seeing the stage version of this well-known classic. It has been estimated that the play has been shown in every city, town, village and cross roads that boasted a theatre, auditorium or town hall.

Before sending the print to New York a pre-view will be held in Los Angeles, to which Bishop Cantwell, of the diocese of Los Angeles and Monterey, and his monseigneurs, priests and coadjutors will be invited, as well as officers in the Knights of Columbus, Young Men's Institute and other organizations.

The Hampton organization has been congratulated on the faithful reproduction of the play. As theatregoers know, "The Parish Priest," is a simple heart interest comedy drama, laid in a small town in New Jersey, and concerns an average day's activities in the life of a beloved priest. It reveals an intimate and engrossing cross section of small town activities, the human interest, the quarrels, the petty jealousies, the heart aches, the simple love affairs and the rare comedy situations that furnish refreshing laughs because of their utter simplicity.

The picture has been happily cast, with the title role being played by William Desmond, who played the part many times in stage productions of the classic. Another member of the cast who also played identical roles on the stage and screen is James Ricketts.

Joseph J. Franz, who directed the Hampton production, produced it many times for footlight presentations.

Manila Exhibitors Show Much Ability in Film Selection and Presentation

AMERICAN films are being used almost exclusively in Manila and throughout the entire Philippine Islands and they are being presented in the most artistic manner, according to F. H. Le Breton, the representative of the Pathe motion picture interests in the islands. Mr. Le Breton is in New York City on a trip for the purpose of arranging a great schedule of high-class American pictures to be presented in his territory in the coming year.

"I cannot state too strongly the absolute necessity for offering only the very best productions to the public of Manila," Mr. Le Breton said in an interview. "It is quite useless to send inferior or medium motion pictures. The demand is for the best.

"The people are keen and discriminating. The clientele of the high-class theatres is composed of well educated and cultured people. The exhibitors must be very careful in selecting their pictures, for the public is quick to show approval or disapproval. When they like a picture they are enthusiastic. When they do not like it they very frankly express themselves.

Exhibitors Are Business Men.

"In my years spent among the people of Manila I have come to know and appreciate them. Their leading exhibitors are typical of the splendid business men who have developed the country and it is a great pleasure to do business with them. They are presenting their pictures in real artistic surroundings and the theatres of Manila today are among the finest in the Far East. The people like music, good music, and an important part of the high-class theatre is the orchestra.

"In the past five years the American motion picture has become recognized as the nearest thing to perfection in the development of the art. The people want American pictures almost exclusively and I believe that American producers will hold this supreme place as long as they keep up the high standard they have set. But they cannot afford to be negligent because they have achieved such an important place in the market."

Before returning to Manila, Mr. Le Breton expects to close important contracts which will insure an excellent array of pictures for the selection of the exhibitors of Manila and the surrounding country. He said that Harold Lloyd was the best liked comedian in the territory and he will probably arrange for the distribution of the new Harold Lloyd two-reel comedies. Aside from first-class dramatic productions, the Philippine public holds in great favor the serial. This choice is general in the Far East.

Leading Exhibitors Pay High Tribute to Efficiency Displayed by Pathe News

FOLLOWING a series of exclusive pictures of national and international events, culminating with remarkable scenes of the recent killing of six persons in a riot before the Lexington, Ky., court house, the Pathe News has received sterling praise from the foremost exhibitors of the United States.

Among those who have paid tribute to the Pathe News are S. Barret McCormick, of the Circle, Indianapolis; J. J. Parker, of the Majestic, Jensen and Von Herberg's big Portland, Ore., house; Theodore L. Hayes, general manager of the Finkelstein and Ruben Circuit; Sid Grauman, of Los Angeles; Harry Koplar, of the Consolidated Theatres, St. Louis; Harry Watts, manager of the Strand, Omaha; George Clark, manager of the Empress, Des Moines, and Jack Eaton, managing director of the Strand, New York.

Jack Eaton Bestows High Praise.

Particular stress was laid by all of these prominent showmen and a host of others on the fact that the Pathe News has been consistently high-class, and has always been "up" on the big news features.

Jack Eaton, of the Strand, New York, said: "I feel that it is no more than fair as an exhibitor to say a few words of commendation on the consistent quality of Pathe News. News Weeklies come and go, but Pathe goes on forever, and the timeliness of subjects that you gather, and the speed with which you deliver pictures of a perishable interest, speaks for itself and the effieciency of your laboratory organization. Pathe News seems about as important as tickets to the motion picture theatre, if the exhibitor is to keep his program alive to his audience."

"Essential Part of Program."

On top of this sincere tribute, S. Barrett McCormick, of the Circle, Indianapolis, wired: "We have always considered Pathe News an essential part of the Circle Theatre's program and know that its consistent interest and news value make for a regular following that becomes as valuable to a theatre as its orchestra or other permanent features."

Sid Grauman dispatched the appended praise: "The excellent quality of the Pathe News makes it a standard product for the Grauman Theatre. The Pathe News has always had it first."

Exploitation aids and suggestions printed by Moving Picture World in conjunction with reviews of new productions, will guide the picture showman aright. They are practicable and easy to put into execution.

"The Right of Way" Scores Big Success on Its New York Showing at the Capitol

THAT Bert Lytell in "The Right of Way" captured not only New York motion picturegoers but the press as well is the boast of Metro Pictures Corporation. Without exception motion picture critics of the daily newspapers of the metropolis commented favorably upon the Metro-Classic feature when it was exhibited at the Capitol Theatre recently. The keynote of the opinions expressed regarding this screen version of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of regeneration, Metro points out, was that the star had given a particularly forceful characterization of Charley Steele and that the production itself was one of uncommon beauty and finish.

"At the Capitol 'The Right of Way,' the screen version of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel of the same name, is an exceptional picture. It is a well told story and the acting is good," are the words of the Tribune.

The Sun's reviewer took occasion to pay tribute not only to the merit of the picture, but also to Metro's artistic courage in refusing to weaken the story by twisting it about into the conventional "happy" ending.

The World took occasion to notice the same feature, stating in its columns: " . . . the end is not happy. The explanation is that the printed story is followed with fidelity, which isn't usually the case when tragic stories are filmed."

In the brief space the Evening Post allots to picture criticism, its reviewer took occasion to record "'The Right of Way,' a screen version of Sir Gilbert Parker's book, with Bert Lytell in the chief role, is the featured photoplay at the Capitol Theatre. The film affords Mr. Lytell many opportunities to display his capacity for forceful characterization and there are scenes of great beauty in the North Woods, where much of the action takes place."

As has already been made known, Metro provides two endings for "The Right of Way," the logical one, used during the showing at the Capitol, and a happy solution of Steele's difficulties.

"Shadow of Rosalie" Completed.

George Archinbaud, who has just completed the direction of the latest Elaine Hammerstein picture, "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes," has expressed himself as highly pleased with the results obtained. This Selznick production called for a dual role and what may be termed a large amount of "heavy" work. This new Selznick picture was made from the novel of Grace Sartwell Mason and was adapted to the screen by R. Cecil Smith.

Yo Ho! Yo Ho! The Sea Is The Life for a Studio!

THE latest thing in moving pictures is the sea-going studio. The Crowley Launch and Lighterage Company, of San Francisco, is fitting up a Shipping Board barkentine with full studio equipment and the vessel will be ready to put to sea at an early date. It will have a powerful electric lighting plant, dark rooms and all necessary studio equipment. The Metro Pictures Corporation will make use of it in the filming of two stories, one to be a Jack London subject, and the vessel will be taken far out to sea in the hope that a real storm may be encountered.

Associated Exhibitors Plans Arousing Wide-Spread Interest; Organization Progressing

INDICATIONS that the co-operative plan of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., is arousing widespread interest among exhibitors is found in the fact that showmen big and small throughout the United States are expressing a desire for information as to how they can participate. Pending the formal announcement of the association, which will be made shortly, these requests are receiving the utmost care and attention on the part of executives of and franchise holders in Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

Chief among these hundreds inquiries are those from owners of smaller theatres, who are particularly interested in the sub-franchise part of the Associated Exhibitors' plan, under which every exhibitor is assured equitable and sound treatment and co-operation from every angle conceivable.

The number of messages received is the best possible proof that smaller exhibitors are eager to follow the lead of the owners of more than 250 first-run theatre men who already are affiliated in the Associated Exhibitors. The general trend of the intelligence is to the effect that virtually 100 per cent. of the showmen are interested keenly in any proposition that promises equitable profit and protection.

Keeping Watch on Organization.

However, exhibitors are not the only factors of the industry that have shown interest in Associated Exhibitors, Inc., stars, directors, producers and state rights men also are keeping in close touch with those most intimately concerned with the affairs of the organization.

During the past week or so many pictures have been submitted for the consideration of Associated Exhibitors, Inc. The organization is sticking by its announced policy of securing only the highest quality of motion picture entertainment, and it is said they intend to adhere to that rule no mater how many or how few pictures are chosen.

Meanwhile the organization is progressing rapidly and carefully. While it is generally known that Messmore Kendall, president of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., Edward Bowes, first vice-president, and other important executives have under consideration many big arrangements, it is said that none of the deals have as yet passed the formative stage. It is expected, however, that news of several big connections will be forthcoming in a very short time.

Howard-Wells Executives to Share in Company's Profits

HEADS of executive operating departments of the Howard-Wells Amusement Company, of Wilmington, N. C., will share in the profits of the coming years' operation of the Wilmington theatres owned by the company through a sliding scale of bonuses ranging from $150 to $1,000 each, according to the net earnings of the company, according to the announcement of Percy W. Wells, president and executive manager of that company.

March 1 marked the beginning of a new fiscal year for the Howard and Wells theatres and the best financial showing ever made by the company was shown by the annual report of its officers to the stockholders at their annual meeting last week, and as a result Mr. Wells has evolved a scale of sliding bonuses, based on the prospective net earnings of the company for the ensuing twelve months, which will be paid in cash dividends to the department heads on March 1, 1921.

This is believed to be a pioneer step in the operation of large theatrical enterprises, and one of the first instances of the application of the profit-sharing idea which has been so largely successful in other industries to the theatre business. It is conceded that the theatre business, above any other line of endeavor, offers great possibilities for individual effort and achievement.

Industry to Be Represented at Dinner to Secretary Hugo

THERE will be a good sized representation from the motion picture interests at a dinner to be given on March 18, at the Hotel Commodore, to Francis M. Hugo, Secretary of State of New York. Plans are being made to accommodate 2,500 diners.

Francis M. Hugo

One of the big features of the affair will be a motion picture showing Mr. Hugo first as a steamboat purser at the Thousand Islands, then as a law student at Cornell, later on as mayor of Watertown, N. Y., and last as Secretary of State and head of two of the largest bureaus of their kind in the entire world, the motor vehicle and the corporation.

Mr. Hugo has always been an advocate of the motion picture as a means of better informing the taxpayers of the state as to the activities of his office, and also in driving home the message of "Safety First" regarding the dangers of the streets and highways from a careless disregard of the automobile.

"The Cinema Murder" Breaks Records Whever It Is Shown

UNUSUALLY big business is reported by exhibitors from all parts of the country on the Cosmopolitan productions, "The Cinema Murder," starring Marion Davies. In New York City alone, as an example of the big demand by exhibitors for the picture six prints have been working constantly since the picture was first released several weeks ago. The greater city is considered a five-print city, but a sixth print was required to satisfy the demand for the picture and since its release not a day has been lost. The following are expressions of opinion from a few exhibitors chosen at random:

Manager Dooley, Regent Theatre, Patterson, N. J.: "'The Cinema Murder' broke my house records. It proved a tremendous money-maker, and I ascribe its success to the fact that it had an unusual exploitation campaign expertly handled."

Sam Marcovici, Williamsburg Theatre, Brooklyn, N. Y.: "I've got to hand it to 'The Cinema Murder.' A beautiful star, a great story, and a remarkable exploitation campaign put it over. My house was jammed all the time during its engagement."

A. E. Hamilton, Hamilton Theatre, Yonkers, N. Y.: "The proof of the picture is the box office. 'The Cinema Murder' smashed all my box office records,, and that's enough for me. What did it? The star, the story, and the exploitation."

Vitagraph to Star Separately Earl Montgomery and Joe Rock

RESPONDING to the request of many exhibitors for more Montgomery and Rock comedies, A. E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, announces that he has decided to double the output of this popular team by dividing it and featuring each player at the head of his own producing company.

Accordingly, Earl Montgomery and Joe Rock this week signed individual contracts with W. S. Smith, general manager of Vitagraph's Hollywood studios, at the expiration of their contract as a team, and will begin immediately separate productions. Each will be provided with a complete organization with the aim of supplying Vitagraph with a new two-reel comedy every three weeks.

By the division both Montgomery and Rock attain an ambition to play alone that resulted from the increasing following they have gained with each year of the five they have played together in Vitagraph comedies. The success of their comedies has been so great that Vitagraph has been assured by exhibitors and its exchanges that the popularity of the pair would serve to attract an equally wide market with each as a separate star.

Their productions will be in two reels, and will follow the promised plan of Vitagraph to make all comedies logical and connected. The method is to create laughs by natural or exaggerated situations, rather than by improbabilities. Each comedy must also carry a reasonable plot to a normal conclusion.

"Slam-Bang Jim" Features Bill Russell in Duel Role

SLAM-BANG JIM," the latest American Special, adapted from "Snap Judgment," is a swiftly moving comedy drama, featuring William Russell in a duel role. As a happy-go-lucky city chap and an Arizona "bad man" who wasn't half bad, after all, Russell manages to hold the spectators in sympathy with both characters. His fighting ability comes into action in almost every act.

Francelia Billington and Adda Gleason, both take turns at playing leading woman, and get all mixed up as to the identity of their true loves. Harvey Clark takes the next most important role. A cute little kiddie by the name of Ruth Everdale, makes her way into the hearts of the spectators in two or three reels. Charles Newton, Perry Banks, Clarence Burton, Ashton Dearhold complete the cast. Edward Sloman directed.

Anti-Trust Suit Against Eastman Firm Complicated by Supreme Court Decision

STATUS of the anti-trust suit against the Eastman Kodak Company is complicated, to say the least, in view of the decision of the United States Supreme Court that the United States Steel Corporation is not a combination in restraint of trade. Advices from Washington state that government officials in charge of the trust-busting campaign, which was recently resumed after a wartime lapse, are sorely puzzled and just about stumped. It is not believed that the government will take any further steps to dissolve the Eastman Kodak Company, and even if such an action is prosecuted it is not believed that the action will be sustained.

The expressed belief of some of the leading corporation lawyers is that the decision of the supreme court in the steel corporation case virtually nullifies the Sherman anti-trust laws, under which two big dissolution decrees have already been ordered. This view is known to be shared by attorneys connected with the department of justice and was expressed by the justices dissenting from the decision. The latter held that the decision was contrary to the anti-trust law, it seems. It can now be taken that by the majority decision, and bearing out the opinion of the minority, that the anti-trust laws are annulled.

Never Advertised Its Big War Work.

Several years ago when the Government began its trust-busting crusade the Eastman Kodak Company was singled out for an attack. It was alleged that the Eastman company was an unlawful combination in restraint of trade and that it unfairly monopolized practically the entire photographic field. At the time, when this country entered the war, at the suggestion of the Government, a halt was called on the trust-busting suits. The Government reserved the right to resume the suits at a later date, if it so desired.

It is a well-known fact among those in a position to be informed that the Eastman Kodak Company voluntarily carried out a policy of war work at an expense which so far has never been made public. The company used, apparently to the fullest advantage, its resources and bigness to help win the war. The company originated and housed the United States School of Aerial Photography, at which about 600 students were maintained at the same time for courses averaging a few months. Various devices for war photography were invented and full use given the Government, among these being an aeroplane camera which shot pictures automatically on strips like motion pictures.

Being called a trust did not prevent the Eastman company from doing its bit, nor did the Government have any scruples about accepting the invaluable assistance of the so-called trust. Many who know of these things say that if the Sherman anti-trust laws held good the company would be in the position of being punished, legally dissolved, for being big and prosperous, in spite of the fact that this same bigness and prosperity made it useful during the war.

Newgass and Schlesinger Return.

George W. Newgass, vice-president, and Gus Schlesinger, manager of the department of foreign film sales of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, returned Tuesday, March 9, from a five-day rest at Atlantic City. Both executives when seen at their offices an hour after their return were already surrounded with a deluge of work.

Trade Showing on "Trailed by Three."

A trade showing of "Trailed by Three," Beck serial production co-starring Stuart Holmes and Frankie Mann, and "The Stimulating Mrs. Barton," the second Mrs. Sidnew Drew comedy, will be held at Wurlitzer Hall, 120 West Forty-first street, on Tuesday, March 16, at 2 P. M., under the auspices of Pathe's New York exchange.

Releasing Plan for "Down on the Farm" Pleases Sennett; Big Bookings Recorded

IMMEDIATELY after Hiram Abrams, of the United Artists, had completed the arrangements for the distribution of Mack Sennett's latest five-reel comedy sensation, "Down on the Farm," which will be the fifth "Big Four" production to be marketed, the release to be during the latter part of April, Mr. Sennett wired his appreciation of the arrangements that had been completed for him by his personal representative, E. M. Asher, as follows: "I feel confident the exhibitors will agree with us that this is a great combination; United Artists, Hiram Abrams, and Down on the Farm. Best wishes."

A very significant degree of enthusiasm over the release of this production was displayed everywhere throughout the country by the exhibitors, who began to negotiate with the sales managers of each of the United Artists branch offices, for the first and second runs of the picture. Because of its early release date, it being given a precedented release to "Romance" in which Doris Keane is starred, exhibitors actually rushed their requests for the first run of the Sennett production. From the day of the signing of the contract with Mr. Sennett, and the close of business for the week four days later, there were reported to the home office of United Artists in New York more contracts than had ever been secured by the "Big Four" on any prior productions in triple that time.

Unlike many of Mr. Sennett's former productions, "Down on the Farm" is not a vehicle for the exploitation of any particular player's single gifts, but it is an "ensemble" production in which the great equipment of the entire Mack Sennett studios and farm was engaged in its entirety.

Principal among the participants in the center of the plot's speedy action are Louise Fazenda, who plays the role of a farmer's daughter and is first shown at her early morning duties "down on the farm," shortly after the rooster of the ranch has manfully succeeded in getting the lazy sun over the tops of the high hills; Marie Prevost, one of the prettiest and most gifted of screen comediennes; Ben Turpin, the screamingly funny cross-eyed fun maker; James Finlayson, "legitimate" and screen player of international celebrity; Bert Roach, also an actor with fame from the "speaking stage" and still wider popularity as a screen expert in acting; Harry Briggon, in the part of a farm hand of romantic tendencies; Billy Armstrong, whose success on the screen of American picture comedy has duplicated his triumphs as a comedy performer on the British stage; and last, but by no means least, John Henry, Jr., the Sennett child-star whose appeal is as strong as the tiny fellow's presence is diminutive.

Selznick Casting Department Moves.

The casting department of Selznick Pictures, which has for many months been located in the Selznick Fort Lee studios, has been moved to 130 West Forty-sixth street, Manhattan, in the same building with Select Exchange, it was announced this week by Lewis J. Selznick. This was done, it is made known, in order that in the future work of casting will be speeded up. The new location is in the center of the theatrical district of Broadway.

Fairbanks Making Progress in Filming "Mollycoddle" Next "Big Four" Picture

BIG strides have been made in the filming of "Mollycoddle," the next Douglas Fairbanks offering to be released by United Artists Corporation, according to word received by Hiram Abrams, from Holbrook, Ariz., the nearest city to that portion of the "Painted Desert," where Fairbanks and a company of 100 players have been active for the past ten days.

An entire episode of the picture has been completed and the company is preparing to return to the studios at Los Angeles, where work will be started on some of the more important interiors.

The star and the other members of the organization who made up the small army that invaded the wilds of Arizona are most enthusiastic over the success of their location work, but will not disclose the slightest information as to the character of their activities, as it is the desire of the athletic leader to hold everything back until the production is released, due to numerous novelties new to the screen.

Meets With Accident.

It is rumored, however, that Fairbanks performed some stunts that caused even the seasoned rangers, who made up the party, to feel like novices in the saddle. It is evident that there is much truth in this report as the star was painfully injured and forced to return to Los Angeles for medical treatment. It has since been learned that his hurts are not of a serious nature and not of a character requiring him to stop activities.

Fairbanks is aiming to eclipse his last United Artists picture, "When the Clouds Roll By," a production which has been declared to be his best. "Mollycoddles" is an original story by the star and the screen adaptation is by Tom Geraghty.

Victor Fleming is again handling the direction and the camera work is in charge of William McGann and Harry Thorpe, the two who were responsible for the photography in "When the Clouds Roll By." Ted Reed is assisting Director Fleming. Frank Campeau, who has long been identified with Fairbanks and has always given an exceptional portrayal with his particular style of villainy, is given a chance at something new in "Mollycoddle."

Early reports on the work of Ruth Renick, the new leading woman of the organization, indicates that no mistake was made in putting her under contract. She is an excellent horsewoman.

Another Herbert Kaufman Editorial.

It was announced this week by Lewis J. Selznick that another Herbert J. Kaufman Weekly, filmed from the writer's editorial subjects which have had wide circulation in daily papers of the country, has been finished at the Fort Lee studios. It bears the title of "The Society Badman," and is described as an interesting version of Mr. Kaufman's message to his readers in various newspapers and magazines throughout the United States and many other countries.

Christies Will Make Feature Comedy from Morosco Farce, "So Long Letty"

THE Christies—Al and Charles—have perfected arrangements to increase their output of comedies for the screen. While they will always stick to the short subjects that have won for their name and product an excellent reputation with both the public and picture-showmen, they are now preparing to make full-length comedies in addition to the one and two-reel merry-makers with which they have been for years identified.

Charles Christie has been in New York for several weeks arranging the business details of the new undertakings. His attention has been given not alone to the plans for continued distribution through independent service, but he has been investigating a number of musical comedies with a view to presenting them in screen form.

Buys $40,000 Comedy.

His first purchase involved a $40,000 investment in the screen rights to "So Long Letty," the Oliver Morosco comedy that traveled country-wide through many successful seasons. This piece has always been considered by Al Christie, who manages the production end of the Christie interests, as a likely candidate for screen presentations.

It was founded on a farce, "Your Neighbor's Wife," well known to Al Christie in its original presentations and in bringing "So Long Letty" to the Screen the Christies will restore much of the original material that was eliminated from "Your Neighbor's Wife" to make the adaptation fit the peculiar requirements of the stage people presenting "So Long Letty."

Parts that in the original farce were eliminated to "play up" other roles will be given their rightful place in the screen version; and character that were subordinated will be restored to full value. "So Long Letty" will be made in five or six reels, under Al Christie's direction during the spring and summer.

Ready for Next Season.

Plenty of time will be allowed to make the production complete in all details. It will not be released until the start of next season. It is the purpose of the Christies to make it a feature comedy in the best acceptance of the term.

Pretty girls will be featured—and there will be a lot of 'em. The scenic equipment and costuming will blend in attractive harmony and it is proposed to have "So Long Letty" about as fine a showing of brilliancy and attractiveness as care and money can combine in producing.

There will be three of these feature comedies turned into photoplays each year; thus will time be given to pay proper attention to the production details. These comedies will be produced without interfering in any way with the progress of Christie one-reelers each week and the two-reelers once a month.

Christies Are Consistent.

In conversation with Charles Christie the World man was impressed with the evident determination of the Christies to protect an excellent business reputation. "Exhibitors have often written to us," said Mr. Christie," commending the consistency of our production.

"We have always tried to make comedies that were consistently good, never circulating a picture that did not come up to the ideas of my brother and I as to what a good comedy should be. We intend to make 'So Long Letty' and all the comedies that are to follow it 'stand up' in comparison with our standard of consistency."

Fox Salesmen Start Drive.

Louis Rosenbluh, the executive of the William Fox New York exchange, has started his army of salesmen on a four weeks' drive over every foot of territory from the Connecticut River to the Delaware River, and from the ocean front between these rivers to the New York State border.

It is his purpose to put a Fox program into every theatre that can be booked, and to increase the William Fox output by a large margin in the territory he manages.

Republic Offers Exhibitors Complete Program from News Reels to Serials

THE exhibitor can book from Republic Distributing Corporation, of which Lewis J. Selznick is advisory director, a complete program from overture to exit march, an announcement this week points out, following the addition to Republic distributing activities of "The Whirlwind," a serial in which Charles Hutchison is starred.

There is no type of film used in the make-up of a modern motion picture presentation that Republic does not offer, according to the statement. The bookings now available include Prizma Natural Color scenics, with which the program may be started. This can be followed by Kinograms, the news reel issued twice a week and which is declared to contain first runs of the most interesting events in all parts of the globe. An instance of the completeness of this reel is cited in the claim last week of a prominent producer that his news reel had just secured a scoop of Nicolai Lenine, head of Soviet Republic. Investigation showed that Kinograms pictured Lenine, in the midst of his Russian activities, in its Issue No. 1, released on February 1, 1919, just one year and two weeks prior to the alleged "scoop" of the other producer. In addition, Kinograms No. 1 also pictured Trotzky, about whom as much of interest has been read as about Lenine.

Features and Short Subjects.

In the matter of feature productions, it has been shown that Republic has made great strides, both in the matter of pictures with stars and subjects in which the casts are of the so-called all-star type.

Short subjects, in addition to the Prizma color pictures and the Kinograms news reel, play a very important part in the make-up of Republic programs. Among the best liked, suitable to follow the main feature of the program or to take the place of the feature, are the eight William J. Flynn subjects of two reels each. The Capitol Theatre on Broadway in New York is presenting the full series, one each week, at the present time.

Comedy, in the Republic line-up, has its day. The Chaplin series of twelve subjects, including "Easy Street," is said to be rolling merrily along and gaining new friends with each showing.

The Judge Brown series of "kid" pictures are also reported as being much in favor. "The Whirlwind," the serial announced, is expected to be named for release shortly, with the understanding that it is to be followed by other serials of proven value.

COINCIDENT with Tod Browning's arrival in New York with the film of the Priscilla Dean feature, "The Virgin of Stamboul," which he directed, under his arm, Universal announced the purchase of another story for this director. "Out of a Clear Sky," a short story by J. V. Giery, which appeared in the March number of "Telling Tales," will offer the plot for Browning's next production. It is not yet known if Priscilla Dean will take the stellar role or if it will be used as a vehicle for some other Universal star.

Universal City is teeming with activity. Philip Rosen has begun work on a new feature, "Virginia," a story of the New York underworld by Ida M. Evans. This is not a crook drama, but the story of a girl who rises above her environment. The cast includes Anne Cornwall, Claire Anderson, Ed Coxen and J. Farrel McDonald.

William Craft Is Engaged.

A new director has been engaged for Eileen Sedgwick and Tom Moore for their forthcoming western comedy-drama, "Who." William Craft will direct this picture, the plot of which is taken from the mystery story of the same name by Clarence Powers.

J. P. McGowan is directing the fifteenth episode of "Elmo the Fearless," the Universal serial featuring Elmo Lincoln, which is entitled "The Burning Fuse." In Lincoln's support are such popular players as Louise Lorraine, Monte Montague, Willie Chapman, Roy Watson, Gordon McGregor and George Williams.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran have finished their first Universal comedy feature, "Everything But the Truth," and are now busily engaged in the cutting and editing of the film. The comedy, which will be released in five reels, is an adaptation by Phil Hurn, of the magazine story by Edgar Franklin.

Ford and Franklin Now Cutting.

Jack Ford and Harry Franklin, Universal directors, are also in the cutting rooms. Mr. Ford's feature is "The Girl in Number Twenty-nine," starring Frank Mayo, while Franklin's pictures is "The Daring Duchess," with Edith Roberts in the stellar role.

Eddie Polo has reached the eleventh episide of his thrilling serial, "The Vanishing Dagger," under his own supervision, assisted by Edward Kull. Thelma Percy, Peggy O'Dare, Ruth Royce and Ray Ripley are among Polo's supporting players.

Work on the eighth episode of the Art Acord serial, "The Moon Riders," will soon be resumed under the direction of Albert Russell, who recently finished "The Lion Man." Acord is now fully recovered from his injuries and ready to tempt fate once more.

Production will begin within a few days on "Togs," a comedy by Edith Roberts.

Grauman Presents Watch to Bosworth.

In recognition and appreciation of Hobart Bosworth's masterful performance in the Thomas H. Ince special production, "Behind the Door," Sid Grauman, a prominent Los Angeles exhibitor, presented Mr. Bosworth with a gold watch, new keystone design, on the back of which is engraved: "A token of appreciation to Hobart Bosworth from Sid Grauman."

George W. Lyon, who formerly represented Fox in Baltimore, has now joined the selling forces of Vitagraph to cover that territory.

"Oh Figs! Oh Dates! (Dromedary Preferred). Oh Sultanas! Oh Fatimas!" (No Adv.)

Inter-Ocean Disposes of District Rights to 60 World Pictures to Max Glucksmann

WHAT is described as one of the largest individual contracts ever made for the distribution of motion pictures in a foreign territory, was closed last week, when Jacob Glucksmann, American representative of the film of Max Glucksmann, one of the largest independent distributors of motion pictures in South America, attached his signature to an agreement whereby he acquired the rights to sixty World Pictures for physical distribution throughout Argentine, Paraguay and Uruguay.

The transaction, which is said to involve a sum of money running well into five figures, is the culmination of a series of business conferences between Gus Schlesinger, manager of the department of foreign film sales of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, and Jacobo Glucksmann.

By the terms of the contract Mr. Glucksmann takes over such successes as "The Scar," "The Crook of Dreams," "The Rough Neck," "The Golden Wall," "The Witch Woman," "The Corner Grocer," "The Man Who Forgot," "The Madness of Helen," "The Black Circle," "A Broadway Saint," "Dust of Desire," and other productions of equal calibre. Such well-known film favorites as Robert Warwick, Alice Brady, Mollie King, Clara Kimball Young, Ethel Clayton, June Elvidge, Gail Kane, Madge Evans, Kitty Gordon, Carlyle Blackwell, Louise Huff, Montague Love, Betty Compson, Ruby de Remer, Creighton Hale and others equally prominent are featured in the sixty releases.

Mr. Glucksmann's personal statement, which appended the announcement from Inter-Ocean, is as follows:

"The sixty World Film productions which I purchased for distribution in Argentine, Uruguay and Paraguay will be released to exhibitors throughout that territory on a weekly basis.

"I was influenced in negotiating for these productions by the tremendous success which World Pictures have experienced among exhibitors throughout Latin-America. The demand for these productions has been so great, and spirited competition among exhibitors for first-run presentation so keen that I can count myself lucky indeed to have acquired the sixty World releases.

"While the price paid for these productions represented a large cash consideration, I am glad to say that I am fully assured that the remuneration is a foregone conclusion in view of the tremendous popularity of World Pictures in South America."

"The Imp," Selznick Picture, Marks Up Sixteen Week-Runs

THAT week runs for Selznick pictures are becoming a regular thing throughout the country among the exhibitors who have been convinced of the value of longer runs is evidenced this week in the announcement by Sam E. Morris, general manager of Selznick Pictures, of which Lewis J. Selznick is president, in connection with some of the bookings on "The Imp."

This production, which stars Elsie Janis and which is this favorite actress' second production for Selznick, celebrated the first week of March by marking up sixteen week-runs at various theatres. This number, added to the bookings which had been received prior to March, brings the total to a healthy figure, and Sales Manager Charles R. Rogers declares "we will have a great many more to report from time to time, in addition to the hundreds of theatres which have booked 'The Imp' for two and three-day showings."

All the Loew theatres in the Boston district have booked "The Imp" for the week runs. In other parts of the country are the following: Merrill Theatre, Milwaukee; Strand Theatre, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Palace, Cincinnati; Colonial, Detroit; Strand, Flint, Mich; Family, Jackson, Mich.; Symphony, Los Angeles; Newark Theatre, Newark; Lyric, Reading, Pa.; Capitol, Philadelphia; Lyric, Springfield. Ill.; Garden, Baltimore; Liberty, Wheeling, W. Va.; Strand, Troy, N. Y.; Top, Syracuse, N. Y.

"Sherry" Completed by Lewis; Soon Ready for Pathe Release

AFTER four months of careful work in his Los Angeles studio Edgar Lewis has completed his latest production, "Sherry," and at the first showing of the new picture held in the Pathe executive offices it was the unanimous opinion that it will win recognition as one of the strongest and most intensely human pictures of the year. It is treated with all the deep simplicity of the director and relies for its great power on the appeal to the hearstrings of the audience.

The production, in point of construction, is excellent in every way. Some beautiful effects have been achieved in photography and the constructed sets are beautiful. Many of the scenes are exteriors and fine locations were selected. There is plenty of action throughout but the dominant thought behind the picture is never obscured by the many adventures of the hero.

Pathe Has Advanced Trailer Made for "Trailed by Three"

AMONG other features prepared for the exhibitor in advertising Pathe's next serial release, "Trailed by Three," a fifteen-episode Beck production co-starring Stuart Holmes and Frankie Mann, is an advance trailer made up of scenes from the play.

The scenes were selected with especial care and the advance reel is said to furnish an attractive and interesting preface to the serial. The views are connected with subtitles which serve the double purpose of explaining the action and rounding out a coherent outline of the type of story and style of production.

As the action in this adventure tale by Charles T. Dazey shifts to various parts of the globe, the subject offered specially good material for the making of an advance trailer and advantage was taken of the variety of scene by Pathe's film editors in preparing the reel. In addition to showing the different countries in which the play develops, there are some glimpses of the sort of thrills which the public may expect when "Trailed by Three" gets under way in earnest.

Pathe officials state that exhibitors who have used advance trailers are so thoroughly convinced of the superiority of this form of advance announcement over the slide that particular attention is being paid by the Pathe departments in improving on the form and quality of the trailer reels.

Prize Story for Corinne Griffith.

Vitagraph has just purchased as a film vehicle for Corinne Griffith the story by Forrest Crissey entitled, "Gumshoes 4-8," which was among the thirty stories which won prizes in the recent O. Henry Memorial Contest. The contest was conducted by the Society of Arts and Sciences. One thousand dollars was awarded among the winners.

The purpose of the contest was to develop stories in the style of the famous O. Henry.

Selznick Branch Managers Will Meet with Home Office Executives April 5

THE second annual convention and six-day conference of home office and branch executives of the Select Pictures Corporation will begin at the Hotel Astor, New York City, on April 5, according to an announcement made this week by Vice-President and General Manager Sam E. Morris.

Although at the present time only tentative plans have been made, it is declared tha tthe forthcoming conference will exceed in importance the last year's convention, and it is said that the attendance will be much larger. Branch managers of Select in the more distant points will leave in time to arrive in New York the day before the convention opens.

It is understood that the new plans of the Select organization and a resume of its last year's activities will be among the important subjects discussed. Great stress will be laid on the fact that the Select organization has not only grown considerably within the last year, but that the coming year will see an even greater expansion. Reports from the various exchange managers will be heard and the home office executives will address the branch managers on subjects relative to their respective departments.

Visitors to See Selznick Studio.

Following the arrangements carried into effect last year, the first meeting will be of an informal nature and will be held on Monday morning at the home office. The first business session will be held on Monday afternoon in the convention headquarters at the Hotel Astor, following an informal lunch a which the convention delegates will be the guests of Lewis J. Selznick. The balance of the week will be devoted to formal business sessions.

Plans for the evening entertainment of the visiting managers have not been divulged, but it is reported that Mr. Selznick will put into effect a program similar to the one carried out last year. In addition to this, there will be trips to the studios where the visiting managers will be shown productions in the making. Several theatre parties and after-theatre suppers will probably be held.

One of the innovations of this year's convention will be the daily publication of a convention edition of the Selznick house organ, "The Brain Exchange." This will be published in the form of a morning newspaper and will be delivered to the rooms of the delegates at an early hour. Copies of this daily edition will be mailed to the branch offices on the date of issue.

Mark Larkin in Charge of Mayflower Publicity in East

NEW YORK'S colony of publicity men is to be increased by the presence of Mark Larkin, formerly Mary Pickford's press representative, according to an announcement from Mayflower Photoplay Corporation.

Larkin, who came to the "big village" recently from Los Angeles with Allan Dwan, was induced to stay by Isaac Wolper, head of the Mayflower company, the idea being to organize an extensive publicity and advertising department for Mayflower. Since leaving Miss Pickford, Larkin has been in charge of publicity for Mayflower on the coast, but owing to the fact that Mr. Wolper intends to make a wide publicity and exploitation campaign in connection with productions being presented under the Mayflower banner, he deemed it advisable to establish headquarters for the publicity department in New York.

Big announcements regarding the activities of Mayflower may be expected from Mr. Wolper very soon, according to Larkin.

Work is going forward rapidly on all productions which Mayflower will present, both in the East and on the Coast. R. A. Walsh, working at the Paragon studio, is filming "The Deep Purple," which will be released by Realart. Emile Chautard is also busy at Paragon, cutting and titling a picture dealing with life after death. Charles Miller is engaged on the final scenes for a picture based on Robert W. Service's poem, "The Spell of the Yukon." This film will be released by Realart also. Sidney A. Franklin is at Lake Tahoe, Cal., making the screen version of Robert W. Chamber's "Athalie," and Allan Dwan is cutting and titling three productions—"A Splendid Hazard," "The Scoffer" and "In the Hear of a Fool."

Talmadges Return from Cuba; Will Begin New Productions

THE Talmadge sisters, Norma, Constance and Natalie, have returned with their mother Mrs. Fred Talmadge, from Palm Beach, Fla., where they have been spending a five weeks' vacation. Constance Talmadge devoted one week to making exteriors for her fifth First National, "The Love Expert," and many scenes from the beach were shot from an aeroplane, showing the World of Fashion at play on the sand and in the water. John Emerson and Anita Loos, authors of "The Love Expert," Director David Kirkland, his assistant, Carl LeViness, and John Halliday, who plays Miss Talmadge's lead, came back a week prior to the Misses Talmadge return.

Constance Talmadge will start work on March 15, on the sixth of her First National Productions, an original story by John Emerson and Anita Loos, to be directed by David Kirkland. Casting for this picture will start immediately.

Norma Talmadge has already returned to the studio and started work on "Yes or No," the third of her First National pictures, which is to follow "The Woman Gives." "Yes or No" is an adaptation by Mary Murrillo of Arthur Goodrich's popular Broadway success, which had a long run at the Longacre Theatre. "Yes or No" is being directed by Roy Neil. Miss Talmadge will have the opportunity of playing two roles, appearing as Margaret Vane and also Minnie Berry. She will be supported by Lowell Sherman now appearing in "The Sign on the Door" at the Republic Theatre, and John Halliday, who has just completed "The Love Expert" with Constance Talmadge. Natalie Talmadge will have an important role as Emma Berry. Frederick Burton as Donald Vane will also have a good part.

Selznick's "Youthful Folly" to Be Released on March 8

YOUTHFUL FOLLY," the Selznick production, scheduled for release through Select on March 8, in which Lewis J. Selznick presents Olive Thomas as star, has a cast of eight prominent players in addition to the stellar role, it was announced this week.

As a matter of record for exhibitors, who use the casts in advertising and billing, Selznick announced the players as follows: Craufurd Kent as David Montgomery, opposite Miss Thomas, who is Nancy Sherwood; Helen Gill as Lola Ainsley, Hugh Huntley as Jimsy Blake, Charles Craig as the Rev. Bluebottle, Harry Truesdale as Jonathan Ainsley, Florida Kingsley as Aunt Martha, Eugenia Woodward as Aunt Jenny and Pauline Dempsey as Mammy. Alan Crosland is the director and Miss Thomas is the author.

Derham Visits Friends in New York City.

J. A. Derham, secretary and treasurer of the Famous Players-Lasky Service, Ltd., with offices in Toronto, was in New York City during the last week. During the visit he called upon Morris Kohn, president, and D. L. Faralla, controller of Realart Pictures Corporation, old friends and business associates when he was connected with the Select organization.

Faire Binney in "Blue Pearl" Cast.

Faire Binney, little beauty of stage and screen, now appearing in "He and She" on Broadway in New York, is in the cast of "The Blue Pearl," which is being distributed by Republic Distributing Corporation. Edith Hallor is the star. Other well known players in this production are Florence Billings, Lumsden Hare and H. Cooper Cliffe.

"Mother Suffers" Is Third Mildred Harris First National

IN her third First National release, "The Mother Suffers," founded on a recently discovered manuscript by Don Manuel Orozco y Berra, Mildred Harris Chaplin's work will absolutely convince American movie fans that she ranks high as an emotional actress. In this story Mildred plays the role of a mother whose only tie to her husband is a supposedly dying child.

Although the story was written many years ago in a Mexican prison and has remained in the meantime in a dusty archive, its power of appeal has not waned and the world for the first time will be given an opportunity to see it enacted on the screen.

The author, who was just as famous as a poet, historian and scientist as he was a novelist, died before his manuscript was published. It was but recently discovered in Mexico City by a relative who was sorting out the dusty manuscripts.

While a splendid cast surrounds Mrs. Chaplin, her work towers above all, and both Louis B. Mayer and Bennie Zeidman, vice-president and production manager of the Chaplin-Mayer Pictures Company, predict that it will prove the greatest vehicle in which Mrs. Chaplin has yet appeared.

Zena Keefe to Work at Bronx Studios.

It became known this week that Zena Keefe, Selznick's 1920 star, will do a considerable part of her year's motion picture work at the Bronx studios.

Miss Keefe, following her return from the North, where she had been with the Selznick company getting exteriors for "The Law Bringers," was a visitor at the Bronx studios, making preparations for her future activities there. Interiors of "The Law Bringers," a Ralph Ince production of the great Northwest, have been shot at the Selznick studios in Fort Lee, N. J. It is understood that the title of this latest Ince-Selznick production will be changed before it is distributed to the exhibitors.

Ontario Exhibitors Discuss Reel Tax, Compensation and Apprenticeship Law

MATTERS of current importance were discussed and considered at the regular March meeting of the Moving Picture Exhibitors Protective Association of Ontario on Tuesday, March 2. The meeting was the first to be held in the new club quarters of the association at 34 Richmond street, East Toronto, and the assembly room was filled to capacity with local and out-of-town members.

In view of the lack of announcements on the part of the Canadian Government regarding the proposal to abolish the fifteen cents per reel per day tax, it was decided to send a deputation to Ottawa during the present session of the House of Commons in order to put in a final word in behalf of the exhibitors. It was also decided, on the motion of F. Guest, of Hamilton, Ontario, to send a circular letter to every exhibitor in Ontario requesting a personal appeal to each of the members of the Canadian Parliament for support in the abolishment of the reel tax. Data on the taxation which is imposed upon the moving picture theatres is also to be supplied to each member of Parliament.

A letter from the Workmen's Compensation Board of Ontario aroused considerable discussion. This communication contained official advice that employes of theatres had been placed under the jurisdiction of the Compensation Act, in which case the theatre owners or managers would be liable for contributions in case of accident to one of the staff. It was decided to place the matter in the hands of a lawyer to ascertain if the Ontario Government had power to place the theatres in the same category as factories in order to make theatre interests liable for stated damages under the Act.

The question arose as to the advisability of permitting the Moving Picture Operators' Union to require a man to serve as an apprentice in the booth for five years before becoming qualified to have charge of projection. It is understood that this step was taken by the operators because of the number of qualified men available. This matter will be discussed fully at the next regular meeting in April when the union representatives will be asked to present their side of the case.

"Lifting Shadows" Is Story of Russia Minus Bolshevism

FULL of dramatic situations and excitement, the new Leonce Perret production, "Lifting Shadows," is said by Pathe to be one of the most absorbing melodramas screened this year. It is a story of Russia and the United States, rich in action, but entirely away from the theme of Bolshevism or other isms which have been made the keystones of many recent productions.

All thought of propaganda was kept out of the production, because Mr. Perret believes in providing the public with exactly what it pays for, entertainment. Emmy Wehlen as the star is seen in an emotional role which gives her an opportunity she utilizes to the utmost.

Miss Wehlen appears as a young Russian girl who becomes a resident of the United States, just before the great war. She marries and becomes thoroughly Americanized. Soon after the war her husband is killed and it is made clear to her that a band of Russian revolutionists are after some important documents left her several years before by her father. These she protects against the onslaught of the band.

The supporting cast is strong. Stuart Holmes, who carried off the honors as the villain of the screen, is seen in his favorite role. Wyndham Standing plays the lead. Julia Swayne Gordon has a strong role.

George Loane Tucker Loses Again in Injunction Suit

GEORGE LOANE TUCKER lost another point on March 9 in his injunction suit against Mayflower Photoplay Corporation and the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Tucker applied for an injunction pendente lite to restrain the defendants from advertising "The Miracle Man," except in accordance with certain clauses in Tucker's contract with Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, that the latter be restrained from cutting and assembling Tucker's second picture, entitled "Ladies Must Live," and be restrained from saying that Tucker was still in its employ, and for other relief.

In the answer of the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation to this suit they counterclaimed for certain injunction relief against Tucker, but they never moved for an injunction pendente lite.

The motion for an injunction pendente lite came on before Justice Warley M. Platzek in the Supreme Court and Mr. Tucker's application was denied.

The plaintiff then endeavored to create the impression in the trade that an application of the Mayflower Company for injunctive relief against Tucker had been made and likewise denied.

The judge's order, of course, did not so state, but the plaintiff tried to have the court re-settle the order as to certain technical points, including a recital that Mayflower's application for an injunction pendente lite (which had never been made) had been denied.

Justice Platzek, in his opinion, said:

"Motion to re-settle the order is granted, except that all references to a supposed cross motion by one of the defendants are eliminated. No such motion was made."

"Where Love Runs Wild" Runs Wild in Republic Bookings

ANOTHER Republic release is nosing toward the lead in booking records, is announced this week from the Republic home offices. This is the production which was made under the direction of F. Morton Thornton and which is called "Romany, Where Love Runs Wild."

The Philadelphia office reports seven bookings for four playing dates in three towns; the New York office three bookings within a short space of time; Ohio three bookings, and the Boston office three. About fifteen of the other Republic branches have reported a similar number of bookings. Several of these bookings call for three day runs.

There has been no let-up on the bookings of the three other releases, "The Amazing Women," "The Blue Pearl" and "12.10," according to the Republic statement. Although these three productions have been booking heavily in every territory it is expected that they will continue to do so for some time. In several instances return engagements have been booked.

IN the news announcements of the week few are more interesting than that by Lewis J. Selznick in which he reports the first release of a National Picture Theatres, Inc., production. Mr. Selznick, president of the National Picture organization, in this announcement adds another page to the history of the film industry.

The release of this organization's first picture, it is said, marks the opening campaign of new methods in the producing and distribution of picture productions. It also marks, it is contended, the formation of a closer bond of relationship between the exhibitor and the producer. As has been said before, the National Picture idea is the final cementing of the various branches of the industry with but one object to achieve, that object being successful showmanship.

The title of the first picture, which was released this week, is "Just A Wife." It is described as a gripping story of how a selfish man uses two women to further his business career. One was his secretary and the other his wife. One offers him inspiration and the other affords him respectability. And for all these gifts he offers nothing but money in return.

"Just A Wife" was produced with an excellent cast, according to the announcement this week, each player having been picked with the view of obtaining a type best suited to the character to be portrayed. Prominent in the cast are Leatrice Joy, Kathleen Williams, Roy Stewart, Albert Van and William Lion West.

Having started the releases, the release of the second production, "Blind Youth," will follow close after the first one. The third production, "The Invisible Divorce," is now in production at the Selznick West Coast studios.

According to Mr. Selznick there will be a sufficient number of releases always available to assure every exhibitor and circuit manager who has taken out a franchise, a program of unusual merit and attraction.

It has been but a few months since the announcement of the National Picture movement and within that time, it is claimed, practically every large circuit and league in the country has endorsed the organization.

Predicts Big Business Boom for Minneapolis Theatres

AFTER a severe winter and a period in which influenza curtailed business to some extent, the Minneapolis territory is due for a great spring and summer season, according to Charles W. Stombaugh, manager of Pathe's Minneapolis exchange. Business is already starting to jump and he expects that March and April will be the two biggest months of the year.

To emphasize his opinion, Mr. Stombaugh stated that he had brought to New York to the executive offices of Pathe Exchange, Inc., a big collection of contracts for spring business with the Reuben & Finklestein interests for the Harold Lloyd $100,000 two-reel comedies. These important exhibitors have taken the comedies for their entire circuit in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth.

The first Lloyd comedy played in St. Paul on March 7 and is booked for Minneapolis on March 14, and every assurance has been given that nothing will be spared in the way of presentation and exploitation. The contracts for the Lloyd pictures have been closed for practically all the important theatres in the territory.

"In January and a part of February we had about 100 towns closed entirely on account of the influenza," Mr. Stombaugh said. "The winter is about over now, people are coming out and the theatres are in for a fine spell of business."

Pathe Gets Congratulations on "Daredevil Jack" Serial

DOCUMENTARY evidence of the success of the Pathe serial "Daredevil Jack," in which Jack Dempsey plays the star role, continues to arrive daily at the home office of the Pathe company from exhibitors in various parts of the country.

Manager Gray, of the Majestic Theatre, Cleveland, sent the following wire to Pathe: "Played Jack Dempsey in 'Daredevil Jack' with greatest box office receipts in history of my house. I think this is wonderful as I have been in the same stand six years. All records were broken including holidays."

W. E. Raynor, manager of Pathe's New York Exchange, announces that the New 14th Street Theatre in New York has increased its booking on the picture from one to two days run, stating that Murray Weiser, manager of the house, doubled the booking after showing the first episode of the serial on Monday February 23, to the largest business in the history of the theatre.

In a letter to the Omaha exchange, Mr. Gailey, manager of the Crystal Theatre in Omaha, writes that the first episode of "Daredevil Jack" went over in such a big way that he is convinced it is going to be the biggest clean-up in serial history.

"His House in Order" Based on Pinero's Drama in Exchanges

SIR ARTHUR WING PINERO'S great drama, translated to the screen by Hugh Ford and presenting Elsie Ferguson in the stellar role, is now available to exhibitors at the Famous Players-Lasky exchanges. "His House in Order" is a feature film and shared the honors of the Paramount-Artcraft schedule for March 7 with Charles Ray's latest Thomas H. Ince production, "Alarm Clock Andy."

The central figure in the story, as scenarioized by Hugh Ford, is Nina Graham, a pleasure-loving English girl. Elsie Ferguson plays the role of Nina. Supporting Miss Ferguson is Holmes E. Herbert, Vernon Steel, Margaret Linden, Marie Burke and a clever youngster named Lawrence Johnson.

Another of those Charlie Ray country boy pictures, directed by Jerome Storm, photographed by Chester Lyons and supervised by Thomas H. Ince, is promised in "Alarm Clock Andy," which was written by Agnes Christine Johnston. Andy is a bashful, stuttering motor truck salesman straight from the "Sticks." Millicent Foster is Ray's leading woman, and support is furnished by George Webb, Tom Cuise, Andrew Robson and others.

Henley Back from Vacation.

Hobart Henley has returned from a much needed rest at Lake Placid, N. Y., and is about to commence work on a big production for Pathe. Forgetting motion pictures and the strain he had been under while working on his latest photoplay, "The Miracle of Money," which Pathe has scheduled for release at an early date, he returned to his "kid days" again and took a keen interest in all the winter sports at the popular resort. As yet Mr. Henley has not announced the title of his next picture or the name of any of his contemplated players.

"Shake!"

Davis Announces Plans to Buy Big Independent Pictures

GEORGE H. DAVIS, head of the Equity Pictures Company, San Francisco, who bought and was in charge of the distribution of "The Confession," the successful National feature which offered Henry Walthall as its star, arrived in New York this week, and announced himself on the market for independent productions.

Mr. Davis was full of the success with which "The Confession" had met. He said that all territory in the United States and Canada had been sold, with the exception of two or three Southern states, and that these would be disposed of within the next few days.

"I would like to buy some big independent production for the western territory or for that matter, for the entire United States while I am in New York," he said. "The great success of productions in the independent field makes me believe that this angle of the industry is the one which is due to develop even more materially than it has during the last year."

Mr. Davis will be the guest of Joe Brandt, eastern representative of the National Film Corporation of America, while in New York.

George V. Hobart Piece for Selznick.

A George V. Hobart comedy is to be produced by the Selznick organization, according to a statement from Myron Selznick. The title of the story is "Stop That Man," and it is one of the most recent works of the well-known playwright and author of magazine and newspaper stories. "Stop That Man" will be used as a vehicle for Owen Moore, who is now working at the Selznick West Coast studios.

Carlton in Cast of "Dangerous Paradise."

William P. Carlton, well-known screen player, has been signed for a part in the next Olive Thomas production, "Dangerous Paradise," according to a statement from Myron Selznick. He will have the role of Richard Channing in this picture, the story of which was written by Frances Marion. Alan Crosland is directing.

Motion Pictures Warn of Eye Trouble But Do Not Cause It, Health Men Find

MOVING pictures do not cause eye trouble. If a person's eyes are troublesome after a visit to the movies, glasses are needed. The movies, though, are not to blame, any more than you can blame the book for eye-strain after reading.

The United States Public Health Service has just completed a study of the effect of motion pictures on the eye. Apparently, there is no effect. Employes in moving picture theatres who spend all day looking at the screen show no higher percentage of eye trouble than any other class of individuals.

A person with normal vision should be able to spend an hour and a half a day at a moving picture theatre without experiencing any distress. If after a visit to the movies the eyes are troublesome, the films should not be blamed but should be thanked for advising the need of glasses.

In the report of its studies of the subject, the Public Health Service completely clears the moving picture of any bad effect upon the eyes. It says, in part:

"It is true, of course, that some people do experience a certain amount of eye strain at a motion picture, but in these cases the trouble appears to be due to an ocular defect rather than to the motion picture. Such persons should therefore have the eyes examined by a competent eye specialist, for it is quite certain that the same person would find even more discomfort in the same period of concentrated reading.

"In this connection it may be pointed out that the employes of motion picture playhouses, who spend a large part of the day looking at the pictures, do not seem to be troubled with their eyes any more than the average individual. This is largely a personal observation since no extensive investigations have been made of the eyes of motion picture theatre employes."

Big Seattle Exhibitor Books Hampton's "The Sagebrusher"

JAMES Q. CLEMMER has booked for immediate presentation at his Clemmer Theatre, Seattle, Benjamin B. Hampton's production, "The Sagebrusher," by Emerson Hough, distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. This picture with a great heart-story has caught on and been received in the market with even greater rapidity than "The Westerners" and "Desert Gold," the previous successful Benjamin B. Hampton production.

In Omaha the Goldberg Brothers have booked "The Sagebrusher" for their Sun, Moon and Muse Theatres; in Sioux Falls, S. D., A. K. Pay has booked it for his Colonial; also the Ceramic, East Liverpool, the Colonial, Fostoria, the Park, Mansfield, O.; the Isis, Boulder, Colo.; the Judith, Lewiston, Mont.; the Majestic, Streator, Ill.; the Liberty, Springfield, O.; the Majestic, Beloit, and the Cosy, Marinette, Wis.; the Globe, McKeesport, Pa.; the Apollo, Dayton, O.; the Queen, San Antonio; the Strand, Portland, Me., and more than two hundred other theatres of rank and standing in their communities.

Crandall Arrives on Coast.

One of the prominent arrivals in Los Angeles this week is Harry Crandall, owner of a string of theatres in Washington, D. C., and vicinity, and treasurer of Associated Exhibitors, Inc. Mr. Crandall is accompanied by Mrs. Crandall and the Crandall children.

Accompanied by Mrs. Crandall and the children, the exhibitor already has visited several studios. They are enjoying keenly their introduction to the world behind the screen, and the intricacies of picture-making are proving a source of constant delight to the youngsters, who already are favorites with many of the players.

Realart Signs Australian Girl for "Law of the Yukon"

CHARLES MILLER will introduce Nancy Deaver, a newcomer to the American screen, in "The Law of the Yukon," the first of a series of pictures he is making for Mayflower Photoplay Corporation.

Miss Deaver is described as a dainty young Australian actress who possesses strong beauty and decided aptitude for screen work, together with a lively and engaging personality that "gets across."

Nancy Deaver
Australian actress who comes to American screen in Mayflower's "The Law of the Yukon" for Realart.

"In my career as a director for the screen," reads a report from Mr. Miller, who is now working at Port Henry, near the Canadian border of New York state, "I have discovered a number of actors and actresses who became popular stars, but never have I been more impressed with anyone's ability than I have with that of Miss Deaver. She has more than come up to what I expected she could do when I engaged her for the part. Her work before the camera since we have been up here has been a constant revelation of true and natural ability and would be a delight to any director who knows how rare and difficult to find such talent is."

Realart, which will release the production, announces that no player is to be featured in the production. Edward Earle will play the part of John Kleath. June Elvidge will play the role of Mrs. Meredith, the doctor's wife. Tom Delmare plays opposite Miss Elvidge. The smaller parts have been filled by capable players and large numbers of men and women extras were used for the big Yukon scenes.

Burt Now Casting Director for Seitz.

William Burt, who has been a member of the George B. Seitz organization for some time, is now casting director and will be in charge of the casting for future serial productions by that company. Mr. Burt is a veteran theatrical man. He began his career in the theatre when a child and during his experience has filled positions as property man, actor and stage director. He has also played in films.

Report Increasing Demand for "Lord Loves the Irish"

IF J. Warren Kerrigan had decided on any other name but "The Lord Loves the Irish" as the title for his fourth Robert Brunton production, and if the star hadn't taken such particular pains to make it one of his greatest successes, Hodkinson managers wouldn't have a thing to worry about, with the exception of the weather, these typical March days.

And its the advent of March, with its 17th of verdure green, that has furnished a vexatious problem for the Hodkinson men in the field. For, every exhibitor with any showmanship astuteness at all wants "The Lord Loves the Irish" for the period covering St. Patrick's Day.

With the limited number of prints in the Hodkinson exchanges, managers and salesmen are at their wits' end to find a way out. In the smaller territories the managers, with the aid of exhibitors have hit upon a partial solution. The same prints of "The Lord Loves the Irish" will be used in two or three houses for two or three days, messenger service having been arranged by the exhibitors whereby the print will be transported from one theatre to another without disturbing the theatres' performance schedule.

"Checkers" Breaks Records at Salt Lake City Theatre

EXHIBITORS are still playing "Checkers" to crowded houses. Branch managers of Fox Film Corporation are still receiving congratulatory telegrams and reports from theatre men. One of the most recent of these received by C. A. Walker, manager of the Salt Lake City Exchange, shows that "Checkers" maintains steadily its reputation as a powerful racing melodrama.

The lobby display of horseshoes and racing posters has been uniformly used by theatres throughout the country. The manager of the Broadway Theatre in Salt Lake City followed this style of display for his house front, and in addition took pattern after the manner in which William Fox exploited "Checkers" during its original run at the Central Theatre in New York.

In Bingham Canyon, Utah, at the Princess and Phoenix theatres, operated there by Messrs. Brisk and Chester, "Checkers" repeated its past performances by playing to capacity houses. The theatre owners expressed the hope that Fox would give the theatres more productions like "Checkers."

Buys More Vehicles for Anita Stewart.

With the purchase of "Harriet and the Piper," Kathleen Norris' popular novel, and "Sowing the Wind," the sensational sex against sex drama which made the name of Sidney Grundy famous, Louis B. Mayer has secured for Anita Stewart two popular vehicles.

"Harriet and the Piper" created a sensation when it appeared serially in the Pictorial Review.

Little comment is necessary on "Sowing the Wind," for as a play it has been presented in every city, town and hamlet, not only in America, but in every English-speaking country of the world.

De Mille Back in Hollywood.

Crandall Film Company to Handle All Equity Specials

THE first of the Equity specials to reach the market, "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives," has been disposed of by Equity to the Crandall Film Company, 121 Fourth avenue, Pittsburgh, for the state of Ohio and will give it its initial showing in that state at the Colonial Theatre, Toledo, March 21, where an unusual campaign will be inaugurated to direct public attention on the unusual theme of the film. In addition to securing "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives" for the entire state of Ohio, the Crandall Company secured the franchise for Southern Ohio for the Clara Kimball Young specials, purchasing the southern tier of the state from Paul Gusdanovic, who controlled the entire state.

Mr. Dresner, representing the Exhibitors Film Company of Washington, D. C., purchased "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives" for Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia, and announces that already first run has been secured at Harry Crandall's Metropolitan Theatre, with Crandall's entire circuit to follow.

House Peters, Mary Alden, Vincent Serrano, Eva Novak, Mildred Reardon, Sam Sothern and other prominent people are seen in "Silk Husbands and Calico Wives," which opens in numerous cities during the latter part of March.

Move Cosmopolitan Scenario Department to the Studio

THE entire scenario department of Cosmopolitan Productions, under the direction of William Le Baron and Julian Johnson, has moved from the general offices at 729 Seventh avenue, New York, to the studio at 127th street and Second avenue. This transfer was made in order to bring the scenario and production departments in closer working contact, and Vice-President and General Manager Henry M. Hobart believes that it will serve to bring about not only greater efficiency, but also a correlation of effort and energy.

"I believe that the moving of the scenario department to the studio will serve the best interests of Cosmopolitan Productions," said William Le Baron. "Personally I am glad of the change because it will bring us into closer touch with the production department. We have some very ambitious plans for the future and our being at the studio will help us materially in our work."

The scenario department at present consists of William Le Baron and Julia Johnson as associate editors, Miss Frances Marion, Adrian Johnson, J. W. McConaghy, Ruth Jabin, Faith Smith, Dorothy Farnum, Frank Beresford and M. M. Stearns.

L-KO Lion Breaks Loose.

Cohen Going Abroad Again for Metro; Plans to Invade Scandinavian Market

HARRY J. COHEN, manager of the foreign department of Metro Pictures Corporation, will sail from New York about the middle of April for a business tour of the continent, the major portion of it in the Scandinavian countries. Mr. Cohen expects to be away for six months, returning in September after visiting, among other places, Stockholm, Christiana and Copenhagen, the capitals of Sweden, Norway and Denmark, respectively, and studying the motion picture field in practically all the large European cities.

The principal purpose of Mr. Cohen's coming trip is to enter the Scandinavian market with Metro productions. Before his return he plans to close contracts for the entire territory.

Mr. Cohen will take with him to Scandinavia from forty to fifty selected prints of Metro releases. These will include all of the Nazimova productions, and the latest starring vehicles of Viola Dana, Bert Lytell, May Allison and Alice Lake, besides "Old Lady 31," starring Emma Dunn and the first two of the Drury Lane melodramas produced with all star casts by Metro, namely "The Best of Luck" and "The Hope."

Gunning for Big Things

In addition to making an exhaustive survey of the entire Scandinavian field Mr. Cohen will again traverse the territory that he covered during his last trip to Europe. He then visited England, France, Italy, the Netherlands and Belgium.

To Visit Other Countries.

"Although I plan to go over all the ground that I covered when I was last abroad and take in addition both Spain and Portugal as well as Sweden, Norway and Denmark, I plan to concentrate on the Scandinavian countries," said Mr. Cohen. "These offer a rich field for American motion picture exploitation.

"The Scandinavian countries, as is well-known, have been least affected, perhaps, of any in Europe in the recent world conflict. They are bustling, thriving nations, where industry has suffered practically no interruption and where, as a consequence, the monetary system has not been seriously impaired. The disparity in money exchange, for instance, which has so affected trade conditions in England, France, Germany and other of the European states, does not exist to so great an extent between this country and Scandinavia.

Norway, Sweden and Denmark Interested.

"The people of Norway, Sweden and Denmark manifest the liveliest interest in motion pictures; there are numerous theatres, and the films produced there with native actors and actresses are of a high standard of excellence. We have placed our pictures in England through Jury's Imperial Pictures, Ltd., and in France and the adjacent countries through the Mundus Film Company. In our dealings in Scandinavia, we expect to make connections with a number of reputable and well-established distributing agencies," concluded Mr. Cohen.

Lloyd's "Haunted Spooks" to Start Spooking March 21

"HAUNTED SPOOKS," fifth of Harold Lloyd's series of $100,000 two-reel comedies, headlines the releases on the schedule of Pathe Exchange, Inc., for the week of March 21. No other feature is scheduled for that week. The newest Lloyd fun-maker will have a pre-release showing at the Strand Theatre, and either the Rivoli or Rialto Theatres, in New York City, during the week of March 14.

"Haunted Spooks" is a successor to "His Royal Slyness," and rivals that subject in the costliness of production. Those who have seen "Haunted Spooks," however, acclaim it the funniest picture Lloyd has ever made. Little Mildred Davis again plays opposite Lloyd, and renders valuable support to the star.

First Series Completed.

The Rolin Film Company, which produces the Lloyd features, is now working on the sixth two-reeler, which will complete the first series of multiple reel comedies. The series was inaugurated with "Bumping Into Broadway," and includes "Captain Kidd's Kids," "From Hand to Mouth" and "His Royal Slyness."

Beauty of Sets in "Honey Bee" Is Tribute to S. A. Baldridge

BIG sets are in evidence in all the recent American productions but in this respect "The Honey Bee" surpasses them all. The New York shop of the art collector, the role carried by Thomas Holding, is the raison d'etre of a wonderful collection of oriental carved furniture, antiques and valuable art curios. The American supplemented its own valuable treasure house with priceless additional pieces from the home of a Santa Barbara millionaire, foreign treasures which could scarcely be replaced at any cost since the war.

The harmonious arrangement and pleasing effect in this drama is a tribute to the artistry of S. A. Baldridge, a technical director of the American Film Company, who is permanently attached to the Santa Barbara Studios. It presents an appropriate setting for the American debut of the famous prima donna, Mme. Marguerita Sylva, in the "Flying A" adaptation of Samuel Merwin's popular novel, "The Honey Bee."

Consensus of Trade Press Reviews

Here are extracts from available reviews printed in the five motion picture trade papers. It is the aim to present one sentence that will reflect the spirit of the writer's opinion. Under each heading the first paragraph is from the review of the Moving Picture World. The others are indicated as follows: Motion Picture News (N.); Exhibitor's Trade Review (T. R.); Wid's (W.); Exhibitors' Herald (E. H.).

The Right of Way

(Bert Lytell—Metro)

N.—Has come to the screen with all of its fine humanity, and above all its powerful characterization.

T. R.—Is a complete entertainment for the better class of picture audiences.

E. H.—The whole picturization of Sir Gilbert Parker's novel is well done.

The Third Generation

(Betty Blythe and Mahlon Hamilton—Robertson-Cole)

N.—Fairly interesting picture on a domestic theme.

T. R.—Registers as good, average melodramatic entertainment.

E. H.—Falls below the mark of previous Brentwood productions, due principally to the lack of strong characters in the story.

The Prince and Betty

(Jesse Hampton—Pathe)

Is agreeable and entertaining.

N.—The piece has moments when it compels interest in the few flashes of humor, and these, with the star's performance, and the work of his assistants will undoubtedly carry it by to those patrons who are not exacting in their screen entertainment.

T. R.—A light, happy offering that would go well sandwiched in between a sex drama and a murder mystery.

E. H.—A comedy of young matrimonial partners; is downright funny.

More Deadly Than the Male

(Ethel Clayton—Paramount-Artcraft)

It is an extremely artificial tale, but its incidents are juggled about with considerable skill and will really surprise nine out of ten spectators.

N.—Ethel Clayton scores as polite vampire.

T. R.—A well constructed photoplay, cleverly directed and with a surprise twist to the plot which diverts its melodramatic trend into pleasing comedy.

The Lord Loves the Irish

(J. Warren Kerrigan—Hodkinson)

While the picture is not flawless in construction, it possesses the charm of a well sustained, interesting characterization.

N.—The title is going to make a lot of friends for the picture. It sure is a winner.

T. R.—Affords amusement in its humorous moments, and the line of melodrama which gives Miles Machree his opportunity lends a dramatic tone to the occasion.

A Joyous Liar

(J. Warren Kerrigan—Hodkinson)

Is one of average artistic quality of the clean comedy order.

N.—If you accept it in the spirit in which it is written and played than you are in for an hour of passable entertainment.

T. R.—A performance well supplied with melodramatic situations.

The Lone Wolf's Daughter

(Louise Glaum—Hodkinson)

One of the most elaborately staged and powerfully enacted melodramas that the screen has yet presented.

N.—A stirring melodrama that will register.

T. R.—A melodrama that contains real thrills, a consistent and interesting romance and entertaining possibilities that cannot be denied.

E. H.—A splendidly done photoplay and has a quality of compelling interest that should make it an attraction of universal satisfaction.

The Shark

(George Walsh—Fox)

Is strong in characterization and continuity. It contains a good deal of sheer brutality, but convinces by its realism.

N.—A vivid melodrama that carries a two-fisted punch.

T. R.—The production is above reproach if one can condone the theme.

His Temporary Wife

(Rubye de Remer and Edmund Breese—Hodkinson)

Succeeds in holding the interest of the spectator from first to last of the six reels.

N.—With such a cast and a title which sounds interesting this ought to get business. How well it will please depends on the individual. If your audience is critical they are apt to ask you questions.

The Broken Melody

(Eugene O'Brien—Selznick)

The manner in which this love story is told holds the interest. Should prove an asset to most programs.

N.—Will afford good average entertainment.

T. R.—A picture which affords pleasing, if not exciting, entertainment.

W.—Star makes very favorable impression in opening scenes. Authors have relied solely upon a vein of sentimental romance.

The Forged Bride

(Mary MacLaren—Universal)

While the story never probes very far below the surface, it keeps the spectator interested all of the time.

N.—Mary MacLaren has a mild offering here.

T. R.—Is a good melodrama.

E. H.—A picture that should please in any house.

The Feud

(Tom Mix—Fox)

There are plenty of dramatic thrills in this six-reel Fox subject.

N.—Of all the pictures which have been based upon southern feuds none perhaps have come closer to serving up dramatic entertainment than Tom Mix's new offering.

The Valley of Tomorrow

(William Russell—American)

Features William Russell in strong mountain tale.

N.—The production embodies plenty of action, and it possesses an element of suspense that balances any flaw of improbability in the story.

T. R.—The picture holds tense situations which are well enacted.

The Very Idea

(Taylor Holmes—Metro)

Moves along easily through pleasant scenes, and the well-selected cast furnishes many interesting personalities.

N.—An amusing comedy which should interest.

T. R.—It shapes itself into a fairly breezy farce of conventional design and the usual horse-play.

In Walked Mary

(June Caprice—Pathe)

N.—Frail picture offers mild entertainment.

T. R.—The situations of the play are all so trite and so frequently familiar that they fail to create a spark of anything akin to enthusiastic interest or response.

W.—Only ordinary. Star not at her best

Burnt Wings

(Josephine Hill and Frank Mayo—Universal)

The plot is one of the sex type and carries little genuine emotion or feeling of reality to the spectator.

T. R.—Is likely to make a popular appeal because of its theme. There are generous dashes of the salacious in the feature.

Easy to Get

(Marguerite Clark—Paramount-Artcraft)

A light comedy, cleverly adapted and arranged and admirably directed.

T. R.—An amusing light comedy which spins along smoothly and swiftly to a hilarious and satisfactory climax.

W.—The best Marguerite Clark comedy in a long time.

Young Mrs. Winthrop

(Ethel Clayton—Paramount)

N.—It is as vital today as it was years ago when the play was written.

T. R.—An unusual entertainment with an abundance of heart interest.

E. H.—Its appeal is general; its production of a high order. In terms of the trade it may well be called a "safe bet."

Pinto

(Mabel Normand)—Goldwyn)

Has pep, unforced situations and many laughs.

N.—"Pinto" is a great picture. It's a western and it's a society picture.

W.—A wonderful comedy, and all to Victor Schertzinger's credit.

E. H.—Mabel Normand admirers should pronounce the entertainment satisfactory.

Red Hot Dollars

(Charles Ray—Paramount)

It will do equally well when shown on any program, as its human appeal is universal.

N. — Wholesome, entertaining comedy drama.

T. R.—Contains plenty of heart interest mingled wtih diverting comedy, and spins smoothly along to a satisfactory climax.

E. H.—Not up to the standard of those in which Charles Ray has been seen.

His Wife's Money

(Eugene O'Brien—Selznick)

A satisfactory product and a good entertainment.

T. R.—Gives Eugene O'Brien good role.

Sidelights and Reflections

THERE have been many stories printed about the amazing changes made by scenario writers and directors in the plots of novels and plays and also of original material before the completed product has reached the screen public. The charge brought against producers that their screen versions of well-known works by celebrated authors are often sadly mutilated generally comes from well meaning but poorly informed persons who have not learned that the change of form from printed word to pantomime imposes certain restrictions that make it impossible to retain all of the characters and situations of a story.

For one thing, there is the time limit; certain novels if used entirely would outdistance the four hours running time of John Barrymore's "Richard III" the opening night and keep on going until daylight, a thing which the most ardent of movie fans might find fatiguing. The question of artistic balance is also quite as important. If you have only a given time in which to hear about a person in whom you are deeply interested you are in no mood to have the conversation switched off to another person who may be a good enough chap in his way but with whom you are but slightly acquainted. If you had plenty of time to hear about both you might feel differently about the matter.

The same is true when people go to the moving picture. Their time is limited and their interest quickly centers on one or more of the leading characters in the story. Artistic balance demands that these characters shall be clearly defined and that their romance, carefully concealed secret or absorbing life-motive, be rounded out into a well-told tale, which can be learned at one sitting. Other characters which, in the greater latitude of the unrestricted and more leisurely novel, can be explained in detail without hurting the interest of the story, must be so briefly sketched in the screen version that it is generally better to drop them out altogether.

It is extremely difficult to make some persons understand that even film producers learn by experience.

Among other things they have learned that a story can be thrown out of balance to a serious extent in the space of time it takes to flash a single incident on the screen—if that incident attempts to awaken more than a passing interest in a character of minor importance. Fancy the effect if a grand opera chorusman should step out of line and focus attention upon himself by breaking into a solo just as the tenor had hit high C and was bowing his appreciation of the applause showered upon him by the delighted audience! The aspiring chorister and his solo would be no more out of place than would an attempt to center interest on a photoplay character whose logical position corresponds to one of the spokes in a wheel of the carriage in which the hero rides.

It will be welcome news to New York picture patrons that "Huckleberry Finn" comes to the Rialto the week of March 14. The success of the Rivoli engagement will undoubtedly be repeated. WEITZEL.

"Excuse My Dust"

Excellent Continuation of the Popular "Roaring Road," with Wallace Reid, Released by Famous Players.

Reviewed by M. A. Malaney.

EXCUSE MY DUST" is not only a picture that will delight those who admire Wallace Reid, but it will give general satisfaction to all classes of theatre-goers. It is a continuation of the popular automobile racing picture, "The Roaring Road," which was released last spring. All of the principal characters, portrayed by the same actors, are in "Excuse My Dust," and there is a thrilling auto race, exceeding the one in the other picture. The story has been adapted from the Saturday Evening Post Tale entitled "The Bear Trap." The new picture opens with Wally and Ann Little, the parents of a chubby youngster, living with Ann's father. There is keen rivalry between the auto company owned by this family and another company owned by a set of shady individuals. Naturally things lead up to another automobile race.

The big events of the race are the smash-up of the two leading cars and the daredevil ride by one driver over a trestle, with a train bearing down behind him. This was made necessary because of a closed roadway. Reid, Theodore Roberts and Miss Little are all excellent. It is easy for anyone who saw "The Roaring Road" to grasp the characters. A foreword explaining something about the previous production also serves to make the story clear to those who have not seen the previous picture. It is a fine production and will certainly please with its speedy action and excitement.

"Toodles" Walden	Wallace Reid
J. D. Ward	Theodore Roberts
President Mutchler	Tully Marshall
Dorothy Walden	Ann Little
Darby	Guy Oliver
Henderson	Otto Brower
Griggs	James Gordon
Ritz	Walter Long
Oldham	Jack Herbert
Police Magistrate	Fred Huntley

Scenario by Will M. Ritchey.
Directed by Sam Wood.
Length, 4,330 feet.

The Story.

"Toodles" Walden is manager of the Darco automobile agency and son-in-law of J. D. Ward ("The Bear"), president of the Darco concern. Ward has the new Darco motor, a marvel for speed and power, hidden. Mutchler, president of the rival Fargot Motor Car Company, is determined by fair means or foul to secure a sketch of it.

Egged on by Ritz, a Fargot racing driver, "Toodles" is lured into a race and arrested. J. D. Ward arranges to have "Toodles'" license suspended for sixty days and sells all three Darco racing cars on the open market. The Fargot concern secretly acquires two of them and disguises them as Fargot cars. At the auto show, the Fargot company issues what amounts to a challenge to the Darco people. J. D. puts up $10,000 for a road race from Los Angeles to San Francisco.

"Toodles" buys in one of the old Darcos and names it the "Cyclone." The Fargot representatives think it is the Darco with the new motor. "Toodles" receives a telegram from his wife in San Francisco that their baby is ill and to come at once. He enters the "Cyclone" in the race.

J. D. hears that the Fargot drivers plan to wreck the "Cyclone." Taking the real Darco with the new motor, he starts out after his son-in-law. Ritz, the Fargot driver, attempts to crowd "Toodles" off the road, but the latter foils him by ramming him in the rear. He beats Ritz up, sees another Fargot driver come up in a disguised Darco, and, jumping into the seat, orders the astonished pilot to take him to San Francisco at top speed.

A Pleasing Comedy Drama of Business—Love—Auto Racing—and Many Thrills.

Exploitation Angles: Play up Reid and the fact that this is another of the "Darco" automobile stories. Hook up with the others you have used and make a special drive on the automobile owners if you can get a list—and you can get a list if you want one badly enough. If you can get a bargain in cloth have banners lettered up "Excuse My Dust. At the ———————— this week," and supply these to auto owners who run fast cars; then get the worst looking Ford you can find and turn it loose on your own account with a similar banner. Send this car out a few days after the others, and frequent breakdowns will add point to the joke.

Terrific Alaskan Blizzard Is Put Into Beach's Goldwyn "North Wind's Malice"

REX BEACH'S next picture, "The North Wind's Malice," has a wonderful group of personalities in the complete cast of players announced by Goldwyn. The company is now on location at Port Henry, N. Y., for the Alaskan scenes of the story, which is made under the direction of Carl Harbaugh and Paul Bern.

Rex Beach has written an intimate drama of the frozen North around a new set of characters, that afford unusual acting opportunities. He also employs an allegorical figure called "The Spirit of Malice," which is very effective and adds to the poetic qualities of this screen drama. The two outstanding figures among the men are played by Joe King and Tom Santschi. Both are in love with Lois Folsom, played by the talented Jane Thomas.

The villain of "The North Wind's Malice" is in the able hands of Henry West, whose first part with Goldwyn was in Mary Garden's picture of "Thais." The spirit of Malice is portrayed by Dorothy Wheeler, a San Francisco actress who played leads in western stock companies, and was for ten years leading woman in Charles Frohman companies. Three sets of buildings have been especially constructed at Arctic City and other points near Port Henry for the chief scenes of "The North Wind's Malice." It is probable that the interior scenes will also be taken there if the studio is available in time. The interest of the story shifts to California and these scenes will be taken later.

Two Curtiss airplanes were taken on location especially for this Rex Beach picture in order to drive the blinding snow required for the great blizzard scenes in which the mail carrier loses his life. Charles Tatem and William Kelly were the airmen in charge of the planes. With the propellers revolving at top-notch speed, the snow was carried with tremendous force a distance of one hundred yards.

According to the Fox press agents, Buck is much interested in the youth of California. Nope. If he were, he'd be showing the kid his Colt. Buck's last is "The Last Straw."

Jiggs Starts to Visit the Boys at Dinty's in Pathe Comedies April 4

THE premiere of the new series of "Bringing Up Father" comedies will be seen on April 4. "Jiggs in Society" is the title, and it is evident that the screen version of the famous newspaper strip by George McManus is due for greatly increased popularity. The comedy bubbles with the humor of Maggie, of Jiggs, of Dinty Moore, and of the crowd of old reprobates who interfere with the social ambitions of Mrs. Jiggs.

In the character of Jiggs himself Johnny Ray sets a new mark for comedians of the screen. In appearance he is an exact representation of the famous McManus character and the other actors have been chosen along similar lines.

The story is full of action and novelty from the moment Jiggs is discovered smoking his pipe in the burglar-proof safe, the only "safe" place for him in his great palace. Dinty Moore and the gang join him in a game of cards while his wife is giving a reception, and the gorgeous affair is fractured by the breaking up of the card game and the appearance of Jiggs, Dinty & Co, among his wife's fashionable friends.

A big campaign of exploitation has been started to aid the exhibitors who book the comedies, backed by all the power of the International for whom the comedies are being made by Christie for Pathe Exchange, with its highly efficient organization, and with the co-operation of all of the four hundred newspapers in which Jiggs appears as a feature. The debut of Jiggs upon the screen has been widely publicized through these newspapers and in many communities special tie-ups have been arranged between the publications and theatres which will exhibit these popular subjects.

Alice Hollister Back on Screen.

After an absence from the screen of two years, on account of illness, Alice Hollister has returned to pictures in the Goldwyn production of the stage play "Milestones," by Edward Knoblock and Arnold Bennett. Miss Hollister will have the leading feminine role in the picture which will be started at Culver City this week, under the direction of Paul Scardon. Among others in the cast are Lewis Stone, Harvey Clark and Gertrude Norman.

Ray Theatre, Cleveland, Reopens Under New Name and Management

AFTER a career, disappointing indeed, to those who have operated it, the old Ray Theatre, on Prospect avenue, in the downtown district of Cleveland, has been reopened under the name of the Winton, and with new hopes of success.

The house, unfortunately, has been handicapped by location. It is just outside the busy district, but only a step, and Cleveland film folks are hoping that it will "go over" this time because the new management has gone to considerable expense and effort to get it over.

The theatre was renovated throughout, after being closed for nearly two years, the small store rooms rented and it looks in spick and span shape. The opening attraction was Maurice Tourner's "The Broken Butterfly" staring Lew Cody.

Another house, closed for two years, was recently reponed but closed after a couple of months. This was the Funland, at East 107th street and St. Claire avenue. In the case of the Winton, however, there has been a considerable advance of business in its direction and it has a much better chance.

Power's Gives Machine to Orphanage.

An official of Universal who long has been an anonymous donor to various charities recently started a fund to provide entertainment for the children in the Bnai Brith Orphanage and Home for Friendless Children, at Erie, Pa.

Collecting several hundred dollars, he negotiated for a moving picture projection machine, believing that a moving picture outfit for the orphanage would be the most acceptable kind of entertainment.

Hearing of the movement, Will C. Smith, general manager of the Nicholas Power Company, donated outright a Power's projection machine of the latest model to the orphanage. The money previously collected was put in the general amusement fund of the institution.

Buys Jackson Play for Washburn.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has purchased as a starring vehicle for Bryant Washburn, "A Full House," a play by Fred Jackson. In its original form "A Full House" was first produced on Broadway in 1914-5, where it ran for some time and subsequently was used by stock companies all over the country. The plot is light comedy incited by complicated situations in which incriminating love letters, stolen jewels and exchange of suit cases abetted by the police combine to produce laughs.

"Mothers of Men"

A Selznick Romantic Drama of True Womanhood in a Time of Stress and Storm.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

A HIGH tension story of exceptional merit, "Mothers of Men" powerfully contrasts brutal passion with the innate purity of true womanhood. The Selznick production rightly follows one line of interest. It is that of a girl adrift at the mercy of circumstance, who preserves her native cleanliness of soul in spite of soiling misadventure. The subject is a delicate and difficult one to handle. To slight the truth would be to weaken the story and its effect. By skill of directing and editing, however, the strength of the situation is maintained and a purpose of broad vision and kindly humanity set forth in vigorous style. That the story is sensational, that it is wrought out of intense and dramatic experience, gives it screen value for that great mass of people who enjoy that which stirs their emotions, and this "Mothers of Men" does through skill of design and treatment.

In acting and in that charm which gives the effect of life known as "atmosphere" the Selznick production ranks high. The types are so well chosen that there has been a prodigality of good taste shown in minor characters. No matter how small or apparently unimportant the part, the actor fills it satisfactorily. So also with the details and general effects in the backgrounds. From the leading role, performed by Miss Claire Whitney, throughout the cast, there are no misfits. It is therefore just to say that "Mothers of Men" provides sensational entertainment of a high order.

Cast.

Marie Helmar	Claire Whitney
Capt. Von Pfaffen	Lumsden Hare
Paulette	Martha Mansfield
Mrs. Schultz	Miss E. Roma
Mr. Schultz	Cesari Cravana
General De La Motte	Arthur Donaldson
Mrs. De La Motte	Zeffie Tilbury
Lieut. Gerome De La Motte	Gaston Glass
Maurice Le Cerf	William Gaton

Directed by Edward Jose.
Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

Among "Mothers of Men" some know only the security of sheltered lives. Others, like Marie Helmer, are set adrift in whirlpools of bitter experience. It is in Austria, while making a hard struggle for existence, that she is victimized by an officer of high rank. In agony of mind, yet with soul not dishonored, she flees to the family of a wealthy cousin in France, where she is given a home and the care of his two younger daughters. It is a gracious and happy household, its pride and hope a son who falls in love with Marie.

In the course of time she has so completely won the affection of the young man's parents that they consent to a marriage. Just before the ceremony Marie writes him a letter, disclosing what happened in Austria. The servant who undertakes the prompt delivery of the note returns it wth apologies for his failure to obey her, and she decides after a mental struggle to bury the past. The honeymoon is barely over when war is declared, and her husband and father-in-law go to the front.

Marie, because of her Austrian birth, is under a cloud for a while, but her loyalty to her husband's country is so intense that it becomes manifest to all. As the fighting line draws near the women of the household are drawn into closer affection by their common danger.

Now appears in the household a quiet servant, an Austrian officer placed there as a spy; none other than the one who caused Marie's downfall in the land of her birth. Recognition is mutual. The spy insists that the young wife shall obtain from her husband a plan of attack discussed by French officers at the house. Terrorized by his threats of disclosure, she induces her husband to disclose the secret. Between terror and loyalty she struggles, until she is transformed by her love. She dares give false information. The result is disaster for the enemy. According to the Austrian officer's code he must commit suicide. He awaits an oportunity to find Marie alone that he may kill her also.

A struggle ensues as her husband approaches the house, and the spy is killed. Marie is so overcome when her young husband arrives that she hands him her written confession and begs him to read it. He smilingly declines—he has already done so on the eve of their wedding. He had the letter returned to her as though it had not been delivered because his love for her was that of a noble and generous mind. Then the sunlight of her pure affection shines once more—she is to be a mother—his splendid chivalry is to have the greatest reward she can give.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines:

Exceptional Story Contrasting Brutal Passion with Purity of Womanhood.

Exploitation Angles: Keep away from the war angle of this story, since to use this is to create the erroneous impression that it is a war drama. Work on the title and the cast, using the latter to emphasize the excellence of the production.

"The Daredevil"

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

TOM MIX may be added to the rather limited list of performers who have successfully written and directed their own stories. In "The Daredevil" he has concocted and put across a swiftly-moving, humorous production, containing a number of unique situations and much action of a stirring sort. It is one of the best of recent Westerns.

There are big moments strung along throughout this picture. The hero's leap from the top of the moving passenger train to the bridge cords is the first sensation. Later his rescue of the girl from a box car proves his unusual daring. The riding scenes are all very good, and the recess of the bandit gang behind the waterfall is an original layout of the kind. The sub-titles are fresh and full of pertinent humor.

Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

Timothy Atkinson, in "The Daredevil," is the son of a wealthy railroad president, who has been sent to a Montana ranch for safe keeping. Tim is a practical joker and keeps the ranch hands in a continual uproar. The indignant owner of the ranch finally tires of Timothy and sends him back East.

His father is not at all delighted to see him, and promptly sends Tim to Arizona to work at a small station. As the train approaches, a reception committee is awaiting Tim's arrival, but he has had an altercation on board and jumped from the roof of the train to a cross piece from which the bridge cords are suspended. Tim finally reaches the station on foot and the committee is surprised to find him anything but a tenderfoot in Western ways.

Tim falls in love with Alice Spencer, daughter of the division superintendent. She urges him to undertake the task of breaking up a gang of train robbers. Tim invades their cave, hidden behind a waterfall, learns their secrets and makes his get-away. Later he rescues Alice from box car and recovers much of the stolen loot being shipped out by the bandits. He wins the love of the girl and the respect of the community.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines:

The Westerners Awaited the Arrival of the Tenderfoot from the East—He Arrives with a Smash and Proves That He Is Anything But a Tenderfoot.

Exploitation Angles: Play up Mix and tell that he lives up to the title. Then list the sensations and play these up as a group or singly. That is about all you need to do.

"In Search of a Sinner"

Bright First National Comedy with Constance Talmadge in a Fascinating Role.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE First National picture, "In Search of a Sinner," is gay with the adventures of a young widow in revolt against association with men who are too good. She detests their paternal advisory attitude toward women. She is inclined to puncture their inflated ideas of moral superiority. She has the acumen and the daring of a charming woman of experience, and she is correspondingly dangerous. Much is to be expected when this lively young widow breaks loose. "In Search of a Sinner" is a delightful comedy of human nature.

Constance Talmadge is a born comedienne. That is evidenced in her avoidance of the amateurish simpers and the eye-rolling of the cabaret vamp. Her attitude is that of an intelligent woman holding up to ridicule masculine sentimentality. Her support is excellent. The personal factors and the workmanship of "In Search of a Sinner" rank it high as a comedy. It drew outbursts of laughter at the Strand, and it will be a winner wherever shown.

"Sporting Duchess" and "Fortune Hunter" Are Booked by Many Prominent Theatres

A LONG distance telephone call from the manager of the William Fox Washington Theatre at Detroit several days ago to the New York offices of Vitagraph, punctuated a booking run on Vitagraph's latest super-feature, "The Sporting Duchess" and "The Fortune Hunter." The William Fox national circuit of houses is conspicuous among those which are booking both features. It is understood that, so far as the advance schedules of these theatres permit, the entire chain is listing the two Vitagraph subjects.

"The Sporting Duchess," which is set for release on March 22, received an ovation from the New York reviewers on the occasion of its pre-release opening last week at the Broadway Theatre. The Evening Sun, in particular, pronounced the subject as one of vast entertainment value, and declared that Alice Joyce presents in it one of the best portrayals she has ever given in her happy career of stardom.

Among the other notable theatres throughout the country which have booked both the big features are the Rialto, at Washington, D. C.; Fox Theatre, St. Louis; Fox Theatre, Denver; New Astor, Minneapolis; New Princess, St. Paul; American, Salt Lake City; the Apollo, Dayton; Regent, Rochester; Kalurah Temple, Binghamton; Bijou, Springfield, Mass.; Strand, Portland, Ore.; Superba, San Diego, Cal.; Tudor, Atlanta, Ga.; Wichita Theatre, Wichita, Kan.; Victory Theatre, Tacoma; People's Theatre, Portland, Ore., and the Victory Theatre, Providence, R. I.

The Hippodrome at San Francisco was one of the large theatres which made an early booking of "The Fortune Hunter." Others were the Strand, at Buffalo; Eckels, Rochester; Colonial, Utica; Liberty Theatre, Seattle, and Walnut Street Theatre, at Louisville.

Those who care for dancing will find plenty to their liking, it is said, in "The Dancin' Fool," Wallace Reid's new production for Paramount Artcraft. Mr. Reid, with his leading woman, Bebe Daniels, do three sets of what might be called interpretative dances. The cave man period shows them in skin costumes in a bower of primitive beauty; the Apache dance is executed with much abandon and skill; the modern steps are performed with grace.

The story was originally printed in The Saturday Evening Post and is by Henry Payson Dowst.

Begin Work on "Lucid Intervals."

Douglas MacLean and Doris May began their sixth Thomas H. Ince starring vehicle, "Lucid Intervals," a sparkling comedy fresh from the pen of Archer McMackin.

Ask Data on "Blood Barrier."

The demand of the public for pictures with a strong vein of patriotism throughout and the popularity of such pictures with exhibitors is forcefully shown by the fact that hundreds of exhibitors have written to the Pathe branch offices for full information on the J. Stuart Blackton production, "The Blood Barrier." The picture is the work of the late Cyrus Townsend Brady and Stanley Olmsted and is a vivid story of red-blooded Americanism.

Thirty Reels Without a Kiss.

Thirty reels without a kiss! A daring departure from moving picture precedents, perhaps, but that's what was done in "The Invisible Hand," the Vitagraph serial just completed by Antonio Moreno. Pauline Curley was the unkissed heroine.

Equity Buys World Rights to Pinero's "Mid-Channel" for Clara Kimball Young

JOSEPH I. SCHNITZER, general manager of Equity Pictures Corporation, which concern distributes the products of Clara Kimball Young and other Garson creations, announces the purchase from Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, for the world's screen rights to that playwright's drama, "Mid-Channel," in which Ethel Barrymore, perhaps, as much as any play in which she has appeared, earned her reputation as one of our foremost stage personalities.

"Mid-Channel," which ran for many months at Charles Frohman's Empire Theatre, was accounted, during its engagement, as the finest work of Pinero, who had many successes to his credit, and one of the most attractive dramas Ethel Barrymore had yet appeared in.

"Mid-Channel" is peculiarly built for just such a figure as Miss Young, who is, of course, to be seen in the role that characterized Miss Barrymore's efforts in the stage production.

To Close Series of Four.

"Mid-Channel" will constitute the final of the first series of four of Equity's Clara Kimball Young specials, of which "For the Soul of Rafael" is to be the third and "The Forbidden Woman" and "Eyes of Youth" were first and second.

A sumptuous production will characterize the staging of "Mid-Channel," and an extraordinary cast of prominent players will be seen in support of Miss Young.

Locations which took Miss Young and her supporting cast from Los Angeles all the way to San Francisco and back, and with stop-overs at most of the famous old missions of California, sets so huge that parts of their structure reached out of the studio into the lot, costuming which required months of research and no little effort to secure, are a few features of "For the Soul of Rafael," which will cause that picture to stand out as a fitting release as compared to both "Eyes of Youth" and "The Forbidden Woman."

"The Forbidden Woman," which is now generally released throughout the United States, is causing new reports to issue in that it is even exceeding the results obtained by exhibitors with "Eyes of Youth," and promises to surpass that picture by many hundreds of days of additional rentals and longer runs.

Goldwyn Flashes Pictures on Screen 85 Minutes After Taking Them at Walton

WITH almost a thousand moving picture fans and a large number of exhibitors from all over the Pennsylvania territory in attendance, the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation gave a practical demonstration of the making of motion pictures atop the Walton Hotel, Philadelphia, last week, at which all known records for rapid completion and projection of film were shattered. The official time-keeper for the affair recorded the event in less than an hour and twenty-five minutes.

To lend "atmosphere" to the affair, Helen Greene, who has recently completed work with Madge Kennedy in "Trimmed With Red," came over from the New York studios especially for the occasion.

Guests Astounded.

While the event was planned primarily for placing the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation on a more informal plane with the picture-loving public, the feat of shattering the world's record for rapid completion of pictures was not overlooked. Ira M. Lowry, director-general of the Betzwood Film Company, also participated. He supervised the technical requirements for the event, which included the erection of a special set, lighting equipment and complete finishing apparatus. He had erected in another portion of the building an entire developing and printing plant with special machinery for rapidly drying the film.

In order that the guests might gain some conception of the difficulty experienced in directing comedy situations, Mr. Lowry arranged with Kempton Greene, a former Philadelphian and member of the old Lubin Company, to enact a scene assisted by two young woman, who were called from the audience. The situations, which were extremely ludicrous, kept the guests in an uproar, and when less than an hour and a half afterward the very scenes they had witnessed being portrayed before them were flashed on the screen, the feat was considered little less than marvelous and hearty applause met the finished effort.

Some of the motion picture men who were present were: Pete Magaro, Regent Theatre, Harrisburg; C. Floyd Hopkins, Wilmer and Vincent circuit, Harrisburg; William H. Woehrle, Third Street Theatre, Easton; George Harrington, Trenton; Lou Brennamen, American Theatre, Pottsville; Frank Walters, Iris Theatre, Philadelphia; Samuel Stiefel, Stiefel circuit, Philadelphia; Abe Einstein, Stanley Company of America; William Herchenreider, Stanley Company of America, and Senator Edwin Wolff, of the Betzwood Company.

The Story.

Georgiana Chadbourne goes in "Search of a Sinner" as soon as her period of mourning for her first husband is over. He is such a good man that he made her life miserable. She wants one with red blood in his veins. Misled by a little adventure in Central Park, she falls in love with Jack Garrison. Not until her heart is committed does she make the discovery that he, tóo, is good. She hopes to stir a little of the devil in him. She is afforded opportunity when her married brother and his wife are called away suddenly, leaving her alone in the apartment.

Jack is an old friend of the brother, but he has never seen the latter's wife. On the occasion of Jack's first appearance in the apartment, when mutual confessions are on edge, Georgiana assumes the role of her sister-in-law. Jack is overcome. He has been making love to his best friend's wife. He leaves in despair. Georgiana goes after him in vamp costume when he is addressing the Purity League, and she breaks up the meeting. He telegraphs to her brother to come look after his wife and home. Georgiana pursues him to his own rooms and torments him. He cannot kiss her—it would be a sacrilege. He rejects her, but her blandishments have had their effect. He collapses morally.

He runs against a lurid lady and gets intoxicated in his own apartment. There he is found by the brother he telegraphed for and by Georgiana. The lurid lady is driven out and explanations follow. Georgiana is now happy to marry Jack—it will be so nice to reform him. This she proceeds to do as soon as her slave for life is shackled, all with a consistent inconsistency thoroughly feminine.

"The Hushed Hour"

Harry Garson Production, with Blanche Sweet and an Exceptional Star Cast Released by Pioneer Feature Film Corporation.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE remarkable cast of the Harry Garson's "The Hushed Hour," embraces besides Blanche Sweet, such star performers as Wilfred Lucas, Wyndham Standing, Rosemary Theby, Milton Sills, Mary Anderson, Gloria Hope and many others whose names are familiar in the world of silent drama. As the story is told in episodic form large opportunity is afforded each of these fine performers. There are four distinct lines of action, each standing out by itself, but they are strongly and consistently connected, a complete series of dramatic events bearing on the main subject and arising from it. That subject deals tenderly withour responsibility to one another. The inward thoughts and real sentiments of common ordinary individuals erring ones like ourselves, are revealed with true dramatic insight.

Infinite pains have been taken to do full justice to each episode and to every scene it contains. There is a profuse liberality of settings shown, affording great variety to the incidental narrative with no loss to the civilizing end in view. When is added to this a consistency of mood and a splendid performance on the part of the principals, "The Hushed Hour" must be rated high as a production. Such was the opinion of a crowded house at the Hamilton Theatre.

Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

"The Hushed Hour" is one of meditation requested by Judge Appleton of his children. On the anniversary of his death each was to give one hour to private thought in the presence of his picture. It is to remind them of the high standard of living he followed. In conformation with his request there is a family gathering, and Daisy, the youngest, goes to the silent room, where floral tributes are assembled by friends and relatives who loved the memory of noble Judge Appleton.

Daisy's grief and remorse is instantaneous. She has a child by an English artist who deceived her while she was painting at Nice, in the south of France. Her life there unfolds before her vision, and she resolves to build her little boy's character along the lines indicated by her father's nobility.

Then comes the turn of Luke, wandering and adventurous, who married beneath him and abandoned wife and children in a mood of drunken fury. In the silence of the room, overcome by his feelings, he forms a new ideal, never to be forgotten, of what is fair and just for him to do with the little family he is in honor bound to shelter in sympathy and manly protection.

Robert, the older son, follows with complacent dignity. He has achieved high place in the business world, but gradually his moral judgment becomes applied to his own conduct in private life. It dawns upon him how much selfishness and hypocrisy there has been behind his commercial success. The voice of conscience condemns him with a thousand tongues. He determines there and then on a radical change in his purposes and actions in the future.

Last comes Virginia, married for money to a man she treats with small consideration, whose life and ambitions she has spoiled through indifference to his love. Through remembrance of little children she becomes so deeply affected that her conduct is called up before the tribunal of her own moral sense. Through shame and new tenderness she goes to the husband waiting outside and twines her arms around him with a new and tender sense of obligation.

Thus, one by one, the four children are converted by "The Hushed Hour" in the presence of the man that lived in honorable recognition of the rights of others to sincerely reform, to live more in accord with the Golden Rule.

"The Flame of Hellgate"

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

STRENGTH of plot is lacking in the Robertson-Cole production, "The Flame of Hellgate," and consequently opportunities for the star are few. Beatriz Michelena, an actres of superior talent and uncommon beauty, is featured in the picture, and does well with the limited possibilities of the role of Star Dowell. To be sure, a fuller rounding out of individual characters with detail or incident conducive to a revelation of their distinguishing traits, would help in a large measure to make the picture more interesting. As it is there is a vagueness connected with the presentation of the story that interferes with a clear delineation of the plot.

The production contains a wealth of western atmosphere, and Miss Michelena's riding and easy manipulation of the lariat compels admiration. It also mingles touches of humor with pathos and the thrill of melodrama; but one is ever on the alert for a stronger play of the rare personality of the star. Jeff Williams, Albert Morrison and William Pike are outstanding figures in the picture.

The Story.

The story of "The Flame of Hellgate" has its origin in a feud between a cattle king of the West and the homesteaders. Old man Dowell and his daughter, Star, live alone in a cabin in the uplands. And when the cattle king shows his intention to try to force the homesteaders out of the district, Dowell decides to organize his associates to protect their interests. A day or so afterward the old man is shot dead outside his cabin door. Star, determining to avenge her father's death, and also to show up an incompetent sheriff, places herself at the head of the organization started by her father.

In the course of events she stages a fake raid on the village of Beartrap, has herself bound and gagged and left as evidence of the work of a bandit. The sheriff goes out into the hills to pursue the bandit, is lassoed

"The White Dove," Starring H. B. Warner Scheduled for Release by Robertson-Cole

"THE WHITE DOVE," a dramatic picture founded on the novel of the same name by William J. Locke, the popular English author, is ready for release by Robertson-Cole. It will mark a new milestone in the advancing career of H. B. Warner, its star, officials of the releasing company are convinced.

"The White Dove" was made in the studios of Jesse D. Hampton. Pre-viewed by officials of Robertson-Cole, the picture was unanimously hailed as the best achievement of Mr. Warner's screen career. Work at once was started on an elaborate campaign of publicity and advertising which is to go with the picture. It is being released as a Robertson-Cole special which speaks volumns for its quality.

As "The White Dove" does not depend on mechanical effects or strained and impossible situations to tell its story, and as its central appeal is to the heart, the picture's commercial success should be wide. The central situation is that of a high-minded man so pure and austere himself, he cannot understand why anyone should deviate from the path of righteousness.

Claire Adams Plays Opposite Warner.

Through a series of dramatic incidents he learns that those closest and dearest to him have been effected with things to which he never could stoop. Turning from them, he leads the life of a hermit, only to discover a greater calamity, so great in fact, that it drives in upon him the truth of universal human frailty and the need for mercy and forgiveness toward all.

A strong cast is seen in support of Mr. Warner. Opposite him is Claire Adams. Ruth Renick has a peculiar part in the picture, that of his first wife, appearing not in life but in a vision. The heavy of the picture is Herbert Greenwood.

Players Added to "The Flapper" Cast.

Following a brief respite, work is again going forward on "The Flapper," it was announced this week by Myron Selznick, head of production work of Selznick Pictures.

Mildred Cheshire, who has appeared in previous Selznick pictures, has signed a contract to play a part in this picture. She will be cast as a schoolgirl, of which there are many in the film. Another player who has been engaged for the picture, in which Lewis J. Selznick will present Olive Thomas as star, is Theodore Westman, Jr., who will have the role of Bill Forbes. William P. Carlton will have the part of Richard Channing.

Lucien Hubbard Joins Universal.

Lucien Hubbard, associate scenario editor for Vitagraph, has signed up with Universal to take charge of the scenario department at Universal City. He will leave New York for the Coast within two weeks.

Hubbard, a former newspaper man, has been in the moving picture business for six years, most of the time as a scenario and continuity writer. He has worked for Pathe, the World, Edison, Vitagraph, and for a brief time a year and a half ago, for Universal.

Wide Powers to Be Given Maryland Municipalities for Amusement Regulation

WIDE powers are given municipalities in regulating theatres, dance halls, cabarets, roadhouses and amusements in one of the three companion bills which were introduced by Senator G. A. Frick, of Baltimore City, in the Senate at Annapolis, Md., on Friday morning, March 5.

For such places that are found to be violating the regulations as laid down by the city codes, the state licenses can be revoked by the municipalities, according to one of the bills. Upon a written complaint made against the place which is signed by three or more persons, actions for this could be instituted. Then within fifteen days after the residents or proprietors of the place which has been complained of must be given a public hearing. The measures are principally aimed at the night life of the city, it is understood.

First Run Contracts Continue to Pile in on Read's "The Lone Wolf's Daughter"

THE latest of the country's important first-run theatres to make room in their bookings for the presentation in Boston of J. Parker Read, Jr.'s second big Louise Glaum production, "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," are Jacob and David Lourie's Modern and Beacon theatres on Washington street, Boston. This production opens a day and date full week engagement March 15, playing Charles H. Williams' Strand Theatre, Providence, R. I., the same full week and the following week plays the Strand, Portland, Me.

A. H. Blank and Abe Frankle's big Des Moines consolidation of theatres has booked the production for its entire Des Moines string of houses, and Harry Goldberg, for the Goldberg Brothers, Omaha, has booked it for the Moon Theatre, their largest first run.

The striking thing in connection with J. Parker Read, Jr., production in view of the admittedly congested condition of the picture market for months past is the rapidity with which they are booked and presented in the large first run theatres.

Among the other important first run contracts closed for the picture within the past few days are The Ceremic, East Liverpool; the Opera House, Lorain; the Park, Mansfield, O.; the Jackson, York, Pa.; the Harlem Opera House and the Odeon, New York City; the Montclair Theatre, Montclair, N. All Details Arranged for Robertson-Cole Convention

PLANS are about complete for the first semi-annual convention of the Robertson-Cole supervisors and branch managers at the Hotel Astor on March 16, 17, 18, and 19. A. S. Kirkpatrick, vice-president and general manager of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, who will act as general chairman at the various business conferences, has compiled a schedule which will enable the field representatives to better acquaint the exhibitor with the fair business principles of Robertson-Cole; the standard and quality of its releases and the big plans perfected to give the trade big stars and special productions for the season of 1920-1921.

The convention program has been so arranged that all of the branch managers will arrive in New York City some time Monday, March 15. The convention will open at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, when the visitors will assemble at the Robertson-Cole home office at 1600 Broadway.

At 12:30 the convention will move to the College Room, at the Hotel Astor. After luncheon, R. B. Cole will give an informal talk and explain in detail the policies of the company of which he is head.

J. L. Merrick, field manager of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation, will be the principal speaker at the Thursday morning conference at the home office.

Louise Glaum's Stop-Over in Chicago Inspires Luncheon

LOUISE GLAUM'S one-day stop-over in Chicago was the inspiration for a luncheon arranged in her honor by S. J. Goldman, manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, and given Monday in the Rose Room of the Hotel Sherman.

About twenty-two of the most prominent exhibitors in Goldman's territory and newspaper and trade journal people were present at the affair, at which it was announced that Hodkinson would distribute "Sex." Miss Glaum's forthcoming seven-reel vehicle for J. Parker Read, Jr.

Joseph Hopp, who controls several theatres through the middle west; W. K. Hollander, the critic; Max Hyman, of the Avon Theatre in Chicago; E. Schlager in telling of J. Parker Read, Jr.'s forthcoming special.

Among those present were Mrs. Porter H. Albright, the star's sister; Joseph S. McHenry, P. P. Dumas, William K. Hollander, H. H. Meyers, Joseph Hopp, Max Hyman, John Bobenz, Genevieve H. Harris, Agnes "Rob Reel" Eldridge, W. D. Burford, Ralph W. Crocker, S. H. Mason, E. Stern, "Doc" Atkinson and William Dineen.

"Women Men Forget"

Mollie King Displays Charm of Fersonality in United Picture Theatres Latest Production.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THERE can be no question raised with regard to the vitality of the subject which Elaine Sterne has chosen for her screen story, "Women Men Forget," produced by United Picture Theatres. The more blase are perfectly familiar with the waywardness of Cupid, and would be willing to corroborate the contention of the story, but it is doubtful if the average head of a family will take kindly to the rather exaggerated example of marital infelicity which the picture presents.

The situation in which a man not only makes love to "his wife's best friend," while his wife is still present in his home, but also allows the "woman in the question" to become the unlicensed mistress of his home while his wife, finding shelter with a friend, bears him a child, is revolting to say the least. Perhaps the director is a bit at fault in playing up the weakness of the wife, who persists in reclaiming a characterless husband. However this may be, the story, as presented, cannot gain much sympathy.

Mollie King is attractive in a thankless role. Edward Langford does his best to win sympathy for the wayward husband, and Lucy Fox makes an acceptably naughty vampire.

Cast.

Robert Graham	Edward Langford
James Livingston	Frank Mills
Helen	Lucy Fox

Story by Elaine Sterne.
Direction by John M. Stahl.
Length, 4,600 feet.

The Story.

The main situation in the story, "Women Men Forget," centers about a husband's unfaithfulness, and his wife's successful attempt to bring him back to the domestic fold.

Robert Graham, apparently devoted to his pretty wife, one day discovers in a friend of his wife's who comes to visit, a woman more alluring than the one he married. To her he recounts domestic trials, and pictures himself as having been misunderstood. Helen, the friend, has no scruples in using her powers of fascination, and it is not long before their love-making comes to the notice of Mrs. Graham and causes her to forsake her home. She seeks shelter with a friend. With his wife out of the way, Graham makes Helen mistress of his home, and goes so far as to give a large party, at which Helen receives the guests. Mrs. Graham, hearing of the affair, decides to attend, meeting with a cold reception.

In the meantime James Livingston, a friend of Mrs. Graham, has appointed himself a committee of one to help bring about Graham's financial ruin by supplying him with funds through his broker for the indulgence of Helen's extravagances. His wife comes to his aid with her jewels, and Helen, discovering that Graham no longer has money to give her, throws him over. The revelation that Mary, his wife, has borne him a child, together with his persistent belief in his better self, causes him to realize his love for her.

"Deadline at Eleven"

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

AFFORDING an animated and consistent view of the workings of a newspaper office, the Vitagraph production, "Deadline at Eleven," refers to the hour at which all copy must be on the editor's desk. The story follows, however, the adventures of a young society girl, who decides to strike out for herself rather than marry an Englishman of title. Those adventures are only amusing at first, with no reflections on the profession of journalism intended when she is uncertain whether to become a waitress, a housemaid or a reporter. She has enough personality and good clothes to achieve eminence in any one of these arduous and honorable occupations.

After all, personality counts, just as it does in the movies, and the young girl as interpreted by Corinne Griffith has it in abundance and to spare. She carries herself with combined dignity and sweetness in the role of a girl reporter. Back of her is an atmosphere, which is at times clouded with smoke by the reportorial staff of her paper, but which is undeniably good from an artistic point of view. She has an exceptionally good support, notably by Frank Thomas, Webster Campbell and Maurice Costello. The play was fairly well received at the Broadway Theatre.

Cast.

Helen Stevens	Corinne Griffith

Story by Ruth Byers.
Scenario by Lucien Hubbard.
Directed by George Fawcett.
Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

Helen Stevens, of "Deadline at Eleven," becomes a cub reporter by choice, in spite of her wealthy and socially ambitions mother. She is taken on more or less as a joke, but she finds a warm friend in the crack reporter, Jack Rawson. It is he who instructs her generally and particularly to get her copy in before 11 p. m., the "dead line" of the night editor. She is put in charge of letters from the lovelorn and is attracted by a note asking for advice. It is from a girl who is threatened with death unless she elopes with her employer.

Helen induces Jack to give up drinking, but he is enticed to the Press Club on the night he intended to follow Helen out on a dangerous asignment. A private detective has been hired by her mother to watch over the adventurous girl, but he fails to do his duty on this particular night. Helen goes alone to discover why a certain working girl has disappeared. She gets the address of the missing girl's employer.

By this time Jack Rawson is roused sufficiently from his drunken stupor to feel the need of following Helen. He does so and stumbles into an old warehouse where murder is being done. He emerges and sinks down in a stupor. The body of the working girl is found in the warehouse, and Jack is accused of her murder. Near her is found a knife he wore as a charm on his watch chain. Helen happens to be covering her story in that neighborhood. She recognizes Jack when he is arrested and declares he is innocent. She begs the police not to inform the papers of his arrest. She will discover the true murderer before they go to press. She visits the office of the working girl's employer and catches him, valise in hand, about to leave in a cab. She affects lameness and asks him to set her down at her office, meanwhile managing to instruct the chauffeur to drive to the police station. She there causes his arrest. He breaks down when confronted with evidences of his guilt and makes a confession. Jack escapes disgrace, and so sincerely reforms that Helen takes him to her home and introduces him as the man of her choice. Her mother embraces him when she finds he is one of the Rawsons of Tuxedo, and all ends happily for the cub reporter.

"Harvest Moon" Noteworthy for Strong Characterizations and Lighting Effects

WITH Doris Kenyon rising to greater dramatic heights, and with a supervised cast assisting her in enacting for the screen one of Augustus Thomas' most successful plays, Theodore C. Dietrich and Arthur F. Beck have every reason to believe that "The Harvest Moon," the new Gibraltar picture for W. W. Hodkinson distribution, will inaugurate its release with a bigger flood of contract bookings than even the ready exhibitor response that marked the introduction of their first Doris Kenyon production, "The Bandbox."

"The Harvest Moon" is a strong picture in many respects. Aside from the acting of the star and the contributing players, among whom are George A. Lessey, Wilfred Lytell, Earl Schenck, Marie Shotwell, Grace Barton and Daniel Pennell, one of the prime features of the Deitrich-Beck production is the remarkable lighting effects obtained by Director J. Searle Dawley.

With the usual Thomas touch a subtle thread of the occult, revealing the psychology of light and shade on human mentality and action, is introduced in such a way as to convey a novel and fascinating atmosphere. The filming of this particular phase of the picture called for stage management of unusual merit, and the lighting technique is a startling feature of the production, manifesting itself in striking photographic effects. Despite the much discussed difficulty of getting across psychic ideas on the screen, proof of success is here found in the simplicity and easy comprehensibility of the story.

THOSE intrepid camera fellows who pick up news in films for the three Hearst International news reels released weekly through Universal, could tell many a good story of the way they do their daily work, but perhaps one of the most interesting yarns is the way E. Carl Wallen, staff cameraman for Hearst International, succeeded in persuading Mohammed VI, present Sultan of Turkey, to pose for the camera.

This, it is said, is the first time that the Sultan had ever been photographed, and to get him to submit Wallen smashed all the court precedents and violated the Koran as well. The scenes that Wallen "shot" are a part of the current Hearst International news reel.

After he had photographed the Sultan, Wallen shipped the negative to the United States by special messenger, fearing to entrust it to the usual shipping facilities.

Famous Pictures Distributes Whole Tyrad Company Output

THE arrangement whereby Tyrad Pictures, Inc., assigns all of its product to the Famous Pictures Sales Company for distribution in the New York City, Albany and Buffalo territory went into effect last week. Matthias Radin, of Tyrad, will sell the balance of the country on the state right basis on all pictures bought by his company.

Of all the subjects turned over under the new arrangement to the Famous Pictures perhaps none has made Charles P. Saunders, district manager, more enthusiastic than "It Happened in Paris," the feature in which Mme. Sarah Bernhardt presents her protege, Mme. Yorska, and W. Lawson Butt.

The picture was made at the Brunton studios in California and at its premier showing in New York City was warmly greeted by the public and highly praised by the press. Heavy bookings are the rule throughout the entire territory and Mr. Saunders is seeing to it that the exhibitors are receiving the co-operation of their local exchanges in the presentation of this classic feature. Exploitation aids are obtainable.

Henderson, Ky., Ministers Swear and Swear and Swear Warrants Out Each Week

A MERRY little Sunday fight has been on for several weeks at Henderson, Ky., the pastors of the various churches through their ministerial association having tried several methods of closing the theatres. They took the matter before the Grand Jury and were unable to secure indictments. They swore out warrants for all of the theatre men on February 20, and announced that warrants would be sworn out every week thereafter.

However, three owners were fined $2, the lowest fine possible, in Judge Farmer's court, and this put the question back to the ministers. On February 26, eleven warrants were issued, four against Louis Hayes; four against Morris Holtzman; three against F. B. Doxey, and issued too by Justice J. I. Farley, of the Spottsville township, ten miles from Henderson. Trial was set for March 3.

The exhibitors dug into the laws, and had their bondsmen surrender them. They were temporarily placed in custody of the jailer. They appealed to Judge Farmer, as the statute permits, for new bonds. This he granted, and set their trial in his court.

This brings the ministers right back to where they started, and it is now "their move." The exhibitors are really having quite a lot of fun out of the case.

"The Dangerous Talent"

Margarita Fisher in American-Pathe Production Impersonates Girl with Talent for Forgery.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

AN adaptation of Daniel F. Whitcomb's story, "The Dangerous Talent," produced by the American Film Company and released through Pathe, features Margarita Fisher. The screen version is a satisfactory presentation of a story in which elements of melodrama play a large part. The average spectator will like it, and will no doubt be pleased with, rather than resent, the attire of inocence in which the dangerous talent of forgery is allowed to parade. At least the idea of converting a favorite alibi of crime into a weapon for the defense, provides a change in the order of things that is not unappreciated.

The situation which brings Lelia Mead and Mildred Shedd to the home of the millionaire, Ellis, is somewhat artificial, in spite of the fact that it forms the main pillar of the story. The atmosphere surrounding individual scenes is always correct. Disregarding apparent plot defects, the production is well made.

Margarita Fisher is attractive in the role of Lelia Mead, and Harry Hilliard in the male lead plays the role of Gilbert Ellis well. Harvey Clark and Beatrice Van do effective work as the heavies.

Length, Six Reels.

The Story.

The story of "The Dangerous Talent" tells of how a young girl makes good use of her ability to imitate hand writing. The discovery that she possesses this talent causes her to lose her position as stenographer in a business office, and brings her to the point of starvation.

One day she meets a down-and-outer in the park. He calls her attention to the fact that rich and poor alike have a "skeleton in the closet," and that the rich especially can be frightened into action by the "mysterious warning." Acting on the suggestion, she writes a note to Gilbert Ellis, a millionaire, in which she represents herself as the daughter of one of his old sweethearts. The game works, but on arriving at his home she discovers that a woman of questionable character from the same rooming house has also gained admittance to the Ellis home.

By careful watching she finally gets the best of the situation. One night, when Mildred and her associate, Horton the butler, attempt to quiet her with a sleeping powder, she feeds the milk in which it has been placed to the cat. In their attempt to rob the safe Ames, secretary to Ellis, is stabbed. Lelia forges a confession, which is shown to Mildred as having been written by Horton, and the pair are trapped. Lelia is invited to become mistress of the Ellis home.

"The Stolen Kiss"

Realart's Second Constance Binney Picture Has Weak Plot and Shows Hurried Production.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE author of "Little Miss By-the-Day" has written a story that belongs to the Sunday School library class of fiction. It is all very pretty and very unreal. The heroine is so remarkably unsophisticated that she does not know that a bonnet and cloak of the 1850 mode is not fashionable attire for 1920 until she sees several up-to-date maidens in a drug store and beholds her own reflection in a full length mirror. Her adventures will probably interest the youthful mind, but even a girl of ten may wonder why Felicia Day can find nothing better to do than plain sewing.

Under the title of "The Stolen Kiss" the story has been given a screen production by Realart, with Constance Binney as the heroine. Many of the situations have individual merit, but the scenario is so loosely constructed that it only accentuates the arificial nature of the tale. The production shows hurry, and is not up to the usual Realart standard. A glaring error in the early part of the story is the scene showing Felicia, who is supposed to be about twelve, taking her morning bath. Inoffensive in themselves the scenes make it clear that the shoulders and chest of the young person in the tub are not those of a girl in her teens.

Miss Binney's dressing and acting of the little girl of a dozen years are remarkably realistic, but when she removes her principal aids to illusion and a "close-up" is taken of her foot as she plays with the faucets of the bathtub with her toes all of the previous efforts to create the illusion of extreme youth go for nought. Aside from the effect of hurry in some of her scenes Miss Binney's acting is on a par with her fine work in "Erstwhile Susan." The supporting cast is excellent.

The Story.

Felicia Day, the receiver of "The Stolen Kiss," is brought up in seclusion by her affectionate but narrow-minded grandfather. Adjoining the yard where the girl attempts to amuse herself is a rectory. One day Dudley Hamlit, a choir boy, throws his ball over the fence. As a result he meets Felicia, whose beauty attracts him, and before leaving he steals a kiss. Felicia's invalid mother passes away, and Major Trenton keeps the orphan from associating with the younger set because he is fearful that she might wed someone of whom he would not approve.

One day he catches Felicia and Dudley together and immediately proceeds to make preparations for sending the girl away. She is forced to go to Canada and is very unhappy because Dudley is ignorant of her whereabouts.

Finally she determines to come to New York. After arriving she secures work as a seamstress, and one day even gets a day's work sewing in Dudley's home, but decides not to search him out because of her out of date garments.

The girl has a natural talent for dancing and is seen by Allan Graemer, an evil-minded theatrical manager, who makes her an offer. Dudley happened to be in the audience and at the completion of the program set out to visit the house where Felicia was staying. He catches the culprit making advances to his sweetheart and without hesitating pitches in and beats him up. After that Felicia tells Dudley that he will not have to steal any more kisses.

"Sex"

J. Parker Read, Jr., Seven-Reel Production for Hodkinson Features Louise Glaum in Unsavory Story.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IT is difficult to believe that a screen writer of such fine repute as C. Gardner Sullivan could turn out as tawdry a story as that on which the J. Parker Read, Jr., production "Sex" is based. It is not only tawdry, but immoral, as presented in its seven-reel visualization, which is being released through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Louise Glaum, the featured member of the cast, works overtime in trying to put across the salacious character of Adrienne Renault, but compels admiration in the contrast which she draws between the dancer's personality governed by the loose instincts of her earlier life, and the more demure requirements of decent wifehood.

It is reasonable to believe that in making the picture the director, overly anxious to create an impression, has trusted too much to the spectacular possibilities of the story; for, what might be considered the biggest blot on the picture, occurs when at least a quarter of the first reel of the picture is consumed with the staging of a midnight orgie of the most objectionable kind. It was a mistake to cast Miss Glaum as a dancer—her attempts to make good in an art at which she is evidently a novice, are a detriment to her otherwise clever performance. Faults in the construction of the picture are also evident, which appear to be due to carelessness in the assembling of the scenes, rather than in the direction. And while the production does, in a sense, live up to the significance of its title, the spectator is at a loss to know exactly what was the object of the author in writing the story.

American Projection Society Witnesses Demonstration of Master Projector

A PRACTICAL demonstration of the mechanical principles embodied in the Master Projector, recently acquired by Inter-Ocean Film Corporation for exclusive foreign distribution, was given on Thursday, March 4, before the members of the American Projection Society, assembled at Inter-Ocean Film Building, New York.

The members were the guests of Eugene H. Kaufman, manager of the accessory department of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, who is personally supervising the sales and physical distribution of Master Projectors in foreign territories.

The demostration was especially arranged for the benefit of the members of the American Projection Society who were desirous of obtaining a first-hand knowledge of the new projector. A program, in which prominent mechanical engineers participated, was arranged for the occasion; and for the edification of the nicotine appetites of those present, good cigars and cigarettes were in evidence during the evening.

Speaks of Benefits of Society.

Mr. Kaufman started the ball rolling with an address of welcome to the members of the Society. He dwelt at some length upon the benefits of such an organization to the industry in general, and after presenting a tribute to the Society, introduced Mr. Farrell, vice-president of the Master Machine Tool Company, Manufacturers of the Master Projector.

Mr. Farrell spoke of the men and the organization behind the Master Projector, and told of the enthusiasm that had characterized the company's efforts in introducing the new machine. He mentioned among other things the fact that leading cinema engineers had directed the design and construction of the new projector, and hoped that their efforts would in time prove a boon for the industry as a whole.

Mr. Phelps, assistant to Mr. Kaufman, then made a few pertinent remarks in which he pointed out the possibilities of the Master Projector. He was succeeded by Mr. Baum of the B. & B. Company, New York, distributors of the new projector, who spoke of the plans which his organization had in preparation for the introduction of the Master Projector in New York State.

Gives Demonstration of Machine.

Mr. Brautigam of the Master Machine Tool Company followed Mr. Baum with a practical demonstration of the machine. He described in detail the component parts of the Master Projector, emphasinz the different units of equipment. He also laid stress on the economical advantages of the Master Projector, wherein he proved that the drives on the new machine were distinctly positive, thereby affecting its operations with an absolute minimum of wear and insuring a durable life to the entire mechanism.

After the demonstration, a vote of thanks was given to Inter-Ocean Film Corporation by the president of the American Projector Society, who furthermore declared that the Society was in sympathy with any new product which meant for the improvement of motion picture projection.

Louise Glaum Arrives on Coast.

Louise Glaum arrived in Los Angeles on the evening of Friday, March 5. Production is to commence soon on a new Glaum vehicle, the idea for which was purchased by J. Parker Read, Jr., and developed by Louis Joseph Vance in New York.

A new director, whose name has not been divulged and who is well known in the stage world, has been named by Read to direct Louise Glaum in her new vehicle.

Washington Congregation Will Worship in Theatre

CO-OPERATION of the moving picture theatre and the church cannot but result in a spirit of more friendly feeling between the two forces. In temporary need of a home, the All Souls Church, Washington, D. C., has been provided with a place of worship by Harry M. Crandall, who has placed his Knickerbocker Theatre, at Eighteenth street and Columbia road, at the disposition of the congregation.

Mr. Crandall's offer was accepted with deep appreciation by the church, and the first services will be held in the theatre within a few weeks. The theatre is large, located at a point touched by the cars of both traction companies, and has a large pipe organ.

"It was a gracious and generous act of the board of directors of the Knickerbocker Theatre to tender to All Souls Church the use of the Knickerbocker Theatre for such period as may be necessary," declared the trustees of the church in expressing their thanks. "The appreciation of the congregation has been conveyed to the management of the Knickerbocker Theatre for this kindly provision for our needs. Centrally located, at the corner of Eighteenth street and Columbia road, with cars of both lines passing the door, with a large pipe organ, and with its many conveniences and comforts, the Knickerbocker Theatre will serve admirably as a temporary home for All Souls Church."

Democracy Photoplay Company Reports Completion of Ten-Reel Screen Epic

DEMOCRACY," or "The Vision Restored," a powerful ten-reel screen drama, is in the final stages of completion under the direction of William Nigh at the Thomas A. Edison Studio in New York City, according to the announcement of Lee Francis Lybarger, president of the Democracy Photoplay Co.

"Democracy" was conceived by Mr. Lybarger, who retired as president of the International Lyceum and Chautauqua Association of America to produce this thought drama. During the past fifteen years Mr. Lybarger has lectured in every state of the Union, inspiring millions of people with his lectures on democracy. Thoroughly conversant with this vital subject, he has peopled his theme with human characters who struggle amid the civilization of today. A notable feature of "Democracy" is this bigness of theme, which has been termed "a vivid dramatization of humanity's fight to justice, right and freedom."

To assure the proper production of the thought drama, Mr. Lybarger engaged William Nigh, known as the director of Ambassador Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany." For the staging of the interior scenes Mr. Lybarger took a long lease on the big Thomas A. Edison Studio in the Bronx. Under his supervision, the studio was completely renovated to accommodate the producing forces of the Democracy Photoplay Company. Over $25,000 worth of new lighting equipment was installed to guarantee perfect photography.

Mr. Night himself plays the role of David, a thinker, a man of high ideals, the representative of Democracy. Those, who recall his powerful portrayal of a somewhat similar character in "My Four Years in Germany," know his abilities as a dramatic actor. Leslie Auston is cast as David's brother, Jonathan, an autocrat. J. H. Gilmore, a veteran of the American stage, has the role of a money monarch. Maurine Powers plays the sympathetic character of a blind girl. Others are Albert Tavernier, Halbert W. Brown, Elsie De Wolfe and Charles W. Sutton.

"Why Women Sin" Secured by Zierler for New York

SAM ZIERLER, president of the Commonwealth Film Corporation, and who has the Equity franchise for New York territory, concluded a deal the early part of this week with Thomas de Vassey, secretary of the Wistaria Productions, Inc., and Jacques Kopfstein, sales manager, whereby he secures the exclusive rights for New York State and Northern New Jersey of "Why Women Sin."

Mr. Zierler, commenting on his new purchase, made the following statement: "I was extremely gratified after I had been invited to view 'Why Women Sin,' to see such a high caliber production, made by a producing company so new in the field. The feature held my interest from the moment the first scene was flashed on the screen, and I sat entranced until 'The End.' The work of the cast was such as one could expect from so well balanced an organization of well known screen players. I intend to exploit 'Why Women Sin' as befits a production of the magnitude of the screen version of this internationally famous melodrama."

The man chosen by the author to accentuate the dancer's characteristics is Phillip Overman, whose wife, finally discovering where her husband puts in his spare time, calls on Adrienne to demand an explanation. While she is at the dancer's apartment her husband enters and she tells him that she will sue for a divorce. Not long afterward Adrienne meets a man with whom she really falls in love and marries, after dismissing Overman.

Dick Wallace, Adrienne's husband, happens to be one of the fly-by-night sort, and soon tires of her, turning to his wife's old friend, Daisy Henderson, who is now a star of the Frivolities, practising the art acquired through early associations with Adrienne. The turning of the tables finds Adrienne pleading for the mercy refused by her to another woman in the same plight in former years. Her husband leaves her, and she boards the boat for Europe in hopes of drowning her sorrows, only to find among the passengers the couple whose happiness she had tried to ruin.

"The Dream Cheater"

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

"THE DREAM CHEATER," a new Hodkinson release, is a modern version of a famous short story by Balzac, on the order of Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp. It relates to a magical skin of an ass, which gratifies its possessor's every wish. The skin shrinks each time and correspondingly limits the possessor's life, as the unlimited gratification of desire is bound to do. A man is apt to wish for more than is good for him. To fulfill all his wants leaves him disgusted with the idea of more.

Such is the meaning of the symbol, though it is doubtful if all will so understand it. It suggests rather than states. Without explanatory sub-title near the end the meaning of the story is left entirely to the uninformed spectator's imagination.

In performance and treatment "The Dream Cheater" is a fine production, though there is irrevelant matter concerning radical socialists shown during the opening scenes. J. Warren Kerrigan gives a highly intelligent interpretation of the leading role, and his support is both generously large and capable. Neither expense nor artistic pains have been spared in ensembles to make the story effective. Wherever its suggested meaning is even guessed, the whole product will rank as good entertainment.

Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

"The Dream Cheater" of modern times, Brandon McShane, is left almost pennliness by the death of his father. He declines help from his millionaire uncle, Shamus, preferring to make his own way as a writer. Force of circumstances leads him to board with the mother of Pauline Mahon. Pauline is touched by the young man's poverty and is caught adding money to his small store. Brandon is affected by her generosity, but he soon forgets it under the fascination of a young widow with a fad for radical socialism.

He is embittered when she discards him for a suitor of wealth. In search of revenge he accepts from an Oriental the gift of a magic skin which gratifies the owner's every wish with the penalty of shortening his life so many years. At a dinner given by his uncle he wishes for millions, and the uncle falls dead at the feast. He is not happy with his inherited possessions. He is so constantly haunted by the shrinking of the skin each time he expresses a simple desire, that he ceases to wish.

Fearing that his days are numbered he entertains royally. At one of his magnificent parties he comes upon Pauline, now in better circumstances. She tells him plainly that he is a victim of superstition. They are now in such perfect accord that he comes near wishing she would become his life partner. He attempts in vain to burn the skin. It is brought to him from the ashes. Pauline now advises him how to utilize his last wish. He wishes the hideous thing wholly out of his life, and is permitted to live like a normal man, his finest wish gratified in the love of a loyal and splendid woman.

"The Lone Hand"

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ONE of the best of recent western productions is "The Lone Hand," presented by Richard Kipling through the Alexander Film Corporation, featuring Roy Stewart. This picture is clean, wholesome and thrilling. It presents deep landscape perspectives and "honest to goodness" western saddle work and bronco busting. The riding exhibitions to which the spectator is treated, the stage holdups, the cross country pursuits by posses at break neck speed, and last, but not least, the romance between the sheriff's daughter and her father's prisoner, are all refreshing variations from the ordinary five-reeler.

Roy Stewart fills the bill as the bronzed mail carrier of Arizona; and Josie Sedgwick as the sheriff's daughter is as attractive a western type as one could wish. The production is well constructed, bubbles with the storied heroism of the old West, and displays interesting action for every foot of the film.

Cast.

Bob Benton	Roy Stewart
Betty Hampton	Josie Sedgwick
Joe Rollins	Harry Von Meter
Sheriff Hampton	William Higby

Story by Alvin J. Neitz.
Direction by Cliff Smith.
Length, About 5,000 Feet.

The Story.

The plot of "The Lone Hand" is constructed around an interesting figure of western life, a young mail carrier, Bob Benton, who is framed by Joe Collins, a dishonest deputy sheriff and his gang, and forced into a thrilling series of actions in exonerating himself, and rounding up the thieving gang.

The sheriff's daughter, Betty, on her way to the annual rodeo at the nearest town, is thrown from her horse, and rescued by Benton, who insists on her riding his horse to town, while he takes the locoed bronco in hand. The development of a romance between them is cut short when the sheriff notifies his daughter that she is needed at home. The young man, on his return trip, rescues a runaway team of horses; and before he has gone far he is overtaken by the deputy sheriff and his gang, who have killed the owner of the team, and have determined to fasten the crime on Benton. The frame-up works, and Benton is landed behind the bars. That night Joe Collins hatches a plan to lynch him, but is forestalled by a girl in the dance hall, who sees interference to her own business if the proprietor of the dance hall happens to be sobered up by the lynching. Betty, aprised of Collins' diabolical plot, helps Benton to escape. Later Collins kidnaps Betty, and while Benton is fighting to rescue the girl, Collins is killed by a stray bullet from one of the gang on the outside of the house in which the fight takes place. The picture closes with the betrothal of Benton and Betty.

Comments

THE RATTLER'S HISS (Western), March 27.—A brightly pictured two-reel subject, featuring Ed (Hoot) Gibson and Mildred Moore. The hero is a range boss who learns to imitate the hiss of a rattlesnake for humorous purposes. He has occasion to employ this accomplishment with more dramatic effect later in the picture, when seeking to rescue the heroine from some bandits. The production is good in action, and carries an entertaining story. It was written by George Hively and directed by Reaves Eason.

HIS PRIVATE WIFE (Sunshine).—This comedy, in which Chester Conklin has the lead, opens in a restaurant, where some extremely funny action is shown when the proprietor tries to take an order for dinner from a customer who has wheels in his head. A bout of dough slinging between the cook and the proprietor is followed by a series of scenes in which the domestic happiness of a couple of the parties to the disturbances is involved. This is very good comedy, and will go well in the majority of houses.

GOOD NIGHT NURSE (George Ovey).—A comedy in which a stranded troupe of players are offered a substitute for their ordinary mode of gaining a livelihood, in the managing of a beauty institution. The steam cure, the face massage, and other avenues for comedy are taken advantage of. Gaining possession of money under false pretenses, and the accidental meeting of a husband and wife in the establishment where a pretty nurse and a fascinating doctor are employed affords good material for a comic situation. A fairly entertaining comedy.

PATHE REVIEW, No. 39.—This opens with some views of Lourdes, the famous Mecca of French pilgrims, to which the lame and afflicted repair each year to be healed. The scenes picturing the process of mining and preparing cement for the market are very instructive. Hand ball makes a good subject for "slow" camera treatment. A study of mason wasps and a demonstration of a Hawaiian dance are also included.

"Silver Horde" and "Dangerous Days," New Specials, To Be Heavily Exploited

BECAUSE of qualities so strong and dominant that they demand particular recognition, two Goldwyn Pictures, recently announced among forthcoming releases, have been elevated to the class of specials, which will be backed by the greatest exploitation campaign ever placed behind a Goldwyn production. The pictures that have won this distinction are Rex Beach's "The Silver Horde" and Mary Roberts Rinehart's "Dangerous Days."

Both will reach exhibitors in seven reels, not because that length had been decided upon before the productions were started, but because the stories, sweeping forward in a rush of dramatic conflicts, demanded seven reels for their full expression.

The policy of the Goldwyn Company in handling the great works now at its disposal is to allow the stories, whatever footage they require for an interpretation, doing justice to the soul-stirring themes on which they are based.

"The Silver Horde" and "Dangerous Days" were subjected to the most exacting criticism before it was decided to give them special prominence among the coming Goldwyn releases. When they were shown in New York to the executives of the company, the only alternative to allowing them to remain in seven reels was a condensation certain to prove detrimental to their dramatic effect. It was decided to let them stand as they were rather than discount the appeal of pictures that had naturally assumed feature proportions.

Preparations are now being made for country-wide exploitation campaigns that will assist exhibitors in realizing to the full on the money-making possibilities of productions that promise to rank among the greatest of the year. The details of the plan being arranged for the publicizing of "Dangerous Days" and "The Silver Horde" will be announced soon.

"A Woman's Business" Is Second Olive Tell Feature

OLIVE TELL'S second production for Jans Pictures will be released under the title, "A Woman's Business." In substituting this for the title of the book, "Nothing a Year," by Charles Belmont Davis, on which the picture is founded, the officials of the company feel that it will have a deeper appeal, and arouse greater interest, which will be reflected in the box office returns.

"The selling value of the picture from the exhibitor's standpoint, is our first thought," says Mr. Jans. "We are carrying out this plan with 'Love Without Question,' and intend to do it with every production. We feel that the title of the second production, 'A Woman's Business,' will prove a financial benefit to the exhibitor."

Code Comes Down from Nome to "Rest"; So Builds Seattle Theatre

W. F. CODE, owner of the Code Theatre in Nome, Alaska, spends his winters in Seattle, and in order to have something to occupy his time during the winter months he is building a neighborhood theatre at Forty-fifth avenue and Meridian street. It is to be called the Lincoln Theatre because of its proximity to the Lincoln High School. It will have a seating capacity of 450. The plans now call for the opening about May Day. Paramount-Artcraft, Goldwyn and Select pictures will be shown.

Mr. Code is also opening a theatre in Siberia this year, just across Bering Strait from Nome. He will leave for the North about June 1, leaving a resident manager in charge of his Seattle house. It is likely that he will build other neighborhood houses in Seattle next year.

Chiefs of Police Unanimously Opposed Massachusetts Screen Censorship Bill

PENDING the decision of the Massachusetts Legislative Committee on Mercantile Affairs on the motion picture censorship bill, discussion of the proposed measure has continued unabated. The committee's report to the legislature is expected within the next two weeks. The decision is awaited with keen interest on all sides. No bill before the legislature this year has received the attention that the censorship bill has received.

Action of the steering committee of the United States Senate in agreeing to favorably report a bill amending the penal code of the nation prohibiting by common carrier the shipment of objectionable films, is felt to double-safeguard the interests of the people of Massachusetts and to make a state censorship bill entirely unnecessary.

Massachusetts already has four safeguards against immoral pictures. A law already on the statute books makes it a prison offense to show lewd, immoral or impure shows or entertainments. Then mayors and selectmen have the power under the state law to withhold licenses to shows they deem improper.

Police Chiefs Fought Bill.

In addition, a number of communities have local censorship boards. Finally, the Boston City censor, in removing objectionable parts to films, looks after the interest of the whole state because films are shown in Boston first and are then distributed to the rest of the state, or all New England for that matter, from the Boston exchanges.

Another outstanding development in the censorship battle was the action of the Massachusetts chiefs of police in unanimously adopting a resolution declaring that muncipal censorship has proved satisfactory and that the state censorship bill is not needed. Action by the chiefs followed a discussion of the proposed measure by Judge J. Albert Brackett, in opposition to the bill, and C. C. Carstens, general secretary of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, in favor of the bill. Several of the chiefs declared they could not see how a board of nine persons could set a standard.

Former Congressman William H. Carter, of Needham, issued this statement: "Creation of a motion picture censorship board would only be justified in the state when the administration of the criminal law had broken down and when the courts were unable to cope with any evil that may be involved. I am very strongly in favor of anything that would tend to give us clean, wholesome American pictures but I am confident that a censorship board as proposed would not bring us the desired results."

Empey Busy on Novel, "Oil" and Several Scripts

WITH the evident intention of hanging up a new record for the activities of a motion picture star, Guy Empey has turned himself into a hydra-headed working machine which crowds into each twenty-four hours activities usually strung over more than that many days by the ordinary mortal. As a starter Empey has personally written all of the titles for his forthcoming seven-reel production, "Oil." He is also giving close personal attention to the cutting and assembling of the film and is present at every running of the roughly collated scenes in order to direct further progress.

These matters, however, are only a side diversion. Empey is concentrating his chief attention at the present time upon the completion of a one hundred thousand word novel which is scheduled for early publication, and three-quarters of which he has already written. This novel embodies a story of New York life and is distinctly different from any of the author's former book publications. The story is a highly dramatic one and undoubtedly will find its way to the screen later on as the theme of one of Empey's own productions.

The author-actor-producer is also busily engaged on the perfection of scenarios of two photoplays, both of which will be given production by his own companies. As is the case with "Oil," all of these stories are tales of modern life and none of them in any way deals with the war or any of its after-effects, or seeks to propound propaganda.

How the Typhoon Fans Blow Patrons into Crandall's Washington Picture Theatres

THOSE of our readers who have visited Washington, D. C., have had the opportunity to note that Washington claims some of the most beautiful and up-to-date theatres in the country.

Harry M. Crandall, the popular showman and exhibitor of that city, is responsible for the construction and operation of many of Washington's finest play houses, including the Metropolitan, Knickerbocker, Crandall's, Savoy and York.

In the construction of each of these theatres Mr. Crandall has availed himself of the able assistance of Reginald Wyckliff Geare, the Washington architect.

The equipment of these houses is most up-to-date and in every instance, the most expensive that could be bought in order to bring about the results desired by Mr. Crandall that every comfort of the Washington moving picture public be provided for to the last degree.

When it came to the question of cooling and ventilation of these theatres, Mr. Crandall installed the Typhoon System.

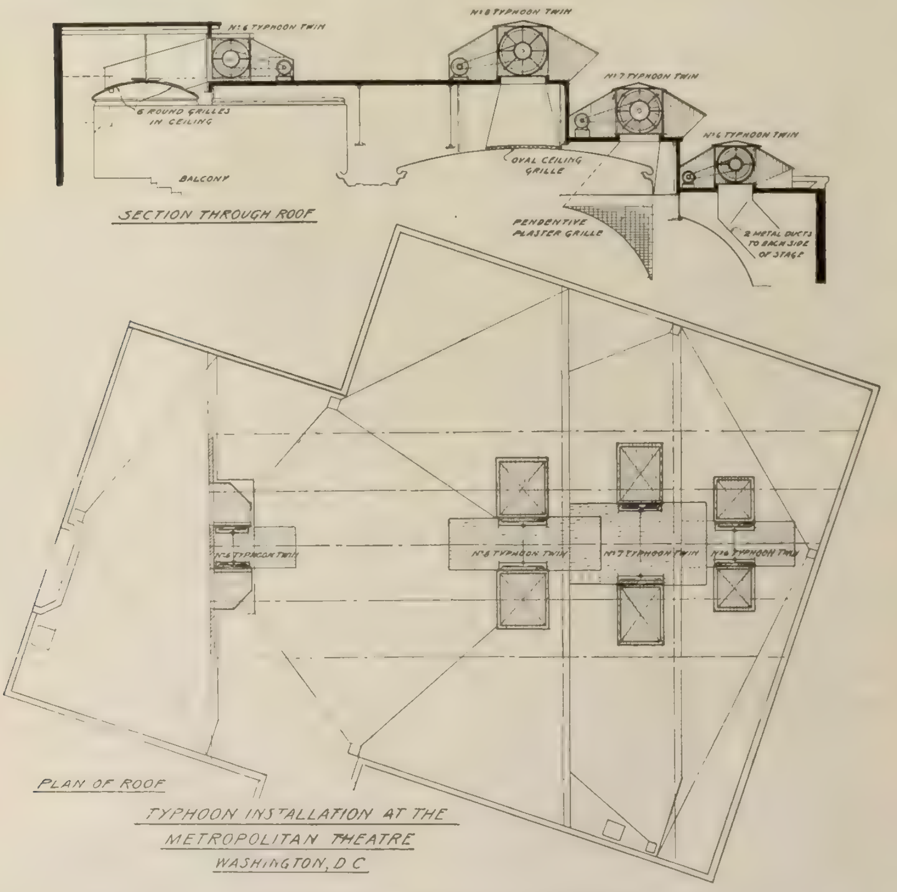
Having had in the course of his showmanship tried out thoroughly in some of his first theatres the Typhoon, there was no hesitancy on his part in specifying Typhoons in the plans for his more recent houses.

It Was Some Equipment.

In the fall of 1918 the Typhoon System for cooling, heating and ventilating was installed in the Metropolitan Theatre. This equipment comprises:

One No. 8 Twin set, two No. 8 Single sets, one No. 7 Twin Set, and three No. 6 Twin Sets. The No. 8, No. 7 and two of the No. 6 Twin Sets are located on the roof of the theatre as shown in the accompanying plan. The two No. 8 Single sets are located in a chamber under the balcony, while the third of the No. 6 Twin Sets is located underneath the stage.

For the purpose of cooling and ventilating in the summer time all of the Typhoons on the roof and the set located under the stage, blow fresh air into the theatre. The No. 6 Twin Set on the roof above the balcony and the two No. 8 Single sets under the balcony, exhaust this air, creating a steady breeze without draughts throughout the entire house.



How the Typhoons Were Distributed.

All surplus air is forced out through the exit doors, greeting the patrons with a refreshing breeze that can be felt clear out to the sidewalk.

For Winter Heating.

For heating purposes in winter, fresh air is drawn from the outside through three rows of heating stacks and blown by the two No. 8 Single Sets into a plenum chamber under the balcony.

From the plenum chamber the air is passed into the theatre through a number of small grilles set in the steps of the balcony, and through several larger grilles situated underneath the balcony.

This warm air passes throughout the house and is exhausted by the No. 6 Twin Set beneath the stage. The surplus of air creates a slight pressure on the house, thus preventing the entrance of cold air from the outside.

All of the Typhoon cooling sets located on the roof are shut down and closed off during the cold period of winter.

With the operation of this Typhoon equipment, in the summer months more than twenty million cubic feet of pure fresh air is blown through the theatre every hour.

During the stifling hot weather, for which Washington is known, patrons flock to Crandall's Typhoon cooled theatres, which run to full capacity every day of the year.

What Crandall Thinks of Typhoon.

So well pleased is Mr. Crandall with the operation of the ventilating equipment of his several theatres, that he has written the Typhoon Fan Company the following letter:

> Typhoon Fan Company, New York, N. Y.
>
> Gentlemen—I have derived wonderful results from the use of your Typhoons, not only from a ventilation standpoint, but from a financial standpoint as well.
>
> We have experimented and found that they have absolutely increased our business the year round.
>
> This is especially noticeable in the summertime, and last but not least, it gives wonderful satisfaction to our patrons, having a tendency to draw a better class of patrons who will not patronize a poorly ventilated house.
>
> (Signed) HARRY M. CRANDALL.

The Typhoon Fan Company advise us that they are in possession of many such letters speaking in the highest praise of the results obtained from the use of their Typhoon system.

GENERAL MACHINE COMPANY
MOTION PICTURE APPARATUS

Projex Lens, manufactured by the Smith Projector Company and the Projection Optics Corporation, respectively.

The Smith Portable Projector is described as a smooth-running machine. It is said to be a new type of motion picture projection machine whose mechanism is electrically operated and automatically controlled. It is equipped with a water-cooled condenser, and even though the light is unusually strong is said to be entirely free from heat.

The "Projex" lens is said to merit special mention because of the sharp and brilliant definition of the picture when correctly adjusted to a projection machine. Eugene H. Kaufman, manager of Inter-Ocean's rapidly expanding accessory department, will be directly responsible for the sales of the new products.

The Gillette Multiple Reel Machine Is Simple, Automatic and Time Saving

THE Gillette multiple reel picture machine, or appliance, is a complete motion picture machine, with the exception and head and lamp house, and works in conjunction with any type of these.

The features of the machine are the skeleton aluminum reels, the slip disc pulleys operating these reels, the variable speed starting device for the driving of projector, and the fireproof film guides.

The skeleton aluminum reels weigh but three pounds each, have a large hub and a capacity of eight thousand feet of film. The film is taken from the shipping reel onto the lower reel and then reversed onto the upper reel ready for exhibition. After the full performance has been shown, the film is again driven into the upper reel ready for the next screening. This can be done during changes of audience.

The reels are controlled by hand throttles operating slip-disc pulleys which have spring tension. The slip-disc pulleys serve two purposes, they drive the reels for rewinding and act as brakes for the reels from which the film is taken. While the upper reel is being driven for rewinding enough tension can be put on the lower one to keep the slack from the film and still not be rigid enough to break it. There is little danger of breaking the film if the pull is steady and no slack allowed. The same throttle that operates the slip-disc pulley driving the lower reel for taking the film from the shipping reels, gives the operator complete control of the lower reel while being used as a take-up, and can be adjusted while machine is in motion. By the use of this special type of slip-disc pulley it is never necessary to detach any of the belts, as the slip-disc runs free unless tension is put on it by one of the throttles.

Has Variable Speed.

The machine has a starting and variable speed device that is new to picture machines. This device is simple and never slips. It consists of a metal cone three inches long, two inches in diameter at the large end and one inch at the smaller end. This cone slides on a shaft with a key-way which is driven by the motor. On another shaft parallel with the cone is a leather disc ⅝ of an inch wide and 3 inches in diameter. The leather disc engages with the metal cone at the small end in starting, giving the projecting an easy start. Any speed desired can be obtained by sliding

MARTIN JOHNSON

Sydney, N. S. W. Australia.

November 9th, 1919.

Universal Camera Company,
℅ Burke and James,
240 Onterio Street,
Chicago, Ill.

Dear Sirs:-

On account of the hasty letter I wrote you just before I left for the New Hebrides, seven months ago, I thought you would be glad to know that both Universals stood up great, we spent six months among the head hunters and cannibals of Malekula, and used only the two Universals.

I have just finished printing the positives, and without a doubt they are the finest films I have ever made--in fact there is not a foot of poor film among the twenty-five thousand feet.

The old camera that I used down here two years ago stood up as well as the new one, and outside of scars and scratches caused by long expeditions through the jungles and over mountains, it is as good as new--in fact, it's like an old shoe, it is like a part of me, and I will always use it in preference to any other.

Will send you some photographs on the next steamer.

Sincerely yours
Martin Johnson

You may use this letter or any part in advertising, my next feature that will be released in about six months will creat a sensation, it is the most wonderful film of exploration that has ever been made, and the photography is perfect--it was all made on the two Universals.

It will probally be called WILD MEN OF MALEKULA.

'Shooting' the wild men with a UNIVERSAL

THE UNIVERSAL Motion Picture Camera is the favorite camera of the explorer—the man who risks his life to get pictures.

The compactness, strength and reliability of the Universal make it the ideal machine for work where the "going" is rough and conditions are bad. The Universal stands up under the hardest kind of usage and gets perfect film under the most adverse conditions.

Read this letter from Martin Johnson, the intrepid explorer, whose pictures of the savage cannibals of the South Sea Islands create such a sensation. The pictures show him filming the "Wild Men of Malekula." He uses a Universal exclusively.

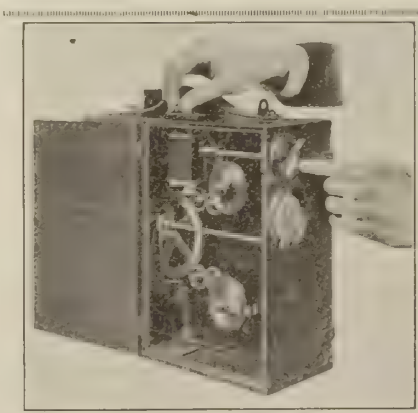
the cone on its shaft. The leather disc is held against the cone by coil springs and can be adjusted to the necessary pressure. A starting lever operating the cone is convenient to the operator's hand.

Another feature of the machine is the fireproof film guides. Each guide has a double set of rollers. Two of the rollers are shaped like a spool, the other two are plain and a trifle wider than the film. These run inside the flanges of the spool shaped ones, making it impossible for the film to run out of the rollers, which are thrown apart by a cam to allow threading of film. The rollers are completely housed and a light spring keeps them against the film, making it impossible for fire to get through them. There are five of these guides on each machine, two for the film while passing from magazines through head and three for rewinding.

The machine has adjustable legs and can be accommodated by any booth five feet square and five feet eight inches in height and give operator plenty of room.

The Universal Camera Has an Efficient "Built-In" Dissolve

THE accompanying illustration shows the "built in" dissolve of the Universal motion picture camera and its method of operation. This ingenious and simple device is actuated by the main gear of the camera.



The Built-in Dissolve
of the Universal camera, showing its manipulation.

The dissolve is operated from the main gear of the camera. A lever on the top of the camera is pressed forward or backward to put the dissolve on or off. The right hand of the operator in the picture is shown pressing this lever. The left hand of the operator is pointing to the shutter indicator, which is placed back of the camera.

To make a fade in, the lever on top of the camera is pressed forward to "IN" and the crank turned until the shutter has opened up to the proper aperture for the exposure.

To make a fade out, the lever is pressed to "OUT" and the crank wound until the shutter opening has closed as shown.

This is only one of the many outstanding features of the Universal, which are winning for this machine world-wide recognition where portability and strength are desired.

Many leading explorers' news agencies and educational film makers have adopted the Universal exclusively.

Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Expands

THE Automatic Ticket Selling and Cash Register Company has moved its executive and sales offices to new and more commodious quarters, on the fourth floor of the Goodrich Building, 1780 Broadway, New York.

Moving into new and larger quarters is the healthiest kind of a sign of success, and we are glad to extend our congratulations to the well-known manufacturers of the Perfected Automaticket Register.

The new offices provide ample show room space for the demonstration of the Automaticket Register to visiting exhibitors and all exhibitors coming to New York are invited to use the correspondence facilities of the company while in town.

Lynch Enterprises Equips More of Its Theatres with Typhoons

THE S. A. Lynch Enterprises, the well known theatre owners, operating one of the largest chains of theatres in the South, has placed with the Typhoon Fan Company during the last few days, another large order for Typhoons.

These people have thoroughly tried out the Typhoon system during the past six or seven years, and have found that to meet the severe conditions in the summer weather throughout the South, the Typhoon cooling and ventilating system is ideal.

Where the Projectors Went.

March 5, 1920.

Moving Picture World:

Replying to the inquiry of John T. Perron in your issue of March 6, regarding "The present whereabouts of the hundreds of motion picture projectors that the Government, Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., and similar bodies must have had at the end of the war," the following letter, which we have recently received, may supply the desired information:

February 27,1920.

Nicholas Power Co.,
90 Gold St., N. Y. C.

Gentleman:

I have used the Power's for theatre and road work for over fifteen years, and had the supervision of some two hundred machines in the army camps in France. I found them to be very reliable and that they stood up well under the rough handling that some of the inexperienced army operators gave them.

It was very difficult to get a Frenchman to admit that any machine was better than his own Pathe, but they made a great scramble to buy Power's when the community quit business in France.

Very truly yours,
HUGH E. KINK, Supervisor, Community Motion Picture Bureau, 6 Beacon St., Boston, Mass.

During the war the Nicholas Power Company sold over 1,800 projectors to the Government, Y. M. C. A., Red Cross and K. of C., which will probably be a record in this line for a long while to come.

In Foreign Markets.

Every machine we sold was a new one, and of course, after it passed out of our hands we had no control of its use or disposal. However, we are aware through our European agencies that these machines are on the market in foreign countries, and they have had quite some influence on our export business. We think it is very excellent evidence of the quality of our machines that they are in active use and there is a strong demand for them in competition with the best and newest European projectors. The treatment these machines received in France and elsewhere came under the personal obsrvation of the writer, and I can heartily agree with Mr. King when he states "that they stood up well under the rough handling that some of the inexperienced army operators gave them."

Some day, when the true story of the great war comes out, I think the boys who served Uncle Sam will realize that no other single thing so greatly contributed to their happiness while away from home as moving pictures. Plain, unadulterated homesickness was the most serious disease in the army, especially in France after the armistice, and moving pictures was the medicine that cured more "sick" boys than anything else I know of.

Very truly yours,
P. McGuire,
Advertising Manager, Nicholas Power Company, Inc.

Wants Stencil Machines.

Moving Picture World:

Find enclosed check for $3.00 for renewal of our subscription to the Moving Picture World for the coming year.

We have been trying for some time past to procure a stencil machine for making slides, and up to the present time have been unable to get any line on where the machines are made.

We are enclosing a sample slide and would like to know if you could give us any information as to where the stencil machines are made and the name of the makers.

AMERICAN THEATRE,
L. P. Brenneman.

Wants Seating Layout.

Moving Picture World:

I notice in the World that you have, for the benefit of your readers, a Better Equipment Department.

I have just purchased a lot and intend building a motion picture theatre, and what dope I would like to know is how is the best way to arrange seating to get in the most seats. Lot is 33 by 125 feet.

Thanking you for any help that you can give me, I remain,

Yours truly,
JOE BROKAW, manager,
Brokaw Theatre.

Would suggest that you take up the matter of arrangement of your proposed house with one of the picture theatre architects listed on this page.

In a matter of this kind their suggestion would be much better than any which I could offer.

Tell Us Your Troubles

WHENEVER any exhibitor or house manager runs up against a snag in the matter of equipment—its choice, use or installation; whenever you are in doubt as to just what you should do to make a new house attractive or improve an old one—ask the "Better Equipment" Department and we will dig up the dope for you. BUT don't forget to enclose a stamped return envelop with your inquiry.

The AMERICAN PROJECTOSCOPE

"The Portable Motion Picture Projecting Machine Without An Apology."

Experience has proven that the new American Projectoscope is without an equal as a compact, portable, fool-proof projection machine. Gets current from any electric light socket, runs film either backward or forward—film can be stopped and held stationary at any point.

For Directors, Film Editors, Exhibitors

For use by a director or film editor in examining film it is unequalled—titles can be held stationary on the screen and inspected. Exhibitors can use it to project features in their private offices while the theatre screen is in use.

FOR SCHOOLS AND CHURCHES

The Projectoscope is ideal for schools and churches. Anyone can operate it—no experience necessary. Either hand-driven or motor-driven devices supplied. Throws a perfect picture. Can be set up and taken down in a minute. No rewind necessary.

FOR COMMERCIAL USE

Price of Machine, Complete
$ 1 6 . 5 0
including ten sticks of compound

A SMALL INVESTMENT— LARGE RETURNS—

This Machine is designed to apply a wax compound to the margin of New Films, to prevent damage during the first few runs thru the Projecting Machine.

The collecting of emulsion from "green" films on aperture plate and tension springs of the projector is in many cases causing untold damage to the film and excessive wear to the projector as well as marring the presentation on the screen by jumping.

Proper Waxing of New Films—

Prolongs the life of the Film.
Eliminates excessive wear on Projecting Machine.
Insures Steady Pictures on the screen.
Prevents tearing of sprocket holes by emulsion deposits.

AND

Saves the film from having Oil squirted all over it by some Operator trying to get "green" film thru his machine without a stop.

The Werner Film Waxing Machine applies the Compound accurately to the margin of the film and positively will not spread wax onto the picture. Wax always in position. Requires no adjusting.

IT ISN'T THE EXTENSIVENESS OF A MAN'S VOCABULARY, NOR THE ARTISTRY OF ITS USE THAT MAKES HIM CONVINCING. IT'S THE UNDERLYING SINCERITY OF HIS WORDS!

THESE advertisements for the RITCHEY poster carry conviction simply because we ourselves are absolutely convinced that the RITCHEY poster is positively, and beyond the shadow of a doubt, the finest motion picture poster that it is humanly possible to execute.

We know that no motion picture poster experts exist comparable to those in this organization, for the prestige of the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. is based upon the fact that it includes practically every really great motion picture poster specialist in the world, and upon the further fact that the entire organization has been welded into a perfectly functioning group under the faultless leadership of the greatest poster expert living!

To fully realize how we compare to other lithographing concerns, imagine a motion picture producing company that controlled all the great and notable motion picture stars, all harmoniously working under the greatest director in the world. One can see, at a glance, that all the finest screen plays would, of necessity, emanate from this producing company.

In the line of motion picture posters that is precisely what the RITCHEY LITHO. CORP. has done, and that is why the RITCHEY poster is the greatest poster it is possible to make. And that is also why no other poster can be made that will compare to it.

All of which is merely a plain statement of fact, sincerely and truthfully spoken.

"BURNT WINGS"

THOUSANDS of women say Joan was right, thousands argue she was wrong. No matter which view they take, the point is, they can't help discussing "Burnt Wings"—which means every woman wants to see it. Add to this, the popular appeal of handsome Frank Mayo, and Bayard Veiller's powerful story—a stage "hit" as "The Primrose Path"—and you'll say here is an offering you do not intend to miss.

YOU know it as well as we—there's nothing like a big production to make big money. And when we say "big" we mean a picture that's big in its scenes, big in its emotions, big in the sweep of its drama. After all, the pictures that people really talk about—that crowd your theatre—are those that stir the imagination with the vastness of their canvas—their vivid coloring—their fundamental human passions. All others are simply "bread-and-butter"—"program stuff."

A production that was six months in the making. Throbbing with human emotion—overwhelming in its big scenes—glowing with all the colors of the colorful East. A picture that will lift your people out of the humdrum round of life and give them something to remember for many years. See your Universal-Jewel Exchange to-day—the sooner you show it the bigger your business. There is only one phrase that completely describes "THE VIRGIN OF STAMBOUL." It is—

NO one who ever saw "BLIND HUSBANDS" will ever forget it—nor will anyone ever forget "THE DEVIL'S PASSKEY," for Von Stroheim has once more combined a tremendously tense story with a wealth of marvelous detail and true-to-life atmosphere. This time you will surely think you are in Paris, for there is a wonderful reproduction of the Grand Prix, the classic of the French turf, with its thrilling races, brilliant crowd and royal guests—sumptuous scenes showing the interior of the Theatre Francais—elaborate views of Mme. Malot's fashionable costume establishment with its beautiful mannequins—all this in addition to a story that gets your heart in its clutch and keeps tightening with every reel. Watch for the coming announcement of release—you need to see "THE DEVIL'S PASSKEY" at your first opportunity.

What Do You Want in Comedies?

ARE you looking for comedies carrying every week the same little cast of "so-called" stars—whose names mean nothing at your box office—whose peculiar type fits them for only a certain type or kind of comedy story, so that the same situations and stories must be rehashed, week after week, to fit that little cast? If so—we have nothing for You.

But—IF you want funny comedies—different in nature every week—a world wide range of laugh-forcing situations because they're built around stories selected only because they're screamingly funny—with real artists selected to fit the story whatever it may be—

Then it's your move. Send that prepaid post-card and get details right now. Several thousand of your brother exhibitors have already beat you to it.

Gentlemen:-

I am glad I had the opportunity of seeing "THE SACRED FLAME". I think it is the best picture I ever saw for the Independent Exchange, and if Independent Exchanges could get hold out about 20 pictures like "THE SACRED FLAME" they would clean up a pile of money that would startle them. To my notion the demands such pictures as yours for it carries the type of story that people want, and that people will boost to the very limit. Thats the kind of picture that gets the Exhibitor the money on the "sure shot basis". I recommend it to any and every Exhibitor in the land, especially do I recommend it to all Independent Exchanges-who want money makers. "The Sacred Flame" is a genuine winner.

"THE RIGHT OF WAY"

"is an unusual picture," says Edward Weitzel on page 1979 of last week's issue of Moving Picture World. "Of the production itself and the individual work of director, star and scenario writer, words of hearty commendation are in order. By its production Metro gives new advance to the screen."

New advances, this year, are not uncommon among pictures or papers. Some of them are worth printer's ink and are noticed by the men who know.

Worth mentioning, among others, are "Clip and Paste" and "Consensus of Trade Press Reviews," appearing each week in Moving Picture World.

By reason of these and a dozen other features—perhaps imitated, but not duplicated by any contemporary—as has Metro's "The Right of Way" among its fewer and better pictures—Moving Picture World has the right of way among five and twenty trade papers.

We Have With Us This Week

Battle of Ballots Between Salina and Wichita 2146

Picture Showmen Vote on the location for a Film Exchange and Universal's Board of Electors gives Wichita the decision. Kansas always was strong for majority rule—it's a Real American commonwealth.

"Good Bye, Good Luck and Thanks for the Offer" 2099

Years of Rumor come to fruition as P. A. Powers surprises Filmdom by selling to Carl Laemmle and Robert H. Cochrane his Universal holdings, lock, stock and "barrel." Read the interesting and important details.

Meet the Exchange Man Who Serves You with Shows 2146

Three pages of newsy gossip about the live-wire hustlers of the film world. You are sure to run into an item that will interest you—news of the men who keep the wheels of industry moving.

Whitman Bennett, Silent Force in Filmdom, Crashes Into the News 2095

With Lionel Barrymore as his star First National will have the Bennett production ideas, unfettered and unafraid, to show big vision of a worker and producer.

Censorship As She Is Sensed Country-Wide 2101

Massachusetts, for instance, apparently has decided for some form of censorship. But the Bay State is an exception to the rule, practically every other Commonwealth standing with more or less determination against restrictions in the form of censorship.

"Cleveland-Pittsburgh Plan" Extended to Sunflower State.... 2155

Kansas exhibitors pay their State association dues by the simple and evidently satisfactory method of running an advertising slide—and keeping paid in advance.

Putting Educationals Into Handy Circulation 2097

C. L. Chester's product goes into the exchanges lately established by Educational Film Company. You can soon get an "Educational" as quickly and easily as you get your mail at the post office.

Get Into "Personal Touch" with Utica Convention Aftermath... 2100

Sam Spedon combs his note book and sets down what was "did" and what was "didn't" at the State convention of New York exhibitors. It's all about "You, and You and You."

And What About the Other Pages—Scores of 'Em?

There are more exclusive features—real features—between the covers of Moving Picture World every week than can be found in any other trade-paper. Said without boasting—said just to remind you that this magazine is run to help the picture showman sell tickets.

For a National Convention

ONE of the more important steps taken by the Utica convention of the New York State exhibitors was that sanctioning the calling of a national convention. If the motion picture showmen of the Empire State finally decide to carry out the terms of the resolution they will have behind them the prestige of the impressive gathering at Utica. Numbers at any convention means authority. If there is any doubt as to the representative character of the attendance at the Utica sessions a perusal of the names of the exhibitors and exchangemen present will resolve it. The Moving Picture World was the only trade journal that seriously made any attempt to collate the names of the men in attendance. Also it was the only motion picture paper to tell the story of the banquet, by every one conceded to be the outstanding factor of the occasion.

It is said that in case a convention is to be called there is a good chance it will be held in Cleveland. Perhaps one of the reasons why the Utica sessions were so largely attended was because of the city's central location in the state. Nationally Cleveland comes within the same category. We are speaking now of the film center, or the geographic film center. If we are to have a national gathering let it be called for that point most accessible to the largest number of exhibitors—providing always hotel and other necessary accommodations are equal.

Sympathy for Mr. Earl

SYMPATHY from the entire industry will go out to Edward Earl, president of the Nicholas Power Company, in the tragic death of Kenneth Earl, his only son, in an aeroplane accident. To those who personally had met this splendid young man the realization of the loss sustained by Mr. Earl will be all the keener.

A Little Business Romance

IN the smoking compartment of a car on a train bound for Utica several exhibitors were discussing motion picture men and motion picture things as only exhibitors are apt to discuss them. The conversation turned on the name of one man known to all in the party. The question was asked if the person mentioned had not encountered difficulties three years ago, financial difficulties and domestic difficulties in the way of illness.

"I'll say so," said one of the exhibitors, a man known from coast to coast. "Three years ago he was 'broke,' and worse than that he was facing accumulating doctor's bills. He wanted me to sell him my theatre. When I inquired what he was going to buy it with he said he would pawn some jewelry his wife had, and pay me $2,000 down and $300 a month in installments. The price was $10,000.

"He had the house paid for in less than a year. He later sold a half interest in it for $17,500, then bought it back for $20,000 and resold it for $30,000. In the three years since he made the first deal he has bought into other houses. Today he can close out for better than $100,000 cash. He is now, as he always was, an A1 showman. He has nerve, and he knows he has ability. I'll hand it to him. He has succeeded and deserved to succeed. In telling this I am saying nothing that will hurt his feelings, either. Secretly, he's rather proud of the way he came back."

There was a reminiscent twinkle in the eye of one of the veteran exhibitors.

"Speaking of nerve," said he, "I'll tell you an incident of the old days. We expended $16,500 in building a theatre on a plot of ground leased for eighteen months—that was the longest lease we could get. In five months we had our money back. And some of the boys think they are moving fast in these later times."

The Exchangeman's Page

HAVE you noted the quick growth of the Exchangeman's Page—or rather pages—in the Moving Picture World? The new department started off quietly and minus any blare of horns, but it "caught on" nevertheless. It has not quite hit its stride, but you do not have to take our word for it that it is "going strong." Keep your eye on this department.

Powers Retires from Universal

THE retirement of P. A. Powers from the Universal Film Manufacturing Company marks the ending of a business association which has covered the era of the motion picture's larger expansion. The announcement came on March 17, the fifth anniversary of the dinner given by Mr. Powers to Mr. Laemmle at the Hotel Alexandria in Los Angeles. This function, which was a part of the celebration of the formal opening of Universal City, signified to the trade at large that the differences which for a long time had existed between the Laemmle and the Powers interests in the organization had been composed and that in the future harmony would prevail between the two men, each of whom had been an active force in the development of the motion picture as a popular amusement.

During his connection with the Universal Mr. Powers has given of his time and means for the furtherance of the interests of the whole industry, nowhere more effectively than as a director of the National Association.

That the severance of the business relations between Messrs. Laemmle and Cochrane on the one hand and Mr. Powers on the other, relations that at times have been as entertaining as they have been exciting, should be in amity and cordiality is a matter for congratulation on the part of all friends of the trio. Here's to 'em!

Kansas Organization Strong

REPORTS from Kansas indicate that the members of the Kansas Exhibitors Association have had a most prosperous year. Matching that in importance and as a "consummation devoutly to be wished" it is announced that "they have come nearer sticking together than ever before." Usually the more prosperous the exhibitors the less ostensible reason has there been for their sticking together. A healthy index as to the situation in the Sunflower State is that at the Wichita convention it is expected there will be a lively contest for the honor of serving their fellows in executive positions.

The Kansans have adopted the Cleveland-Pittsburgh slide plan of dues paying and it has worked out successfully. The initial sum was $52 a year. Now it is hinted the price for the coming year may show an advance on this amount.

Some Short and Snappy Stuff

"I Hope the Girls Across Page Don't Jump
When I shoot," says "Hoot" Gibson, Universal player.

French Film Men Here to Buy and Sell Productions

BRINGING five French productions, Captain Vandal of Charles Delac, M. Vandal & Co., of 11 Boulevard des Italiens, Paris, arrived in New York, March 14. All of the pictures, which are Film d'Art productions, practically were sold before the captain left France. The captain formerly was managing director of the Eclair company, well known to American exhibitors. He is accompanied by R. A. Ferrand, and the two will be in New York for a month. It is their intention to take back with them American productions, for distribution by the renting division of their company. The firm of Charles Delac, M. Vandal & Co. is planning an American campaign for Film d'Art productions.

Would Tax Advertisements to Conserve Print Paper

A TAX of 10 per cent. upon all advertisements in books, magazines or newspapers having a circulation of 5,000 or more, or pamphlets or other publications entering the mails, is proposed in a bill which has been introduced in Congress by Representative Thompson, of Ohio. The only exceptions to this tax would be classified advertisements under the heads of "lost," "found," "help wanted" or "situations wanted."

On all advertising matter other than specified above, a tax of 15 per cent. of the sum usually charged for the production of such matter would levied. This would take in billboards, posters, street car advertisements, theatre programs, etc. In both instances the tax would be payable by the advertiser.

Adoption of a tax on advertising, in the opinion of the author of the measure, would materially reduce the advertising space used and would conserve the supply of print paper, while at the same time providing revenue for the government. The measure has been referred to the House Committee on Ways and Means.

Lincoln Files Suit Against Associated Pictures Company

ALLEGING breach of contract and a right to participation in the profits from the motion picture play, "Virtuous Men," E. K. Lincoln, motion picture star, has filed suit in the New York supreme court against the Associated Pictures Corporation and Herbert Lubin and Arthur H. Sawyer, officers.

Mr. Lincoln alleges that on September 30, 1918, he entered into a contract with the defendants to loan them $30,000 and render his services as a motion picture star, for which services he was to receive $4,000. In return, Lincoln charges, the defendants were to produce a photoplay under an arrangement with the General Enterprises, Inc., and after this play was sold and necessary expenses deducted, he was to receive 50 per cent. of the profits, plus 6 per cent. interest on the money he invested, while all monies spent in the production were to be met against vouchers approved by Lincoln, he alleges. In addition, the latter says Lubin and Sawyer undertook to finance the play, guarantee and production, and the performance of the contract by the Associated Pictures Corporation.

Soon after signing the contract, Mr. Lincoln was elected a director of Associated Pictures and work started on "Virtuous Men" with Lincoln in the star role. On its completion he avers the play was sold for $100,000 and his $30,000 was returned to him, plus the $4,000 he earned, but ever since he says he has been unable to obtain from the defendants the interest on his money, or his share in the profits of the play.

"Motion Picture World" Solicitors Are Not Connected With This Paper

WHAT seems to be at least a more or less mild case of misrepresentation has been brought to the attention of the Moving Picture World. Calling on exhibitors in Ohio have been two solicitors seeking a slide tie-up between merchants and exhibitors. The cards presented by the two have a striking typographical resemblance to those carried by accredited representatives of the Moving Picture World. They bear the inscription, "Motion Picture World, Suite 511, Hartford Building, Chicago," with offices in New York, Detroit, Chicago and Los Angeles. The Chicago office of this paper is at 64 West Randolph Street.

The Moving Picture World desires exhibitors to bear in mind that this journal has nothing whatever to do with the "Motion Picture World" or its representatives. The plan of the slide purveyors may be perfectly regular as a general business proposition, but as to that phase of their work the Moving Picture World is not concerned. We are in the publishing, not the slide, business.

Texas Public Utility Agent Takes Sunday Closing Action

SUNDAY closing by an edict of public utility officials is now facing the motion picture industry. By an arbitrary order issued by a local express official at Dallas, Texas, all in and out service on motion picture films for Sundays and holidays is eliminated, the order becoming effective on Sunday, March 21.

This is regarded by the industry as one of the most drastic measures ever attempted by a public utility and one that if permitted to remain in effect will mean that hundreds of theatres served by the Dallas exchanges will be compelled to close their doors on one of the busiest days of the year.

At a special meeting of the transportation committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry called by Chairman P. H. Stilson on March 16, action was taken to have the order abrogated. Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary, has taken up the matter with the Interstate Commerce Commission, as the order affects interstate as well as intrastate business.

Appeals to Chamber of Commerce.

An appeal has been made to the Dallas Chamber of Commerce for its co-operation in an effort to have the order set aside and that organization has been asked to enlist the support of other trades and industries which may be affected. The national association has also asked the leading Dallas exhibitors to co-operate with the exchange managers in an effort to have the order permanently rescinded.

Arrangements will also be made for a conference with D. S. Elliott, vice-president of the American Railway Express Company.

Broadwest Films, of London. Now Controls Windsor Film

BROADWEST FILMS, LTD., of London, has taken over the entire control of Windsor Film Company, Ltd. The acquisition of the new studio, Walter West, managing director, claims, gives him more studio floor space than any other producer in Europe. The Windsor studios are situated in Bromley Road, Catford. The executive offices are also on this three-acre plot of ground. Renovating and repair work has already begun, and it is estimated that this company will produce 75,000 feet of negative film and approximately 20,000,000 feet of positive film in a year.

Mr. West is securing the film rights to a large number of books and plays, as well as original stories. He will also enlarge the Walthamstow plant. The Walterdaw Company, of Gerrard street, has already purchased the entire output of Broadwest Films, Ltd. Two of this company's production, "A Daughter of Eve" and "Snow in the Desert," are now being exploited in the United States.

Athens, Ga., Gets $200,000 House.

James F. Shehane, of Athens, Ga., has let the contract for the new $200,000 Palace Theatre to be erected at Athens this spring, and construction work will start in the near future. The theatre was designed by C. B. Howell, well known theatre architect of New York City. The house is to be constructed so that it will accommodate road attractions, vaudeville and motion pictures, but it will be primarily for the showing of pictures. The seating capacity will be 1,500.

Quebec Showmen Forming an Association for Mutual Help

A CONSIDERABLE number of independent exhibitors of Montreal and other centers of the Province of Quebec have followed the lead taken by the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario and organized a co-operative moving picture exchange. The Montreal theatre interests have organized the Almagamated Exhibitors' Circuit, Ltd., and a Dominion charter has been secured for the company, as it is the intention to establish branch exchanges in other provinces of Canada. Announcement is made that about fifty per cent of the theatre men of Montreal are financially interested in the new enterprise and stock is being sold on the open market.

An agreement was signed by practically all of the interested exhibitors last January and various investments were guaranteed by them. Even before the lists were completed offers had been made for important distributing franchises, but as yet no announcement has been made regarding such arrangements.

Phil Hazza Heading the Movement.

It is understood that the man behind the development was Phil Hazza, who has resigned from the management of the Montreal branch of the Canadian Universal in order to hold office with the new circuit. Mr. Hazza is also well known in the Canadian West, having been in charge of the Universal branch at Winnipeg for a number of years.

He also has a brother who is a theatre owner of Edmonton, Alberta. It is expected that a circuit similar to the syndicate in Quebec will be organized in the Prairie Provinces to book the pictures secured by the Amalgamated.

New Japanese Company Starts with Extensive Theatre Chain

THE International Motion Picture Company, Ltd., of Kyobashi, Tokio, Japan, has recently organized with a capital of 10,000,000 yen. The president is Bunji Okada, a member of the house of peers and former superintendent-general of the metropolitan police board. The board of directors includes Kisaburo Kobayashi and Shinji Sekiya, who will be managing director.

The Natural Color Cinematograph Company, Ltd., of Tokio, which controls over 400 picture theatres in Japan, is amalgamated with this new company, assuring it an immediate market for its product. The new company announces its intention of erecting new theatres throughout the empire.

This information is contained in a letter from the International Motion Picture Company to Moving Picture World. A representative will soon be sent to this country to get in touch with American producers.

New Kentucky Company Buys Three Motion Picture Houses

THE purchase is announced of the Princess and Dixie theatres in Mayflower and the Savoy Theatre in Princeton by the Strand Amusement Company, of Louisville, Ky., composed of Leo F. Keiler, John W. Keiler, Lee Goldberg and Fred Levy. All are motion picture houses. The company is capitalized at $50,000. The principal stockholders are the men named above. Colonel Levy is president, J. W. Keiler is vice-president, Lee Goldberg is second vice-president, Leo Keiler is secretary-treasurer and general manager, and Rodney Davis is assistant manager. The company is affiliated with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Members of the company are associated with the management of the Strand, National and Mary Anderson theatres in Louisville. Messrs. Levy and Goldberg control the Kentucky and Tennessee franchises of First National. The Strand company, it is reported, will within a week buy four other theatres in western Kentucky.

Associated Producers Still Undecided on Distribution

THOMAS H. INCE and J. Parker Read, Jr., left for California at which time they emphasized the fact that the Associated Producers had no announcement to make regarding distribution plans of the organization.

Notwithstanding the rumors that have been current, Mr. Ince and Mr. Read declared no negotiations of any nature had been closed between the Associated Producers and any organization or individuals. They added that up to the time of their departure they were not even in a position to indicate what direction any future negotiations might take.

"Nothing definite will be consummated until our return to the Coast," said Mr. Ince. "Immediately following there will be a meeting of the Associated Producers to consider the result of our conferences in New York. It is reasonably certain that shortly after that a decision will be arrived at which will enable us to make public the future plans of the Associated Producers."

Answers Insinuations That Film Men Think Only of Cash

FRED B. MURPHY, president of the New England Film Managers' Association, has a few pertinent ideas regarding state censorship of motion pictures. Here they are:

"We are not in an illegitimate business. Every man at the head of the film industry in Massachusetts is a married man and head of a family. We are not placing the dollar ahead of the morals of children. We are doing everything under the sun to promote films suitable and eminently proper for all to see—good, big, broad, wholesome shows.

"It has been charged by the proponents of the censorship bill in Massachusetts that the industry has brought a large sum of money into the state to fight the bill. This is a contemptible charge. It is absolutely untrue. Whoever made that statement does not know the film industry and does not know the men who are in that industry. This charge doubtless was made to show by innuendo that the film producers and distributors were placing the dollar ahead of the morals of the community and what is right for the children of this community.

"It is a strange fact, but true, that many of the women now favoring this measure have been to our organization time after time for films for charity use. We have gone to great expense and have willingly done so, in order to help those who wanted films for any good, legitimate purpose."

Shawnee Exhibitors Buy Another.

Jones and Cammack, proprietors of the Cozy Theatre, Shawnee, Okla., have purchased the Savoy Theatre in the same town from H. T. Douglas. C. E. Momand and son, A. B. Momand, the present lessees, will continue running the theatre until their lease expires early in 1921. Jones and Cammack will not close the Cozy Theatre.

RAMBLES ROUND FILMTOWN

WITH WALTER K. HILL

"Dicated But Not Read."

Let's All Go on a Shopping Strike.

So long as the profiteers confined their depredations to the luxuries of life the Infant Industry might well run merrily along without protest.

Let the wanton waste of money for the luxurious egg, the plutocratic loaf of bread or the pitiless price raising in meat and rents continue. Filmdom knows nothing of luxury and cares less.

But the sheer necessities of film-life are now feeling the robber hand of the profiteering price lifters. It's time to call a halt.

Poker decks and pinochle dittoes of the more dependable brands are up to 40 and 50 cents. Marked cards may only be used by millionaires.

Sweet Caporals at 10 cents the pack are higher priced than they ever were during the war.

Composite cubes that roll and dance have been outrageously boosted, while real ivory dice may only be purchased on an exchange manager's salary.

Let's strike. Down with the profiteers who would snatch from the hands of an Infant Industry the necessities on which it thrives!

Up with the Shopping Strike!

If press agents would be as eager to have printed in tradepapers the news of their firm that is of general concern to tradepaper readers as they are to have printed the matter the film-boss is immediately interested in the old scrap-books would grow fatter 'n fatter and tradepapers better 'n better.

As Critics Lamp the Movie Vamp

Miss Bara vamped more space in New York newspapers on her opening night in "The Blue Flame" than ever did all the other screen queens put together.

She was the first star ever to appear on the New York stage and get a unanimous verdict from the dramatic critics.

Circuit to Star Lionel Barrymore in Series to Be Made by Whitman Bennett

LIONEL BARRYMORE will be starred in a series of four independent productions to be released through Associated First National Pictures, Inc., and to be made by Whitman Bennett, who recently resigned as production manager for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation after two years in charge of that concern's studio activities.

The contract with Mr. Bennett and Mr. Barrymore is the first to be signed by Associated First National Pictures, Inc., as an organization, and as one of the two new companies created by the exhibitor members of First National Exhibitors' Circuit at their convention in Atlantic City in January of this year.

The event is important in that it marks the beginning of activities by First National members to increase the number of productions to be available to owners of sub-franchises now being allotted to independent theatre owners throughout the country for circuit attractions. In addition, it brings to the field of independent producers Mr. Bennett, who for two years has been the managing executive of the Famous Players-Lasky production forces. Mr. Bennett announced his resignation last week. It will become effective as soon as arrangements are completed for some one to succeed him.

The negotiations between Associated First National Picture officials and Mr. Bennett and Mr. Barrymore were conducted by Larry Giffen, of the Alice Kauser organization, who also represented the producer and star in arranging details of the contract.

Mr. Barrymore will begin production work soon after May 1. The first picture in the series is scheduled for release through Associated First National early next fall.

The last screen appearance of the famous actor was in the character part of Milt Shanks in "The Copperhead." Mr. Barrymore has just completed a very successful two years' engagement as a co-star with his brother John in "The Jest" and is now starring in "The Letter of the Law" at the Criterion Theatre in New York. His four productions for Associated First National will be made in the East so that he can continue his work on the stage.

Mr. Bennett, who has gained a wide reputation as production manager while with Famous Players, will have complete charge of the Barrymore productions.

The stories for the four Barrymore pictures will be announced soon, according to First National officials, who say that each will be from a famous novel or a famous play.

Lionel Barrymore, member of the famous Barrymore family of actors and actresses, has long been ranked among the best of American artists. His stage career included theatrical engagements with Nance O'Neil, James Herne and John Drew in such plays as "The Best of Friends" and "Pantaloon." After an absence of three years from the stage because of ill health, he returned in 1909 in "Fires of Faith," later touring in vaudeville in "The Still Voice" and "The Copperhead."

His screen career began with Biograph, with which company he was for a long time connected. He appeared in the Pathe picture, "Exploits of Elaine," and later was starred in comedy and dramatic parts by Metro, one of his most notable vehicles with that company being "The Yellow Streak." Some of the more recent pictures in which Mr. Barrymore was starred were "Making Good," "Great Green Eye" and "The Millionaire's Double."

Officials of Associated First National Pictures regard the signing of the celebrated actor as a great achievement.

"We predict a phenomenal success for Mr. Barrymore in the series to be produced by Mr. Bennett because of his rare ability to do such exceptionally clever character work," says a statement issued by Associated First National officials. "His return to motion pictures brings another strong ally to the ranks of independent producers and independent stars. With Mr. Bennett he has accepted the tenets of our policy that each star and producer shall and or fall strictly on his or her own ability."

Mr. Barrymore's brother, John Barrymore, and his sister, Ethel Barrymore, both have made reputations in motion pictures equal to their attainments on the spoken stage. Miss Barrymore now is starring in "Declasse" at the Empire Theatre in New York, while John Barrymore is scoring a fresh triumph in a revival of "Richard III," after two successful seasons as a co-star with Lionel in "The Jest."

The Chesters Writing New Story.

Mr. and Mrs. George Randolph Chester, the former of whom is editor-in-chief of the Vitagraph scenario department, are well into their new novel "The Son of Wallingford," which is to be converted into a special production. This story will be the one hundred and fifth one that Mr. Chester has written in relation to the famous character, J. Rufus Wallingford. The story is entirely new except that its characters have been previously associated with the inimitable Wallingford. The stories have been circulated wherever the English language is spoken, and also have been translated into six or more foreign languages.

Nashville's Vendome Nearly Ready.

Work on the Vendome Theatre, Nashville, has been almost completed, and the theatre will open under Marcus Loew management in the course of the next two weeks. It will run on the usual Loew policy of vaudeville and feature productions. Cost of remodeling was about $100,000, including a $20,000 pipe organ which is one of the finest in any theatre in Tennessee. Heretofore the Vendome has catered only to the legitimate attractions and when it operates motion pictures it will do so for the first time in its history.

Ten Companies at Work in Vitagraph's Western Plant

SINCE the inauguration of its new special production campaign, Vitagraph has now ten companies at work at its Hollywood studios. There are three feature companies, three serials and four comedy groups at work.

Tom Terriss, with a notable all-star cast, is starting work on "The Girl from the Sky," a super-feature adapted from the novel, "Trumpet Island," by Gouverneur Morris. David Smith is nearing the completion of "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," adapted from the novel by James Oliver Curwood.

William Duncan has reached the seventh episode of his super-serial, "The Silent Avenger"; Joe Ryan and Jean Paige are well under way in their new serial, "Hidden Dangers," and Antonio Moreno has just completed his latest serial, "The Invisible Hand."

Larry Semon has just finished a comedy, and Jimmy Aubrey and Montgomery and Rock are working fast on their new ones. Montgomery and Rock have just been dissolved as co-stars, and are now heading their own companies.

Extended Runs Become Rule on Universal-Jewel Picture

REPORTS received by Universal indicate that the Universal-Jewel production-de-luxe, "The Great Air Robbery," starring Ormer Locklear, is going over even greater than had been anticipated. The picture is being booked for extended runs in the larger cities throughout the country. It is being heralded by elaborate exploitation in practically every place it is booked.

Among the theatres in which it recently has been booked for a week's run are the Standard, Cleveland; Superba, Los Angeles; for a second week, the Princess, Milwaukee; Columbia, Pittsburgh; H. and D. Theatre, Oakland, Cal.; Grand Opera House, St. Catherine, Canada; Strand, Toledo; Colonial, Aberdeen, S. D.; Garden, Newark, N. J.; Moon, Omaha; Crandall's, Washington, D. C.; Colonial, Wheeling, W. Va.; Hastings Street Theatre, Vancouver, B. C., and in the theatres of the Iowa Amusement Company in Des Moines and of the Circle Theatre Company of Indianapolis.

Goodfriend on Mayer's Camera.

The latest addition to Louis B. Mayer's force of cameramen is Pliny Goodfriend, who is doing the photoplay for Mildred Harris Chaplin's next First National attraction.

Test projections of both interiors and exteriors have shown that Goodfriend is an artist at the camera and that Mrs. Chaplin's coming picture will be a photographic masterpiece.

Work on this newest Mrs. Chaplin production has progressed to such an extent that Louis B. Mayer expects shortly to be able to set the release date.

C. L. Chester Describes New Studios Before His Departure for West Coast

THE head of the Outing Chester productions, C. L. Chester, left New York March 16 for Los Angeles, which city in the future will be the home of Chester-Outing Scenics, Chester Screenics and Chester Comedies. Until the completion of the studio which Mr. Chester is building he will have his offices in the Martin Building.

When seen in New York on the morning of the 16th, Mr. Chester was full of enthusiasm in telling of his plans for the future. Talking of his studio, he said it would be two stories and on a plot 180 by 320 feet adjoining the Fox studio. The lower floor of the building will be the workshop. The floor above will be laid out more as a private dwelling than as a factory. The rooms will be decorated with the thousand and one souvenirs brought home by Chester cameramen from the four corners of the earth. There will be an extensive library. In fact, the atmosphere of this floor will be that of the library. Silence will be the rule.

To Continue Menagerie.

Mr. Chester is surrounding himself with men of the highest caliber. Speaking of the work of his companies in the field, Mr. Chester says that a cameraman starting out has his book of instructions and follows them. Nothing is left to chance. Every detail is settled in advance. If on arrival at the scene of action the cameraman is under the impression that he can do a certain thing better than the script calls for he is permitted to follow his own bent, but at the same time he also must follow his directions.

C. L. Chester

At the studio will be continued the small menagerie which contributes to the fun in the comedies. The animals are trained in advance for the setting of the stage. This, in fact, is the rule in all the Outing Chester works.

In abandoning New York to go to the Coast Mr. Chester feels that he is going home. In Los Angeles for many years have lived Mrs. Chester's father and mother. The Chesters own their own home.

Mr. Chester believes that on the West Coast he is going to do bigger things than he has been able to do in the East. His friends here will regret his departure. At the same time they will wish him a full measure of success in his new field and in the working out of his larger plans. Not the least among these in the order of importance is the coming distribution of Chester productions through the branches of the Educational Films Corporation of America, the full details of which will be found on the following page.

"Why Change Your Wife?" Evokes Exhibitor Applause

SALESMEN at the New York City and Buffalo exchanges of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are still hearing echoes from New York State exhibitors who saw the forthcoming Cecil B. DeMille super-special, "Why Change Your Wife?" at a special showing in the Colonial Theatre, Utica, during the recent Utica convention.

More than two score exhibitors attended the showing of the picture at the Colonial. In connection with the screening there was an unusually fine program on the theatre's big pipe organ. At the conclusion of the picture, the exhibitors burst into a storm of hand-clapping, and, it is said by Famous Players representatives, they declared that "Why Change Your Wife?" will surpass the records of other big Cecil B. DeMille productions, such as "Male and Female," "Don't Change Your Husband" and "For Better, for Worse."

Famous Players representatives who attended the convention were H. H. Buxbaum, manager of the New York exchange; Allan S. Moritz, manager of the Buffalo exchange; Joseph H. Seidelman, manager of the newly organized Albany exchange; W. G. Roosevelt and Henry Randall, New York exchange salesmen, and J. A. Rogers and M. W. Bempner, Buffalo salesmen.

Distinctive Types Appear in Barker's "Branding Iron"

SELDOM is a more notable cast gathered together for a screen production than those included in the Goldwyn picture, "The Branding Iron," a Reginald Barker production, based on the popular novel by Katherine Newlin Burt. It is a picture in which the roles are so distinctive, the types so pronounced, and the situations so tense and dramatic as to require ability of the highest character, says a Goldwyn announcement.

Barbara Castleton plays the role of Joan Carver, about whom the story centers. She has played delightfully in society roles, her beauty and charm of manner fitting her thoroughly for such parts. Her role in "The Branding Iron" is radically different. It is the role of an ignorant mountain girl with impulses and longings and aspirations which she herself does not understand. It is essentially a character portrayal.

Playing opposite Miss Castleton is James Kirkwood, in the characterization of Pierre Landis, untutored, direct, forceful young rancher, Russell Simpson, is cast in the role of John Carver, the dissolute, utterly degraded father of Joan. Richard Tucker plays the role of Prosper Gail. Albert Roscoe is a well-known screen leading man. Sydney Ainsworth has an enviable reputation on stage and screen.

September 23, 1911, Epes Winthrop Sargent established in Moving Picture World the first department applying to Advertising for Exhibitors. Without missing an issue he has continued it ever since—eight years of efficient helps to the showman.

Educational Announces New Contract Involving Investment of $750,000 Plus

CONTRACTS for short subjects involving an investment of more than $750,000 were signed during the past week by Educational Films Corporation, according to an announcement just made by E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager.

While the addition of this product to the company's own releases places Educational Films in a foremost position in the short subject field, it is stated that this is but the first of a series of announcements that will follow the plans of Mr. Hammons and his associates for unusual specialization in the distribution and exploitation of scenics, one and two reel comedies, travel and animal pictures and various subjects that come under the head of "educational."

During the past week the entire product of C. L. Chester, including the Chester-Outing Scenics, the Chester Comedies and the Chester Screenics, were acquired. Contracts were also signed with Johnson and Hopkins for the exclusive control of all pictures made by the "Stereospeed" camera, a recent invention of Earle Emlay. Negotiations for other pictures were also brought to a satisfactory stage and further announcements are indicated as forthcoming soon.

Promises Special Exploitation.

Exclusive control of both the American and the foreign markets is provided for in the agreements just signed. Recent announcements in the trade press have told of the organization by Educational Films of its own exchanges throughout the United States and these will be devoted exclusively to the handling of short subjects. Educational has for some time controlled the foreign distribution of Chester-Outings as well as its own product, and as the result of the participation of English capital the foreign system of distribution is being greatly increased.

For months past Mr. Hammons has been carefully laying the plans for the increase in short subject product. During the past few weeks there has been an adjustment of the organization to provide for the fullest development of short subject possibilities and ample capital has been provided to carry out the most ambitious plans. Arrangements for the fullest possible exploitation of these pictures assure them the same attention as the so-called "features." By confining itself to this class of product Educational promises a degree of exploitation that is not possible with companies dealing with film of all kinds it is said.

Taking over of the short subjects announced this week, and acquisition of others for which negotiations are now pending, will in no way affect the product heretofore distributed by Educational. In fact, expeditions controlled by the company, which will penetrate literally the four corners of the earth, are now under way, and there are in the company vaults thousands of feet of adventure and scenic product which will shortly be ready for release.

For many months Robert Bruce Scenics and Chester-Outing pictures have been regarded as leaders in that field, and it is significant that Mr. Chester should be the first to contract for the acquisition of his entire product by Educational. Chester-Outing Scenics will continue to be released weekly and will cover in their same inimitable manner places and peoples all over the world.

"Four Times Foiled," first of the new Chester Comedies, was recently shown at the Rivoli and was given a reception accorded few achievements in the fun field. Mr. Chester has proven to the officials of Educational that he will be able to maintain the same high standard in his future creations, which are being produced on the West Coast by W. B. Campbell, and that they will afford a degree of humor and cleanliness that will appeal to all audiences. Thirteen of these comedies are to be produced in a year.

Comedy and Scientific Novelties.

Chester Screenics are a recently announced creation. Each of these will include 500 feet of animal pictures and 300 feet of carefully selected scientific subjects, so arranged as to have a popular appeal. It is said that this reel, which will be produced weekly, will mark a distinct departure in cinema entertainment.

E. W. Hammons

Following the recent announcement of the perfection of the "Stereospeed" camera, there has been an unusual interest in this product. Mr. Emlay has been able to create an almost endless number of novelties, both comedies and scientific subjects, with this camera which makes it possible to photograph pictures at the rate of 384 a second.

Negotiations for the acquisition of much other short subject matter, including several brands of comedies, are now in progress, and announcement of several of these deals is expected at any moment. Mr. Hammons authorizes the statement that Educational will continue to devote its entire resources to handling short subjects of all sorts and that it is ready to consider the acquisition of further matter that meets the high standard of quality that is demanded by his organization.

Pell Mitchell Engaged.

A further announcement of the past week is that Pell Mitchell, one of the best known news reel editors in the country, has been added to the Educational staff. Mr. Mitchell organized Fox News and attracted much attention by his work as news editor of Gaumont Weekly. Mr. Hammons intimated that he expected to have an interesting announcement to make within a short time as to the special work which will be under the direct supervision of Mr. Mitchell.

Determination to make an earnest effort for fullest exploitation of the short subjects is evidenced by the announcement that R. E. Pritchard, who for the past year has been director of advertising, exploitation and publicity for the Allen Enterprises in Canada, has been brought back to New York to take a similar post with Educational.

To Release "Burnt Wings" for the Week of March 29

BURNT WINGS," featuring Frank Mayo and Josephine Hill, is the special attraction on the Universal release program for the week of March 29. It was directed by Christy Cabanne and is the screen version of Bayard Veiller's play, "The Primrose Path," which played on Broadway last season.

The serial releases announced for the week include "The Fatal Crossing," the eighth episode of "Elmo the Fearless," with Elmo Lincoln, and "Desperate Deeds," the fourteenth episode of "The Lion Man," with Jack Perrin and Kathleen O'Connor. A one-reel Lyons and Moran comedy, "Butting in on Baby," and a Rainbow comedy, "Light Hearts and Leaking Pipes," with Zip Monberg and Virginia Warwick, are the laugh provokers. The question of prohibition enters into the Jewel Special, "A Prohibition Monkey," in two reels, with Joe Martin. A two-reel western, "Finger Prints," features Robert Reeves. Dorothy Wood, a vaudeville artist, is also in the picture.

Beginning the week of March 29, the International News released on Wednesdays will be discontinued. All future releases will be known as International News and will be shipped Tuesdays and Fridays. International News released on March 29 will be known as No. 13 and will run consecutively thereafter.

Graumann Projection Expert Sees the Simplex Factory

GEORGE FEINBERG, of Minneapolis, Bert Weddige and Max Rubin of Detroit, Leo Dwyer, of Cincinnati, and George Perkins, of Canada, Simplex distributors, have been visiting New York theatres. Another recent interested visitor at the Simplex factory was Edwin A. Keller, late of the Graumann projection staff of Los Angeles, who has been selected by Major Greason to take full charge of the projection in the fifty-odd theatres controlled by the Provincial Cinematograph, Ltd., throughout the United Kingdom.

Mr. Keller is a member of Local 150, M. P. O. U. of Los Angeles, and has held every office in that union. He was greatly interested by what he saw at the Simplex factory. Mr. Keller, together with Fred Weaver, has perfected a device for a dissolving change-over which he will incorporate in the projection system across the water.

Mr. Keller is a nephew of Charles Pettijohn, of the Selznick forces, and is noted on the West Coast for his ability as a projectionist.

Associated Makes Final Arrangements to Distribute Through Pathe Exchanges

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS, Inc., has made definite and final arrangements with Pathe Exchange, Inc., for the distribution of the Associated product. This move on the part of Associated Exhibitors comes as the result of a searching and exhaustive consideration of every distributing organization of the industry. The Associated Exhibitors believes that Pathe, headed by Paul Brunet, offers the most complete distributing service to be found. With branch offices in more than thirty-two film centers, Pathe has efficient forces and facilities to handle any number of pictures.

The members of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., located throughout the United States, are in intimate daily touch with the branch of the Pathe organization located in their city or territory. Due to the closeness of this relation, the Associated Exhibitors start operating with their future more assured and their plans already further advanced than could be the case under other circumstances.

Pathe Sole Distributor.

With the acquisition of their first picture they start out with what they consider the best distributing organization in the country. Their pictures will be handled by men who have been in intimate touch with their theatres for a number of years. These men know exactly the kind of service that the theatre man requires; they are prepared to handle the Associated product with the same thoroughness as if the picures belonged solely to Pathe.

At the time of closing this deal between Pathe and the Associated Exhibitors, Inc., Paul Brunet expressed the thought that with the big pictures which would undoubtedly be handled for the Associaed Exhibitors he would be supplying the exhibitors of the country, who look to Pathe for big things, a service of great importance. Every picture bought or produced by the Associated will be distributed through the Pathe organization to the members of the Associated Exhibitors, Inc.

Paul Brunet a Director.

While this new arrangement is merely to provide for the distribution of the Associated product throughout the United States and Canada, Paul Brunet will act as one of the directors of the new organization. This will give the Associated the benefit, in an advisory capacity, of the knowledge and experience of one of the best trained film executives in the country.

No pictures have been turned over to Pathe as yet for distribution. There have been false rumors of several important deals in which the name of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., has figured. There is no doubt, however, that when a picture is announced for Pathe distribution, it will be a box-office attraction; it will be picked with the thorough knowledge of exhibiting conditions in the country, coupled with Director Paul Brunet's international knowledge of box-office values.

Good Reports on "The Superman."

Special Features Company, of Knoxville, continues its favorable reports on the showings of "The Superman," the five-reel melodrama which it controls for the southern territory, and which is being released by Tower Film Corporation on the state right market.

Anita Stewart's Latest at Strand.

Anita Stewart's latest Mayer-made production, "The Fighting Shepherdess," will be given its first showing in the country at the Strand Theatre, New York, this week. This is Miss Stewart's first release since "In Old Kentucky."

"The Fighting Shepherdess" is a picturized version of Caroline Lockhart's novel of the same name. The production was directed by Edward Jose.

Equity Treasurer Gives His Views on "Percentage Dates That Don't Percent"

JOSEPH I. SCHNITZER, treasurer and general manager of Equity Pictures Corporation, has views on percentage engagements which he has gleaned from his experience both with Universal and during his past eight months with Equity.

"Percentage engagements in which both producer and exhibitor share responsibilities and profits are the nearest possible approach to equitable playing arrangements," he says. "First comes house expense, then prorated the productional cost. In the event of an exceptional feature, a first-class house costs no more to maintain than the engagement costs the producer to maintain.

How It Helped One Exhibitor.

"As a concrete example let us take the instance of 'Eyes of Youth' at the Ohio Theatre, Indianapolis. The franchise holder in this territory could not get a rental which he considered commensurate with the importance of the picture, and rejected several rental offers which seemed to him far below what the picture warranted. Arrangements were entered into with the Ohio Theatre to exploit the film and run it as long as it stood up.

"A special man was sent into the city, newspaper space and stunts resorted to in no more lavish manner than was the custom in the city among the first-class houses, and the picture played almost two weeks and the franchise holder received 200 per cent. more than his best rental offer and the theatre achieved its very biggest two weeks' business.

"If a theatre has a weekly overhead of $2,000 and a picture which costs more than $150,000 is booked, then, if the picture interest spends $1,000 on exploitation, etc., the net proceeds can be split fifty-fifty, and the sharing terms are absolutely equitable to both parties, for surely the cost of the picture represents, in the instance of playing this one house, at least 1 per cent. of its original cost.

"Legitimate houses rarely pay rental for attractions. Occasionally they purchase the gross receipts for a stipulated sum, but rarely do they pay an outright amount for an attraction. How then does the percentage plan work a hardship on the film exhibitor? Surely the one-night-stand manager whose house runs legitimate plays, parallels the film theatre in expenditure, overhead, etc.

"Eyes of Youth" an Example.

"'Eyes of Youth' playing Indianapolis at English's Opera House in its legitimate form would receive at least 60 per cent. of the gross receipts and would expend less than $500 on exploitation. Paper would be furnished which the house would post; the theatre would do its usual amount of advertising. 'Eyes of Youth' as a film play should be able to do anything that 'Eyes of Youth' as a stage play did, for the same conditions apply to its playing dates.

"Any producer who abstains from percentage engagements merely lacks faith in his product. His product, if played on percentage, would undoubtedly prove a poor attraction, for it is notoriously known that unless an attraction has a special appeal, it does not do more than the average business at any house. It is the special picture which must be played at special times, under special conditions and with special treatment. A film good enough to attract percentage dates must be good enough to do at least 25 per cent. more than normal at any house, no matter what that house consistently does."

Exploitation aids and suggestions printed by Moving Picture World in conjunction with reviews of new productions, will guide the picture showman aright. They are practicable and easy to put into execution.

708 Times Building,
March 15, 1920.

Mr. George Blaisdell, Editor Moving Picture World,
516 Fifth Avenue, New York.

MY Dear Mr. Blaisdell: As spokesman for the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the State of New York I beg to assure you that we are not insensible of the generous treatment which the Moving Picture World has accorded to our convention at Utica.

We particularly appreciate your editorial comments to the effect that events at the "banquet alone would have established a record entitling the convention to rank among the most notable of state gatherings—or of national gatherings either."

In seeking their proper place in the councils and in the leadership of the industry the motion picture exhibitors of the country are animated by constructive motives, and the object which they seek to attain is bound to result in the elevation of our standards. The motion picture theatre owner represents not alone a substantial and permanent investment, but he more than any other branch of the industry has the closest and most intimate contact with the great motion picturegoing public on whose confidence and approval the progress and prosperity of the motion picture will always rest.

The exhibitors of the country are therefore glad to notice co-operation on the part of the trade press. Through and with the exhibitor the trade press can align itself with every sound public sentiment and contribute its share in constructive work as well as in the defeat of hostile measures aimed at the screen. A strong body of exhibitors, national in scope, led by capable men is a wholesome and building influence and helps to preserve the independence so necessary in the journalistic field.

Sincerely yours,
SYDNEY COHEN, President.

P. A. Powers Retires from Universal; Laemmle and Cochrane Now in Control

IN a deal involving several million dollars, one of the largest in the history of the moving picture industry, control of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company will be unified within the next day or so in the hands of its president, Carl Laemmle, and its vice-president, R. H. Cochrane. This will be brought about by the purchase by these two officials of the holdings of P. A. Powers, at present the treasurer of the concern and its second largest stockholder. The Universal is the oldest and one of the largest film companies.

Mr. Laemmle and Mr. Cochrane have held an option on Mr. Powers' stock, which still has a month to run, but it has become known that they will exercise this option and acquire the stock. Mr. Powers was one of the company's original stockholders when the firm was organized in May, 1912.

Friendliest Feeling Exists.

Reports have been circulated for several weeks that there was a possibility of such a deal being consummated, but no statement could be obtained from any of the principals until March 17, when Mr. Laemmle and Mr. Cochrane, in admitting that they held an option of the Powers stock, announced: "We will exercise this option as soon as the papers can be drawn up."

Mr. Laemmle stated that by acquiring the Powers stock he and Mr. Cochrane would be the sole owners of Universal. It was further announced that there will be no changes in the personnel of the organization except the retirement of Mr. Powers as treasurer. The friendliest feeling is said to exist between all parties involved.

Were Original Stockholders.

Mr. Powers has considered this move for several months. In discussing the option and the proposed sale, he explained that his other business interests have assumed such proportions that he desires to be relieved of his duties with the Universal company.

The three principals of this deal have been associated throughout the history of the Universal and were original stockholders. The company was formed in May, 1912, by a consolidation of several independent film manufacturers, the most important of which was the Imp Film Company, owned and operated by Mr. Laemmle. Among others interested in the new company were Charles Bauman, of the New York Motion Picture Company, and W. H. Swanson, the manufacturer of Rex pictures.

Fought Patents Company.

The new combine was formed to wage war against the Patents Company, an organization endeavoring to prevent the independent manufacture and sale of moving pictures in the United States. It took up the fight of the Motion Picture Sales Company, the distributing agency for independent film manufacturers.

Mr. Laemmle had been in the film business only a few years at that time. Mr. Cochrane had been his close associate from the start. The present vice-president of Universal and his brother, P. D. Cochrane, now at the head of the Universal poster department, conducted an advertising agency in Chicago prior to their entrance into the moving picture world.

How Mr. Laemmle Started.

Among the accounts they handled was the advertising of a department store in Oshkosh, Wis. Carl Laemmle was one of the officials of that store. Amassing several thousand dollars, Mr. Laemmle determined to break away from the department store and start his own business. He went to Chicago and sought the advice of his advertising friends, the Cochranes. He wanted to put his money into some small article of popular demand.

Impressed by the unusual opportunities offered by the moving picture, then really "in its infancy," he enlisted the Cochrane brothers in his support and launched into the film business. The Cochranes threw their talents heartily into the new field. R. H. Cochrane, already an advertising expert of note, began to force new ideas into the struggling moving picture business. Some of the most important steps in the advancement of moving picture advertising were originated by him. He has been one of the most important figures in the screen world.

Universal Had Up-Hill Struggle.

The Universal company had an up-hill fight, not only against the Patents Company, which it finally defeated, assuring the future of all independent film concerns, but also because of internal disputes. Charles Bauman, its first president, retired from his position shortly after the company was formed, and Mr. Laemmle, recognized as the leader of independent film men, was placed in his stead. Mr. Laemmle has been president of the Universal ever since.

Shortly after taking office Mr. Laemmle went to Europe and opened the first American independent manufacturer's office. Upon his return several thousand acres of land in the San Fernando Valley, California, were purchased, and Universal City, today one of the largest moving picture plants in the world, began.

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company is a distributing organization as well as a manufacturer of moving pictures. Today it has more than half a hundred branch exchanges throughout the United States. It has its own branch exchanges in all parts of the globe and constantly is adding to its foreign film exchange equipment.

Sidelights of the Big Utica Convention

By SAM SPEDON

JUDGING from the number of private parties in and around the Hotel Utica during the time of the convention, we do not wonder that the motion picture industry is called the motion picture "game."

* * *

The close-up of Sam Trigger and Lee Ochs, shaking hands across the gap of then and now, was very timely and well staged. It was worth the trip.

* * *

Select's booth was easily the most attractive at the convention. It showed the fine "Italian" hand of Will C. Murphey, of the Selznick publicity department.

* * *

* * *

The movie ball, held on the evening of Wednesday, March 10, was half in and half out. The State Armory wasn't half big enough to hold the attendance. It was evident that "movies" have not lost any of their pull and popularity.

* * *

Exchangemen found the booths profitable. They reversed the order of trade. The exhibitors came to them at the convention. A number of contracts were closed there and then. United Artists representatives closed over $17,000 worth.

* * *

Very few of those who remained over at the ball until Thursday failed to take home a peace offering to their wives. A great deal of money was put in circulation at Utica.

* * *

Buck Taylor, Pathe's Buffalo manager, hired a special car to bring a party of exhibitors and exchangemen to Utica. They became so interested in what was going on in the car they didn't know when they reached their destination. The train was pulling out of the yard before they could gather up their belongings and get out.

* * *

Sydney Cohen, president of the New York State Exhibitors' League, made the big noise of the convention by throwing the league's hat into the ring for a national organization of exhibitors and the holding of a national convention.

* * *

The imitation Charlie Chaplins, Big Tillie and Elongated Mabel, took a fellow back ten years. While they didn't add to the convention they made a big flash and put over a good stunt for the attraction.

* * *

Bill Cook, of the Fox publicity department, in charge of the Fox booth, was the right man in the right place. He was on the job and never lost a point.

* * *

The consensus was that Cleveland will get the next National convention. New York and Chicago were discussed, but were considered too large with too many side attractions, which prove distractions.

* * *

S. Harrison, general representative and director of productions of the Grossman Pictures Corporation, was among those who attended the Utica convention. The Grossman Company has just produced "Face to Face" and "Wits Versus Wits," featuring Marguerite Marsh.

* * *

Benny Apple, the King of Troy, is building an eight-hundred-seat house at Troy, which will open during Easter week.

J. V. Ritchey, of Ritchey Lithographic Company; Mr. Becker, of the Becker Theatre Supply Company, of Buffalo; P. W. Barron, representing the Dooley Exchange at Syracuse and Buffalo; Bert A. Gibbons, Vitagraph's Albany representative; Frederick G. Sliter, eastern division supervisor of sales and exchanges for Robertson-Cole; Nathan Robbins, of the Majestic Theatre, Utica; P. Smith, of the Novelty Theatre, Syracuse; Charles P. Gilmore, of Oswego; Jack Farren, of Rochester; Samuel H. Eyser, of the Empire, Port Richmond, S. I.; Sol Sapphire and S. Schwartz, of New York and Leo Brecher, of Brooklyn, are a few of those whom we failed to mention in our list of those present.

* * *

Frank Bovay, manager of the Lyric at Binghamton, says conditions have been in favor of the exhibitor this past winter and a more favorable spring and summer is before them. The Kodeco Theatrical Company is erecting a new house, seating 1,600, on Shenango street.

* * *

The booth of the Dooley Exchange, Inc., of Buffalo and Syracuse, was entitled to special mention not only because of the display it set forth but because of its genial representatives: Thomas W. Dooley; Jack Kirsch, Buffalo branch manager, and P. W. Barron, special representative.

Homer Howard, representative for the National Pictures Corporation (Selznick), in upper New York State, was formerly with the United Theatre Pictures Corporation and for several years with the Paramount-Artcraft in the same territory.

Photoplay Libraries Announces Another Big Production, "The Scarlet Dragon"

LESTER PARK, who is associated with Edward Whiteside in the production of big productions for the state right market, has issued from his office at 500 Fifth avenue, New York City, a statement to the trade in behalf of their second production, "The Scarlet Dragon," starring Gail Kane and directed by Frank Reicher from Willard King Bradley's story dealing socialogically with the subject of commercialized vice.

"It is a film frankly sensational in its appeal to the public," said Mr. Park. "While sensationalism is not its aim, while lurid details have not been sought, while we have not made a mad effort to lay our hands on something red in its appeal, nevertheless the nature of the story and the manner in which it has been developed has provided opportunity for a series of unusual scenes of a sensational character.

"Sincerity is the keynote of every foot of the film. The highest class patron of motion pictures will find no detail is overdrawn, that no scenes ring as being untrue.

"I have just witnessed a private showing of 'The Scarlet Dragon' at the laboratory, and feel confident that in it we have one of the biggest money-makers of the season, especially in view of the fact that prominent in the cabaret scenes, offering their inimitable specialities are Ted Lewis, the 'Jazz King,' who is accompanied by his famous jazz band; Mlle. Dazie, who is scoring in 'Aphrodite,' a nubian dancer, who was formerly a slave of Abdul Hamid; and a number of beauties from leading Broadway shows, who offer their various versions of the shimmy dance.

"'The Scarlet Dragon' will be handled through Photoplay Libraries, Inc., who report big interest in our first offering, 'Empty Arms.' Its subject readily lends itself to unusual exploitation, and our advertising and publicity experts are extending themselves in an effort to arouse as much interest in 'The Scarlet Dragon' as they succeeded in doing for 'Empty Arms'."

With John Barleycorn in His Grave Reformers Concentrate on Censorship

WITH John Barleycorn buried, although there are indications he is rustling around in his grave, the congenital reformers have turned to the movies. That accounts for the activity this year of the censorship committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, for this is the "off year" for legislative sessions and ordinarily censorship problems would amount to very little.

The first legislative battle was staged in Virginia where the proponents of censorship, after promising to delay the matter, introduced a bill in the absence of Jake Wells, the leading exhibitor of the state. A public hearing on the bill was arranged, and at the request of the national association David Wark Griffith went to Richmond and made the principal argument against censorship.

Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the national association, and Jake Wells were in charge of the fight in Richmond, and the committee reported against censorship and in favor of the bill which would put teeth in the penal law which prevents the showing of an indecent or immoral film. The national association has at all times supported the strengthening of the penal law so as to punish the exhibition of improper pictures.

Quick Reversal in South Carolina.

Just as the Virginia fight was won, the national association received the informatoin that without a hearing the education committee of the South Carolina House of Representatives had made a favorable report on a censorship bill. A hearing was asked for by wire, and Royal K. Fuller, executive secretary of the censorship committee, went to Columbia to represent the industry. He was joined there by Jake Wells, who, in view of the aid given him by the National Association in the Virginia fight, volunteered to do what he could in this state. Miss Mary Gray Peck, at the request of the South Carolina exhibitors, went to Columbia to explain the work of the National Board of Review.

Within a half-hour after the hearing on the bill was over, the education committee, which had reported the bill, voted unanimously against censorship. Under the legislative law of the state that did not kill the bill, for any introducer who can get ten representatives to vote with him can keep a bill on the calendar. The bill was held for more than two weeks, and when it finally came to a vote it was overwhelmingly defeated.

After the hearing in South Carolina Mr. Fuller went to Atlanta for a conference with the members of the Film Exchange Managers' Association of that city as to the means of opposing the censorship bill, which it is anticipated will be introduced when the Georgia legislature convenes in June.

Mississippi Schemers Foiled.

The governor of Mississippi recommended a censorship law and the first bill introduced was amended so as to make it a crime to exhibit an indecent or improper film. The people who were supporting censorship expected that the motion picture industry would oppose that bill, and it would give them an excuse to introduce one which provided for a censorship of all films.

E. M. Clarke, special representative of the Saenger Amusement Company, who was working in co-operation with the exchange managers of New Orleans, supported the bill. It was thought that this had disposed of censorship for the state, but recently a straight censorship bill has been introduced. It is believed that this bill can be defeated in view of the amendment which has been made to the penal law.

A censorship bill was introduced in Kentucky, and while it has not been finally disposed of it is not believed that it will succeed. There has been splendid co-operation of the exhibitors and exchange men, and the experience of censorship in the adjoining state of Ohio will do as much as any one thing to defeat the bill in this state.

MASSACHUSETTS RECOMMENDS SOME FORM OF CENSORSHIP

SOME form of motion picture censorship was recommended in a formal vote taken on March 12 by the Massachusetts legislative committee on mercantile affairs. The vote stood nine to one, with five members absent. It is understood that Representative Bowser, of Wakefield, held out against any form of censorship.

A sub-committee of five was appointed to draft the bill and submit it to a committee of the whole. The members of the sub-committee are Senator Foley, of South Boston, and Representatives Keniston, of Boston; Doyle, of New Bedford; Bowser, of Wakefield, and Lombard, of Everett.

The form which the bill will take is not at all certain. Some members of the committee favor the creation of a special state department of censorship; others favor turning over the work to some existing state board; still others favor local censorship.

Massachusetts Fight the Hardest.

The hardest fight of the year has been in Massachusetts and the issue is still in doubt. There the proponents of censorship were well financed, and they made a systematic fight, working through the women's clubs. The most active supporter of censorship has been and is a candidate for a position as censor if the bill becomes a law, and that has been one real incentive of the fight. Not all of the women have supported censorship, and there were several well-known organizations which appeared at the hearing against it.

There have been two hearings on the bill, and the joint committee on mercantile affairs has named a sub-committee to consider the matter, and if thought advisable to report an amended bill. This makes it evident that the bill prepared by the so-called State Committee on Motion Pictures, which has been sponsor for censorship, will not be passed.

Splendid Support from Labor.

Harry F. Campbell, Boston manager of the Fox Film Corporation, has been chairman of the committee which has been opposing the bill, and which co-ordinated the activities of the exchange managers and exhibitors. William A. Brady, president of the national association, has given the Massachusetts situation his personal attention. The industry has been receiving splendid support from organized labor in this state, as it has in all others where there has been a censorship fight. Jack S. Connolly, Washington representative of the national association, whose home is in Boston and who served in France with the New England division, has been working with the committee. It may be several weeks before the matter is finally disposed of by the Massachusetts legislature.

In addition to the state fights the National Association and the censorship committee have been interested in several municipal contests, where an effort has been made to impose unfair and restrictive ordinances for municipal censorship. One of the most picturesque fights was in Portland, Ore., where the industry made a direct appeal to the people for fair play and has every prospect of success against the intolerant few advocating censorship.

Emmett Dalton's "Beyond the Law" Breaks Broadway Symphony Record

EMMETT DALTON, sole survivor of the famous gang of bandits that spread terror through the West in those early days when the railroads were piercing the wildernesses in their slow progress to the Pacific, is making new records on the Los Angeles Rialto. His six-reel special, "Beyond the Law," opened at the Symphony Theatre, a New York first-run house, Sunday, February 15. Mr. Dalton is pleased with results, smashing house records at every performance after the opening, when the waiting lines reached half a block in both directions from the Symphony entrance.

Before the Dalton premiere, Lew Cody in "The Beloved Cheater" and Tom Mix had tied for the house record at the Symphony. The Cody feature benefited greatly from a great love-letter contest, the winner of which was promised a role in the next Lew Cody picture. But, despite the aid of this strongly supported exploitation "stunt," Dalton outdistanced "The Beloved Cheater" house record. Dalton did not attempt to exploit his big feature, attracting the public attention wholly through human interest stories in the newspapers—and as the ex-bandit is a live news wire these gave him unstinted support.

Picture Mainly Historical.

The Dalton feature picture is mainly historical. It is said to be built wholly on facts and to be a true history of the exploits of the famous Dalton gang, but all through the story two delightful romances are woven—the story of Bob Dalton's love for a typically courageous western girl, who gave up her life for him and the story of the long, faithful vigil of Emmett's sweetheart, who made her way to the Kansas state penitentiary to visit him after he had been desperately wounded in the last stand of the Daltons at Coffeyville and then waited for him at his white-haired mother's home until the prison doors swung open fifteen years later.

Although the Dalton feature film is crowded with thrills, it is primarily a powerful argument against crime. Its purpose is to dissuade the youth of America from departing from the straight and narrow path. All the criticisms of the offering, produced by Dalton's own company, are said to have been without exception favorable.

On the seventh day's showing Dalton sold "Beyond the Law" for Southern California and Arizona to C. W. Breedlove, a well-known exhibitor of Los Angeles. He is now producing a series of two-reel western fiction pictures, which are being state-righted by Wilk and Wilk, of New York.

Three Barrymores to Appear at S. R. Drew Post Benefit

FOR the first time in the history of New York theatricals, Ethel, Lionel and John Barrymore are to appear on the same bill. This will be at the benefit performance for S. Rankin Drew Post, No. 340, American Legion, at the New Amsterdam Theatre, on Sunday evening, April 11.

The reason for this epoch-making stage event is that the S. Rankin Drew Post, composed of theatrical and motion picture people, was named for a member of the famous Drew-Barrymore family. S. Rankin Drew, a son of the late Sidney Drew, made the supreme sacrifice in France and was the first American actor killed in the world war.

To honor the memory of Mr. Drew, the Barrymores will appear at the New Amsterdam benefit. Ethel Barrymore first suggested the idea, which was taken up with enthusiasm by Lionel and Jack.

The benefit performance, which will be one of the most unusual of its kind ever presented, is being given to raise funds for a gymnasium for the S. Rankin Drew Post in the heart of the theatrical district. The Post now has a membership of more than 300 men of the amusement and allied interests. It also has a women's auxiliary, of which Mrs. Sidney Drew is president.

The three stars heading the bill will be surrounded by an array of the most popular and prominent players now in New York. The performance will be under the direction of R. H. Burnside, stage director of the Hippodrome. One of the numbers will furnish a big surprise to followers of motion pictures, it is announced.

Alice Archainbaud Chautard Dies Suddenly of Paralysis

EMILE CHAUTARD, Mayflower director, is receiving condolence from his many friends upon the death of his wife. Alice Archainbaud Chautard, who passed away on Friday night, March 12, at the Chautard residence, 790 Riverside Drive, New York, following a stroke of paralysis.

Although Mrs. Chautard had been a victim of paralysis for some time, her death came as a shock to relatives and friends. Word that his wife had suffered a third stroke of paralysis reached Mr. Chautard while he was working on a picture at the Paragon Studio, Fort Lee. The director hurried to his wife's bedside and was with her when she passed away.

The late Mrs. Chautard was, for years, one of the most prominent actresses on the French stage. As an emotional actress, she ranked second only to Sarah Bernhardt in the esteem of Parisienne theatre-goers and critics. Descended from a line of theatrical celebrities whose fame antedates the French Revolution, Madame Chautard was born and bred in the atmosphere of the French stage, beginning her professional career at the age of 7.

When her husband, then one of the most prominent of French motion picture directors, decided to produce in America, Madame Chautard, sacrificing the adulation of a nation, accompanied him. Arrangements were made to present her to theatregoers of this country in an elaborate stage production. At this junction, the affliction which resulted in her death intervened and she was forced into permanent retirement.

The late Madame Chautard is survived by her husband and a son, George Archainbaud, also a well known motion picture director.

Director H. Pixley Keeler Is Strong for West Coast Colony

H. PIXLEY KEELER, who came on from the Coast to make the first "Torchy" pictures for Master Film Corporations with Johnny Hines, is considering several offers to direct in the West and will return as soon as he closes with one of the film companies. During Mr. Keeler's eight years in the film business he spent half the time with Thomas H. Ince, starting as publicity manager and then becoming successively scenario writer, cameraman and assistant director.

For the last year he has been directing his own pictures. Mr. Keeler is one of the directors that is strong for the West Coast as a motion picture production center.

Robertson-Cole Sales Forces Hear Policies Outlined in Big Convention

THE officers and branch managers of the Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation met in first semi-annual convention at its home offices, 1600 Broadway, New York, on March 16, 17, 18 and 19 to discuss the general business affairs of the organization. At twelve thirty each day they participated in a luncheon at the Hotel Astor, at the conclusion of which one of the latest Roberston-Cole productions was presented and a general discussion held in the Astor Ballroom.

At Tuesday's session, March 16, A. S. Kirkpatrick, vice-president and general manager, in his address of welcome, among other things, said: "You are selling pictures by the Robertson-Cole standard, and at no time will you be permitted to make promises to the exhibitor unless you are absolutely certain you and Robertson-Cole can make good. We must be fair and honest to the exhibitor, for unless he succeeds, we fail and we must establish close co-operation, linked with fair dealing, which results in a two-fold result. Robertson-Cole maintains at all time a set policy. However rigid this course might be, honesty of purpose and sincerity of effort will count in the long run. We want results and will stop at no honest methods to secure what we believe a fair return for our investment."

Will Buy Theatres Only When Forced.

A number of telegrams from artists and others prominent in the industry were read.

At the luncheon, President R. S. Cole said: "Robertson-Cole is in the motion picture business for the money good pictures are bound to bring us and a fair investment and close co-operation between exhibitor and distributor. The men behind Robertson-Cole have a set standard and pictures not meeting the requirements of that standard will have no place in its program. It will not purchase theatres for the release of its productions unless forced to do so by competitors who band together to usurp all the trade. We should give the exhibitor the best pictures money and time can buy. We shall do everything in our power to help the exhibitor; unless he lives, we die. Business principles are the backbone of our policy. The announcements made in the past ninety days are to be overshadowed with what is to come in the future.

"The men behind Robertson-Cole are men of sound business judgment and well equipped for the battles in the motion picture world. We make no promises which cannot be carried out and do not forecast what might come but give to the trade only accurate information, sealed by contract. Robertson-Cole has sufficient money backing to purchase any film which comes up to its standard. Its trademark stands for fair play and quality of production." On Tuesday evening the entire Robertson-Cole organization was invited to attend the performance of "Clarence," at the Hudson Theatre.

On Wednesday, March 17, the visiting manager at 9:30 a. m. made a tour by autos to the Ritchey Lithographing Company and from the Battery, up Broadway, returning by way of Riverside Drive to the Hotel Astor. After luncheon the convenors went into executive session until 5:30 p. m. and disbanded for the day.

Merrick Speaks on Salesmanship.

Thursday, March 18, the convention assembled at the home office to listen to an address by Field Manager J. L. Merrick on salesmen and salesmanship, also instruction on sales records, individual pictures, quotas, branch operation and future policies. After the daily repast at the Astor and the showing of the "Fortune Teller," the delegates went into open discussion of the picture until supper time. At 8:30 p. m. the entire delegation were guests of Robertson-Cole at the performance of "The Passing Show of 1919," at the Winter Garden.

Friday, March 19, the assembly convened at the home office at 9:30 a. m. for general business and final instructions. Branch managers were called upon to answer questions pertaining to their respective territories and a general discussion of the questions followed. At 12:30 p. m. the entire Robertson-Cole organization attended luncheon in the North Ballroom of the Hotel Astor, during which general discussion was entered into and general instructions given. The convention disbanded at 5:30 p. m.

Gets Out Elaborate Brochure.

The proceedings of the convention was set forth in the most beautiful products of the printer's art that has ever been and the person responsible for it deserves special mention.

Those Present.

Those who attended the convention and took part were R. S. Cole, president; A. S. Kirkpatrick, vice president and general manager; J. L. Merrick, field manager; O. R. Hanson, Newton E. Levi and Fred G. Sliter, field managers; branch managers C. A. Saunders, Albany; R. A. Dvisa, Atlanta; F. F. Kimmerle, Boston; E. J. Hayes, Buffalo; Max Levey, Chicago; Charles Casanave, Cincinnati; Morton A. Levy, Cleveland; W. L. Campbell, Dallas; J. S. Nelson, Denver; Jerome Safron, Detroit; C. W. Tyler, Indianapolis; F. W. Young, Kansas City; A. R. Patten, Los Angeles; Louis Klar, Milwaukee; I. F. Mantzke, Minneapolis; J. B. Dumestre, Jr., New Orleans; F. Goldfarb, New York; T. R. Richards, Oklahoma City; C. L. Peavey, Omaha; J. F. Gill, Philadelphia; George Moore, Pittsburgh; W. A. Crank, San Francisco; Joe Desberger, St. Louis; L. Wingham, Seattle and C. E. Tyson, Washington.

Nagapate Said That the Work Was the Best He'd Ever Seen

THE wild men of Malekula are on their way to the United States to "capture" exhibitors. The only way to handle them, according to Watterson R. Rothacker, of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago, will be to book them.

Martin Johnson who took these pictures wrote Mr. Rothacker from Australia as follows: "I must hand it to you people. Mr. Beyfuss sends you my borderland films for printing and sends ten reels to me here in Sydney. They are excellent—in fact, I have never seen better work done. I gave a private showing at the Picadilly Theatre to two hundred of my friends and came away mighty proud of all ten reels. Then I took the films to Malekula and showed them to the South Sea nobility. Nagapate thought the work the best he had ever seen—of course, he had never seen moving pictures before.

"I shall have my new film, 'Wild Men of Malekula,' cut and assembled in about a week. It will go forward by the next steamer to America. I am sailing to New Guinea with 45,000 feet of film in about two weeks. This film I shall develop on the spot. However, afterwards when I go to Borneo, Sumatra and Africa, I shall travel so fast that I shall not have time to develop, so after New Guinea I shall send all work to you to be developed."

JOE RYAN has recovered from the injuries received while "bull-dogging" a steer for one of the scenes in "Hidden Dangers," the Vitagraph serial in which he is co-starred with Jean Paige. Accordingly, Vitagraph is able to announce that production on the new serial will be resumed.

One of Joe Ryan's next tasks will be to kill a shark with a knife in an underwater scene. Aside from that exploit, it is likely the erstwhile bad man will commit deviltries of an altogether different sort.

His implements and instruments and the forces working for and against him will be largely those of electricity.

Ryan plays the role of Dr. Brutell, a young scientist possessed of two distinct personalities, merging and changing at different times with uncanny suddenness. He works with electricity to such an extent that his discoveries become marvelous, and his employment of this power works in terrible ways.

Charming Olive Tell

Whose first Jan's production, "Love Without Question," will be given a special trade showing at the Strand Theatre on Wednesday, March 24, at 10:15 A. M., with elaborate orchestral accompaniment arranged by Carl Edouarde. Miss Tell and other members of the cast expect to be present.

THE next James Oliver Curwood novel to be visualized on the screen will be "Nomads of the North," to be produced by David M. Hartford, who directed "Back to God's Country," another Curwood romance of great screen vogue.

With the completion of Julien Josephson's "Wheelbarrow Webster," featuring Lloyd Hughes, work will begin upon the production of another Josephson rural comedy-drama, "Homespun Folks."

The Al Woods farce, "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," is being prepared for the screen, with Viola Dana starring in the role Florence Moore created. Edward Dillon will direct the presentation at Metro's Hollywood plant.

Thomas Meighan, Paramount's new screen star, is now at work in Cuba, under the direction of Hugh Ford, in "Civilian Clothes," adapted for the screen by Clara Beranger from Thompson Buchanan's play of the same title.

"Love Among the Chickens," a forthcoming Owen Moore production, was written by P. G. Wodehouse. The reader is hereby authorized to perpertrate all the "wheezes" the title will carry.

Madge Kennedy's latest Goldwyn picture, "Trimmed with Red," by Wallace Irwin, which was filmed in New York, has been finished and Miss Kennedy has gone with her husband, Harold Bolster, to Florida for a short vacation between pictures. Miss Kennedy's next picture will be made under the direction of Hugo Ballin.

Having completed "The Roads of Destiny," an adaptation of Channing Pollock's play made under the direction of Frank Lloyd, Pauline Frederick is studying the script for "Madame X," the famous French drama, which will be her next starring vehicle. The emotional possibilities of the role to be portrayed by Miss Frederick are tremendous.

Jane Novak, immediately on the conclusion of her appearance in "Roads of Destiny," was cast to support Tom Moore in his current productin, "The Great Accident," a Ben Williams story being filmed under the direction of Harry Beaumont.

"The Honor of His House," a Eugene O'Brien production scheduled for release in July, was written by Andrew Soutar, who has another story now passing through his "Blick."

Burton King is bringing Virginia Lee into prominence as a screen queen. She will star in his presentation, "The Road to Arcady," based on Edith Sisson's story first printed in the Ladies Home Journal.

Marguerita Sylvia, primma donna soprano of international repute, will soon be seen in her first screen attraction, titled "The Honey Bee," made by "Flying A" Features.

Universal's Stage Woman's War Relief series of short photoplays are introducing to the screen stage celebrities who would not otherwise find themselves photographed in animation for "picture fans." There were twelve in the original series and the last subject has just started its rounds.

Maurice Tourneur is going right down through the Robert Louis Stevenson stories. Having completed "Treasure Island" for the screen, he is now working on "The Pavilion on the Links."

Teddy, the dog that appeared in Metro's "Stronger Than Death," attracted the attention of a studio visitor.

"Oh, no," replied Director Ray Smallwood. "Teddy's a vegetarian. He gets about a hundred berries a week."

Andrew Robson has been cast as Mr. Secor in the Rupert Hughes' production, "Scratch My Back," being directed by Sidney Olcott, with T. Roy Barnes in the principal part.

Richard Tucker has been assigned to Reginald Barker's production of "The Branding Iron." Marion Colvin, Joan Standing and Albert Roscoe have also been added to the company.

Jack Pickford is making rapid progress in the O. Henry story, "The Double-Dyed Deceiver," and Mabel Normand is creating a remarkable comedy character in her interpretation of "The Slim Princess," a photoplay version of the stage comedy by George Ade and Henry Blossom. These are among the Goldwyn activities.

First staged and now screened, Augustus Thomas' "The Harvest Moon" is shining as brightly on the silver screen as upon the dramatic boards. Doris Kenyon is the compelling star of the presentation.

Mitchell Lewis rescued a girl who had fallen victim to an overturned motor near Metro's studio in Hollywood. A friend of the big star, asking a question about the incident, remarked:

"I hear you rescued a damsel in distress from beneath a flivver, Mitchell?"

Lewis smiled. "There wasn't that much to it," he replied. "And, besides, it wasn't a flivver. I had to use both hands to lift the darn thing."

Albert Payson Terhune, well-known contributor to newspaper "syndicates," has written a scenario that Marquerita Fisher will be starred in by "Flying A" features. "The Thirtieth Piece of Silver" is the title. King Baggot, one of the pioneers in motion picture acting, will be Miss Fisher's leading man in the new presentation.

Edith Day, who is playing the leading role in "Irene," a Broadway musical comedy, has the leading role in "Children Not Wanted," a forthcoming screen drama. Other members of the cast are Dorothy Walters, Jean Robertson, Ruth Sullivan and Lumsden Hare.

J. Warren Kerrigan will have as principal feminine support in his presentation of "The House of Whispers" Margery Wilson and Claire Du Brey.

Mlle. Valdeo, solo dancer with the Chicago Opera Company, and Blanche Parks, a dancer in Ziegfeld's Midnight Frolic, both appear in the George Fitzmaurice production, "The Man Who Killed," featuring Mae Murray and David Powell. And don't forget Mae is "some" dancer her own self!

Bernard Durning, who has just finished his first starring picture, "The Gift Supreme," will soon begin another, "The Sowing of Alderson Cree," in which Pauline Stark will appear as his leading woman.

Billie Burke has a habit. After finishing the scenes in each set at the Famous Players-Lasky studios she makes a careful survey of each piece of furniture, the rugs, hangings and vases to see if there is anything she wants for her own home. Then she goes shopping.

William S. Hart, a $25,000 residence; Cleo Madison, a $10,000 bungalow, and Wanda Hawley, $5,000 invested in a lot, on which she will at once build a tidy little home for something like $15,000.

Having nearly finished "The Cheater," screen version of "Judah," May Allison is preparing for "Fine Feathers," her succeeding Metro, by visiting the milliners and modists. Interest in "Judah" will be created by recalling that E. S. Willard and Marie Burroughs originated that Henry Arthur Jones play on the stage.

"Stop That Man," a stage play by George V. Hobart, has been purchased by Myron Selznick and will be arranged for the screen as a starring vehicle for Owen Moore.

Frank Keenan's next Pathe photoplay will be entitled "Dollar for Dollar" and will carry a moral lesson through its dramatic action.

Olive Thomas, with several members of her supporting cast in "The Flapper," with Alan Crosland, her director, and William Scully, assistant director, will visit Lake Placid, N. Y., where exterior scenes will be taken.

Tarkington Baker, general manager of Universal City, has written for Harry Carey a scenario that will be produced by Reeves Eason under the title of "Crossed Claims." Mr. Baker came naturally by his "story" talents. He was an active newspaper writer and editor before he "took to pictures."

"The Fighter," which will be made into a forthcoming Selznick production, was written by Albert Payson Terhune and published in book form by Methuen of London. Jack Dempsey is a serial star and must not be associated with this screen feature.

Sixteen years ago Charles Hutchison, star of the screen serial "The Whirlwind," was leading man in the melodrama "Driven from Home," supporting Patrice. Later moving pictures drove melodrama from the stage.

Bryant Washburn will have Margaret Loomis as leading lady in his screen revival of "What Happened to Jones," the Broadhurst comedy of other years.

"Next to motion pictures, automobile stealing is the largest industry in Southern California," Albert Shelby Le Vino, of the Metro scenario department, told the motor salesman when he purchased a new speedster recently.

Samuelson Completes Sixth Production in Los Angeles; Gets Passports for England

G. B. SAMUELSON, the British film producer, who has just completed his sixth production within four months at Universal City, has been issued passports for England, and will leave Los Angeles with his entire producing personnel on April 6 for New York, his sailing port. Mr. Samuelson states that he will return to Los Angeles next fall to resume film production in America.

"California is an ideal place for a studio," he says, "and it is my hope to build a studio here some day, but at the moment my English interests require my presence in England."

"Desert Dreamers," which will be Peggy Hyland's next Samuelson feature, will be filmed partly in Egypt and partly in Paris, but the first destination of the Samuelson players after leaving New York, is Worton Hall, the English studio of the Samuelson company at Isleworth, England.

The six productions that have been completed here are "At the Mercy of Tiberius," with Peggy Hyland; "Love in the Wilderness," with Madge Titheradge; "The Night Riders," with Maudie Dunham; "Her Story," with Miss Titheradge; "The Ugly Duckling," with Florence Turner and Maudie Runham; and "David and Jonathan," with Madge Titheradge and Campbell Gullan.

Harry Leonhardt Has Plan to Reduce Cost of Production

HARRY LEONHARDT, recently manager of the California Theatre, is responsible for the organization of a band of independent producers of film features in Los Angeles with the object of slashing the high cost of motion picture making.

These producers will each keep his organization intact but all will work under one roof and will have one set of business headquarters, and one set of auditing and publicity offices. The business offices and headquarters will probably be established in New York, but the studio will be secured in or around Los Angeles, or will be built to accommodate the producing units belonging to the organization.

The producers who are now considering becoming members of the organization are Andrew J. Callahan, head of the Bessie Love Productions; Sam Rork, of the Katherine MacDonald Company; King Vidor, who is making First National features; D. N. Schwab, head of the David Butler Productions, and possibly Louis B. Mayer, whose stars are Anita Stewart and Mildred Harris Chaplin.

One of the plans of these economists is the securing of a suitable studio, or perhaps the building of one, so that all the companies may be housed under one roof, which will result in a great saving of expense in production as regards properties, laboratories, costumes and certain local offices.

Rothacker Laboratory Going Up.

A. P. Miller, technical secretary of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, is now in Los Angeles to confer with architects regarding the film laboratory-studio which will be built immediately upon the Hollywood property purchased last year by Watterson Rothacker.

The laboratory will have a 327-foot frontage on Sunset Boulevard at Van Ness. Mr. Rothacker is expected to come soon to Los Angeles, when a technical staff for the new laboratory will be engaged, as well as workers for the other departments.

Tarkington Baker to Produce.

Tarkington Baker, general manager of Universal, has announced his intention of becoming a film producer in the near future, or as soon as he is relieved from his duties with Universal. According to the announcement, Mr. Baker will go to New York to complete the organization of his company, after his successor at Universal City is appointed, and then will return to make his productions in the west. The pictures he will make will feature the story rather than the star, although all-star casts will be used. Two authors and two directors, whose names have not been made public, have been engaged for the Baker productions.

Christie Outgrows Old Studio.

The Christie Film Company, having outgrown the plant occupying the City block at Sunset and Gower street, which Al Christie started as the first motion picture studio in Hollywood, has branched out, and is acquiring property in the neighborhood of the original studio. The first piece of land acquired is three acres on Selma avenue, on which a big new stage is being built as well as street sets. The Christie company is also negotiating for another twelve acres near the present studio, which, now that the carpenter shop is completed, presents a solid frontage of buildings on Sunset Boulevard.

Edwards Production Manager.

Harry Edwards, who has served two years as assistant to Al Christie in the direction of the Christie Comedy releases, has been promoted to the position of production manager of the Christie output, having charge, under Al Christie, of the productions of seven directors.

Lloyd Hughes in "Homespun Folks."

"Homespun Folks" is announced as the title of the second picture in which Thomas H. Ince will present Lloyd Hughes in the featured role, "Wheelbarrow Webster," which marks the first special production featuring Hughes, was completed this week at the Ince Studios in Culver City, and work on the new story will commence at once, Julien Josephson, who wrote many of the Charles Ray successes and Douglas MacLean and Doris May's recently completed comedy, "Shakespeare Clancy," is author of "Homespun Folks."

Lawrence Weber Here.

Charles Christie in East.

Charles H. Christie, general manager and treasurer of the Christie Film Company, is in New York in the interest of the Christie film productions, and will, on his return, Artistic Subtitles in the Making.

have new announcements to make regarding future Christie pictures.

Abe Warner Here from East.

Abe Warner, member of the firm of Warner Brothers, now filming the Al St. John comedies and the Helen Holmes serials, has come from New York to confer with Jack and Sam Warner regarding the Warner productions and the purchase of a tract of land in Hollywood for a studio.

Tsuru Aoki to Go to Japan.

Tsuru Aokia, Japanese star, has finished her contract with Universal with the completion of her picture, "A Tokio Siren," and is leaving for San Francisco within the week as the first step on her journey to Japan. Sessue Hayakawa, Miss Aoki's husband, who was to have made the trip with her, says that his picture contracts will keep him busy for many months to come, so that he will have to postpone his visit to the Orient.

Completing First Pandora Film.

T. J. Shirley, manager of the Pandora Productions, with headquarters at the Boyle Heights studio, announces that the first production of the company, entitled "The Crucifix of Destiny," is nearing completion. R. D. Armstrong is directing the picture, and Wheeler Dryden is the featured player. Other members of the Pandora company are H. E. Wagner, cameraman C. J. Barber, and Agnes Parsons, of the editorial department.

Clune's Broadway Changes Managers.

Clinton Pedrick, who a few months ago assumed charge of Clune's Broadway Theatre, has tendered his resignation, and A. H. McQuesten, with a long theatrical career behind him, will take up the managership of the house. McQuesten has been identified with the motion picture industry since the old Biograph days, and has just recently returned from Government service with the U. S. Naval Aviation forces in France and England.

Studio Shots

THE all-star cast selected to support Betty Compson in "The Test" includes Clara Horton, Ralph Lewis, Claire MacDowell, Roy Stewart, Emory Johnson, Betty Schade and Roscoe Karns.

Gladys Brockwell and her company have just returned from Flagstaff, Ariz., where scenes for "The Rose of Nome" were made.

Earl Rodney has just completed a six-room bungalow which he has built with his own hands between pictures at the Christie studio.

Buddy Post, a young giant six feet six inches in height, and weighing 325 pounds, will be starred in a series of twenty-six two-reel farces by the National Film Corporation.

William Russell and his company have gone to Fort Bragg to make location stuff for a new Fox feature.

Three prominent stars have purchased homes this week: Bill Hart, a $25,000 residence; Cleo Madison, a $10,000 residence, and Wanda Hawley, a lot next to Hart's, upon which she will build a home.

Anna Q. Nilsson, Edwin Stevens, Ora Carewe, Joseph Gerard and Kate Parks have been engaged to support Eugene O'Brien in the Selznick picture, "The Figurehead."

Alice Hollister, Kalem star of a few years back, makes her return to the screen in "Milestones," from the Arnold Bennett play to be produced at Goldwyn's.

Bert Lytell has returned from San Francisco, where he has been spending a short vacation.

Charles West has been engaged for an important part in the coming Marshall Neilan production.

Shirley Mason and her company have returned from a location trip to Santa Ana for the Fox picture, "His Harvest."

William De Mille begins production in the latter part of March on "Conrad in Quest of His Youth," with Thomas Meighan, Kathlyn Williams and Margaret Loomis in the leading roles.

Helen Howard, who has been playing ingenue parts in "Flying A" films, will be featured in a series of polite comedies by the National Film Co.

William and Dustin Farnum are taking a two weeks' vacation around Catalina Island in Dusty's yacht, "The Ding."

Jack Dempsey and a company of cowboys have gone to a wild spot in the Tehachepi Mountains to make scenes for the eleventh episode of "Daredevil Durant."

Ethel Clayton has just completed "The Ladder of Lies" under the direction of Tom Forman, and will begin work next week on "All in a Night" under Director Thomas Heffron.

Colleen Moore's father, C. R. Morrison, of Chicago, has come to Los Angeles to make his home in order to be near his daughter Bessie Love, who has recovered from the flu, is now back at work on "The Midlanders," her first independent production.

Florence Turner is being featured with Maudie Dunham in the Samuelson production, "The Ugly Duckling."

Jack Hoxie, supported by Lucille Rubey, will start work on a new serial for National about April 1.

Seena Owen and Helen Eddy play the leading feminine roles in the American all-star feature, "The House of Toys."

Constance Talmadge and her mother are expected to arrive from New York this week.

C. M. Franklin, who has been directing the Annette Kellerman picture for Sol Lesser, is seriously ill, and Nate Watt, his assistant, is directing in his place.

"Pell Trenton has just completed his work as male lead in "The House of Toys," an all-star feature made by the American Film Company at Santa Barbara.

Myron Selznick's Producing Activities Cover Extensive Field, Resume Shows

A RESUME of motion picture activities reveals that Myron Selznick, of Selznick Pictures, has in full sway one of the largest production forced in the industry. The Selznick organization, which has been among those whose steady growth has been generally noted, has earned the reputation of giving to the screen pictures that entertain and "create happy hours."

The Selznick producing activities, under which come also the National Picture Theatres subjects, cover a wide area. Two studios are used in the East and about an equal amount of space is utilized in California. At the present time a large proportion of the studio, technical and acting staff is at the West Coast, under the management of Harry Rapf.

Olive Thomas is now making "The Flapper," by Frances Marion. This feature, Miss Thomas' seventh for the Selznick trademark, is being directed by Alan Crosland. On the West Coast Eugene O'Brien is being filmed in John Lynch's story, "The Figurehead," the sixth he has made for Selznick. Robert Ellis is directing. Elaine Hammerstein is busy on a feature called "Things That Hurt," her fifth Selznick feature. William P. S. Earle is directing.

"Well, Look for Yourself!"

Owen Moore is being filmed in California in his third Selznick picture, "The Desperate Hero." This production, which is rapidly nearing completion, is from Edgar Franklin's story, "His Word of Honor," and is being directed by Wesley Ruggles.

The Ralph Ince special Selznick production, "Out of the Snows," is also nearing completion. In the cast are Ralph Ince and Zena Keefe, Selznick's 1920 star. Mr. Ince also directed the production, which is from a story of the Northwest by G. B. Lancaster. Still another special nearing completion in the Selznick eastern studio is Willard Mack's "The Timber Wolf," directed by Burton George.

Four companies are working on the Herbert Kaufman Weekly editorial subjects, which are being made in the East. Among these are "Little Red Riding Hood," "The Faded Butterfly" and "Puppy Love." It is the intention to have eight productions complete before the first is released.

"Just Outside the Door," a Lawrence Weber production starring Edith Hallor, and which is to be distributed by Republic, is being made on the West Coast under the direction of George Irvin. This is the third Weber production made for Selznick-Republic release.

The third picture for National Picture Theatres, Inc., Lewis J. Selznick's co-operative organization, is "The Invisible Divorce," following "Just a Wife" and "Blind Youth." This is being made on the West Coast under the direction of Edward Sloman. Thus far one company has been occupied in the filming of National Picture Theatres subjects, but an announcement states that in the near future two and later more Selznick companies will be producing this brand.

CHICAGO NEWS LETTER

JAMES S. McQUADE

United Artists Official on Exchange Tour Finds Business Excellent in Chicago

RALPH O. PROCTOR, assistant general manager of United Artists Corporation, made his first stop in Chicago last week on a tour of the exchange centers in the United States, the main objects of the tour being to complete arrangements for the first run showings in the various territories and to consult with branch managers on business conditions generally.

In an interview he stated that he found business excellent in Chicago and that prospects never looked brighter. He remained in the city until Sunday night, March 14, when he left for Minneapolis. There he will spend three weeks, during which most of his time will be devoted to the organization of the local force for the opening of the Auditorium Theatre, which will take place Monday, April 5.

Charles Branham has been appointed manager of the Auditorium. Mr. Branham has been manager of the Strand Theatre in Minneapolis for Thomas Saxe, afterward manager for Ruben & Finkelstein, also manager of the Majestic Theatre, Detroit, and later general manager of the S. A. Lynch Theatre circuit, in the south, so that he brings to the Auditorium ripe experience and the knowledge required to conduct the business of a thoroughly modern picture theatre. Mr. Proctor says that he is a very able man and that he is considered one of the best equipped managers in the country.

Orchestra of Thirty Pieces.

An augmented orchestra of thirty pieces will be used at the Auditorium, and the aim will be to give patrons thoroughly modern presentations of moving pictures, with artistic respect to musical interpretations and the creation of the necessary atmosphere for each picture.

The Auditorium will have a seating capacity of 2,590, and four shows will be given daily. The prices will be 25, 35 and 50 cents.

"Pollyanna" has been selected for the opening and it will be followed by a well selected short-reel program at each show.

Mr. Proctor will go direct to Seattle from Minneapolis, early in April. Thence he will visit, in order, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Salt Lake, Denver, Kansas City, Dallas, Atlanta and Washington, before reaching the home office in New York.

United Artists' next release will be Mack Sennett's five-reel feature, "Down on the Farm," in which Louise Fazenda, Ben Turpin, the dog comedian, "Teddy"; the cat comedienne, "Pepper"; the "boy," and the entire assemblage of Mack Sennett's comedy animals will join in their merry antics. The release date of this promised scream is fixed for April 25.

The second of the forthcoming releases is "Romance," which features Doris Keane, who starred for three years in the stage version in London, one year in New York, six months in Chicago, and for an extended run at Boston.

"Romance" is considered one of the greatest—if not the greatest—stage plays as yet adapted for moving picture use, Mr. Proctor states, and the picture rights cost $125,000 in real money.

Release "Mollycoddle" May 30.

The third of the coming releases is "Mollycoddle," in which Douglas Fairbanks will be the star. It is promised that this will be a typical Fairbanks' picture, of pronounced western atmosphere. "Mollycoddle" is based on an original story, by the star himself, and will be released May 30.

The fourth of this highly promising series of releases is "'Op O' My Thumb," adapted from the stage play of that title by James Berry. It is scarcely necessary to state that Mary Pickford will be the star. It will be completed in the near future and will be ready for release this spring.

D. W. Griffith has just purchased picture rights to "Away Down East," from William A. Brady, and will produce it at his new studio in Mamaroneck, N. Y. He will start work on the picture at once and will have it in readiness for release early this summer.

Louise Glaum Greets Friends.

Louise Glaum, the well-known star of a number of Thomas H. Ince features and now under the W. W. Hodkinson banner, stopped over in Chicago, Monday, March 8, on the trip from New York to Los Angeles. She presided at a luncheon given in her honor at the Hotel Sherman. Her forthcoming picture will be "Sex," to be followed by "Love Madness."

The Christie Film Company Will Enter the Feature Field

CHARLES H. CHRISTIE, general manager of the Christie Film Company, paid a one-day visit to Chicago, Wednesday, March 10, on his way back to the Los Angeles studio, after spending three weeks in New York. When seen he said that the Christie company recently decided to produce five and six-reel features. Work on the first of these will be begun in May, and it is expected that the picture will be ready for release in September. Mr. Christie was silent on the name of the star and the title of the feature.

In the meantime, the one and two-reel comedies which have made him famous will not be slighted, nor will they be lessened in output because of the new project. On the contrary, Mr. Christie promises that they will be improved.

"The Christie studio has earned a reputation for being a short-cut to stardom," said Mr. Christie. "Some of the first-rate screen artists have been discovered and made by our directors. Among these may be mentioned Betty Compson, who has now become generally recognized through her work in 'The Miracle Man'; Alice Lake, whose latest is 'Should a Woman Tell?' and Helen Darling, all of whom have received their diplomas from us. Our latest find is Charlotte Merriam, whom we expect soon to introduce and whom we regard as a comer in movie fame."

Whether there was any connection between the company's plans for producing features, and the fact that the Christie graduates have flown from comedy to the more ambitious field of drama, the general manager did not say. But if Christie makes the stars, why shouldn't he keep them? Hence his entry in the feature field.

In speaking of the distribution of Christie comedies, Mr. Christie stated that it has been firmly decided to continue to sell through the Celebrated Players Film Corporation, in the territory covered by President Friedman. In view of this firm's successful handling of the product for the past four years, he believes that this is the only consistent policy, regardless of the fact that he has received numerous offers recently from national booking concerns.

Pathe's Chicago Manager Is Promoted and Banqueted

TUESDAY evening, March 9, at the Hotel La Salle, a farewell banquet was given in honor of E. A. Eschmann, who has been Chicago manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., for the past six months, and who was promoted to the position of assistant sales director of the organization on the date mentioned, with headquarters at the home office, New York. The banquet also served to welcome Mr. Eschmann's successor, W. A. Aschmann, who was appointed Pathe's Chicago manager on the same date.

Mr. Eschmann has been very successful in further developing the business of the Chicago office from the promising condition in which it had been left him by his predecessor, Frank B. Rogers, who was promoted to the position of division manager of the middle western district. His strong personality and his uniform courtesy to people in the trade have been weighty factors in his success; but, perhaps, a still greater factor has been the fair and equitable treatment of his numerous customers.

Another strong feature of Mr. Eschmann's brief and brilliant career in the Chicago office has been his very efficient handling of the large sales force in Chicago territory. He knew and trusted each of them and every man of them "brought home the bacon." Loyalty was their watchword and it found expression in the gift tendered by them to Mr. Eschmann at the banquet in the Hotel La Salle.

Proctor Elected Toastmaster.

Ralph O. Proctor, assistant general manager of United Artists Corporation, who chanced to be in the city, was an invited guest and was elected toastmaster by acclamation. His felicitous manner of filling that position added in no small measure to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Frank B. Rogers was also among the guests. As already mentioned, he has been district manager for Pathe in the middle west for the past six months; but on Monday, March 8, he was appointed general sales director for the J. Stuart Blackton Feature Pictures, Inc., the product of which is released through Pathe Exchange, Inc. He will also have headquarters in New York, in future, and his duties will extend to Europe.

W. A. Aschmann, Pathe's incoming manager, and co-opartner with Mr. Eschmann in the honors of the evening, has been with Pathe for the last seven years. He started as salesman in the Chicago office and worked in Wisconsin territory. There he increased the business so successfully that a Pathe office was soon established in Milwaukee and he was appointed its manager. He retained the position until he succeeded Mr. Eschmann in the Chicago branch.

Is Given Traveling Bag.

During a brief lull at the banquet, W. W. Anderson, assistant manager of Pathe's Chicago office, took the floor and after a happy little speech presented Mr. Eschmann with a large and handsome traveling bag, the gift of the Pathe salesmen's organization of Chicago. Mr. Eschmann who was much affected by the honor, replied in a short heart-to-heart talk.

In addition to those already mentioned the following salesmen were present: W. B. Franks, Stanley Waite, E. Mordue, T. G. Meyers, A. G. Spencer (feature salesman), Harry Corbett, T. G. Gillick, G. Lefko, D. R. Davis, C. Koeppler, J. G. Davis, Frank Harris, F. B. Wathne, B. E. Wilkes and A. F. Hickox.

Big Hit Made by the Opening Episodes of "The Lost City"

A PRE-SHOWING of the first three episodes of "The Lost City" was given in the Red Room of the Hotel La Salle, Tuesday, March 9, by J L. Friedman, president of Celebrated Players Film Corporation. A week previous invitations had been mailed to theatre owners and managers to be present at the luncheon prepared by Celebrated Players for the occasion.

Due to the fact that "The Lost City" serial has been produced by William N. Selig, the originator of "The Adventures of Kathlyn," the first serial picture ever produced, and the first release of which was made December 29, 1913, over 400 guests were present. These represented film exchanges in the city, exhibitors, theatre managers and people well known to the trade.

Irene Rich.

Among those present were Aaron J. Jones, the Ascher Brothers, Lubliner & Trinz, Andrew Karzas, Max Balaban, Frank Schaefer, M. A. Choynsky, Sam Kohl, of the Western Vaudeville Managers' Association; Mesrs. Finn and Ascher, of the Finn & Heiman Circuit, etc.

Sidney Smith, the famed creator of "The Gumps," was an especially honored guest. On request he gave a clever, impromptu exhibition of his art as a cartoonist and kept the large gathering in hilarious mood by his good-natured caricatures of several well-known people present.

The first comedy of "The Gumps" series, "Andy's Dancing Lesson," followed Sidney Smith's exhibition and made a great hit, notwithstanding that many of those present had seen it at least three times.

J. L. Friedman, president of Celebrated Players Film Corporation, holds U. S. rights for the distribution of "The Gumps" comedy series. He has already sold the following franchises: Minnesota, North and South Dakota to the Merit Film Corporation, Minneapolis; Oklahoma, Texas and Arkansas to the R. D. Lewis Film Corporation, Oklahoma City, and Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Montana, Oregon, New Mexico and Washington to Supreme Photoplays Corporation, Denver.

Three Big Picture Theatres Are Planned for Chicago

CHICAGO is now in the midst of such vast improvement enterprises on her own behalf that what would have excited unusual comment a few years ago in the matter of picture theatre construction now excites but little interest. And this is not to be wondered at, as the city recently voted the stupendous sum of $110,000,000 to be devoted wholly to city improvements and the beautification of the lake front on a vast scale.

But the growth of the city of Chicago from 1829, when it had an estimated population of 30 souls, to 1920, when the census is expected to show a population of 2,800,000, is scarcely more amazing than a comparison of the first picture theatre in Chicago, the Electric, opened in the fall of 1905, on the northeast corner of State and Harrison, with the big modern picture theatre that is now being built at the southeast corner of State and Lake, at a cost of $5,00,000!

The old Electric Theatre was, in fact, a transformed restaurant, in which John R. Thompson made his first venture and success in that line. One was lucky to find standing room in that house, as chairs took up too much room and the show only lasted about five minutes, at five cents admission.

During the week of Monday, March 8, announcements were made of the building of three new picture theatres in Chicago, at a combined cost of nearly $2,000,000. Schoenstadt & Sons, who have already a chain of five theatres, will construct a new theatre and hotel building at Hyde Park boulevard and Blackstone avenue, at a cost of $1,500,000 and seating 3,500 persons. The Brighton, at Archer avenue and Forty-second street, costing $250,000, will shortly be opened by the same firm.

Joseph A. Schaffer, publicity director of the Ascher Brothers circuit in Chicago, and president of the Palais Royal Theatre Corporation, will build a co-operative theatre at the corner of Kedzie avenue and Ainslie street, to seat 3,000 persons and to be known as the Palais Royal. The estimated cost is $200,000.

Officers and Directors of M. P. Theatres, Inc., Meet Here

A MEETING of the national board of directors of United Picture Theatres, Inc., was held at the Hotel Morrison, Tuesday, March 16. The members of the board are all men of big business interests, who also own, individually, picture theatres throughout the United States.

J. A. Berst, president; Milton Goldsmith, treasurer, and Charles C. Johnson, secretary of the organization, came on from New York for the occasion.

Reports Heavy Business on "Mystery of Yellow Room"

H. W. WILLARD, manager of Realart's Chicago office, informs me that "The Mystery of the Yellow Room" is going over splendidly in Chicago territory. He visited South Bend and all the other important cities in Indiana recently and found business booming everywhere. The present demand in the Hoosier state aims particularly at bright, clean comedy dramas. While in South Bend the La Salle was showing "The Stolen Kiss" to capacity business, despite the blizzard that was then at its height. Constance Binney, the Realart star, is very popular in this feature in South Bend, just as she is as a dramatic actress.

"The Luck of the Irish," an Allan Dwan production, is the next Mayflower special and is now ready for release in western territory. "Bookings for this picture are very satisfactory to this office," said Manager Willard. Its first appearance in Chicago will be at the Rose and the Playhouse. This picture had a most successful run at Grauman's Theatre, Los Angeles, where it was first shown a short time ago.

Bert Gottlieb, Lane Court, a Three-in-One Manager

THE Lane Court Theatre has found a happy, though perhaps not generally imitable, solution of the question of reducing employes without reducing the amount of service obtained. And speaking of service, here's a manager, Bert Gottlieb, who if given a chance to answer that glaring question now being flaunted in filmdom—"Who's Your Servant?"—would come back with "The Theatre! Ladies and Gentlemen, and specifically its manager." But there being no particular occasion to speechify in this manner, Manager Gottlieb and his staff are taking the less direct but equally effective method of making their patrons aware that the purpose of the Lane Court is to serve. For there is a what-can-

Cecil B. De Mille
Re-elected director general of Famous Players-Lasky.

I-do-for-you? air in the manner of every employe who comes into contact with the public. And it might be added, though rather unnecessarily, that the Lane Court is prospering.

However, what we started out to say was that Manager Gottlieb can wield a baton or a violin bow as well as he can the glad hand. One year ago, when he was found and contracted for by Ascher Brothers, he was director of the orchestra at Rector's Cafe, New York. These natural musical inclinations of his refused to be smothered by the performing of mere managerial duties. He soon found his way from the lobby to the orchestra pit, where he now frequently, though not regularly, repairs for the purpose of playing a violin solo, or for taking the place of the usual conductress, Miss Irma Heinze. The Lane Court orchestra boasts of quality rather than size. It consists of five pieces played with care and art. On Wednesday and Sunday evenings song revues and vaudeville specialties are programmed.

The Lane Court is just across the way from Lincoln Park, on Center street, in a pleasant neighborhood. Its patrons are "regulars" and because of this, lend an attractive homey air to the theatre, easily noticed by a casual visitor. Babies, youngsters, and flappers are always to be seen in large numbers, which probably accounts to some extent for the fact that this theatre's patrons are an enthusiastic lot.

Frank Cook Says Conditions in Milwaukee Are Very Good

FRANK COOK, manager of the Strand Theatre, Milwaukee, was seen last week during one of his booking trips to the city, and described business at his theatre as "simply wonderful." The conditions in Milwaukee generally he pronounced very good.

The Strand runs from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m., continuously, charging 35 cents for all seats, which number 1,400. They are all on the ground floor. The open market policy is followed in making bookings, which are all made by Manager Cook himself. Goldwyn, Realart and Vitagraph specials, Metro classics and various other makes form the programs. Each show lasts for two hours and in every case first runs are booked.

The Strand has an orchestra of nine pieces. Two organists are employed, and every member of the orchestra is a soloist, each of them being featured weekly.

A healthy rivalry prevails in Milwaukee picture theatres, every manager vying with his fellows to present his pictures in the most approved modern style. This is necessary, as patrons are now thoroughly educated and demand the very best.

Dearborn Theatre Faces More Promising Future

THE Dearborn Theatre on West Division and State streets, took on new hope and new owners last February. At that time it was sold by Cuneo Brothers to Frank Ward and Lewis La Rose. The plans of the new management for better pictures, better music and a better theatre promise to put the Dearborn on a new basis, namely, to command the interested attention of the somewhat indifferent neighborhood, and to offset the prevalent reputation that the theatre had fallen into a rut. This is one of the older houses, having been built about seven years ago. It is advantageously located about one mile from the loop, and having no deadly rivals in its very midst, it faces, it would seem, a successful future.

Bigger Pictures Promised.

Bigger productions and a greater number of "suppers," will be presented. Additions will be made to the orchestra which will take the place of the somewhat disabled organ previously used. The entire interior will be redecorated. An indication of the new plan for showing special feature productions was evidenced last week when "The Copperhead" (Paramount) was shown. A well-planned, a well-played musical accompaniment was furnished.

Praises Parcel Post Delivery.

Ben W. Beadell, chairman of the committee of transportation for the Chicago F. I. L. M. Association, states that during the current strike of expressmen the parcel post delivery of films in Chicago territory has exceeded all expectations. "The efficiency is 100 per cent., both on outgoing and incoming packages, including films and advertising matter," Mr. Beadell says.

The strike is gradually waning and quite a number of strikers have returned to work during the first week of its run.

The Crown Theatre Survives Period of Hard Competition

THE Crown, one of the older, less pretentious houses on the southwest side of Chicago, is one of the several that has survived the struggle of competing with one of the new, expensive theatres that was unceremoniously planted under its very nose two years ago. The first year of existing under such conditions is said to be the test, as the expression goes among theatre owners. Otto Linden, manager of the Crown, which is owned by John Bobeng, proprietor also of the Armitage, explains the victory by the fact that everywhere are to be found movie-frequenters with whom it is first, last and always "picture"; not theatre, not star, not music, but "picture" alone which attracts. On this policy the Crown is keeping above by exploiting a line of bookings almost incompatible with admission charges (seventeen cents for adults; eleven, for children).

National Picture Theatres Nears Quota; All Big Chicago Chain Theatres Booked

FOLLOWING the release of its first subject, "Just a Wife," it is disclosed that National Picture Theatres, Inc., of which Lewis J. Selznick is president, is nearing the 100 per cent. quota mark in all sections of the country. That this cooperative exhibitor organization is entrenched strongly throughout the country is an assured fact, judging by the announcement this week from the New York offices.

Chicago, it is made known, has reached its quota in National Picture Theatres. In this territory "Just a Wife" will play through a circuit of National franchise holders whose combined rentals, based upon the picture's total cost, will show a decided profit in that territory to the company's stockholders. This result has been achieved since November when National first offered its franchise to the Chicago exhibitors.

One hundred of the best theatres in Chicago and many more smaller ones are National franchise-holders. This membership includes every big chain theatre group in the city. The theatres of Lubliner and Trinz, Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Ascher Brothers, Balaban & Katz and Andrew Karzas were among the first to join and they were quickly followed by scores of individual theatre owners, who follow the lead of the big ones.

Dallas and Philadelphia Run Second.

Dallas and Philadelphia offices are expected to reach their quotas within two weeks. Although Chicago is the first territory to reach its quota in National and Dallas and Philadelphia quotas are practically reached, several other offices are close behind, says a statement from the Selznick offices, and within the next four months at National's present rate of growth every territory in the United States will have reached its quota.

The exhibitors of the Dallas territory are running theatre owners of Chicago a close race in showing their confidence in National—130 theatres have become franchise-holders. In Philadelphia the Mastbaum Circuit, which books a large number of the important theatres in Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern Jersey, joined recently and soon the entire Philadelphia quota of theatres will have been secured.

Two of the most recent big chain theatre interests to enter National are the Saxe Theatre, of Milwaukee, and the Swanson Theatre Circuit, of Salt Lake City. The Saxe Enterprises, in addition to large theatre holdings, control the Loew vaudeville franchise in Milwaukee and Tom and John Saxe are looked upon as among the shrewdest and most far-seeing exhibitors in the Middle West. Tom Saxe will be a member of the board of directors of National.

George Maine Praises Plan.

In endorsing the National movement, George Maine, vice-president of the Swanson Circuit, in a letter to Mr. Selznick wrote:

"We have watched very carefully every co-operative plan that has been offered by the producers. We have studied them carefully because we thought it was for our best interest. We have investigated the National co-operative plan and we firmly believe that it will result in exhibitors getting fair play. We also believe that we will get consistent high-class pictures at fair rentals and a square deal.

"Mr. Swanson believes so much in the Selznick plan that he has taken the first run franchise and a directorate for the Salt Lake City territory, and we are going to support it, as, in our opinion, it is deserving of the support of every exhibitor.

An Infant Industry Restless in Its Crib

Combing Motion Picture World Ten Years Ago

THE issue of Moving Picture World dated March 26, 1910 was not conspicuous for anything savoring of greater news-urge than its predecessors. News there might have been, but it didn't get into the pages of the World.

Very likely the scarcity of press agents made for paucity of news—but, ten years later, if tradepapers depended for NEWS solely upon the publicists the World of today would be just as flat and lifeless as it was ten years ago. Getting NEWS out of a film organization (via the publicity department) equals the amount of comfort the "wets" are deriving from Amendment No. 18.

But there was a flicker of light even in the darkness of ten years ago. Thanhouser had just brought New Rochelle into the limelight and one Bertram Adler was assigned to the job of publicizing the new brand of "Independents." Bert (we can't get used to the "Bertram" thing) entered the game when "publicity" seemed to consist in writing the synopsis of a film and sending it to Moving Picture World.

"Without Fear or Favor."

To carry advertising the World was compelled to have text matter, hence the ease and grace employed in making up a paper with the plural of "film synopsis" and some editorial expressions as the main element of its reading matter. Into this situation, we repeat, Bert Adler stepped—and promised to wreck the whole scheme.

Bert stepped right out—and wrote an editorial for the World captioned "The 'Free-Usher' Evil." Just what the "evil" was we know not—unless it might be the evil of a press agent writing editorials for tradepapers.

But Bert was breaking into the news—mentioning names of Thanhouser employes, for instance. "Who are the Thanhouser producers?" was a question Bert asked himself in "Thanhouser Notes." And right back at himself Bert said:

"We are glad to tell you. Barry O'Neil, late a Klaw & Erlanger producer, is one, and Lloyd B. Carlton, formerly with the Frohman forces, the other. . . . Frank Crane portrays 'St. Elmo' and Anna Rosemond is 'Agnes' in the Thanhouser 'St. Elmo.' . . . The little tots in 'The Actor's Children' are Orilla Smith of New York City and Yale Boss of the same place." Thus Bert Adler began to break with something that, at least resembled, NEWS. Now he's with Realart —exploiting.

Lubin in New Quarters.

The new plant of the Lubin Company, Philadelphia, was pictured in a half-page cut. There was a considerable description—but nothing like the "novelization" that now comes to tradepapers when studios are the text. A. D. Hotaling was "field director"—just back from Nassau with a company unnamed and unidentified.

"Bill" Steiner was the subject of an interview. Same "Kid" Steiner now making independent productions, circulating them and sawing wood always putting the dust in safe-deposit. Interviewed ten years ago, "Bill" was asked how long he had been in the business:

Von Ronkel Monopolizes a Good Word.

From Chicago it was made known that I. Von Ronkel, of the American Film Service, had obtained "a permanent injunction against James L. Reilly and Charles F. Pugh, of the American Film Exchange (with headquarters in Pittsburgh) restraining them from using the word 'American'." Guess the injunction petered out later on as several kinds of people have been tossing the word around indiscriminately within easy memory.

The Mayor of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., refused to allow showings of films in his fair city—fair in many things, not including Sunday observance. He preferred to have the coal miners, up for air, loaf around the street corners and shoot cut-plug at a mark.

Pathe, Paris, Joins the "Wets."

Figuring by the picture that appeared, illustrating the event, the Seine had decided to make the Pathe plant at Joinville le Pont, France, a Baptist institution. Flood that raised the Seine until it lapped the eaves of most of the buildings created havoc with many films (that pictured long loaves of French bread in dramatic action) cost hundreds of thousands of dollars (and beaucoup francs) before the waters drained off and let work proceed.

Sam Spedon, Vitagraph's "Pufflicist" in 1910.

He hands "the paper" to a motor courier with instructions to deliver them to Vitagraph's frontier post in Santa Monica, Cal.

"Max Linder was one of the last to leave the plant and waded three quarters of a mile through water up to his waist when he finally left the factory." Surveyors who have been through West Fifty-fifth Street, City of New York, predict that the Fox Studios are likely to be inundated with water, garbage and ashes as the mass starts moving down hill toward the Hudson when gentle spring breathes on the work left undone by the Tammany hosts in our fair city. The Paris flood of 1910 should be warning enough.

"The Goods" on Sam Spedon.

Herewith is shown Sam Spedon, handing the first message that ever started (no saying it finished) from studio to studio via transcontinental motor journey. Samuel was "Keeping in Personal Touch" with tradepapers ten years ago as "pufflicist" for Vitagraph, in Brooklyn Borough.

It will be observed that Mr. Spedon has not changed a wrinkle—as he passes from exchange to exchange picking up those concise items of interest that appear weekly in these later and newsier issues of Moving Picture World. Give an eye to Samuel as he delivered "the papers" shown in the engraving.

Another youth of current interest and importance to the current film era is to be mentioned, without illustrating—Joe Lee, who ten years ago was running a flock of concessions at Wonderland Park, Revere Beach, Boston. Here it was that Josephus put in the foundation for his life-work as a film salesman and exploitationist. Educational Films now reap the benefit of Joe's training behind soft-drink bars by the sad sea waves.

What were YOU doing ten years ago?

Picking Up Some Loose Ends.

In a recent issue pictures of the first "movie" were shown on the same page with this throbbing record of a lusty infant's career. Brett Page now shows his interest in the uplift by reminding us that reference was not made, at that time, to Alexander Black, who produced "Miss Jerry" as the first photoplay.

"Like printing a picture of Pike's Peak," says Mr. Page, "without its front name with the 'explanation' caption: 'A peak near Denver discovered by some old chap in the long ago'." Clinching matters and coupling Alexander Black with his work, Mr. Brett proceeds:

Explaining the First "Movie."

"The first picture plays, beginning with 'Miss Jerry' in 1894, were projected with a special form of dissolving stereopticon using registered lantern slides. These slides were 'stills' in the technical sense, but being registered stills they produced an effect of slow motion in changes of three to five per minute on the same optical principle that the registered images of a modern film produce their effect of full motion in fifteen or sixteen changes per second.

"By a mechanical attachment to the lantern the first picture plays introduced the effect of a rising curtain, and by means of the double lenses vision or 'flash back' effects were freely introduced. The author (who was also director and photographer) stood in the dark and spoke for all the characters—as he puts it, he 'said everything he couldn't make the picture say'."

Tennessee Manager Offers Pad Calendar Instead of More Usual Arrangement

ALTHOUGH the monthly calendar has been a favorite form of advertising for many years, it seems to have remained for L. W. McCuan to have worked out a daily pad calendar in place of the month-to-a-sheet form commonly used. In his first effort Mr. McCuan has made the mistake of using too small a type face for the date, for a calendar should first of all give the date clearly, or it is of little use as a calendar. This card is 3¾ by 9¼, white stock printed in blue, with the date pages about 2 by 3 inches.

The first page is taken for a personal guarantee, as shown in the reproduction, and the Sunday pages talk of the good things to come Monday, but the others are given to an announcement of the current offering and put it right where the recipient will get the message the proper day. This overcomes the handicap of spreading the entire month at a glance. That gives too general a survey of the subjects. With the daily sheet pad the story is advertised particularly the day it is shown. In future issues we think a monthly change of cut would be to advantage, as a portrait will give the sheet a better chance of a showing. Mr. McCuan runs the Kozy Theatre, Dresden, Tenn., and is another example of the hustle of the small town managers.

THREE clutching hands surrounding a poor and presumably innocent young thing form the attractor of the 24-sheet gotten out by Arthur F. Loew's Cleveland Theatres Employ Clever Schemes for Chain Spaces

TAKING a full half-page for Loew's Euclid is a regular stunt with M. A. Malaney, the publicity manager, but the other day he evolved a new idea for the other four Cleveland houses. He took pictures of the interior and used them as attractors for his Sunday announcement and the result was an advertisement very much out of the ordinary. Anything new will catch the eye and Mr. Malaney spread himself this time, for the Euclid space reproduced the double page for "On with the Dance" recently used in our advertising pages; the one showing a bird's eye view of lower New York with the locations of the story marked. The cut shows up well, but the actual newspaper reproduction is too dark, yet even at that we think many readers took the trouble to study it out. It was, at any rate, something new and striking and Mr. Malaney achieved the well-advertised 100 per cent.

Combination Program Suggests Clever Tack Card to Kentucky Show Hustler

A. N. MILES, of the Eminence Theatre, Eminence, Ky., figured it out that there wast not much use in having a specially good program if the people were afraid of the flu. He had booked Bert Lytell in "It's Easy to Make Money," and Fatty Arbuckle in "Moonshine." By combining the two titles he got out an unusual tack card, 9 by 14 inches. The titles were the only type on the card other than the "with" which connected them, and all over town the message stared possible patrons in the face.

IT'S EASY TO MAKE MONEY WITH

Here's a Clever Tack Card.

For a moment no one knew what the big idea was, but gradually it dawned upon them that the theatre had plays with these names and the newspaper advertising and screen slides hooked up with the same gag. As a result Mr. Miles did a better business than he had since the flu scare hit the town and he not only made money on the day, but he got his people back into the habit of coming to see the show. The Arbuckle title worked hard when it first come out, but this combination might have been made to order. It simply carries out the point so often made that if you can get a laugh you can get a sale. One good laugh is worth a hundred superlatives.

Type and Script Combine Well in This Display for Lyric from J. L. Johnston

DIFFERING from his usual advertisement with the use of a design frame, John L. Johnston combines a script title with type talk very effectively in a seven-column display, but we think that it would more to play up Walthall than to give the play so much greater prominence. People know Walthall and do not know the play. The title means little but the stars means much. We think that Mr. Johnston overlooked another bet when he printed the text of the confession. The confession is an essential of the plot and should have been held back. A sketch of the paper with the text suggested rather than written would have been more to the advantage of the story, but Mr. Johnston has done so much good work of late that he can slip a little and still have a big balance on the right side of the ledger.

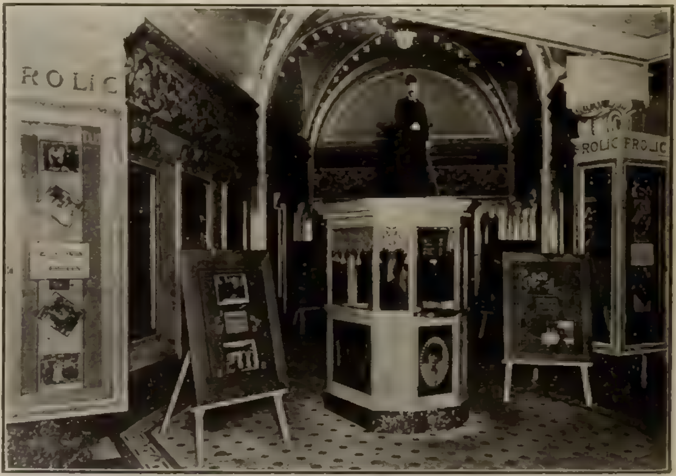
Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin Are Touring the Theatres in Company As in Honeymoon

JUST after the marriage of Mildred Harris to Charles Chaplin was announced, almost every theatre in the country took a whack at the "Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin" announcement, and created a boom in the Chaplin re-issues. The the stunt seemed to die out and was forgotten, but Barney Goodman, of the Frolic, San Francisco, dug the idea out of camphor the other day and got a Chaplin re-issue to run with Mildred Harris in her latest jewel, "Forbidden." The stunt seemed to be dead, but evidently it works as well as ever and will stand a revival if it has not been used within six months. Good old schemes die hard and sometimes the oldest are the best.



Once More the "Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin" Makes Its Bow.

Makes Full Page Work for Two Dates

Mr. Ramsey Makes His Big Play Before His Opening

HOWARD G. RAMSEY, of the Royal, El Dorado, Kansas, sends in so much good stuff that it is not possible to use it all. He is not afraid of space bills if he thinks he can get his money back, for he knows that if he can sell one ticket more than the advertisement costs he is making a profit on his direct work and getting the benefit of the moral effect which comes from large spaces. He does not always take full pages, but he does believe in making a big splash on Saturday for his Monday openings, and this full page for Anita Stewart in "In Old Kentucky" shows what he can do. It will be seen that he knows how to make up a full page display without crowding, and he gets a pretty result, though the compositor has done better with some smaller spaces. He ran the attraction for four days and in addition to six regular shows he ran a complete performance starting at ten o'clock each night, which is about equivalent to a milkmen's matinee in a larger town. He got twenty-eight shows out of four days. A three eights is along somewhat similar lines from other houses, but the text is good. It does not advertise any particular film, but your house should be made a headliner some times, and this copy will work hard for you. It pays to make people realize the advantage of a picture theatre, and it often does you more good than a page splash for a single subject, for the effect you create does not apply for a few days, but keeps on going.

Stammer Cure Hooks Up with Motion Pictures

LOOK-UPS have been suggested for about every line, but this advertisement clipped from a Boston paper offers the limit in this form of advertising, we think. It was run in the Sunday issue the same week the Ray picture was advertised first run, and was in the dramatic advertisements and not "run of paper." As the school is located in a middle western city, it is to be presumed that other cities carried the same copy. All of which should give our Rambler rich suggestions for new title hook-ups.

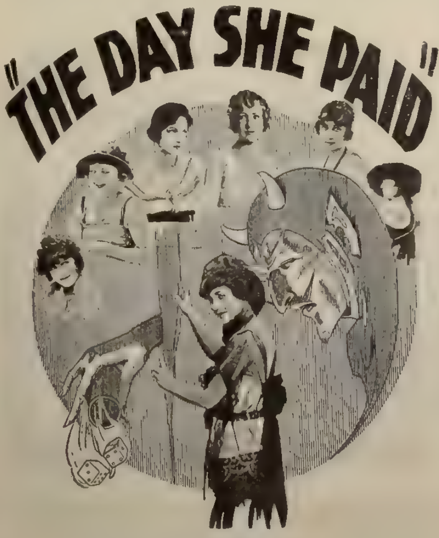
Two-Color Work Calls for Very Skillful Handling

WITH a second color being used more and more for Sunday advertising, a study of color effects becomes essential. Lately we showed a display from Charles R. Roediger, of the Rialto, Tacoma, and commented upon his handling of the red used to give strength to his display. He sends in another example, not quite so good, and yet well worked. The entire five fulls will not reproduce to advantage, but this cut of the key plate will give the idea. The picture is the Fannie Hurst story of "The Day She Paid." It is all black save for the head, the hand of the devil and the dice. Below the title of the serial is printed in red and the house signature is in black overprinted in red, which gives an unusually good effect. This is particularly good because there is a tendency to print the important lines in the color and almost always the color fails to give the strength of the black and the value of the display is weakened. By overprinting you get both the value of the color and the strength of the black.



Going a little deeper into the subject it should be remembered that more than one shade of color can be gained through the use of a benday or other stipple or a series of lines, the depth of the color depending upon the width and closeness of the lines. In no case should the color be overplayed or the full value will be lost. Often a single splash of color will be more effective than a more generous use, but the temptation is to use too much of the color, since it is being paid for. Mr. Riediger also gets out some good lines. The story is "Fannie Hurst's vivid panorama of models and morals in pre-prohibition New York," and "A daring story delicately told. Every woman owes it to herself, her daughter, even her sex, to see this tremendous upheaval of the human soul." Wouldn't that get your dime or quarter? We'll own up.

Clever Handling of Full Page Works Double Duty

ALTHOUGH full-page displays for Harold Lloyd comedies have ceased to be novelties, this full from the Waldorf, Lynn, Mass., offers a new kink worth remembering, for it advertises two Lloyd comedies and rings in Pollyanna as well. It is a good idea and it is nicely laid, although the printer does not seem to know how to spell "conjunction" and the management did not catch him. Look in the corners by the signature and see the cut, which reads: "Lamps of Lloyd are the Lamps of Laughter." This is a clever and legitimate parody on the "Eyes of Young" stunt, given point by the well-known glasses. It's clever, but we hope it does not start anything over at the Hotel Astor.

Two Interesting Studies in How to Handle Cuts

THESE two displays from the Colonial, Detroit, are chiefly interesting because of their handling of cuts. The hand lettering we do not like, but the cuts are skillfully worked; particularly those in the advertisement for "The Lone Wolf's Daughter." Three different cuts are used, yet they do not seem to crowd the four fourteens. This seems like a casual arrangement, yet evidently it is the result of careful study because it does look to be so simple. The treatment of the single cut in the three sixteens is as good in its way, though we do not like the lettering. Where it is necessary to intrude upon the cut, we think it would give a better effect to outline that portion of the letter wih whie insead of changing the color. Of course it may be argued that everyone will know that it is Theda Bara, but that is not the point. It does not look well, no matter whether the message gets over or not, and it could at least be made to loom better with a little thought on the artist's part. Both displays use type in part and here, too, the Glaum space is better handled.

Don't Use a Cut With Obscure Lettering

Two good studies in cut placement.

Has a Six-Sheet for a Reissue

BERT ENNIS sends in a photograph of a new six-sheet gotten out by the Victor Kremer Film Features for "Chaplin's burlesque on "Carmen." It is done in bright colors and the scene selected gives a good idea of the general style of the offering and is quite in character. New paper for reissues is becoming a regular feature, but this is attractive above the usual and gives the manager a chance to work with up to date material instead of having to use up the scanty supply of the old material.

Got the Story Over with Talk

SELLING the play by talk counts for more than title. The Randolph Theatro, Chicago, carried "The Greatest Question" with small spaces, but big points. Of course full use was made of Griffith's name; but the stress was laid upon the greatest question and this was differently put in each display. Large spaces were not taken, for even the large Loop theatres are not generous in their advertising displays, and the largest space was a double twelves, but "Why does the Creator put brutes and children into the same world?" with a four point enlargement on this question sold more tickets than a larger space merely announcing the play. This was only a fifty lines, double, yet it carried about an inch and a half of display, a cut matching the question and this talk:

> The Brute and the Child—he driven by an uncontrolled impulse—she by that age-old instinct of feminine self-protection. Neither reason when impulse drives. Why does the Creator put brutes and children into the same world? And having placed them so—to struggle and suffer because of each other—has He not placed a greater compensating power at the disposal of suffering humanity?

This is getting about all that can be had from so small a space and making brains take the place of column inches.

—P. T. A.—

Obscure Lettering and Reduction Hurt Display

APPARENTLY this two fours from the Colonial, Detroit, is a reduction from a larger design, but we question if even the large design showed the title clearly. Out of four persons to whom this display was shown, only one recognized the matter below Miss Janis as the title. One called the title "Everybody's Pal," and the others gave it up. That "Imp" looks more like a box than it does like a title until you know what it is, when it becomes clear enough. Without an explanation it makes a first class puzzle picture without intending to be such. Titles, most particularly short one, are best displayed in type or in lettering in imitation of type, and it should be free from all confusing design. Drawn designs give some curious effects, but this is one of the worst results we have seen in some time. A cut such as this is useless for real advertising purposes. A small face and more room for larger type would have been very much better from every angle.

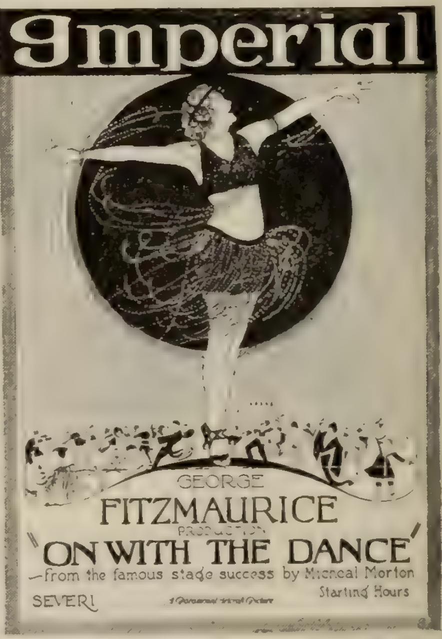
A Large Space Effect in a Double Column Drawn Ad

GETTING an effect in a large space is merely a matter of having the room, but to get an art effect in a double column eighty-five line ad is something of an accomplishment, yet J. A. Partington, of the Imperial, San Francisco, got a capital display for "On with the Dance" and probably could have done no better in a much larger space. He knew better than to have the figure drawn to fill the space, and between the line effect and the black circle he got a more distinct showing than some treatments would have yielded in a three column space. Eighty-five lines is virtually a six inch drop, and that does not give much chance for fancy art work, yet Mr. Partington made his display stand up and got a big space for twelve column inches.



An Effective Display in Small Compass.

—P. T. A.—

Crowded Through the Drifts

ONE of the best pieces of advertising we have seen lately was a front page picture, apparently a news feature, showing the line in front of the Empire Theatre in Portland, Maine, waiting to see "Pollyanna." Any crowd willing to wait on the street in the weather they were having in Maine about that time is a better advertisement than any quantity of talk about the picture itself, and getting it on the front page was something of a stunt. There were no advertising lines to detract from the effect, merely a 24-point caption.

This Is the Banner Press Agent Stunt

A Sheik in Search of Sari Stirs Town Like Milk Baths Did in Good Old Days

VEILED ladies have nothing on Sari-searching Sheiks when it comes to putting it over on the daily press, and it does not really have to be a real put-over to get in, for if the story is picturesque and good reading it will be run, even if the reporter mutters "Allah is wise—all knowing" as he writes the story, which is the oriental equivalent of admitting that the story isn't true.

To boom "The Virgin of Stamboul," which opens at the Broadway Theatre next Sunday, the Universal put over a real press agent stunt of the sort the Associated Press falls for and cleaned up columns of space in New York, and put the story on the wires for the benefit of other managements.

Like the Good Old Days.

The story went over like the Anna Held milk bath stunt of twenty odd years ago. The New York papers "ate it up" and it spread to the out-of-town sheets; and yet it was very simple in its working.

Sunday, March 7, two weeks before the opening, five Arabs, one of whom was dressed in native costume, while the others wore the conventional frock coats and fez of the Turkish diplomat, drove up to the Majestic, one of the semi-family hotels. With the utmost deference the four in European dress ushered the leader of the party into the lobby, and with effusive eastern compliment approached the clerk on the subject of rooms.

A lot of picturesque stories "break" from the Majestic, and perhaps this was why the party experienced no difficulty in securing rooms when most transients start in by demanding the bridal suite and wind up by paying seven dollars for the privilege of sleeping on a billiard table.

Tipped the Reporters.

Perhaps this is also the reason why a hot tip shot into the newspaper offices that the Sheik Ben Mahomet, brother of the Amir of Hedjaz, was in New York in search of Sari, fiancee of his brother and daughter of Hadahismo, who had lately died, leaving Sari about $100,000,000 (Turkish).

According to the story Sari, who was known as the Virgin of Stamboul, eloped with a United States Marine shortly after the armistice, and was believed to be in New York.

The reporters, overlooking the fact that no follower of Islam would affront the Prophet by using the feminine spelling of his name; with an "et" instead of an "ad," hotfooted it for the subway and presently were in the august presence. They had not the slightest difficulty in gaining an audience.

Telling the Tale of Woe.

Mohammad spoke a little broken English, a lot of French and still more Arabic and between the quintet they managed to tell the reporters all about it. There were hints of a visit to Washington to interest Secretary Daniels, a suggestion that the Sheik would dine with Morgenthau, the former Turkish ambassador, and the story of a landing in Halifax, to throw the ship news reporters off the track.

Monday morning is always the best time for press stories, because news breaks badly on Sunday, and practically all of the New York papers did a two-column head or better. The Times had almost a column, the Tribune a two-column, "kidding" the story and printing Morgenthau's denial that he knew the dusky visitor.

They Joked, But Printed.

Most of the papers scented the hoax, and the Times even hinted at the forthcoming release of the Universal production of "The Virgin of Stamboul," but the Sheik was picturesque, and a man who threw the beds and chairs out of a hotel suite and made the reporters squat on the floor in default of a leewan was worth a column on a dull night, and they gave it to him. If he was on the level it was all right, and if he was not it was at least darned good story, and they let it go at that.

The party was posed for the International News and the Kinogram camera men, and the next day their pictures were thrown on the screen at the Capitol and Strand. Underwood and Underwood shot some stills (which were less suspicious than stills which might have been offered), and a large number of U. & U. prints were sold on telegraphic order to the out-of-town papers.

Keeping in the News.

Tuesday's papers carried the story that a private detective agency had been retained to make a search and Wednesday the eager reader was informed that Sari had been found in a tenement in the Syrain quarter. Thursday's papers told that the Majestic, deploring the publicity the Sheik had gained (though they have an active press man of their own), had requested him to give up his apartment, which provided a graceful "out" for the end of the story.

Meanwhile the Broadway had started a teaser campaign, which left the reader in doubt as to whether the story was a press fake or whether the house had simply ridden the news, and these teasers worked into more definite advertising as the playing date approached.

The Lowdown.

It was about the best planned fake ever put over for a picture, in that it held up consistently to the end. The Arabs were picked up on Washington street and carefully coached in their parts. The Sheik was a splendid type and played his role with a gravity and dignity convincing and effective and never stepped out of character. His retinue carried off their minor roles with equally good effect and they got a four day run in the New York papers without once making a false move. One New York paper, the Mail, even made editorial comment on the visit, and hundreds of columns of out-of-town mention were added to the metropolitan mention and, draining the story to the dregs, the final kick was a Sunday feature story telling how the stunt was put over, good for the better part of a page. Barnum never did better.

Saenger Uses New Publicity Angle in Booming Director

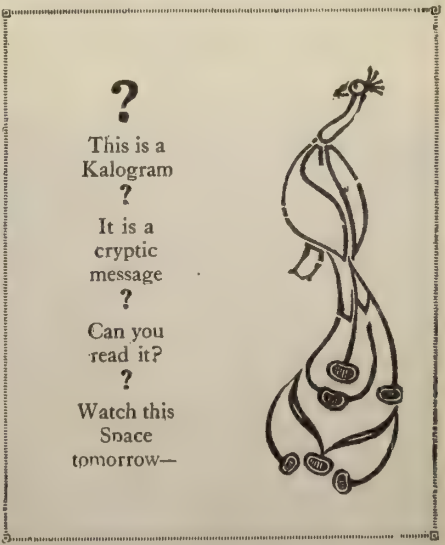
SOMETHING new in star directors was dug up by the Saenger Strand Theatre in New Orleans, in paving the way for "The River's End." The house was offering "In Old Kentucky," which also was made by Nielan. It was a corking good production and the management figured that it could be made to work for the next show, so on the same program page of the Saengerette using the current announcement of "In Old Kentucky" appeared this paragraph.

In view of the credit being given directors who produce the master achievements of the screen we wish you to remember Mr. Marshall Neilan as director of "In Old Kentucky," for from this young genius is due to come for presentation at the Strand the week commencing Saturday, March 27, the greatest of all pictures to date, a production of James Oliver Curwood's thrilling, fascinating romance, "The River's End"—first of Mr. Neilan's own unhampered, independent productions.

It was figured out that without a pronounced star in the first independent production the good work done for Miss Stewart in the Dazey play could be made to work for the director and get interest in the forthcoming production. The idea is worthy of imitation, for some directors are as surely stars as the leading players.

This Is a Kalogram, If You Know What Kalograms May Be

THIS, gentle reader, is a Kalogram. There used to be lots of Kalograms before July 1 of last year, but they are almost as extinct as the dodo these dry, degenerate days. This Kalo was hatched and hand-reared by E. A. Crane, of the Hodkinson Detroit office, who got the egg from the Hodkinson plan book. He got George Guise, of the Miles theatres, interested in the bird, and it was adopted for the Majestic Theatre, where "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" was to have its opening.



The Opening Kalograph Announcement.

It was caged on the home page of the Detroit Journal and $10 split into prizes of $5, $3 and $2 were offered for the persons who gave the neatest solution of the puzzle, which is that the design forms the letters of Louise Glaum, who stars in that play. The reproduction does not show the prize offer. That came the second day, and by the third it seemed almost impossible to over look the hint, for the text told all about the "Lone Wolf" and his daughter, but at that the 1,873 answers received ran all the way from Mae Marsh to Theda Bara. Many of the replies were in colors and some were really handsome.

The Stunt With a Smile Sells the Tickets

Hewitt Paged John Cumberland Until He Had to Pay John's Laundry Bill

MANAGER HEWITT, of the Strand, Robinson, Ill., believes in having a line of people all ready to buy tickets when he is ready to give a show, and now and then he jazzes things up just to keep people in mind of the house.

Lately he booked in Pathe's "A Gay Old Dog." It struck him that he could do something with this if he started in time and went at it right. The star was new to this town and they liked the old favorites, so Hewitt decided to make Cumberland as much a household word as the name of the latest granulated soap or the newest glue jelly.

Just for a starter he slipped over to another town and went into the telegraph office. There he explained that he wanted to send a telegram to John Cumberland, who must be stopping at one of the hotels over in Robinson, but he did not know which one. The telegram was very important and he would appreciate it if the clerk wired the operator in Robinson to make a special effort.

And the Boy Paged and Paged.

Business was not so brisk in Robinson that the telegraph messenger could not try to be obliging, so he went the rounds of the hotels and when this did not turn up the elusive John, he tried again. He might have made a third trip of it, because the message seemed very important, but the clerks saw him coming and waved him off.

And Hewitt arranged to have other wires sent from day to day, with the suggestion that certain stores be tried, and a lot of merchants had trouble explaining to the persistent messenger that they expected no drummer by the name of Robinson. The boy was getting interested in this Cumberland cuss and he was persistent.

Then Hewitt started on another tack. He called up the local steam laundry and asked where in Gehenna his laundry was. He wanted it sent down to the hotel at once. He put a regular commercial traveler emphasis on the "at once" and the manager looked all over the bundles in vain to find the Cumberland name.

Taking an Encore.

In a couple of hours "Cumberland" called up again to know where the shirts and things were. To judge by the voice he was considerably peeved and apparently was wearing his last clean collar.

The manager of the suds shop went all over the bundles again and even opened some which looked as though they might be labeled by mistake. He wanted to fix this Cumberland up, but he had to telephone that he could not find the bundle.

When the clerk told him he could not find Cumberland either, the mystery deepened and it was a good thing that Hewitt was on the phone when he called up the next day and repeated his demand for the missing duds. Hewitt hung up the receiver with a shocked expression on his face and decided to try something else.

Used the Personals.

The next move was a display classified offering a reward for any information leading to the discovery of John Cumberland. All letters were to be addressed to a certain post office box. He was described as a gay old dog and the general impression was created that his friends were anxious to capture a periodic souse who was on one of his sprees.

By this time the police were becoming interested in John and a score of persons were certain they had seen him around town and shot their tips into the post office address.

Then It Broke.

Hewitt was having a lot of fun, but it was time to get busy in earnest, so he started to advertise John Cumberland in "A Gay Old Dog" and a lot of people heaved sighs of relief. They were getting worried about Cumberland and it was good to know that he was a motion picture actor.

And the manager of the laundry read along with the rest and he gathered up about $11 worth of unclaimed laundry and sent it over to "John Cumberland, Strand Theatre, Collect."

Mr. Hewitt saw the point and paid up, and then both he and the laundry manager told the reporters and the story got into print without in the least hurting the chances of the play.

Now Mr. Hewitt is thinking up something else, but meanwhile there is a chance to adapt this stunt to your own house if you live in a town small enough to be stirred to its foundations by a missing man. And it might be remembered that the town doesn't have to be so infernally small, at that.

America's National Birds for a Ballyhoo.

Got a Swagger Throwaway Using Trade Press Cuts

LATELY it has been pointed out that the press book cuts in the larger size are particularly available for throwaway material, but William Brandt, of the Marcy, Brooklyn, did better than that. He had "Male and Female," and he was particularly impressed by the cut used on the title page of the press book. So he borrowed the two-color plates, had it printed on heavy cream paper and got an effect that only a blind man could ignore. It is not a throwaway, it is an art supplement, and it cost little more than a cheap and inconspicuous print paper circular. It is a real stunt.

A New Form of an Old Contest

TRYING something else for a hook-up page, the Washington Theatre, Detroit, ran a full page with seven other advertisements and offered ticket prizes to those forming the words "Pinto" the greatest number of times from the letters in each advertisement, using each letter but once. It's an old idea, but it made interest and got attention for the trailer advertisements on the page. A lot of people will go into a stunt of this sort merely for the amusement they get out of it, and the replies received probably represented only a portion of those who had "Pinto" indelibly impressed upon their memories.

Sees American's Camel and Rivoli Raises It Three

LAST week it was told how the American, Denver, borrowed a camel from a circus in winter quarters and used it to advertise "Flame of the Desert." Now comes the Rialto with a camel quartet and a real circus front and a clown and all the rest for "Her Elephant Man." Mighty handy to have a circus nearby when you have a circus story, for it made tremendous business and gave the record another boost.

Fashion Shows Still Make Real Money

"Pollyanna" Went Over with a Big Bang Between a Contest and a Kiddiefest

BETWEEN a contest and a children's party for crippled kiddies, "Pollyanna" went over to a fare-ye-well at Poli's Theatre, Hartford, and even the well-known blizzard, which seems to have been a component part of every press stunt the past three months, did not hurt the business, which ran to extra performances.

To begin with, J. F. Clancy, the house manager, astutely booked the picture for the week of the spring vacation in the public schools. That, in itself, was a move which spelled business. Then he got in touch with Charles E. Moyer, of the United Artists, and they cooked up the publicity plans. A letter signed by Miss Pickford donated $50 for prizes for an art contest among the school children, which was split $25, $15 and $10.

Mr. Clancy got in touch with the art teachers of the public and parochial schools and persuaded them to help along. Then the Courant came out with a column and a half special story of the contest, plus a three column reproduction of the Pickford letter. This was on Sunday. Monday morning every kiddie got a four-page circular about the stunt.

Crutches Were Distinctly in Fashion.

Putting It Over.

This was a nine by twelve four-pager, the first page giving a cut of the star and announcing the prizes. The second page gave the rules, which conformed to the Post Office rulings, the third gave a cut of 7½ inches high of the pose to be copied and colored, with color hints below and the suggestion that all contestants see the colored painting in the lobby of the theatre, though the hints were sufficiently complete in themselves. The back page reproduced the letter.

One of the stipulations was that the originality of the work was to be certified by the signature of the teacher, and for a week the schools buzzed with excitement in which the teachers shared, for a prize winner meant a certain glory to the school and class.

Made Lobby a Salon.

More than 300 entries were received and the best—and worst—of the entries were placed in the lobby frames and constituted a source of delight to all with a sense of humor, for a few were good but more were funny, and good and bad alike got attention. Decisions on the paintings was rendered by the high school teachers and honorable mentions helped to preserve good feeling among the near-winners.

A second spurt contemplated a theatre party to the crippled and destitute children, worked in conjunction with the Hartford Times. This meant six double column stories on the front page of a popular evening paper, and the sob stop was pulled out in the writing; perhaps the best appeal to the class of persons most likely to be interested in the play. Much was made of the automobile accident and Pollyanna's recovery.

Dogs Were Guests.

Nearly a thousand children and half a dozen crippled dogs were the guests at the special performance, volunteers supplying the autos for transportation to and from the theatre—which was where the newspaper came in.

Crippled Dogs Proved Exemplary Guests.

This stunt has been worked all over the country, but it has not failed in a single instance to put the story over big, and it is safe to say that no city turned up a more enthusiastic audience. When Pollyanna was struck down by the automobile the silence was broken only by a gasp of sympathy and when her cure was effected the crippled kiddies were the loudest in their acclaim. Many of the children were looking at a motion picture for the first time in their dun-colored little lives and to them it was better than a visit from Santa.

Between the two stunts the picture was put over to extra performances even on the Saturday when the tail end of the western blizzard struck the town. The children were all out of school, the mayor suspended the law prohibiting the attendance of children under four years of age, and hundreds of adult patrons came who do not usually visit the motion picture theatres. They were interested in the book and now they are interested in pictures.

And the proudest kiddies in town are the three winners, for Miss Pickford's letter expressly asked that the prize-winning pictures be sent her as souvenirs, and they are all swelled up at the thought that "Mary" is looking upon their handiwork.

Fashion Shows Boom "Lombardi"

"LOMBARDI, LTD.," has gone to the smaller houses, but the small town man is just as anxious to make money with the film as are the city exhibitors, and several of them have made a proportionate cleanup with a Fashion Show, which is a device particularly indicated for this Metro story of the man dressmaker. Fred S. Meyer, of the Palace, Hamilton, O., put on a show with seven local girls as models and did so well that he is sorry he did not make "Lombardi" better than a three day run. In addition to the seven girls, a dancer was employed to cover the costume changes and it was hard to tell whether the men or the women appreciated the show the most. Of course the pre-Easter season is the cleanup time for fashion shows in the spring, but a show can be put over almost any time and the local girls will bring you the most money, so try to frame it locally.

Combined Similarity and Raffles Stunt Made Something New for Indiana Crowd

COMBINING two old stunts formed a new idea and put Constance Binney over strong in Washington, Ind., in her first Realart production. Neither angle was new in itself, but the combination gave a fresh result.

Ernest Stellings was handicapped to a certain degree in that the local newspaper had no engraving plant, but he decided upon a similarity contest, offering a prize of a season pass to the woman most closely resembling the new star, with four minor prizes. The contest was ostensibly conducted by the newspaper. A local photographer offered to make new photographs for all who presented entry cards to be obtained from the paper or the theatre management.

The announcement was sprung two weeks before the first showing, and gave the excuse for a generous planting of portrait photographs, for local merchants knew that these photographs would be studied and were glad to give them a place in their windows, where they would attract attention to their own wares.

Held an Art Show.

The picture was to open on a Wednesday and the contest was closed in time to permit the photographs of the contestants to be shown in the display window of one of the leading stores the Sunday previous to the opening. The result was not announced, the photographs being shown without comment.

On Monday the winner was taken to various stores and in each selected some article to be called by the name of the play, in one an "Erstwhile Susan Hat," in another a coat and so on. These were promptly placed in the show windows and vigorously exploited, to the further help of store and play alike.

This was merely an adaptation of one of the "Micky" ideas, but it excited no little interest in the 8,000 town. The stores made much of the stunt and the advertising helped the house.

Then Came "Raffles."

Tuesday's paper announced that "the woman in Washington who looked most like Constance Binney" would give passes to all who greeted her with the formal salutation, "I know you, 'Erstwhile Susan.'" As the winner had not been announced, many of the contestants were approached, but quite a number guessed right and got seats for the opening.

The Raffles stunt in itself is old stuff. So is the similarity contest, but the similarity contest working into the Raffles idea gave the old idea a new kick and made a more effective combination than could be expected. Usually the Raffles is some unknown person, but this Raffles was known to look like Miss Binney. To get the pass it was necessary to know what Miss Binney looked like, and it was not possible to see her pictures without feeling some interest in the player. Everyone who studied the picture and was sold on the idea came down whether they won a pass or not, which was what Mr. Stallings was banking on.

Appealed to Women.

And the stunt was one to appeal to women. That was the chief factor. Mr. Stelling knows that to get the women is to bring the men, so he gave place to the ladies and he handled the stunt so well that he was able to make a record with the first appearance of a new star instead of trusting to that first performance to interest in her later appearances. He sold the new star and sold her big on two old ideas worked into a new combination. You can't do better than that.

Hauber Used Limericks to Get Interest in a Serial

J. C. HAUBER, of the Hauber Theatre, Pine Bluff, Ark., favors concentrating his exploitation stunts on the serials, arguing that when he puts a serial over the interest he creates runs over the fifteen weeks the serial lasts. He also favors the cheap stunt not only because elaborate schemes eat up most of the money the stunt brings in, but because the simple stunt is usually the best. At a cost of ten sets of tickets to "The Adventures of Ruth," he got columns of free publicity and had everyone interested in the new Ruth Roland serial. He simply hooked up with the local paper, the Commercial, offering a season pass each day for ten days for the best limerick on the serial. The entries poured in and because many of them were clever the Commercial was glad to use a column or so a day. The contest was supposed to be conducted by the paper, which gave the space free in return for the tickets, and the circulation boom it received and Mr. Hauber sold the town on the key serial.

Used Critic's Contest to Get Interest in Five Goldwyns

BECAUSE five Goldwyn features were booked into a single house in thirteen days, it was felt that something should be done to assure sustained interest. The Majestic, Jackson, Mich., booked "The Cup of Fury," "Pinto," "Jubilo," "The Paliser Case" and "Duds" within a two-week period, and Harry R. Guest, Goldwyn's man in Detroit, suggested a critic's contest. The Jackson News was induced to offer prizes for the best letter of 100 words or less on any one play, and hundreds of contestants struggled for recognition as critics in the eyes of their fellow townsmen. And to get the most out of it, the News kept talking about the contest and the plays for about three weeks and sent in no bill for pure reading matter, figuring the scheme as a circulation stunt, but being mindful of the heavy house advertising. It is not always a good scheme to encourage patrons to criticise, but sometimes it pays if it is done right.

Water Wagon Drew Attention of Crowd to Rogers Feature

PROBABLY lots of people thought of a water wagon perambulator in connection with Will Rogers in "Water, Water, Everywhere," but few knew where to get one of the blamed things in February, and others found they were frozen solidly to the ground to await the coming of spring. But the California Theatre, San Francisco, dug up a sprinkler in the city yards, hired a team and a driver to set it out on Market street to interest the populace in the Goldwyn feature. A large sign was used to prevent the prohibition crazed populace from getting the wrong impression, and the wording "If you want to learn how to get a real drink" sent thousands to the theatre to see the picture. Several times the police sought to interfere, but the driver had a permit and he stayed out all of the week.

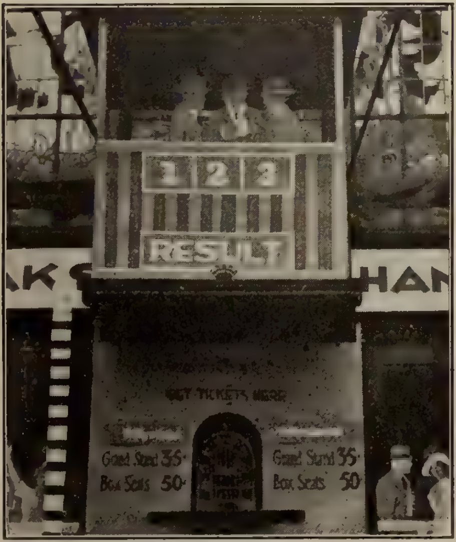
Philadelphia Theatre Carries Race Idea to Limit for "In Old Kentucky" Fortnight

PROVIDING its own race track crowd to supplement the throng of spectators was one of the ideas by which the Victoria Theatre, Philadelphia, put over Anita Stewart in "In Old Kentucky." Having this First National feature for a two weeks' run, the house could afford to go to extra expense for a lobby and it worked out a very effective display.

The Victoria is located on Market street and a good display will catch much transient trade in addition to the house regulars, and a good lobby means enough extra business to defray the cost of doing things right, but the house went to extremes to put this production over.

And a Judges' Stand.

The box office, which stands at the head of the short flight, was dressed to represent the two-story judge's stand, the box office occupying the lower portion, while above three men apparently discussed the finish preparatory to announcing the winner. Seen at close range the figures are not convincing, but from their elevation they looked down upon the crowd with better effect.



The Box Office Stand.

Signs on either side of the window announced the way to the Grand Stand and the Paddock, the latter being the balcony.

All of this was not a marked departure from many other lobby efforts on this picture, apart from the elaborateness with which the work was done, but this was just the starter.

On either side of the box office access is had to the lobby by means of plate glass doors. On the inside of these doors were cut-outs of a typical race track crowd, the men in high hats and the women in the odd costumes of the period of the play. Cut life size, they filled the doors completely and suggested that the lobby was filled with a mass of enthusiastic patrons of the sport of kings.

These cut-outs served a double purpose. They attracted the attention of the passer-by and they cut off the crowd within. Often a possible patron, seeing the lobby crowded, will pass on, but once he had climbed the steps to the box office and had purchased his ticket he could not retreat.

A Huge Sign.

The attraction was lettered upon the huge sign in front, but this sign is used every week and is an old story. Most of the selling was done by the cut-outs and the general race effects, and these effects were sufficiently novel to attract business for the entire fortnight and to send the story on to the lesser houses with the benefit of a big advertisement. It was not only an advertisement for the house, but it put over the story to a majority of Philadelphia theatregoers, all of whom hit Market street at least on Saturday.

Used an Intensive Campaign to Launch a New Playhouse

BOOKING his first three attractions from the Goldwyn exchange to get the aid of the promotion man was a happy thought of Herbert Weil, of the new Bijou Theatre, Port Huron, Mich. He booked in "The Girl from Outside," "Lord and Lady Algy" and "Strictly Confidential."

All through the course of erection spaces were taken to keep the public informed as to the progress of the new house and the many advantages it would offer when opened. Just before the completion, Harry R. Guest, the Goldwyn man, arrived and went to work in earnest

He started in with a two-page hook-up for "The Girl from Outside" with a dozen commercial advertisements, each carrying a scene cut. This he backed up with daily spreads and stories, a mailing campaign, window cards, throwaways and all other tricks of the business. There was no one outstanding stunt, but a case of plugging so steadily that no one in town went in ignorance of the opening date and attraction. No one thing was trusted to get the house over. It was a cumulative campaign, and by the time the doors were opened most of the town was waiting outside for a chance to get in.

Broken Phonograph Records Boomed "The Broken Melody"

ADVERTISING that broken phonograph records had a cash value, Willard Patterson, of the Criterion, Atlanta, got the interest of everyone, for almost every home has a phonograph and every phonograph cabinet has some records which are or should be broken. Everyone watched for the next announcement which ran to the effect that broken phonograph records would be accepted as cash at the opening matinee of "The Broken Melody."

"Don't throw away your broken phonograph records," the advertisement ran. "Don't pitch them out of the window or into the ashcan. If the baby has broken your favorite Caruso, save it. It is still valuable."

Mr. Patterson packed his house for the first showing and the novelty of the idea proved an unusual advertisement. The only trouble with the whole scheme is that Mr. Patterson doesn't know how to cash in on the records now he has them, and he doesn't want to throw them away because they might have some value. If you know what he can do with them, write or wire, then try the scheme yourself.

City Manager Finds Four Reels Will Please

Trick Street-car with Cut-out Fares Helped to Open "The Eyes of Youth"

SIGNING a check for publicity is about the easiest way of promoting a picture—for the check signer. When William Smith, of the Rialto, Tulsa, Okla., booked "The Eyes of Youth" from Peacock Productions, Inc., he merely signed his check for the sum he was willing to pay for promotion and the Peacock did the rest.

About the best stunt was a special street car used the Saturday before the opening. This was a regular passenger car, run over all of the lines, but the usual lettering was obscured by the streamers, the top reading, "We are going to see 'The Eyes of Youth.'" The lower gave the house and date. In each window cut-out "passengers" of the comic supplement type, enlarged to life size, gave emphasis to the "we" in the streamer. The faces at the windows were a far more potent attractor than a cover sign could possibly have been.

Decorated the Dash.

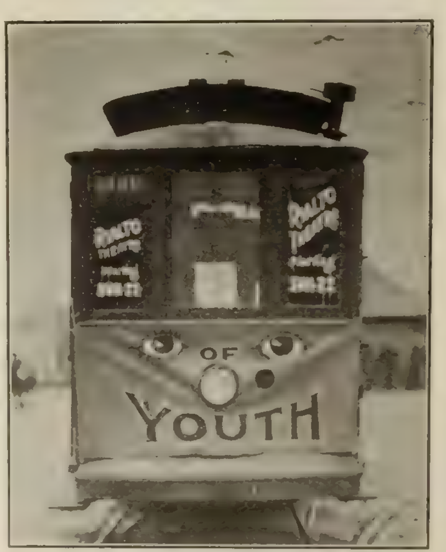
The front of the car was even more startling, for here a banner covered the dash with a pair of painted eyes, a headlight nose and a mouth formed of the word "Youth." It was brightly painted and the effect as the car made its way over the route was startling though not as bad as it probably would have been in pre-prohibition times on a Saturday afternoon.

The newspaper campaign was started two weeks in advance of the opening. The first week only the press book teasers were run, working into a two sevens the week before the opening and with the space increased each day up to a full page for the opening Sunday. Glenn Condon, who had charge of the campaign, used nothing but planbook mats, for he wanted to show what could be done with the aids available to all.

Five hundred sheets of paper were pasted including fourteen 24-sheets, a large number of threes and sixes and plenty of ones.

Ten thousand stock heralds were put out the Friday before the opening, and a number of hand-painted window cards were used. Each carried two stills from the play and were so attractively done that they were put into many windows, to which a printed card could not possibly gain access. They were artistic and a credit to the window, and they were put in the most advantageous positions.

Of course the plugger song was played up. Mr. Smith also runs the Orpheum, the vaudeville house, and arranged to have the song sung there the three days prior to the opening. He also used a trailer in the Orpheum as well as the Rialto.



Wouldn't This Jolt You.

Because the song was boomed, the ten-cent stores gave up windows to the display for a week in advance and during the showing, while every cabaret and dance hall was supplied with orchestra scores and used them.

Tagged the Cars.

Tags of a shape and color similar to those used by the police in summoning delinquent automobile owners were attached to every parked car in the business district the Saturday before and the Wednesday of the showing. The front read "You are summonsed," while the back advertised the film, but the shape and color were so deceptive that many visited the police station to make certain that it was not a regular summons in spite of the reading matter. They were taking no chances.

A projector which threw a slide on the sidewalk of the chief business street was installed and a miniature automobile, built on the lines of a racing car, but only two feet high, was used for a perambulator.

The lobby display was a cutout showing Miss Young and the Yogi, and a Yogi gave a five-minute prologue to the showing of the picture.

And the picture cleaned up in spite of the fact that there was no blizzard to report.

Cleaned Up with Chaplin As a Grind Show in Four Reels

USING Chaplin's "A Day's Pleasure" as a grind show with only two news reels in addition, Thomas H. Schnader, of the Columbia, Pittsburgh, not only played to capacity with double the usual number of shows, but was surprised to find that his patrons actually liked the shorter program. When he booked in the comedian, he figured that the crowd coming to see Chaplin would not care particularly about what dramatic feature he had, so he did not provide any. Two news reels gave him a four-reel program and this was ground throughout the day. He made a point of asking the departing patrons how they liked the show and was surprised to find that practically all of them approved its brevity and that none complained of the lack of dramatic feature. He used small display advertisements, the Chaplin flivver cut being the attractor, and he had a big cut-out of this for his lobby display, with an usher dressed as a policeman directing the traffic with a semaphore. The rest of the lobby was kept clear for the crowds and playing to twice as many persons as he might otherwise have done, Mr. Schnader feels that now and then a brief program pays the best, if only the short feature be carefully chosen. He does not argue that the public habitually wants a four-reel show, but that when they go especially to see a comedy, they do not care a whoop about the drama, which merely takes up time and brings no return.

Used Outdoor Stands for Selling Out "Desert Gold"

UTILIZING outdoor sales stands at the leading book shops for a special sale of Zane Grey's novel, "Desert Gold," D. M. Bain, of the Victoria, Wilmington, N. C., put over the film version to big business and left the booksellers in shape for his next drive, for they cleaned up, too. Two of the large stores were induced to give windows to the advertisement of the book and play, and then to put into commission outdoor stands for the sale of copies. It was this latter touch which put the idea over. Book hook-ups were not new, but the outdoor sale was, and it caught on. And after he got the people in Mr. Bain pleased them with a prologue following one of the big scenes.

PROJECTION

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Sounds Plausible, But—

SEVERAL weeks ago T. A. Reynolds, Brooklyn, wrote asking for some book on projection which was, as we understood him, simpler than the handbook. We commented on his letter and sent him a carbon. He now says:

> I asked for something less diffuse, not less difficult. I am sorry any misunderstanding arose, because even an apparent reflection on either yourself or the handbook was very far from my thoughts. I bought a handbook as a matter of course, it being the standard work on projection.
>
> It was the very first work I secured bearing in any way on the moving picture business. I have often wondered at the amount of industry and practical experience which made such a work possible.
>
> But let me explain. I do not believe that the mere fact of having passed an examination and secured license proves a man to be an A-1, fully qualified projectionist, or that he is even safe to leave in charge of a projection installation. I believe the chief purpose of the examination, and of all civil service examinations, is to limit the supply of men to the needs of the business and to prevent overcrowding trades and professions.
>
> As to Examinations.
>
> Examining boards will ask one man twenty questions and the next one only two. They do not try to make things easy for the applicant, so as to ascertain his real knowledge.
>
> They try to tangle him, mix up the circuit one way or another, or disarrange some of the many parts of the mechanism and in various ways cause him to lose his presence of mind. This would be quite fair if they had already given him credit for knowing his job under ordinary circumstances, but such is not the case.
>
> I think there should be a work (book) coaching men for examination, the same as in every other line of work, and once the applicant secures license he should serve his apprenticeship, meanwhile studying the handbook and the other works you made mention of. Pardon my being lengthy. I wanted you to get my viewpoint.

Got the Viewpoint.

I secured the viewpoint all right, but I do not at all agree. I have right now in my desk something which I, at great labor, compiled for another purpose, and then laid carefully aside because it would be the most wonderful little "coacher for examination" that ever happened. I could print it and make at the very least calculation $10,000 in one year by so doing, but I could only do that at the expense of flooding the industry with incompetents and working irreparable injury to the men and the profession that I have for years tried to help, and I cannot agree to that, for any amount of money.

No, an examination is not for the purpose of "limiting the supply," but to prevent incompetents entering the field, injuring the business by butchering up film, ruining machinery, wasting electrical energy, which means coal, man-handling productions which cost tens or hundreds of thousands of dollars, and injuring the quality of the show people pay real money to see.

Lucky If He Didn't Bite.

You say the man should serve an apprenticeship once he has secured his license. Umph! Sounds good, but I have a tintype of more than one out of about 9,876 doing it. The rest of them would give you the haughty glare if you even presumed to suggest such a thing. "Apprenticeship! Whatcha mean, man? See my license? I'm a projectionist, I am."

Notice to All

PRESSURE on our columns is such that published replies to questions cannot be guaranteed under two or three weeks. If quick action is desired, remit four cents, stamps, and we will send carbon copy of department reply as soon as written.

For special replies, by mail, on matters which, for any reason, cannot be replied to through the department, remit one dollar.

QUESTION BOOKLETS.

We have two paper covered booklets containing 150 questions designed as a guide to study. They indicate what the projectionist should know.

Either booklet, postpaid, twenty-five cents; both, forty cents . United States stamps accepted; cannot use Canadian stamps.

THE LENS CHARTS.

Are You Working by "Guess," or Do You Employ Up-to-Date Methods?

You demand that your employer keep his equipment in good order and up to date. He owes it both to himself and to you to do so, but you ofe it to him to keep abreast with the times in knowledge and in your methods.

The lens charts (two in one, 11x17 inches, on heavy paper for framing) are in successful use by hundreds of progressive projectionists.

Don't "guess." Do your work RIGHT. Price, fifty cents, stamps.

Address Moving Picture World, either 516 Fifth avenue, New York City; Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill., or Wright & Callender Building, Los Angeles, Cal.

Why, you would be lucky if he didn't bite you for even suggesting so absurd a procedure. The whole trouble lies right here.

I was obliged to serve five years' apprenticeship to be adjudged capable of running a locomotive, although there is much less to learn in order to become a proficient, locomotive engineer than is necessary to learn to be a competent projectionist.

Yet men seem to think it a terrific hardship that they are not allowed to handle projectors after a wee bit of study, or coaching for examination, and just a few months of apprenticeship—or none of the latter at all.

I grant that a large percentage of the present day projectionists have entered the profession in just that way, but that does NOT prove the procedure to be right.

I venture the assertion that were the British Columbia examination put into effect here in New York City tomorrow, with Mr. Oswald as examiner, there would be one of the most terrific shakings up any trade or business in the city of New York ever experienced, and that the number of cards now in existence would shrink from more than a thousand to decidedly less than one (1) hundred—yes, to less than fifty, and, mind you, the British Columbia examination is absolutely fair and just in every detail.

Of course there are quite a number of New York men, above the number named, who could pass the B. S. examination with some study, but there are a great number who either could not pass it at all or could not pass without beginning at the very beginning and learning the profession they now know practically nothing at all about, from the ground up.

They handle lenses every day, yet they know as much about lens action as a cat knows about heaven.

They handle valuable films, yet they could not make an intelligent test of the tension of their projectors.

What's the Use?

They handle a hundred amperes D. C. and brag about it, not knowing that by the application of a little knowledge they could get as good or a better result with 75, or maybe 60 amperes.

They handle valuable films, and have a reel can under their projector to catch the surplus oil, or as much of it as the film does not mop up.

They work under conditions which make it utterly impossible to project a high class screen result, yet are unable to tell the exhibitor what changes are necessary or desirable, because they do not know.

They rewind valuable films on a rewinder that is out of line, at high speed, on crooked reels, and then curse the "rotten service" they get.

They—oh, what's the use! I could spend pages telling what they do NOT know, and LINES telling what they do.

Yes, I know it is rough to tell the truth this way, and right out in meeting too. But it is also rough to have the profession cumbered with incompetents.

In closing let me tell you this: If you know your business, no examiner on earth can tangle you up. If you don't know it the examiner commits a moral crime when he passes you, and gives you a card.

Oh, yes, I nearly forgot. An examiner often asks only a couple of questions to some men because their answers to those two are quite sufficient to prove their entire lack of real knowledge.

Interest in Projection Room Aroused

On page 1468, February 28 issue, we published our idea of the possibility for front-of-the-balcony projection room location, together with sketch somewhat condensed, illustrating the various details. From Reginald Wyckliffe Geare, Architect, Washington, D. C., comes the following encouraging letter:

> Your article with reference to the location of projection rooms in the balcony is an interesting one. You certainly deserve commendation for suggesting such an idea to the prospective theatre builders and exhibitors of the country. If such co-operation can be enlisted in the interest of "The Perfect Theatre," in all branches of theatre design, then the perfect theatre will very soon become a reality.
>
> Tried to Incorporate the Idea.
>
> I have several times attempted to incorporate the idea you suggest in theatres designed in my office, but have always met with difficulties in construction or lack of interest on the part of owners.
>
> Last fall Harry Crandall, who is, by the way, progressive and willing to take a chance, engaged me to design an eighteen hundred seat, combination legitimate and moving picture theatre in Cumberland, Maryland. This house, which is now under roof, will be the nearest approach to a perfect medium sized theatre that has been erected up to this date, not because of my connection therewith, but because of the co-operation of every essential party to that end.
>
> Needless to say it embodies the idea as illustrated in your sketch, with all the objections eliminated. In view of the vast importance of this item to the industry, would you care to include in your columns an illustrated drawing of the Cumberland theatre projection room and sight lines?

The drawing would have to be made, as the contract drawings would be unintelligible to the average person who is not familiar with construction detail drawings. If you say the word I will prepare the drawing, with brief description for your consideration."

More Than Glad.

We shall be more than glad to have the drawing and description, which will have a place in the editorial section of the paper, with the display its importance demands. Mr. Blaisdell, our Editor in Chief, agrees with me in this.

I well know that owners and exhibitors do not realize the importance of this matter. They seem imbued with the idea that keystone effect is the only single evil effect of the way-back and up-high projection location, and that that can be easily eliminated. They do not understand that keystone is one of the minor evils. They do not understand that, while they can eliminate keystone, they cannot eliminate distortion.

They do not understand that the placing of the projection room up high and far back renders it a practical impossibility for the projectionist to have that clear, sharp view of the screen which is essential to best results, and that this sets up additional, unnecessary eye-strain for the audience through lack of sharpness in focus.

They do not know that the far back, up high location calls for enormous waste of light, which means waste of electrical energy; hence adds to overhead expense every hour they run. But all this is fact just the same, and fact must be reckoned with. My compliments to you, friend Geare, and may your tribe increase. Please send that drawing as soon as you conveniently can.

Feaster Non-Rewind Being Pushed

The Feaster non-rewind, which this department had thoroughly tested years ago, and which it has always approved and recommended, is now being placed on the market on what seems a reasonable business basis.

It is made to handle 2,000-foot reels of film and will be rented to theatres for $100 per year for two machines, which will include the upkeep of both devices. That is to say, for $100 per year the company will equip both projectors with Feasters and will keep them in repair.

Worthy Consideration.

It will be well for theatre managers to give this matter serious consideration. The elimination of rewinding will very largely reduce damage to film and damage to film must, no matter what the source of damage, be paid out of theatre receipts. It therefore follows that if damage to film can be materially lessened the theatre will directly benefit, and in several ways.

First, film rentals can be reduced in proportion as there is less damage to film, with consequent lenthening of the useful life thereof.

Second, the less damage the less will be the injury to the screen result and the better the "show" which can be put on.

This directly affects all those thousands of smaller theatres which cannot use strictly first run, undamaged film.

A large proportion of the "rain" in film is directly due to "pulling down" in rewinding, hence with rewinding eliminated rain would be greatly reduced. From every viewpoint the Feaster, when reduced to the present rational business proposition in the matter of price, is a particularly good one.

They Want To Be Projected

The accompanying photograph shows two Detroit projectionists who call themselves "movie operators." They evidently were not intended by nature to work with the same observation port.

William Burns, the tallish one, seems to have been born on a day when legs were plentiful, and feet not so scarce. George James the Number 8 collar fellow, must have been raised on grape fruit, which comes in small kernels and boxes.

Well, anyhow, these two, who style them selves "Nuts and Happy," have tired of shooting men, women, trees, houses, etc., at a screen. They now desire to themselves pass out through a lens.

They seek an engagement with some comedy. Their address is 121 Farmer st., Detroit, Michigan. They say they have both been before the camera. We would strongly advise comedy companies to come early and avoid the rush.

Excellent Carbon Adaptor

The sales department of the National Carbon Company sends in samples of the new Silvertip Adaptor and Columbia Carbon Saver which that corporation is placing on the market as soon as it is able to accumulate sufficient stock, which same may have happened by the time this reaches our readers. From the letter written by Mr. Geib, of the sales department, we get the idea that the National folks think real well of the two devices, with which view we are happy to say we can cordially agree.

The Silvertip adaptor will accommodate anything from 5/16 to 7/16 of an inch. The Columbia Carbon Saver, which is designed to allow the projectionist to consume his carbon stubs down to the last possible half inch, takes anything from ⅝ to ⅞ inch.

Ample Dimension.

Both are of ample dimensions and have a powerful clamping arrangement. The depth of the contact surface in the saver is a bit less than an inch and of the adaptor it is a bit more than half an inch. This latter may seem a little scant, but undoubtedly the National folks have very thoroughly tried it out in practice and have found it to be sufficient.

The adaptor and saver both have the hearty approval of this department. We would, however, suggest to the company that to each saver and adaptor a card be attached, reading: "Keep clamp screw lubricated by dipping it into powdered graphite occasionally." In fact, such a card should be attached to the lamp of every projector sent out by projector manufacturers.

A New Theatre Opens

Up in Harlem, at Broadway and 159th street, a new 2,800 seat moving picture theatre has thrown its doors open to the public. The Rio is its name, and David V. Picker is its owner.

The projection installation is in itself interesting, both for its excellence and its mistakes. The screen is 148 feet away from and, of course, far below the lens. The projection room is, apparently, without any good reason, hoisted up ten feet or so above the top of the topmost balcony seat, and is reached by means of an iron ladder and a hole in the floor.

The projection angle is 17 degrees and the picture, which would, under normal conditions, be twelve by sixteen, is about twelve feet six inches by sixteen. The distortion is not sufficient to be seriously objectionable, though the result would be more pleasing to the audience were the picture normal.

The installation was by the Cinema Center. The screen is a plain white surface and gives splendid results. Incidentally, it might be remarked that several of the great Broadway houses have recently gone back to the plain painted screen.

The projection installation consists of two Type S Simplex projectors, Robin electric speed indicators, two 2-phase, 220-volt, 60-cycle, 6.75-KW Westinghouse motor generator sets, a special switchboard with two voltmeters and two ammeters and two field rheostat controls.

The motor generators are so connected that either may be used separately or both in parallel (multiple). A circuit breaker is provided, with a no-voltage cut-out to prevent any possibility of either generator acting as a motor when one is stationary, or in case of accident. The switchboards were designed by Mr. Robin.

Projection Room Small.

There is a spot lamp. Both projectors are equipped with Feaster non-rewinds capable of carrying 2,000 feet of film. Seventy to eighty amperes will be used at arcs, which is conveyed to machine table switches by No. 0 wires.

The projection room is equipped with special supply and tool cabinets. Motor generators rest on a four-inch thickness of cork and cannot be heard by one seated directly beneath the room. There is no A C emergency set because of the fact that the dual motor generator renders such an installation unnecessary.

The installation is most excellent, but the room, with its dead white plaster walls, poor location and small and none-too-well placed observation ports is distinctly bad. Just why an exhibitor will purchase such excellent and costly equipment, and then handicap its efficiency by making everything about the room itself wrong, passeth understanding.

On the night of the opening the orchestra lights murdered the picture. So very bad was this that many of those seated in the balcony left in the middle of the show.

Some of the titles were so badly light struck that they could not be read at all, at least from the rear half of the balcony.

To sum up, the projection installation is very complete, but the projection room is very bad in several points, which render high class screen results difficult, if not impossible and the orchestra lights, if left as they were the opening night, will enable the fiddlers to pose before the audience—allow them to be "seen," but will operate to make the picture unsatisfactory and even invisible in its finer details.

Twenty-Five Cycle Projection Current

Ed Kramer, Burlington, Iowa, says:

There are a number of towns around here which offer good openings for a moving picture theatre, but the current is 110 volt, 25 cycle, and what has been bothering me is, can we use this for projection. In other words, can we get a fairly good picture on short throw, say forty-five to sixty feet, using a projection transformer?

The projector is a Power's, with two-wing shutter. Would take current through a Power's 25 cycle Inductor.

Cannot afford a rectifier or motor generator, at least until have given these towns a tryout.

Recently I noticed something with regard to your handbook which I had not supposed would ever happen. Took a short auto trip recently and stopped in Mt. Pleasant to look over a house.

It is running now, operated by the Adams Theatre Company, of Des Moines. On top of the desk in their office was a Richardson Handbook, which the firm supplies to all their projectionists, first placing in its front a nice little note telling them that the day of inefficiency and the flickering picture is past.

They use two Power's, taking current through a rectifier, with a Fort Wayne compensarc for warming up.

Advise Motor Generator.

With regard to the 25 cycle current matter, I could not conscientiously advise anything other than a motor generator set.

The current will give you flicker, because the cycles are so slow that even in an incandescent lamp the flicker is visible to the eye. This is inevitable and cannot be overcome by anything other than a motor generator set.

A rectifier will give very fairly satisfactory service, but even it will not, I think, entirely remove the objection.

Much depends on what you call a "fairly good picture." I am afraid we might differ on that point.

You can get a fairly brilliant picture, if it be not too large and if you use a good metallic surface screen, using one inductor set at its maximum.

You may even get a fairly bright picture with a plain white screen, but the flicker in the light itself is inherent and cannot be evaded.

The length of throw is of no importance up to 100 or 125 feet, except that anything less than fifty is bad, unless you have a very small picture.

Put in more intelligent form, any distance of projection and picture size which compels the use of an objective of less than 4-inch E F is not good, and if it compels the use of an objective of less than 3½ inches it is very bad indeed.

Excellent Business Proposition.

We are, of course, flattered by the action of the Adams Company, but many progressive companies are now doing the same thing. For instance, Major Grierson, chief engineer Provincial Theatres Company, Inc., London, England, has ordered handbooks for several of its theatres, and will, I believe, order for them all, because it is a most excellent business proposition.

An exhibitor who pays large sums of money per week for film service can well afford, purely as a matter of business economy, to pay $4 for a book to teach his projectionist to put that service on his screen efficiently and well, and to take proper care of his costly equipment.

Sorry I cannot be more definite on the 25 cycle question, but I have given the only practical answer.

You cannot give what I would call a satisfactory show with 25 cycle current at the arc, but you might, nevertheless, call it fairly so. And there you are.

Los Angeles Man Honored

516 Fifth Avenue, New York City
Schiller Building, Chicago, Ill.
Wright & Callender Bldg., Los Angeles, Cal.

To save time, order from nearest office.

Brother Keller has resigned his position with the Grauman Million Dollar Theatre, Los Angeles, to accept the position of Supervisor of Projection with the Provincial Cinematograph Theatres, Ltd., 199 Piccadilly, London, W.

Mr. Keller will receive a salary commensurate with the importance of his position, and will have supervision of projection in fifty of the finest moving picture theatres in Europe, scattered in various cities of England, Scotland, Wales and Ireland.

Mr. Keller took along an autographed copy of the handbook, a lens chart and an ambition to make good and do honor to the land of his birth.

We commend him to the courtesy of British projectionists. He was engaged, as we understand it, by Major Grierson, chief engineer of the company, at the time of his recent visit to the United States.

We wish for brother Keller all good fortune. We feel sure he is well equipped for his new position and that he will justify the judgment of Major Grierson in his selection.

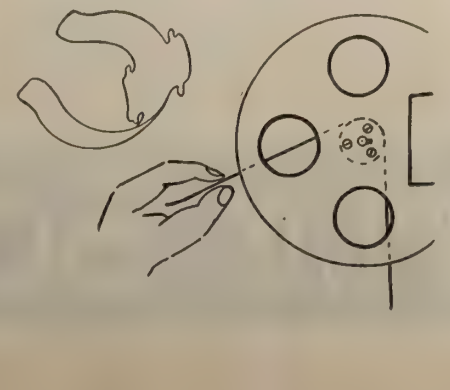
Clever Reel Film Clamp

Down in Washington, D. C., C. Francis Jenkins, one of the oldest old-timers in the business, has invented what we regard as a very clever clamp for attaching film to the reel.

The device is merely a piece of spring steel which snaps on over the standard small reel bulb, either wood or iron, and hugs it tightly, but may at any time be removed merely by pulling it off.

Its center is just wide enough to fit in between the reel sides. In fact, the two Jenkins sent us for inspection were a bit too wide, but that may be easily remedied with a carborundum wheel or a cold chisel, vise and hammer.

Spaced apart exactly the same as the two lines of sprocket holes are four steel teeth, two pointing each away, bent up just enough so that when the film is held against the reel hub and the reel revolved slightly, or the film is pulled endwise, they engage two of the sprocket holes.



Looks good to us for the projection room reels. Will save time and bother in threading and do away with the annoyance of loose spring clamps.

Distortion and Its Effect

In nine out of ten high class theatres, especially in the east, the projection room is located up high and way back, the general idea being to place it where it will occupy space that cannot possibly be put to use for seats. The prime idea is that seating capacity counts for everything and that almost any location will do very well indeed for the projection room if seats are not sacrificed.

But there is a phase of this matter which exhibitors do not seem to have grasped. It is possible to locate the projection room where no seats will be sacrificed, but at the same time involve very great sacrifice in seating because of the fact that empty seats have mighty little value. They may —or may not—be ornamental, but as revenue producers an empty theatre seat is about the most useless thing we know of today.

So let us look into this matter just a wee bit further. Let us take a certain Broadway theatre, for example, because it is, we think, the very finest example of moving picture theatre magnificence in this or perhaps any other country. It has a projection room so located that the picture is very nearly square in form on the screen.

A Seat-Selling Proposition.

Now this theatre has, if I rightly remember, 2,800 seats. It gives two shows a day, hence has 2,800 × 2 = 5,600 seats to sell every day. Does it sell them? Some days, yes. More days, no, which is not as it should be. There is, of course, a reason. While it is quite true that the audience, not having an undistorted picture before them for comparison, does not actually know the screen result is not as pleasing as it should be.

It does know that the net result is not altogether to its liking, and this naturally operates to decrease the attendance. Of course we cannot actually prove this as to this particular theatre, but we nevertheless firmly believe that if there were an undistorted, truly proportioned picture on its screen the added beauty of the result would fill those sometimes empty seats. And if this is so, then while the projection room location is such that it does not actually supplant any seats, still it sacrifices seating capacity heavily by making the seats less salable.

One Effect of Distortion.

One effect of distortion caused by error in projection room location is to compel one to remember that one is looking at a picture, the very thing one does not desire to do, and may not do under right conditions. But when one sees men and women abnormally tall and thin the mind rebels. Sub-consciously it senses the fact that something is wrong. People do not actually look that way. And the sense of pleasure is thus marred.

There is no more use in disputing that proposition than there is disputing the proposition that one and one make two. One may dispute the latter, true, but arguments will not alter the result of the addition by the smallest fraction.

Meeting in May

The next meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers will be held in Montreal, P. Q., May 10, 11 and 12. Many interesting papers will be read and doubtless very valuable discussions will be held thereon.

Republic to Distribute "Common Sense."

Announcement is made by Briton N. Busch, president of Republic Distributing Corporation, of which Lewis J. Selznick is advisory director, that Republic has acquired and will shortly release "Common Sense," a five-reel production directed by Louis William Chaudet. The cast includes Vola Vale and Ralph Lewis.

Eschmann and Aschmann Are Much Alike in Sales Ability as Well as in Their Names

HEADED by the appointment of E. A. Eschmann, of Chicago, as feature sales manager, Pau Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., this week announced a list of important promotions in the executive and field sales forces of Pathe.

Mr. Eschmann assumed his new position, which he earned by his success in handling Pathe's product as manager of the Chicago exchange since August, 1919, on Monday, March 15. He will work directly under Elmer R. Pearson, director of exchanges.

William A. Aschmann, formerly manager of the Milwaukee office, has been transferred to a similar position in the Chicago exchange, where he will have wider latitude for his energetic selling ability.

Following the Pathe policy of giving its employes the fullest advantage in the promotion line, J. H. Mergener has been appointed manager at Milwaukee. Mergener was formerly assistant to Mr. Aschmann, who topped off his long career with Pathe last November by winning a $1,000 ring for his wife in the "Quimby Tribute Month" competition.

E. A. Eschmann, since joining the Pathe forces last August, has won the reputation of being one of the most effective branch managers in the organization. He has been instrumental in materially increasing the Pathe business in the Chicago territory, and as one of his final acts as branch manager of the Windy City exchange he turned into the home office in a single day 150 days' bookings on Edgar Lewis' big special, "Other Men's Shoes." He is in thorough accord with the ideas of Director of Exchanges Pearson regarding the exploitation of features, having been one of Mr. Pearson's most effective aids when the latter was feature sales manager.

Mr. Aschmann, new manager at Chicago, is one of the "Old Guard" of Pathe. Having been thoroughly schooled in the Pathe ethics, Mr. Aschmann has been one of its most successful branch manager, and in moving into Chicago he will have a greater field wherein to gain new laurels. He will have to meet a high figure weekly to touch the record set by Mr. Eschmann, but he will do it, Pathe believes.

"Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" to Tie-up with "Florodora" Revival

"THOSE were the happy days," say the theatrical producers who are reviving the delightful "Florodora" of two decades ago and cashing in on the sentiment which invariably accompanies a comedy revival from the unforgettable yesteryear. And the ever alert exploitation men who are already looking ahead to the publicity value of Charles Ray's forthcoming First National production, "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway," are planning to tie up the photoplay with the renewed interest in "Florodora."

The revival of "Florodora" is scheduled for the Century Theatre, New York City, during the next few months and the efforts of the producers to gather a "Pretty Maiden Sextette" resembling closely the well-known chorus of twenty years ago is gaining considerable attention for the delightful character of the "Florodora" girl. In the George M. Cohan story in which Arthur S. Kane is presenting Charles Ray one of the principal feminine characters is Flora Dora Dean, a personality adapted from the original play of similar name, and who retains the appearance of the dainty ballet girl of the "Florodora" sextette.

A novel exploitation stunt will be introduced into the advertising of this photoplay, which will come directly upon the wave of popularity attending the big revival of the comedy. Considerable publicity has been aroused by the search for the elusive "Florodora" type by statements from all available survivors of the original sextette and by the selection of girls in cities outside of New York for trial in the parts of the chorus girl of twenty years ago.

It is planned to start similar contests in towns wherever "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway" is shown, not only to recruit an entire "Pretty Maiden Sextette" from among local talent but to arrange for its personal appearance at motion picture houses. The publicity attendant upon the selection of the young women best suited to the roles and the reproduction of their pictures in local newspapers is declared to offer unlimited opportunities for putting "Forty-Five Minutes from Broadway" across in a highly interesting fashion.

Many High Class Houses Sign for Sidney Drew Comedies

ANNOUNCEMENT of the release of the second comedy of the Mrs. Sidney Drew series on April 18 finds practically all first-class houses throughout the country under contract for the series of six pictures, according to reports received at the Pathe Exchange. The second comedy is "The Stimulating Mrs. Barton" and John Cumberland is featured.

Latest returns from the branches show the signing of many of the leading theatres throughout the United States, including the Rivoli Theatre of San Francisco.

Edward Dillon Will Direct Viola Dana in Latest Play

EDWARD DILLON has been engaged by Metro to direct Viola Dana in "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," the Al Woods farce that will be her next Metro-Screen Classics picture.

Edward Dillon recently directed Irene Castle in "The Amateur Wife." For twelve years he has been prominent in the motion picture industry. He started as an actor with Biograph and after several years branched out as a director. He has directed De Wolf Hopper in "Don Quixote," Madge Kennedy in "Our Little Wife," Ann Pennington in "The Ambitions of Ann," Bessie Love in "The Heiress of Coffee Dan's" George Welsh in five productions and other successful pictures.

"Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" is the boudoir farce by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan which enjoyed a successful season in New York and now, in its third season, has three companies on the road. A. P. Younger of the Metro scenario staff adapted it for the screen. Eugene Pallette will be Miss Dana's leading man.

New Reading Theatre Makes Special Appeal to Kiddies

CHILDREN as a necessary adjunct to the exhibition of motion pictures in a neighborhood theatre have been recognized by Carr and Schad in opening the Strand Theatre in Reading, Pa. The firm, which operates three other theatres in Reading, made a special appeal to the children and the parents of children on the opening date, on the theory that a picture showing special care for the comfort and welfare of children would acquire a friendly standing in any neighborhood made up of American homes.

Accordingly, the announcements of the opening contained the invitation to bring or send the children. The fact was advertised that two women would be employed regularly by the theatre to look after the comfort of kiddies who attended and to give them any attention that was necessary. Charlie Chaplin in his third First National attraction, "A Day's Pleasure," the opening feature, was also advertised as a picture that would make a specail appeal to the young folks.

SIMPLE SOULS

Three More Circuits Book Realart Films; Rubin & Finkelstein Among the Number

THE ranks of big circuits booking Realart's special was swelled this week by the addition of Rubin & Finkelstein, the prominent Twin City exhibitors, Jensen & Von Herberg, the big Northwestern circuit, and Poli's chain of theatres in New England.

The obtaining of these contracts in quick order, according to J. C. Ragland, general sales manager of Realart Pictures Corporation, makes the company's representation in all the big circuits throughout the country practically complete.

Rubin & Finkelstein signed contracts for "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," an Emile Chautard Production, and "The Luck of the Irish," an Allan Dwan Production. Both features are presented by Mayflower Photoplay Corporation and are to have early showings in the principal houses of Minneapolis, St. Paul and Duluth.

Jensen & Von Herberg closed contracts for "The Luck of the Irish" for one week each at the Majestic in Portland, the Strand in Seattle, the Rialto in Tacoma, and the Rialto in Butte.

Poli's circuit of vaudeville theatres took contracts for "The Luck of the Irish" for four-day showings in the firm's houses in Bridgeport, New Haven, Waterbury, Hartford, Meriden, Conn., and in Springfield, Mass.

"The signing of any one of these chains," said J. C. Ragland, "would constitute a good week's work anywhere, but here we are suddenly given all three, and at a time when we figured we had accomplished about all in the way of big circuit bookings a single firm could hope to get.

"I consider that a circuit booking is the most rigid test to which any picture can be subjected. It means that its appeal is not limited to a single class of patrons or to small neighborhood audiences. Circuit bookings are only for pictures with a broad, powerful appeal, and those other qualities that attracted the large masses of people."

Senator Sherman Introduces Wheeler Bill in the Senate

SENATOR SHERMAN, of Illinois, has introduced in the United States Senate the bill previously introduced in the House of Representatives by Representative Wheeler, of the same state, restricting the sale of tickets and the number of admissions to the theatres in the District of Columbia.

This would prohibit the theatre owner or manager from selling tickets or granting free admission to any person unless such ticket or admission permitted the immediate seating of the person involved. Further, section three provides that the district commissioners be required to limit the number and determine the arrangement of seats in any theatre, having regard to its proper ventilation, fire protection and sanitation, and no theatre would be permitted to increase its capacity without the approval of the commissioners.

The building regulations now require with respect to theatres having a seating capacity of 500 or more that lobby space equivalent to one and a half feet a person be provided. Take the Metropolitan, Knickerbocker, Palace, Rialto or any of the other large houses and were it not for this regulation the seating capacity could be increased so as to take care of all the people who now have to stand for a few minutes after buying tickets and before seats become available.

If the theatre men were prohibited from selling tickets until seats become available, it would mean an end to all continuous performances such as the motion picture exhibitions. Incidentally, the price of admissions would be increased. The manager would run a show and then clear his house, and it would take forty minutes to sell tickets for a second show and seat the people, it is estimated.

Hodkinson Releases Hit High Mark in New York Territory

HODKINSON releases are cutting a wide swath in the Metropolitan district. Marx S. Nathan, head of the local exchange, and his sales force have for weeks been hitting a high mark in the volume of contract bookings obtained from the big circuits and the larger theatres in the New York zone on the big productions distributed by the Hodkinson organization.

Manager Nathan reports contracts on J. Parker Read, Jr.'s, Louise Glaum picture, "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," for presentation on the entire Sydney S. Cohen circuit, which has already started a big twenty-four sheet poster campaign in the Bronx; for Moss' Hamilton, the Charles Steiner circuit, the M. & S. circuit, the latter having arranged for extended engagements at all its houses. The Cohen circuit has also contracted for Zane Grey's "Desert Gold," "The Capitol," starring Leah Baird, "His Temporary Wife," and J. Warren Kerrington's "Live Sparks." Last week Kerrigan's "30,000" played Moss' Hamilton, the Adelphi, the Symphony and the Seventy-seventh Street Theatre, besides being booked solid on all other Moss houses.

C. H. Schneider, owner of the Beverly Theatre, Brooklyn, after booking "The Lone Wolf's Daughter," arranged with forty-six stores in his vicinity for use of their windows in a unique promotion campaign.

She's a Gem at the Gem Projection Machines Is Mrs. J. C. Morgan Ripley

HEREWITH we present a portrait of Mrs. J. C. Morgan, who is said to be the only woman moving picture operator in West Virginia. She has charge of the machines at the Gem Theatre at Ripley, and is also assistant manager of the house. Not only that, but Mrs. Morgan also conducts a photo studio in the town and does all kinds of photographic work.

Film salesmen in this territory are high in their praise of the pictures projected at the Gem and all agree that Mrs. Morgan is a little wonder when it comes to light, focus, frame and all other requirements of a perfect picture.

Many Houses in Metropolitan Area Book "The Deadlier Sex" Following Premiere

FOLLOWING the announcements of the booking of the latest Blanche Sweet production released by Pathe, "The Deadlier Sex," by the B. S. Moss Theatre, New York City, many of the finest theatres in the Metropolitan area have contracted for the picture. The Broadway Theatre run of the picture for one week started on March 14 and many exhibitors visited the theatre to see for themselves the manner in which the production went over. Important bookings resulted.

Among the important houses contracting for the picture are the Moss Regent and the Moss Flatbush theatres, B. F. Keith's Prospect, Academy of Music, Proctor's Twenty-third Street and Proctor's 125th Street, Harlem Opera House, Keith's Jersey City, Proctor's Mount Vernon and Proctor's Yonkers, Halsey Street, D. V. Picker's Rio Theatre, Adelphia, Seventy-seventh Street, Symphony, Fox's Nemo and the Majestic on Washington Heights.

In all of the big exchange centers the most representative exhibitors have either booked the picture or have arranged for a screening as soon as prints are available for them. The splendid success of the first two Blanche Sweet pictures released by Pathe, "A Woman of Pleasure" and "Fighting Cressy," have established the star on a firm basis in the best theatres and with every assurance that the third production, which is from the pen of Bayard Veiller, is of the highest standard of excellence.

A factor which is making the picture popular in many of the smaller cities and towns is the newspaper tie-up which has been arranged by the Pathe publicity forces. A series of articles on noted women of history prepared by Blanche Sweet under the title of "The Deadlier Sex" has been widely distributed among the newspapers of the country

Columbia City Council Rules in Favor of Liberal Sunday

THE city council of Columbia, Tenn., has passed an ordinance repealing the present Sunday closing law and permitting business houses to remain open on the Sabbath with the exception of two hours between 10 o'clock in the morning and noon. Whether or not this will also permit moving picture houses to remain open is not determined, but the motion picture theatre is regarded as much of a business industry as anything else.

In passing this ordinance Columbia is one of the first cities in the South to take this step once the Sunday blue laws had been placed in actual operation, and the result will be watched with interest by other towns and cities of the section.

Especially active against the repeal of the law were the various women's clubs of the city, several of them adopting resolutions against a repeal of the closing law.

The suspense is now over and we know that Realart's mysterious star personality is Wanda Hawley, whose many friends have long wanted to see her starred.

Survey Shows Twenty-Five New Theatres Due to Open in Cleveland Within Year

A SURVEY of the theatres now being built and on which actual promotion has been made in Cleveland reveals the interesting fact that before 1921 twenty-five new houses will have been opened. Two theatres to replace the Klaw & Erlanger and Shubert present houses, two Keith vaudeville theatres and more than twenty motion picture houses are included in the program of amusement enterprises to be established during the year. They will supply a seating capacity for 50,000 and the cost of them will be over $10,000,000.

Five new downtown houses having a combined seating capacity of 13,000 are now building or will go this year. One of the picture houses is Loew's State, which will seat 4,000 and will be the largest in the city. The other downtown picture theatre will be the Allen, which will seat 3,000.

Extending Theatrical District.

These two picture theatres, the Klaw and Erlanger and Shubert and one of the Keith houses all will be centered at Euclid avenue and East Fourteenth street. In fact, the entrances to all of them will be within a half block. This will extend the heart of the theatrical district up Euclid avenue three blocks, as the present district centers around the intersection of East Ninth street and Euclid avenue.

The survey also disclosed plans, hitherto unannounced, of the Loew interests for the building of five more theatres in Cleveland, three in the East End and two on the west side of the Cuyahoga River. The locations of these houses are not given out because all real estate and financial arrangements have not yet been completed. They will have a combined seating capacity of 9,000 and will cost over $2,000,000. Construction work will start about May 1.

The List in Detail.

The following is the complete list of theatres now building or about to be started in the city

Loew's State, pictures, Euclid and East Fourteenth street, 3,300 seats, $2,000,000; the Ohio, Klaw & Erlanger house, Euclid and East Fourteenth street, 1,500 seats, $5,00,000; the Hanna, Shubert theatre, Euclid and East Fourteenth street, $500,000; the Terminal, pictures, 236 Superior avenue, West, 600 seats, $50,000; Loew's Park, pictures, Euclid and East 101st street, 4,000 seats, $850,000; Keith's, vaudeville, Euclid and East 105th street, 3,000 seats, $1,000,000; Hoffman's Palace pictures, Euclid avenue and East 102d street, 1,500 seats, $400,000; Stratford, pictures, Hough avenue and East Eighty-fourth street, 1,500 seats, $225,000.

Five Points, pictures, St. Clair avenue and East 152d street, 1,500 seats, $100,000; Corlett, pictures, 12,705 Miles avenue, 1000 seats, $80,000; Buckeye, pictures, 11,621 Buckeye road, 1,000 seats, $80,000; Deutsch, pictures, Cedar avenue and East Seventy-ninth street, 1,000 seats, $80,000; three Loew theatres on East Side, pictures, 5,000 seats, $1,250,000; Allen, pictures, Detroit and West Sixty-fifth street, 1,800 seats, $300,000; New Lakewood, pictures, Detroit and Geil ave-pictures, Fulton road and West Forty-first nue, 1,800 seats, $250,000; New Lyceum street, 1,800 seats, $200,000; American, pictures, 3541 Fulton road, 1,000 seats, $125,000; Norval, pictures, 5302 Storer avenue, 600 seats, $25,000; Sommerfelt, pictures, 2221 Bridge avenue, 600 seats, $25,000; two Loew theatres on West Side, pictures, 4,000 seats, $1,000,000.

The next Frank Keenan picture will be another big moral lesson on the screen full of the drama and philosophy for which the actor's productions are noted. It will be released under the title "Dollar for Dollar," and reports of the first screening of the picture indicate that it will prove to be a repetition of the frequent Keenan successes.

"Treasure Island" to Have Extensive Book Publicity

IN addition to exploitation which can be effected through the Charles Scribner's Sons de luxe edition of "Treasure Island," exhibitors showing the forthcoming Paramount production of "Treasure Island," taken from Robert Louis Stevenson's famous novel, will have the benefit of similar arrangements made with M. A. Donahue & Company, of Chicago and New York.

Owing to the fact that there are no copyrights on Stevenson's works, various versions have been published. The edition of Charles Scribner and the more popular priced volume of M. A. Donahue & Company represent the standard forms in which the book is known and both concerns have agreed upon a wholehearted campaign of publicity co-operation when the picture is released early next month.

Standard Paramount Artcraft posters and photographs, both colored and in black and white or sepia rotogravure sheets, will be used to enhance the attractiveness of local bookshop windows in exploiting "Treasure Island." Charles Scribner's Sons have given instructions to all their branches and agents so that sufficient volumes will be available to present window display that will do justice to the picture and also meet the demand for copies of the book which is anticipated.

M. A. Donahue & Co., through its twenty-two branches, will inaugurate a special sales campaign during the intervening three weeks. Bookstores are being advised of the forthcoming production and are already evidencing their enthusiasm for the plan by placing orders for large quantities of books.

Largest and Smallest Settings Built for "Old Lady 31"

INTERIORS so widely contrasting as the Temple of King Solomon in Biblical times and a tiny frame dwelling on the New England seacoast were constructed at the Metro studios in Hollywood for the picturization of "Old Lady 31," the Lee Kugel stage success by Rachel Crothers, in which Emma Dunn is to be starred on the screen. The picture is now being cut and assembled.

The Solomon's temple scene was the largest ever constructed at the Metro plant on the Pacific Coast. It took up one complete enclosed stage, 90 by 150 feet, or a floor space of 13,500 square feet. Two hundred and fifty persons participated in the temple scenes, among them more than 100 dancing girls, houris and attendants of the harem.

The other extreme was represented in the cottage set, which was one of the smallest and most compact ever built on the Metro studio stage. It occupied a tiny corner. The setting represented the parlor of the modest home of Capt. Abe and Angie Rose, the two old sweethearts in "Old Lady 31."

"Fine Feathers" to Set Off Loveliness of May Allison

BEFORE she starts work in her next Metro production, "Fine Feathers," May Allison will buy some. Which is merely another way of saying that Miss Allison will spend the next fortnight gathering together an assortment of spring raiment not only for street and house wear but to set off her loveliness in Eugene Walter's powerful drama.

Miss Allison is so nearly through her work in "The Cheater," a screen version of "Judah," the compelling stage drama by Henry Arthur Jones, that a few days at the most will see her endeavors before the camera completed. She has been promised a vacation of two weeks before starting "Fine Feathers." H. Thompson Rich is finishing the continuity of "Fine Feathers."

"The Cheater" was adapted by Lois Zellner from the Henry Arthur Jones drama and filmed under the direction of Henry Otto, with William Esmond doing the camera work. In "The Cheater" besides Miss Allison are Frank Currier and Harry Van Meter.

Get Prints of "King Spruce" Ready for Hodkinson Offices

PRINTS of "King Spruce," the Holman Day story of the Maine forests starring Mitchell Lewis and produced by Otto Bollman and Roy Clements for the Dial Film Company, are being assembled at the Republic Laboratories for early dispatch to the thirty-four Hodkinson branches. Simultaneous with the inauguration of a big advertising drive, trade showings of "King Spruce" will be held by all Hodkinson managers in the field.

A cast of merit was assembled to support Mitchell Lewis by Roy Clements, who directed the production. Chief in support of the star in the production, which is announced for release April 18, is Mignon Anderson. Melbourne MacDowell has a role commensurate with his ability. Arthur Millette, the ever-busy heavy, introduces a new brand of villainy.

An important part is in the hands of Betty Wales, a youthful artiste who has won her spurs on the screen after an enviable record on the stage.

Joe Ray, of the same rugged type as the star, gives a good account of himself as Tommy Eye. James O'Neil, Gus Soville and Frederic Herzog are seen to advantage in the minor roles.

To Seek Film Appropriation.

United States Senator Robert L. Owen, of Oklahoma, will seek an appropriation from Congress of $6,000 to be used in the printing and distribution of the Motion picture film, "Come Clean," and an appropriation of $9,000 for co-operation with the States in educational work in oral hygiene. His request will be made when the Senate takes up for consideration the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill.

"Crossed Claims" Is Carey's Next.

"Crossed Claims," a story by Tarkington Baker, is the title of the next story to be filmed by Harry Carey, Universal star, and will be directed by Reeves Eason. Much of this picture will be filmed on Harry Carey's ranch in St. Francisquito Valley, Cal. It is planned to release this feature about the middle of June.

Colonel Fred Levy and Lee Goldberg Complete Their "Swing Around Circle"

COLONEL FRED LEVY, president of the First National Exhibitors' exchange of Kentucky and Tennessee, and Lee L. Goldberg, the secretary, have just completed "a swing around the circle" in their territory that has undoubtedly been productive of more good for the motion picture industry in this section than can be estimated.

Col. Levy is president of the National Association of Retail Clothiers and as such was booked to attend the state convention of retail clothiers of Ohio, held in Cincinnati. He had also to attend the convention of Tennessee clothiers in Knoxville the same week.

"Now is the time for our trip," he said to Mr. Goldberg. "It couldn't happen better. We'll have to put two mental reels in our heads so we can run clothing and pictures at the same time, but I'm sure we'll be equal to that."

They made the first leg of their journey to Cincinnati. Col. Levy was honor guest of the Ohio clothing men. They met there many picture men of Northern Kentucky and I. Libson, of Cincinnati, who books for the Strand and Keith theatres in Louisville, and Godfrey Kotzin, of the Lyric Theatre, Covington.

Picture Men Meet Clothiers.

From Cincinnati they went to Knoxville where the convention of the Tennessee clothiers was in progress. W. E. Drumbar, manager of the Signal Amusement Company, and his associates met Col. Levy and through him met the Tennessee clothiers. The picture men and the clothing representatives became well acquainted and struck up a mutual interest that is certain to be productive of good.

From Knoxville Col. Levy and Mr. Goldberg went to Chattanooga. There they met Milton B. Ochs, editor and publisher of the Chattanooga Times and brother of Adolph Ochs, publisher of the New York Times. It happened that Milton Ochs had just been appointed state chairman by Gov. Roberts of the campaign to raise Tennessee's share of the fund for America's memorial in France to her soldier dead. Mr. Ochs was anxious to get the campaign presented on slides in the picture houses. At Col. Levy's suggestion he appointed Frank H. Dowler, Jr., of the Signal Amusement Company in Chattanooga and Knoxville, chairman for these cities; Tony Sudekum, president of the Crescent Amusement Company in Nashville, and Charles L. McElravy, of the Majestic in Memphis, chairmen for their cities.

Many Benefits Secured.

In Chattanooga they attended a Rotary Club luncheon which brought them in contact with the leading men of the city.

In Nashville Col. Levy and Mr. Goldberg met Tony and Harry Sudekum and the other leading picture men of that section. The visit to Memphis was equally pleasant. From Memphis they returned to Louisville.

In Col. Levy's talks to the clothing men of the two states he digressed sufficiently to tell about the picture industry and its importance in the life of the nation. Many incidental benefits were secured. For instance, in one city an important newspaper had failed to recognize the picture houses at their full value. Col. Levy and Mr. Goldberg were able to bring the paper to a full appreciation of the motion picture and henceforth the paper will hold to this policy.

Four Roads to Leadership

1. Last Sunday, the New York Times quoted Moving Picture World's feature article in its February 21 issue on the use of motion pictures as evidence in California courts. Said the Times, "According to Moving Picture World——." And it does that often.

2. We received this week from a Baltimore photoplay editor a letter which termed our new "Clip and Paste" page a "knockout." Because, the writer said, "it's just the thing the theatre manager needs." Howard G. Ramsey, El Dorado, Kansas, has to pay for his own moving picture section in the local paper, and he uses "Rambles" and "Clip and Paste" for his news.

3. Evidence comes in from other cities in the form of theatre programs that "Rambles" is popular for snappy moving picture paragraphs. A San Francisco house, one of the finest in the country, has a theatre house organ, ninety per cent of whose comments on the films are taken from "Rambles."

4. From the showmanship field we have this letter from the Grand Theatre, Massena, N. Y., dated February 3: "Gentlemen: For your information note that I have sold the above theatre to Mr. Frank Cutri & Co. I purchased the place twenty-six months ago for $4,000 and sold it for $10,000. The new owner took possession on February 1. So don't you think I made good to have built up such a business in this place in twenty-six months as to get $10,000 for it?

"I am very proud of your good Moving Picture World, as I believe if I did not have it I could not run a picture show. So I thank you very much for Moving Picture World. At present I am without the theatre, but I'm going into the game again as soon as I can find another place.

"Please remember that I cannot stay without Moving Picture World, so please change my address to the one I inclose.

"Respectfully yours,

"L. BENNY."

Associated Exhibitors Have Many Big Deals Pending; Want Highest Quality Pictures

ASSOCIATED. EXHIBITORS, INC., announces that, with numerous important arrangements pending, no product for circulation by the organization as yet has been definitely decided upon. The machinery of the association is working toward the acquisition of only the biggest and best photoplays it is possible to obtain, and according to one of the officers, no product will be announced until there can be not even the slightest shadow of doubt in the mind of any one as to the product's attractiveness.

This is in line with the Associated Exhibitors' announced intention and firm plan, according to the statements of Secretary H. H. Wellenbrink. It is known generally in film circles that all sorts of propositions have been put before the consideration of Associated Exhibitors. However, none of these possibilities as yet has materialized into concrete form. Many of them, it is said, may develop into most radical departures from antiquated motion picture precedents—precedents that in the past have proved weak in application, but strong in habit.

No Reliance on Precedents.

In the words of Mr. Wellenbrink, the Associated Exhibitors are not working on motion picture precedent. Rather, he says, are they building up and going forward on established values of business experience as applied successfully in any line of endeavor. He contends that chief of these business values, insofar as the motion picture industry is concerned, is the value of equitable dealing with the theatre owner.

"The issue of equitable dealing with the picture showman is paramount," said Mr. Wellenbrink, "and the very beginning of equitable dealing with the exhibitor is the acquisition for him of the best pictures. That is the first thing to worry about, for when an organization has big attractions to circulate it has a commodity for which an eager market is waiting. This obviously means that such a commodity will show a handsome profit for everyone concerned in its production, distribution and presentation.

Promise "Biggest Attractions."

"Highest class motion picture entertainment is one of the pillars of the foundation on which this organization is builded—for it must be on such a foundation that any stable motion picture enterprise is erected. And this enterprise is composed of builders —the exhibitors—whose very business existence demands that they build with granite-planned blocks rather than promise-colored mud.

"The Associated Exhibitors realize just what they are up against when they say that only the biggest attractions will carry their trade-mark. They know it is not a simple matter to live up to a promise of only the best. But they are wise men; they are backed by the financial resources to carry the plan through, and whether their output consists of one or 100 pictures a year, the exhibitor can rest assured that Associated Exhibitors' pictures will be the best motion pictures obtainable anywhere."

"Big Four" Receiving Many Contracts on Sennett Comedy

A VERITABLE avalanche of contracts poured into the office of Hiram Abrams, of the United Artists, last week, immediately following the announcement of the early release in April of Mack Sennett's latest five-reel comedy sensation, "Down on the Farm," which has been heralded every where by the executives of the "Big Four" organization who have seen it as a most spectacular comedy.

Louise Fazenda has the role of the rustic maiden whose charms excite the romantic impulses of a large-fisted, large-hearted farm hand and whose prospective inheritance no less excites the desires of the village Shylock trying to act like a Don Juan.

Thrills, laughter, suspense, travesty, satire, a tinge of burlesque of high art, and spectacle are combined in this sensational comedy that is as delightful as it is inspring and thrilling, it is said.

Hiram Abrams, of the "Big Four," has been most enthusiastic about this sensational comedy, and says that it is on a par with the type of production that has been distributed by United Artists.

Little Detroit Girl Guessed New Realart Star's Identity

RESULTS that were wholly unexpected are reported to have followed the three weeks' mystery campaign on Wanda Hawley which Realart Pictures Corporation conducted in the trade papers alone and directed solely toward the trade. A surprising number of queries was received from persons who are not exhibitors and not connected with theatres.

Realart officials expected that many persons would guess the name of the new star from the data about her career furnished in the advertisements. They were surprised, however, that most of the correct guesses were based upon the parts of photographs which were published. In the first advertisement two pages of the colored insert gave glimpses of Miss Hawley's features, feet, hands and head. It was three clues that prompted most of the right answers.

One of the most interesting answers was that of Miss Dora Tyler, 14 years old, of Detroit. Looking through the advertisements in a trade paper, she came upon the "Can You Put Her Together?" insert and immediately guessed Wanda Hawley from the eyes.

She took her guess to Jacob Smith, editor of the Michigan Film Review, and together they called on Ralph B. Quive, Realart's Detroit manager. Mr. Quive refused to divulge any information. Thereupon Mr. Smith wrote to the home offices, as follows: "In my paper this week I am running a little item about Miss Dora Tyler, 14 years old, who guesses Wanda Hawley as the star. She saw your ad in one of the trade papers and guessed it by the eyes. Great, how these kids can figure these things out. It goes to prove how closely people follow the movies."

Ziehm Reports Contracts Closed.

Arthur Ziehm, manager of the foreign sales department of Goldwyn Distributing Corporation, last week closed several large contracts for the handling of the third year series of Goldwyn pictures—Spain, Portugal, Mexico, Central America and Japan. The arrangements for marketing the Goldwyn product in the last named country were made by Geoffrey Nye, who is now on a tour of the far East.

The success of the first and second year Goldwyn pictures abroad has created a big demand for the new releases presenting stars who have already developed a considerable following in foreign lands. Distributors in Europe, Mexico and Central America are planning to back the star series pictures with extensive exploitation.

Margaret Dale Makes Screen Debut.

Margaret Dale, well-known legitimate actress, is making her motion picture debut in a new production, featuring Alma Rubens, now being made for Cosmopolitan Productions at International Studio, 127th street and Second avenue, New York, under the direction of Robert G. Vignola. Considerable secrecy surrounds the character and theme of the production, but it is said to be particulary timely and one of the most desirable pictures Vignola has made.

Finish First Fox Production with Vivian Rich in 18 Days

EIGHTEEN days of actual working time is the record set by Vivian Rich, the new Fox star, in completing her first production for William Fox at the California studios.

The previous record for completion of a production of this nature and length was established some time ago—also by a woman star—and totaled twenty-one working days. Miss Rich's progress in her first film for this producer, under the direction of Scott Dunlap, is a notable one.

The name of her first picture as a star is "Would You Forgive?" It is a drama of domestic life and furnished the actress a role that puts her ability to a much severer test than that which she met so successfully in appearance under the Fox banner—in the melodrama, "The Last Straw," which introduced Buck Jones as a screen star, and in which she was his leading woman.

The story, written especially for Miss Rich, is from the pen of Julius G. Furthman, one of the four writers recently added to the Fox scenario staff on the west coast. There are but four principals in the story, and the entire picture was filmed within the walls of the studios in Hollywood without loss of time on location work.

Supporting Vivian Rich are Tom Chatterton, Ben Deely and Lilie Leslie.

Winter Weather Just Suited "Law of the Yukon" Company

CHARLES MILLER and his company have arrived in New York City after three months spent at Port Henry, N. Y., where camera work on "The Law of the Yukon," his first production for Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, was practically completed.

Director Miller voiced an emphatic paean of praise for the winter that is passing. The blizzards which had worked suffering and great financial losses in various cities had been of incalculable value, Mr. Miller said, in obtaining the "frozen North" and Yukon effects which he desired. He recounted numerous experiences through which the company had passed, suffering few hardships despite the rigorous weather and passing through a severe influenza epidemic in Port Henry without one case of sickness in the company.

Mr. Miller's company left New York City on December 17. About seventy actors and actresses made up the company. Port Henry's solitary hotel was taken over entirely. Work was held up for the first ten days by the failure of the lights to arrive from New York City. But a start was made on the Alaskan village that was erected on location and when the lights finally arrived work started with a rush.

Snow and plenty of it arrived at about the same time. "From the standpoint of weather conditions," Mr. Miller said, "most of the members of the company were satisfied they were in the 'frozen North.' The village we had built was snowed under. We had to put runners on the front trucks of our automobiles and wear snowshoes."

Inter-Ocean Starts Big Advertising Campaign in American Trade Papers

THE first important step in the development of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation's plans for educating the American motion picture producer in general and the independent producer in particular to the value of placing their productions in the hands of an export house specializing in the distribution of American films in foreign territories, got under way this week in the first of a series of advertisements which are to be carried in American trade journals throughout the coming year.

This is in line with its policy recently made public through the trade press of inaugurating an extensive and far-reaching advertising and publicity campaign in behalf of the American motion picture export company, and to emphasize the advantages to be derived from the producer's association with such an organization. It is wholly apart from Inter-Ocean Film Corporation's regular advertising and publicity campaign which is now being conducted in the various foreign trade mediums.

This is declared to be the first time in the history of the motion picture industry that a large American film exporting concern has attempted such a campaign in the American trade press. That it will be instrumental in producing the desired results both to the American producer and to the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation is a conclusion which Inter-Ocean officials have no hesitancy in affirming.

Time for Campaign.

"That the time is ripe for an educative campaign of this nature among American producers is commonly known in the industry," said an Inter-Ocean official, commenting on the company's new plans. "It has remained for the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, however, to take the initiative and start the ball rolling.

"While the campaign will involve a large expenditure on the part of Inter-Ocean, we are appreciative of the reward it will bring in good will and increased business later on."

The campaign will be conducted by A. L. Feiman, who will also continue in charge of advertising and publicity in foreign trade mediums.

Fairbanks Keeps Secret Nature of His Stunts in His Next "Big Four" Picture

FOR the first time since he entered upon a screen career Douglas Fairbanks has taken steps to prevent advance information from reaching the outside world as to the nature of his activities in his studios.

With his return from Arizona this week, together with the hundred members of his company who had been on location in the desert filming a number of the more important and thrilling scenes for "Mollycoddle," the next Fairbanks production for United Artists, the order was issued by the star to see that no loitering be permitted about the grounds of the plant and that every "set," whether on the stage or otherwise, be hidden from the view of outsiders.

The precautions are due to the fact that there are so many novelties being introduced in "Mollycoddle," which will cause even greater comment than the nightmare and flood episodes of "When the Clouds Roll By," and these two innovations to the screen have mystified the most hardened critics throughout the world.

Robert Fairbanks, manager of the productions of the organization, has followed his brother's instructions to the letter and things have been camouflaged to such perfection that even the eyes of the trained army aviators who continually fly over the film colony in Hollywood are deceived.

According to word which came to Hiram Abrams at the United Artists headquarters from John Fairbanks, general manager of activities on the Coast, it will be a miracle if Doug comes out alive before "Mollycoddle" is completed.

"No, I Ain't Gotta Union Card!"

Winchell Smith Believes Screen Offers Greater Creative Field for Dramatist

WINCHELL SMITH, who recently joined Metro's staff of authors at its studios in Hollywood, disclaims any special genius for writing, in spite of the notable list of successful stage plays to his credit.

"No, I never had any newspaper experience," he said. "Sometimes I feel that the less a man knows about the mechanics of literary work, the better he is equipped for dramatic writing. A man who writes phrases as people speak them and not as the copy books construct them is the man who gets the best dialogue."

Mr. Smith is now personally supervising the picturization for Metro of "The New Henrietta," the comedy he and Victor Mapes adapted from a play by Bronson Howard. Mr. Smith was first an actor and then a producer. He told how he came to write as well as act and direct for the stage.

"The man who was to dramtize a story which I was to produce backed out at the last moment. I got another man in with me and we wrote that play. It succeeded and I became a playwright."

His Plays Most Successful.

The play was "Brewster's Millions." Other plays credited in whole or in part to Winchell Smith are "The Only Son," "The Fortune Hunter," "The Boomerang," "The New Henrietta," "Turn to the Right," and "Lightnin'." Very successful productions in which he has had a hand, but which he has hitherto not been credited with writing, are "Officer 666," "Hawthorne of the U. S. A." and "The Three Wise Fools."

"Mostly rewrote them," he smiled, referring to his work as a playwright. "We did our real writing during rehearsals."

"The picture method will be slightly different for you," was suggested.

"Yes," he sighed, then laughed. "Do you know, I used to rehearse Miss Mathis in my stage productions. This morning I took my preliminary script for the picture to her and after she talked to me for a time about scenario writing I came out of her office feeling like a bloody schoolboy!

"I'm going to like motion pictures immensely," he confided at the end of his first day at the studio. "Here is a wonderful range for a man. On the stage there are only two or three ways of doing a thing where there are two or three thousand on the screen. The whole earth is here on your stage."

"The House of Toys" Under Production.

"The House of Toys," a society drama, is the "Flying A" special now under production at the Santa Barbara studio of the American Film Company. Daniel F. Whitcomb, himself the author of numerous original film stories and continuities, adapted the novel by Henry Russell Miller, and George L. Cox is directing the filming of this new photonovel. Assisting Mr. Cox is Sidney Algier, and S. A. Baldridge is the technical director.

"Sex," Starring Louise Glaum, Scheduled by Hodkinson Corporation for April Release

STARRING under the management of J. Parker Read, Jr., is resulting in one success after another for Louise Glaum, whose newest production is, "Sex," a drama from the pen of C. Gardner Sullivan and directed by Fred Niblo, through an arrangement with Thomas H. Ince. W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, the distributors of Mr. Read's Louise Glaum productions, announces the pre-release of "Sex" in the larger first run cities of the country as of April 11 and a vivid, intense advertising campaign is now launched for the production.

"Sex" is the drama of the sorrow and suffering that refines the soul of woman; the drama of experience without which no life is complete and of the great unknown, the great gamble that is life. It ranges from being before the eyes of audiences a drama of a hundred persons, these hundreds being typical of millions of men and women throughout the world. In a flash it narrows down to the life of two or three persons who live within reach and touch of your elbow.

Has Richnes of Pageantry.

In color, in crowd, in costuming it has the touch and richness of pageantry at moments and the next is confined with force to the picture of two women fighting the battle of their lives for their happiness. "Sex" is not the physical in life, but has been made to throb and live by Louise Glaum as the great allure; the great appeal of love, of heart-hunger.

Louis Glaum shows the liberality and democracy that have been responsible for her great success in the past year in the excellence of the cast of supporting players that she and Mr. Read have engaged for this production. Her supporting cast includes Myrtle Stedman, Peggy Pearce, Irving Cummings, and William Conklin.

To Be Given Wide Exploitation.

The W. W. Hodkinson organization has distributed the J. Parker Read, Jr., productions under the selective system of distribution. Each picture has received the attention of specialists. Each one has been kept free and clear of other pictures and handled as if it were the only picture to which the organization was devoting its nation-wide energies. "Sex" now in its turn receives such promotion and management. The picture is not available except in its most restricted form as of April 11. It is protected against such rush showings or imperfect exploitation by being turned over only to such first runs as guarantee it exclusive and liberal showmanship of the highest grade of advertising.

Prints of the picture have been shipped to thirty-two Hodkinson branches and trade showings are to be held in this number of cities on March 25.

National Association to Move Soon to New Home in New York Theatre Building

THE National Association of the Motion Picture Industry will on March 31 remove its offices to a suite in the New York Theatre Building, 1520 Broadway, from its present headquarters in the Times Building, where it has had a home since its organization in 1916. The increased activity of the association in all phases of the industry made it imperative that larger offices be obtained.

The new offices are on the Forty-fourth street side of the New York Theatre Building and are admirably arranged for the purpose of the association, which for a long time has been handicapped in its work by lack of room. Because of the present limited space it has been necessary to hold many of the important committee meetings away from the office.

The association is performing many functions which were not contemplated and solving many problems which had not been presented when it was organized. Its activity during the war days won the highest commendation from President Wilson and other officials, and its peace time activities, while perhaps not so conspicuous, are quite as important to the industry.

Expansion of Activities the Cause.

As an illustration of the increased activities, the film exchange committee and the committee on fire prevention regulation are co-operating in the work of finding suitable and adequate quarters for the exchanges in all the exchange centers. Thomas H. Butler has been placed in charge of this work and he and his assistants are in daily consultation with architects, builders and financiers who are coming to New York.

The work of the committee which is handling censorship matters had increased so much that last year it was necessary to change its plan of operation. Royal K. Fuller was named as executive secretary of this committee.

The Americanization committee, of which Franklin K. Lane, formerly secretary of the interior, is chairman, will have its offices on the same floor with the national association, and in that way there will be closer co-operation.

The association is generally recognized as the strong factor in the industry in this country, representing as it does 95 per cent. of the production and distribution of motion pictures. William A. Brady has been president of the association since its organization, Walter W. Irwin has been chairman of the executive committee and Frederick H. Elliott has been its executive secretary.

Pathe Reports 480 Days' Bookings on "Other Men's Shoes" by Chicago Office

EDGAR LEWIS' special, "Other Men's Shoes," has been responsible for the smashing of record after record hung up by Pathe Exchange, Inc., on its big specials, but none has been more noteworthy than the feat just accomplished with this attraction by the Chicago branch. One month after release date, and following the showing of the production in the leading Chicago first run theatres, the Windy City office on March 4 reported to the home office the booking of another 150 days in first and second run theatres in its territory. The total number of days received thus far by Chicago on the Lewis production is now 480.

Outside of Chicago proper "Other Men's Shoes" was booked during the drive conducted by Manager E. A. Eschman and which will continue throughout March, by the following theatres:

Hartley, East Chicago; Orpheum, Ottawa, Ill.; Empress, Peoria; Empire, Auburn, Ind.; Lyceum, Columbia City, Ind.; Palace, Muscatine, Iowa; Grand Opera House, Dubuque, Iowa; Colonial, Delavan, Ill.; Wigwam, Genesco, Ill.; Lincoln, Lincoln, Ill.; Temple, Mishawaka, Ind.; DeLuxe, Lake Forest, Ill.; La Salle, South Bend, Ind.; Orpheum, Elkhart, Ind.; Garden, Michigan City, Ind.; Princess, Monticello, Ill.; Riviera, Peru, Ill.

Chicago Theatres Booked.

The local houses booking the picture included the Delphi, Clark, Bowen, Shakespere, Kimbark, Lucille, Ben Hur, Victory, Stanley, Marshall Square, Vernon, Prairie, New Home, Illington, Broadway Strand, Atlantic, Boulevard, Halfield, Archer and Ewing.

In all other territories, "Other Men's Shoes" is surpassing the records established by all previous Pathe specials, not excepting "The Thirteenth Chair" and "Common Clay."

Among theatres booking the production during the past week are: the William Penn, Chester, Pa.; Palace, Ardmore, Grand, Pullman, Washington, D. C.; Paramount, Lewiston, Idaho; Empress, Spokane; Rialto, Loveland, Col.; Strand, Shelbyville, Ind.; Luna-Lite, Marion, Ind.; Majestic, Florence, Ala.; Rex, Bismark, N. D.; Opera House, Wadsworth, Ohio; Valentine, Defiance, Ohio; Royal, Upper Sandusky; Playhouse, Dover, N. J.; Empire, Rahway, N. J.; Avenue, Elizabeth, N. J.; Delphi, Detroit; Miami, Detroit, Wuerth, Ann Arbor, Crystal, Lakewood, Detroit; Majestic, Charleston, Pa.; Family, St. Mary, Pa.; Park, Franklin, Pa.; Palace, Hamilton, O.; Auditorium, Dayton, Rex, Middleton Ohio; Linthonian, Little Falls, N. Y.; Maetin, Globe, Ariz.; Forepaw's, Philadelphia; Poli's, Wilkesbarre, Pa., and the Opera House, South Bethlehem.

Already the minimum quota for "Other Men's Shoes" has been surpassed by virtually every exchange and the indications are that within a fortnight each branch will have passed the high market set for it.

Three Patriotic Films To Be Released by Pathe Exchange in Month of April

FOR probably the first time in the history of the industry a great organization in the business will release three patriotic productions in one month. The Pathe Exchange, Inc., will release, during April, productions by J. Stuart Blackton, Edwin Carewe and Leonce Perret, and all of them are intensely patriotic in theme and virile American stories.

"Lifting Shadows," the Perret production featuring Emmy Wehlen, will be released on April 4; the Blackton production, "The Blood Barrier," with Robert Gordon and Sylvia Breamer, will be released on April 11, and on April 25 the Edwin Carewe production of Augustus Thomas' famous story, "Rio Grande," will be released.

The first of the pictures to be released, "Lifting Shadows," deals with the intrigues of a band of Russian conspirators against the safety and peace of the United States. The second, "The Blood Barrier," deals with the efforts of enemies of the country to make an officer of the United States army betray the secrets of his government. "Rio Grande" is a picture of conditions on the Mexican border.

Emmy Wehlan Well Supported.

In "Lifting Shadows," as in all three of the productions, entertainment is the first consideration and it is said to be a picture of high dramatic value. The settings are said to be on a magnificent scale and the lighting effects to be superb. As a young Russian girl, in love with a young American, Miss Wehlen is seen at her best. Stuart Holmes is the villain, the role in which he is so well known. The leading man is Wyndham Standing and Julia Swayne Gordon is also in the cast.

"The Blood Barrier" is from the pen of the late Cyrus Townsend Brady and was written in his most effective fashion. Sylvia Breamer and Robert Gordon are seen together in the picture and are supported by an able cast. Commodore Blackton has created a production of fine technique, the sets and mechanical effects showing some of the finest work of his career, it is said.

April also will be a notable Pathe month for short subjects and comedies. On April 11 the new "Bringing Up Father" comedy, "Jiggs in Society," will be released and wide newspaper publicity of the filming of the McManus' comic strip has already resulted in strong bookings. The second Mrs. Sidney Drew comedy, "The Stimulating Mrs. Barton," will be released on April 25.

Ray Completes Organization of Staff; Appointing Well-Known Technical Men

WITH the addition of several well-known technical men to his staff this week Charles Ray has completed the organization of his studio personnel and has commenced to work on the introductory details incident to production at his new Los Angeles studios.

Mr. Ray who is entering upon a new era in his screen career, having begun independent production under the direction of Arthur S. Kane for release through First National, has gathered to his organization a staff of high priced technical experts. He declares that he will spare no expense to make his independent films of the highest standard possible, not only to justify his position as an independent producer, but to merit the faith which his sponsors have placed in him in their promises to the exhibitors of the country.

Have Unusual Qualifications.

In addition to Director Jerome Storm, Cameraman Chester Lyons, Studio Manager Wesley Gilmour and Isabel Johnston, continuity writer, Mr. Ray has appointed this week George E. MacCormac, formerly with Famous Players, as chief of the electrical department, and Frank Ormston as head of the art department.

Mr. MacCormac has been a year and a half with Famous Players-Lasky as head of that corporation's electrical department and he brings to the new concern undisputed talents in devising novel and startling lighting effects. He has had entire supervision of the wiring of Mr. Ray's Fleming street studios. An experimental laboratory has been built adjoining the plant where he expects to try out several original departures from modern methods of lighting.

Experienced Staff Proposes Great Things.

Mr. Ormston comes from a family of painters, and in addition to his studio work he is, in private life, an artist of note. He was in charge of the scenic department at the Boulevard Theatre, Caracas, Venezula, and on his return to the United States gained his first picture experience in the Edison experimental studios in New York. Following a brief return to theatrical work, Mr. Ormston became permanently associated with motion pictures, first with the Nicholas Power Company in New York and later with Universal, where he was in charge of the art and technical departments. Mr. Ormston was recently with the Lois Weber Productions for three years and a short time ago with the Lew Cody company as art director.

With Richard Willis as general manager, Albert E. Kidder, Jr., as business manager and with Arthur S. Kane in charge of all his eastern interests, Charles Ray has in back of him an experienced and efficient staff of business assocaites, all of which presages for the star a high standard in all departments of his production company and promises big things for his forthcoming films.

Realart Takes Over Morosco Studios; Wanda Hawley to Make First Film There

THE Morosco studios in Hollywood, one of the largest and best equipped plants in the country, have been acquired by Realart Pictures Corporation. Realart will take immediate possession, and in addition will take over the present operating staff of the studio. The deal was concluded by Morris Kohn, president of Realart.

Wanda Hawley, the new star recently announced by Realart, will make her first production there and is scheduled to begin work shortly. The name Morosco is to be dropped. New signs have been made to mark the change. For the present no changes are said to be contemplated in the physical aspect of the plant.

Frank Garbutt, who constructed the studios about six years ago for the Bosworth Producing Company, will remain in charge under the Realart management. He has retained the staff of assistants which was previously employed there.

"Guarantees Excellence of Pictures."

"Exhibitors possibly will not immediately recognize the importance of this studio announcement," said J. S. Woody, general manager of Realart, "but it means a great deal both to them and to us. Now that we have our own plant exhibitors will know that our pictures are more truly than ever a Realart product all the way through. The change guarantees the future excellence of Realart pictures in keeping with the reputation of quality already established. Three productions at one time can be accommodated on the inside stage alone, and there is a large outdoor stage as well."

The studio buildings are located at 201 to 211 North Occidental Boulevard, and occupy ground on both sides of the street. The buildings are all of modern steel or concrete construction and present an attractive and most substantial appearance.

The building housing the covered stage is a steel structure, covers ground area of approximately 55 by 200 feet. The dressing rooms are located in this building and are in two tiers overlooking the stage.

40,000 Feet of Film a Day.

Near this building is a large carpenter shop with equipment in machinery from which material for building elaborate and large sets can be turned out.

A well-equipped laboratory, housed in a heavy concrete, fireproof building, is on the same side of the street. The laboratory is reputed to be one of the best on the Coast and has facilities and a working force capable of turning out 40,000 feet of film a day.

The open stage is located directly across the street and is about the same size as the closed stage. It is somewhat newer than the covered stage, however, having been built about three years ago. It is fitted in such a way that canvas can be stretched over the top to protect work in progress on it.

Frank Garbutt, the studio manager, has been responsible for developing the plant to its present state of efficiency. The principal members of Mr. Garbutt's staff are Will M. Ritchey, head of the production department; Mrs. Una Nixson Hopkins, art director; Jack Burrows, western traffic manager; Frank Biggy, superintendent of laboratory, and Walter Hansen, stage manager.

Miss Traverse Has New Type of Vehicle in Next Fox Film

ANNOUNCEMENT is made from the executive offices of Fox Film Corporation that William Fox, president of the organization, has decided to equip his star, Madlaine Traverse, with a type of role distinctly different from that in which she has gained an enviable distinction.

The first of the new parts selected for Miss Traverse will be found in the production upon which she has just started work at the studios in Hollywood. The story is known by the working title, "The Spirit of Good," and offers the star the role of a music hall singer. The title will probably be changed before release, but, as it suggests, the story deals with the uplift of the fallen, and enables Miss Traverse to draw on her versatility of character design and make-up. Denison Clift will direct Miss Traverse.

The principals to support Miss Traverse in her new picture include Frederick Stanton, Clo King, Dick LaReno and L. Hahn. The remainder of the cast is not yet announced. The story of "The Spirit of Good" is adapted from the original of Clifford Howard and Burke Jenkins, and the scenario is the work of Mr. Clift.

Dallas Sunday Closing Movement Dies Natural Death; May Repeal Ancient Law

THE Sunday closing movement in Dallas has died "abornin'." The moving picture shows will remain open, since no overt action will be taken against their proprietors by Dallas pastors who have been seeking to make them observe the much disputed state Sunday closing law.

On Monday, March 8, after a full morning of discussion, the Dallas Pastors' Association issued a report which, while urging fuller observance of Sunday, had nothing to say about Sunday amusements. The pastors' association was divided in its opinion in regard to taking action with a view to closing Dallas theatres on Sunday. The majority was against Sunday closing here, while other cities, notably Fort Worth, permitted the theatres to remain open. Dallas public opinion is strong for Sunday shows.

The pastors in their report disclaimed all intention to force their beliefs in regard to Sunday observance upon other people. They denied emphatically that they wished the joining of church and state. They said that their legal advisors had told them that the Dallas ordinance permitting Sunday picture shows as voted by the people was not legal, since it conflicted with the state law, and contented themselves with saying that laws should be obeyed by all thinking people.

The theatres will not close.

Fort Worth moving picture theatres were wide open Sunday, March 7, after being closed for the previous two Sundays. Business men of the city took a part in the discussions as to Sunday closing and urged that the theatres be allowed to remain open. The Fort Worth pastors receded from their stand in the matter and no prosecutions will be essayed.

The repeal of the Sunday law is likely to be brought before the Texas legislature at its next session, either in January, 1921, or at any special previous meeting.

SIMPLE SOULS

Take 90 Interiors in a Day.

Edward Griffith, director of the Vitagraph Company headed by Corinne Griffith accomplished the feat of taking ninety interior scenes in one day recently for Miss Griffith's latest picture, "The Garter Girl." The scenes were filmed in the Irving Place Theatre, at Irving Place and Fifteenth street, New York.

Earle Williams Starts Work on "Three Keys" on the Coast

FOLLOWING his completion at the Hollywood studio, of exterior scenes for "Captain Swift," the interiors of which he made at the Brooklyn studio, Earle Williams, the Vitagraph star, has begun active production on his first feature on the coast since his return. Mr. Williams' previous release was "The Fortune Hunter," the production of which caused his several months' stay in the east.

His new vehicle is "The Three Keys," a feature of high power, adapted from the novel by Frederic Van Rennselaer Dey. The scenario was written by H. Thompson Rich and Lucien Hubbard. Chester Bennett will direct the production.

A strong cast has been selected to support the star. Vola Vale appears as his leading woman. The rest of the cast includes H. A. Barrows, Frank Crayne, Rhea Haines, Lee Hill, John Elliott and Paul Wiegle. The story is based upon an exciting Wall street theme.

Fox Corporation Devises Plan to Guide Overhead Bank Lights by Radio System

THE slogan of William Fox, president of Fox Film Corporation, is efficiency. It is efficiency that has established his organization among the comparatively few motion picture producing companies occupying the front rank in the industry today.

With the removal of the executive offices and all departments of the firm from the Forty-sixth street location to the new Fox building on West Fifty-fifth street, Mr. Fox has been enabled to maintain a closer contact between the managerial and technical branches of his organization. One of the first steps taken by him since the change was to lay out plans for the rapid manipulation of the hundreds of overhead bank lights used in the mammoth studios, it is announced.

The existing system entails the slow process of moving the lights from one track to another by straight rails, curves and switches through the use of long push poles or ropes. For some time Mr. Fox has been considering the possibility of eliminating the waste of time in rearranging lights for interior settings. The regular method is not only awkward and slow, but occasionally results in breakage of the Cooper-Hewitt tubes.

Having read several articles in newspapers and magazines on the advance made in directing aeroplanes, torpedoes and ships by means of wireless outfits, it occurred to Mr. Fox that here might be the solution to his problem. He summoned his chief electrician and outlined the plan. Together they evolved a system for rigging up a wireless outfit on each overhead lamp frame and directing the lamp to the desired spot by means of a wireless sender installed on a desk on the studio floor.

With this new system completed, one need only operate a key in order to move a lamp to any position in the studio and much valuable time will be saved.

It is expected that this system will be in readiness prior to the date of the formal opening of the big studios, at which time there will be a grand celebration; in fact, there are hints of a dance at which the stars and principals then engaged in the making of pictures will mingle with the invited guests.

Announce Episode Titles of "The Silent Avenger" Serial

VITAGRAPH announces the complete list of episode titles for its new William Duncan super-serial, "The Silent Avenger." The statement punctuates the opening of the company's booking campaign for the big chaptered melodrama.

The titles are given as follows: 1—"The Escape"; 2—Fighting Back"; 3—"Within the Noose"; 4—Tearing Through"; 5—"Blotted Out"; 6—"The Hidden Blow"; 7—"Dynamite Doom"; 8—"The Crusher"; 9—"Into the Jaws"; 10—"Blades of Horror"; 11—"Shot Into Space"; 12—"Facing Eternity"; 13—"A Human Pendulum"; 14—"The Lake of Fire"; 15—"The Final Trump."

Vitagraph further announces that it has issued to the trade a complete campaign book of forty-eight pages and cover in colors, presenting an infinite variety of exploitation aids on this production. The book is replete with illustrations of the thrills that occur in every episode. It also presents an immense volume of news material and fact statement that may be employed in advertising and publicity.

Alaskan Exhibitors Seek First Rights to "Tiger's Cub," Starring Pearl White

THE exhibitors of Alaska at last feel they have a story of the territory in which they live that will be a true picture of Alaska. R. A. Thorne, veteran showman of the territory, heads the list of Alaskan exhibitors who have demanded the privilege of showing the Fox production, "Tiger's Cub" in the far north.

Charles Giblyn, the director and his capable assistants have left no stone unturned to make this picture truly Alaskan in atmosphere. William Fox has spared no expense to obtain accurate details in costumes and settings. The result is that the Alaskan exhibitors who from the first announcement of the story voiced their interest in it, and who have usually tried to avoid the so-called Alaska features, are now so enthusiastic about "Tiger's Cub" that they are already in the market for it.

The manager of the Empire Theatre in Juneau has requested that a print be rushed to him so he can show it while the legislature is in session in order that the senators and representatives may spread broadcast in a territory one-fifth of the size of the United States the good news that the real Alaska has reached the screen at last. Captain A. E. Lathrop, who controls a string of theatres in Valdez, Cordova, Seward and Anchorage, is after the Pearl White feature, as is George Kobe, of Nome.

William Fox employed exclusively men who have mined in Alaska and who have lived among the natives, the gamblers and the business man, and in the snow drifts of the trail. These men, carried with the company while on location at Port Henry, N. Y., and returning with it to the new Fox studios in New York, have tied themselves to Director Giblyn and the star, Miss White, every working minute of the day, observing the detail of dress, manner, custom and settings, thus assuring accuracy for the production in all particulars.

Simplex Distributors in New York.

Two of the distributing forces of the Simplex Company spent a busy week in New York looking over the many new developments at the factory and incidentally picking up a few valuable points on Simplex exploitation.

Bert Weddige, president of the Michigan Motion Picture Supply Company, Detroit, and Max Rubin, his assistant, are the two in question. Mr. Weddige while at the Simplex offices spoke very optimistically of the future Simplex business in his territory and announced his intention of going into larger quarters immediately and also arrange for the issuance of a monthly house organ with which to reach every exhibitor in his territory.

David P. Howells Says Exporters Who Quit Now Are "Deserting Under Fire"

TERMING his subject "the equivalent of desertion under fire," David P. Howells points out the grave future danger from what appears to be a concerted action by several film exporters to abandon their foreign affiliations and turn to other and less difficult phases of activity in the domestic film industry, as a result of the discouraging aspects given the export situation by the rates of exchange and rumors of increased production abroad.

Consternation and surprise now mark the thoughts of foreign renters and distributors as they watch the fast changing tenure of enthusiasm in American film export circles, according to letters and cables received by Mr. Howells within the last three weeks. Supplementing these direct evidences of concern over the recent change of front in this country, Mr. Howells has received advices from his own representatives abroad, who, as managers of his foreign offices in charge of European sales on First National Exhibitors' Circuit attractions, are in almost daily contact with the important exchange or distributing executives.

Situation Creates Perplexity Abroad.

"A summary of the questions and information I have had asked and given me," says Mr. Howells, "shows that the announced plans of several film exporters, wherein they are withdrawing from the export field and turning to other interests, have created genuine perplexity and wonder abroad. The European is quite different from the average American business man. To him a business or chosen field of commercial activity is a life work. Difficulties, problems and business reverses cannot, as a general thing, shake his confidence in the future. The American is different. He will readjust his entire business overnight, and he is less inclined than the European to pursue a profitless course for weeks or months, preferring to turn where money is to be made without years of time-marking.

"Present conditions may reduce our profits as an export house, and they may add greatly to the expense of operation, but we feel what should be a common responsibility among all American exporters who have solicited the confidence, good will and business of buyers abroad, that so long as the situation does not force us into bankruptcy, and so long as it enables us to continue without sacrificing everything we own or have, that we have a great duty and responsibility to discharge in aiding our foreign customers to fight the turbulence through to success.

Foreign Renters Continue to Buy.

"Wherever the facts have merited, we have readjusted our contracts with buyers in Europe so that they can continue as handlers of American pictures. We are trying in every way we can to lighten the pressure and to develop a more friendly and confident feeling, not toward ourselves especially but toward all American exporters. If the men who regularly send film abroad expect to get out of the export business the moment they find the going a little rough, and offering promise for the future instead of big profits on the instant, they are speeding the day when it will be exceedingly difficult for the exporters who stick and fight through to find anything like a normal market.

"European importers are pressed almost to the breaking point now. The absence of theatre development has kept down the consumption of American films, while production here has increased in volume. Still, the foreign renters have continued to buy, not for love, certainly, but as a business proposition and as the most important party to the success of the exporters in this country.

"The Proverbial Last Straw."

"Add to all the worries generating from these facts a complete rearrangement of the American export situation, and you have the proverbial last straw, which will decide the big foreign buyers to bend every energy to the encouragement of European-made pictures as a substitute, at far less cost and with far less worry and strain, for the American pictures they now import.

"All this is happening now, and it is going to have a dangerous retroactive effect on the American market. Exactly what the ultimate result in American film circles will be is impossible to predict, but it is certain, as a broad, national outcome, that American producers and American exhibitors will have to divide the cost between them.

"Now, if ever, is the time when every American exporter should stick tight to his guns, refusing to be frightened into desertion and exerting himself to the utmost to help his foreign customers to tide over the crisis and bring about an earlier remedy by giving the same consideration he expects."

Gibraltar and Hodkinson Heads Enthuse Over "Harvest Moon" with Doris Kenyon

PRODUCERS Theodore C. Deitrich and Arthur F. Beck of the new Gibraltar picture, Augustus Thomas' "The Harvest Moon," starring Doris Kenyon, for W. W. Hodkinson distribution, are more confident than ever that their new production will take its place among the big pictures of the year. This show of enthusiasm from producers, who are seldom given to praise of their product, is the result of the first private showing of "The Harvest Moon" held for executives of Gibraltar and the Hodkinson organization as well as a number of the East's most prominent first-run exhibitors, one of whom pronounced the Doris Kenyon picture: "The finest and best-done screen romance I have seen in years."

"The Harvest Moon," enacted amid new and novel settings, reflects the wide experience of its director, J. Searle Dawley, who, besides handling the megaphone, adapted the story for the screen.

Doris Kenyon's charm and winsomeness are given greater play in the new Deitrich-Beck production.

George A. Lessey, coaxed back to the screen from his work as a director by Mr. Deitrich, contributes a fine performance. Others who contribute worth while performances are Wilfred Lytell, Earl Schenck, Grace Barton, Daniel Pennell, Marie Shotwell, Mrs. E. M. Holland, widow of the famous actor, and Ellen Olesen, the Swedish stage celebrity.

Seven Companies Making Metro Specials; Six on West Coast and One in the East

for crowds! S.R.O. 12

SIX companies on the west coast and one in the east are getting under way on the big special production which will constitute the fourth round of Metro's "fewer and better" pictures series of photoplays adapted from stage successes and best-selling novels.

The fourth round of the "fewer and better" series includes May Allison in Eugene Walter's drama of a woman's love of luxury, "Fine Feathers;" Bert Lytell in a picture version of a colorful and gripping novel of India, by I. A. R. Wylie and entitled "The Temple of Dawn"; Viola Dana in the uproarious boudoir farce, "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," from the stage hit by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan; Alice Lake in "An Outsider;" a second Herne play, this one by the daughter of the author of "Shore Acres," Julie Herne; a third all-star-cast melodrama from the Drury Lane Theatre in London; "Hearts Are Trumps," by Cecil Raleigh; Taylor Holmes in a picturization of one of the stage hits which contributed so much to William Collier's popularity, "Nothing But Lies," by Aaron Hoffman; and Mitchell Lewis, in the first of his cinema productions of four Jack London novels, this one being "Burning Daylight."

No Director Chosen for Walter Play.

No definite word has as yet been forthcoming from the Metro studios in Hollywood regarding the choice of director for the production of the Eugene Walter play, "Fine Feathers." This, it will be recalled, was produced several years ago in New York with a cast as notable as the success the play enjoyed. H. Thompson Rich has prepared the script for this striking play of American life.

"The issue of such a play as this on the screen today," said a Metro official at the New York offices this week, "is particularly timely. It is a play which follows with unswerving logic the result of extravagance."

Bert Lytell's part in "The Temple of Dawn" will come as a marked contrast to his last two characters, that of the immaculate and brilliant young Montreal lawyer, Charley Steele, in Sir Gilbert Parker's "The Right of Way;" and of the title character of "Alias Jimmy Valentine," the reformed crook, Paul Armstrong's great melodrama made world-famous.

Has Role of English Army Officer.

In "The Temple of Dawn" Lytell will be seen as an English army officer, Leigh Dering, who, through unfortunate circumstances becomes an outcast in India, and there later "finds himself." Arthur Zellner of the Metro scenario staff prepared this story for the screen, before leaving Hollywood for New York to join Maxwell Karger.

"Parlor, Bedroom and Bath" will be something of a novelty, too, for Viola Dana, last seen in "The Willow Tree," by J. H. Benrimo and Harrison Rhodes; and recently having completed "Dangerous to Men," from the drama by H. V. Esmond. Edward Dillon has been selected by the production staff at the Metro studios to stage the production. Chief in the support of Miss Dana in the cast of this boudoir farce by C. W. Bell and Mark Swan, is Eugene Pallette. A. P. Younger, of the Metro scenario staff, wrote the script from which Mr. Dillon will direct the piece.

In "An Outsider," by Julie Herne, daughter of James A. Herne, who wrote "Shore Acres," Alice Lake at the head of an all-star cast will be given the part of a manicurist. Lois Zellner has done the adaptation and continuity for the picture, but the choice of director has not as yet been made public.

Third of Drury Lane Plays.

"Hearts Are Trumps" is the third of the Drury Lane melodramas of the five Metro purchased last year while Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, was in England. This third of the thrillers is the sole work of Cecil Raleigh, who collaborated with Henry Hamilton and Arthur Collins in the writing of several other big successes of the same sort. As the title implies one story deals with gambling, high social life in England, and intrigue, with a strong and appealing love interest skillfully woven through the story. Finis Fox wrote the scenario.

Aaron Hoffman wrote "Nothing But Lies" for William Collier after that stage star's hit in "Nothing But the Truth," which James Montgomery adapted for the stage from the novel by Frederic Isham; and the comedian repeated his triumph. Metro believes that the same repetition of humorous achievement will fall to the lot of Taylor Holmes, who recently bought and produced three stage comedy hits and produced them for distribution through Metro.

"Nothing But the Truth" and "The Very Idea," the latter by William Le Baron, have been finished; and "Nothing But Lies" will be in the course of production within the near future. This picture is being made by Taylor Holmes Productions, Inc., in the East.

Mitchell Lewis has Edward Sloman as director for "Burning Daylight," the Jack London story of Alaska and New York which will be the first of five such Mr. Lewis will appear in on the screen, for C. E. Shurtleff, Inc.

Hodkinson Reports Exhibitors Showing "The Sagebrusher" with Big Success

WHETHER it is the action and fidelity of the picture to Emerson Hough's novel or whether it is the heart story of a blindgirl's faith that is making Benjamin B. Hampton's "The Sagebrusher" such a big success with first run theatres everywhere even exhibitors are not able to determine. But the fact remains that the production is a record-making picture.

"Everybody responds to a great love story, the finest type of story that can be put in a theatre," says Charles H. Toy, a big Milwaukee exhibitor and he booked "The Sagebrusher" instantly for his Toy Theatre. Such theatres as the Liberty, San Jose; the Rialto and Lyric, Lincoln, Neb.; the Fuller, Kalamazoo, William Fox's American, Paterson, N. J.; the Star, Elgin; the Heyburn, Evanston; the Majestic, Rock Island, Ill.; the Virginian, Charleston, West Va., are repeating the public success that "The Sagebrusher" has won in Washington, Chicago, Los Angeles, Seattle, Butte, Pittsburg.

Although this Hampton production has been released but six or seven weeks there are not more than a dozen big cities in America at the present time that have not set play dates and announced the coming engagement of "The Sagebrusher."

C. E. Stillwell, the prominent Spokane showman who stirred the townspeople with a spectacular promotion campaign on Mr. Hampton's "Desert Gold" last Fall, duplicated that drive on "The Sagebrusher," the attraction at his Casino Theatre last week, resulting in an engagement that reached the high attendance mark set by the powerful Zane Grey picture.

Kansas Picture Showmen Getting Ready for "Live Wire" Convention in Wichita

THE Kansas Exhibitors' Association will enter its convention at Wichita, March 29, "under" as the leading citizens who welcome the visitors will say, "the most favorable auspices." This has been by far the best year that organization work ever had in Kansas.

The exhibitors have come nearer sticking together than ever before. The organization has maintained a membership of around 100; its committees have worked faithfully, and they have accomplished some real results.

At Wichita, it is hinted, there will be special interest in one subject; that is the election of officers. The program of work for the state association has been satisfactory; there will probably be no radical change in this respect. The officers have done well. No serious problem that is not already under process of action by the association, is arising in Kansas to require talk-festing at the convention.

Looking for "Speed Demons."

Consequently the exhibitors are centering their interest, for this convention, on the choosing of officers who will put the maximum amount of punch and pep into the association for next year. That's the keynote of all their talk now:

"Who can be elected who will keep us going in high all the year?" There is, it must be understood, no criticism of present officers in this attitude; there are only compliments, on all sides, for them, and the whole roster may be re-elected.

Kansas exhibitors in convention will have one bone to pick—that has to do with percentages. Perhaps not all the exhibitors are opposed to the percentage plan; many of them like it once in awhile—especially when the picture isn't sure fire.

Will Tackle "Percentage."

But mighty few of them like the percentage plan when the exhibitor has to guarantee a fair amount of rental, and then give the distributor part of the excess profits, too! The dissatisfaction over this exaction of a minimum in percentage contracts is queering the whole percentage game, it is said.

"Percentage playing kills initiative, especially when the exhibitor has to guarantee a minimum," said one exhibitor. "What's the use of trying hard to put it over, when the real money one makes by doing the job well has to be divided? For my part, I am willing to take the risk of paying rental, so that I will have the fruits of victory when I win big."

How One Man Operated.

The story is related of one exhibitor who took a percentage picture on which a minimum rental was required; he had reasons for showing the picture—his clientele expected it of him. But he wasn't enthusiastic.

He spent the minimum in exploitation, and did not turn his hand over to make the show a real success. He told friends that he hoped he would not take in much above the required minimum, because he hated so to divide those earnings with anybody. And he felt within himself that the more he lost on the picture, the heartier he would be in fighting against the percentage-with-minimum plan.

"Prince of Pines" Company Returns.

The members of the cast composing the company producing the special Selznick picture, "The Prince o' Pines," has returned from New Hampshire, where they had been making the logging camp scenes for the picture. Work was immediately started on the interior scenes at the Selznick Bronx studios.

Included in the members who returned from location were Burton George, director; Anna Lehr, Thurston Hall, Arline Pretty, Jack Costello, Bobby Agnew, William P. Davidson and the dog, Jeanne.

Los Angeles Critics Praise "Mystery of Yellow Room"

THE critics of Los Angeles newspapers have given unanimous approval to "The Mystery of the Yellow Room," an Emile Chautard production presented by Mayflower Photoplay Corporation, adding their praise to one of the most popular and successful showings in the city for many months.

The feature was shown at Tally's Broadway Theatre for a week and Mr. Tally was so pleased with the result that he wired J. S. Woody, general manager of Realart Pictures Corporation, that he was out to book the "Realart product whenever opportunity offered."

Writing in the Los Angeles Times under the heading "Tally Mystery Film Hits Bull's Optic," Grace Kingsley, a well-known critic, said: "Not since 'The Thirteenth Chair' have we seen such an absorbing, hair-raising, spine-tickling, detective play as 'The Mystery of the Yellow Room.'"

"A decided novelty among photoplays" is the manner in which May Markson, writing in the Los Angeles Record characterized the picture.

Vitagraph Reports Big Demand for "The Sporting Duchess"

FOLLOWING its feature run at the Broadway Theatre in New York, the Vitagraph super-feature, "The Sporting Duchess," of which Alice Joyce is the star, is reported to be making big headway from a booking standpoint.

Its pre-release run at the Broadway was marked by an avalanche of acclaim from reviewers. This advance notice apparently has found its way to the farthest corners of the country, and the exchanges report that the feature is in heavy demand.

In many localities the production has been booked to succeed Vitagraph's other current feature, "The Fortune Hunter," of which Earle Williams is star.

A notable fact relating to the picture is that an unusually large number of chain theatres have booked it. Some of the more important in the east and central west were among the first to get this subject on their schedule.

Names Mildred Harris Chaplin's Third.

It has definitely been decided by Louis B. Mayer that the third Mildred Harris Chaplin picture to be released through the First National will be "Old Dad," founded on the story of the same name by Eleanor Hallowell Abbott.

The story of "Old Dad" had its first publication serially in the Woman's Home Companion. It has not yet been decided when "Old Dad" will be released.

Deitrich to Produce "Oh, Henry!"

Theodore C. Deitrich, well known producer of motion pictures, starring Doris Kenyon, is to enter the field of spoken drama. His first production, already in rehearsal, is the farce-comedy, "Oh, Henry!" by Bide Dudley, co-author with Otto Harbach. Mr. Deitrich announces that his stage activities will not interfere with his motion picture production.

Neely Edwards Signs Three-Year Contract to Appear Under Management of the Cohns

JACK COHN has issued a deniel of a rumor to the effect that he and Harry Cohn, producers of the Hall Room Boys Comedies, have lost the services of Neely Edwards. Mr. Cohn explains that upon the dissolution of the Flanagan and Edwards combination, Edwards was engaged for the featured role in the series.

"Neely Edwards' personality and winning smile are largely responsible for his large personal following," says Mr. Cohn, "and it was because of this characteristic that we decided to retain him as the featured player. Flanagan is no longer with our company, but Edwards is under a three-years' contract with us. Hugh Fay, who has had long training in pantomime comedy, will support Edwards, appearing as Ferdie Hall Room."

Harry Cohn announces that the first of the new releases, "Oh, Baby!" is now complete, and the second, "This Way Out," is well under way, and will be sent East within a short time.

Neely Edwards is said to have scored a big popular success in his characterization of Percy Hall Room, in the releases which have been heavily booked in various territories.

State Rights Rapidly Sell on "A Dream of Fair Women"

"A DREAM OF FAIR WOMEN" is in great demand because it is something new and different," says Murray W. Garsson, general manager of the Foundation Film Corporation, in announcing the sale of several large blocks of territory for this special feature, which is being distributed through state right exchanges.

Several states were already sold, including the following: the Gardiner Syndicate bought for all of New York City, Albany and Buffalo; Royal Pictures, Inc., bought for eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey; M. A. Lightman, of the Criterion Film Service, bought for North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee and Kentucky, and David P. Howells bought a block of far eastern territory as well as considerable other foreign territory.

"A Dream of Fair Women" is heralded as "something different, something new and novel." It represents the attempt of the producer to get away from the conventional, stereotyped motion picture. It presents four of the most beautiful girls in America, selected as the result of a contest held in three popular magazines.

"Everywhere I go I find the picture reaping a rich harvest for exhibitors," says Mr. Garsson. "It lends itself easily to exploitation not only in the form of competitions to determine the four most beautiful girls in the exhibitor's town or city, either through newspapers or photographers, but also in the co-operation which stores can give."

Rolfe Preparing to Begin on Second Olive Tell Film

HAVING completed "Love Without Question," the first of the series of six Olive Tell features for Jans Pictures, Inc., Director B. A. Rolfe is preparing to start work on "A Woman's Business" adapted from "Nothing A Year," a novel by Charles Belmont Davis.

Mr. Rolfe announces that the scenario is ready, sets and locations selected and a cast to support Miss Tell is being chosen. The star is cast as a modern society girl, and she will be supported by a number of well-known players. The locale and nature of the story call for elaborate interior sets, and Miss Tell will wear a number of stunning gowns.

"A Woman's Business" is said to be a modern dramatic story with genuine appeal, with a pretty love story woven around an interesting drama.

Marion Kohn Plans Effective Exploitation for His Films

STATE rights buyers handling short features produced by the Marion H. Kohn Productions will receive help in selling, distributing and exploiting these subjects.

"I propose to go to the limit with the state rights buyer with these productions," declares Mr. Kohn. "I'm a state rights man myself and I know that the short subject release needs just as much care in production and exploitation as the biggest feature. I want to make the state rights buyer my friends by co-operating with him fully in all his many problems. Then we will go after the exhibitor. With every contract we make we pledge the state rights buyer the best press notices, the finest of paper, exploitation hints that are new and noval and consistent advertising in the trade papers, aimed directly at the exhibitors."

The Marion H. Kohn Productions have already disposed of considerable territory, states Mr. Kohn.

Popular Players Featured in Newest Gayety Comedies

FORTHCOMING Gayety Comedies, which are released one a week through independent exchanges, feature two popular teams of comedians. "Twin Bedlam," written by Jack Jevne; "Dry and Thirsty," showing what happened to a young man who flirted with a bootlegger's wife; and "Parked in the Park," written by Billy Bletcher, all feature Billy Bletcher and Vera Reynolds.

In "Why Cooks Go Cuckoo," by Keene Thompson, George Ovey and Lillian Biron are featured. George Ovey appears as a chef whose main occupation consists in keeping on friendly terms with a trained oyster. Mr. Ovey and Miss Biron are also featured in "Good Morning, Nurse."

Completion of "Democracy" in Ten Reels Is Announced

DEMOCRACY, or The Vision Restored," described as a powerful ten-reel screen drama with a punch and a purpose, has been completed, under the direction of William Nigh, at the Thomas A. Edison Studio in New York City, according to the announcement of Lee Francis Lybarger, president of the Democracy Photo-Play Company.

"Democracy" was conceived by Mr. Lybarger, who retired as president of the International Lyceum and Chautauqua Association of America to produce this drama. During the past fifteen years he has lectured in forty-six states of the Union. Conversant with this subject from study and general observation, he peopled his theme with characters who struggle amid our own civilization of today. It is announced as a dramatization of humanity's fight for justice, right and freedom.

Nina Wilcox Putnam, well-known as a brilliant author, collaborated on the scenario, and William Nigh, who directed Ambassador Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," screened the production.

Lamping a Vamp

Charlie Chaplin, though, is about to fall in Victor Kremer's "Burlesque on Carmen."

Bobby Vernon Is Featured in Latest Christie Special

THE latest Christie special, "Petticoats and Pants," featuring Bobby Vernon, is the twelfth of the series of Christie two-reelers, which were started just a year ago. This is also the first two-reeler in which Vernon has been featured, though he has been featured in many of the one-reelers.

The picture was written by F. H. Conklin, scenarized by W. Scott Darling, and directed by Bill Beaudine. Bobby Vernon appears as a rube, who is invited to the city by a group of "Follies Girls" who are touring the country. The girls are shown in a lavishly equipped cabaret, with Helen Darling as the leader. Bobby proves to be not as big a rube as he seems.

"House Without Children" in Buffalo.

The Family Theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., had one of its biggest 1919-1920 weeks with Robert McLaughlin's picture, "The House Without Children," February 29 to March 6. An extensive advertising campaign was waged in all of the daily and Sunday papers and the capacity of the theatre was taxed night after night.

Messrs. Cohen & Pearl, the distributors for up-state New York had a force of salesmen in the surrounding territory and booked all of their prints solid for five weeks.

Lesser Buys "The Spoilers."

Robert W. Priest, president of The Film Market, Inc., reports that Sol Lesser has purchased from him the reissue state rights to William N. Selig's production of "The Spoilers" for the Inter-Mountain States, including, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and New Mexico. This purchase gives Mr. Lesser several times more territory on "The Spoilers" than any other distributor, and incidentally registers next to the last territory throughout the world to be sold. Louisiana and Mississippi comprise the only remaining unit to be disposed of.

Fidelity Sells Four States.

M. J. Silver, of Denver, Col., has purchased the Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and New Mexico rights on the Fidelity Pictures release, "The Married Virgin," and expects to put same over as a road show.

"Tillie" Arouses Interest.

"Tillie's Punctured Romance," the six-reel comedy feature now being released on the state right market by Tower Film Corporation is announced as arousing a great deal of interest among exchangemen and exhibitors in every section of the country. Tower Film Corporation states high anticipations are being manifested in the box office success of the revival of this feature, on which an extensive exploitation campaign is being launched.

"Tillie's Punctured Romance" features five prominent comedy stars—Charlie Chaplin, Marie Dressler, Mabel Normand, Chester Conklin and Mack Swain.

Victor Kremer Presents "Skinner's Dress Suit"

VICTOR KREMER FILM FEATURES, INC., has secured the rights to "Skinner's Dress Suit," starring Bryant Washburn, for the United States and Canada. The titles have been completely revised and artistic decorations added in the form of backgrounds.

A comprehensive array of advertising material is now being prepared which includes an assortment of lithographs, 8 x 10, 11 x 14 and 22 x 28 lobby display, three styles of slides, heralds printed in two colors, an elaborate press sheet, and a distinct novelty in the form of a cut-out. This cut-out consists of a dress suit carrying on the shirt front the title together with a description of the play.

A novel exploitation campaign will be carried on for "Skinner's Dress Suit" for the interest of state right buyer and exhibitor as a part of a co-operative plan for the benefit of exchange men and showmen.

"Skinner's Dress Suit" is the first of a series of productions starring well known players which will be exploited by Victor Kremer Film Features, Inc.

Chatkin to Handle Sales.

Announcement is made by the Marion H. Kohn Productions that David J. Chatkin, junior member of the Kohn concern, will look after all sales, state rights contracts, and other matters relating to the distribution of the Kohn short subjects, while Mr. Kohn himself will have charge of production. Besides maintaining the San Francisco headquarters, the Kohn Productions will have large offices at the National studios in Hollywood, where the pictures are made.

National Engages Helen Howard.

Miss Helen Howard, who for a long time played important roles in "Flying A" productions, has been engaged by the National Film Corporation of America to play the feminine lead in a series of "polite" screen comedies.

Tyrad Buys "The Scar of Shame."

Tyrad Pictures, Inc., has purchased "The Scar of Shame," a five-part drama starring Lucille De Tar, supported by Florence Hackett, Charles Eldridge, Mabel Young and Alex Rene. This picture was secured by Matthias Radin, president and general manager of Tyrad, during his recent trip to California, and will be sold on the state rights market.

Zierler Buys Rights to Jans Film.

Sam Zierler, president of Commonwealth Film Corporation, New York, announces his company has secured rights for New York, to the first release of Jans Pictures, Inc., "Love Without Question," starring Olive Tell. Mr. Zierler, who has been in the exchange business for several years, is enthusiastic over this picture, and predicts that it will prove a great box-office success.

Lee F. Lybarger Describes Evolution of "Democracy—the Vision Restored"

THE photodrama, "Democracy—The Vision Restored," is announced as the fulfillment of an idea born in the mind of Lee Francis Lybarger during his college days and it found its first public expression in 1905, when he lectured on "Democracy and the Future" at the Miami Valley Chautauqua, in Ohio.

"Democracy has been the underlying thought and keynote of every lecture I have delivered in the course of my fifteen years as a Chautauqua speaker," stated Mr. Lybarger. "I have made it my life's work to bring to the minds of the American people a realization of the true meaning of Democracy. By personal contact with millions of people in forty-six states and territories I believe I have gleaned the essence and fundamental principles which are embodied in that all-powerful theme Democracy, which typifies Americanism.

"Every perplexing phase of our civilization has a democratic solution. I have endeavored to teach this interpretation of Democracy as a panacea to cure the ills which cause discontent in our great nation.

"With my theme built on the rock bottom foundation of true facts gained by first hand personal contact with the masses and classes of America, I have continuously developed it. In my ten-reel cinema epic 'Democracy—the Vision Restored,' I have embodied this completed theme. Backed by three thousand people, I founded the Democracy Photoplay Company, of Mifflinburg, Pennsylvania, in December, 1918, to produce a visual presentation of this thought drama. I engaged William Nigh, the director of Ambassador Gerard's 'My Four Years in Germany' to make this screen message and leased the Edison studio for production purposes. With a stellar cast of players, my copyrighted theme has been completed and is now ready to be released to the American public."

Lee Francis Lybarger

Real Whitechapel Characters to Appear in "Determination"

THE United States Photoplay Corporation has engaged Coster Dan and Coster Neilan to bring three other costers with them from England to appear in the Whitechapel scenes in "Determination." For the information of the American trade it is announced that a coster is a rough-and-ready person corersponding to the American pushcart pedler. Buck the Preacher and Mary the Saint, who are announced as reformed Whitechapel characters, are also under contract to help lend the Whitechapel atmosphere to "Determination." They will bring costumes typical of that section of London.

The corporation is now seeking ten acres of land on the Palisades in New Jersey for a studio site. It is intended to start four companies working on four pictures at the same time. The corporation will take over the E. K. Lincoln studio for two years on June 1, and will begin production work fifteen days later.

Harry McRae Webster will direct "Determination." Others who will assist Captain F. F. Stoll in this work will be John L. McCutcheon, co-director, and Herbert L. Messmore, technical director. Captain Stoll says that real Whitechapel characters correctly costumed will be seen for the first time in "Determination."

Harry Edwards Promoted.

Harry Edwards has been named production manager of the Christie Film Company by Al Christie, its president and supervising director. Edwards has served two years as assistant to Al Christie, having joined the Christie forces three years ago and missed one year of studio work while in the navy. He formerly appeared in Christie Comedies, playing opposite Betty Compson, and is well known in the studio colony. He now has charge under Al Christie of the production activities of seven directors.

Third Cunard Film Titled.

Grace Cunard's third Marion H. Kohn release, "A Daughter of the Law," is a two-reeler dealing with the "moonshine" traffic. This picture, which was made in the National Film Corporation of America's studios, was written by Miss Cunard. She also directed. Miss Cunard is supported by Cole Herbert in all her Kohn pictures.

New Title for Polly Moran Film.

The title of the second Polly Moran one-reel slapstick comedy, produced by the National Film Corporation of America, has been changed from "Dollars and Scents" to "A Scrambled Romance," according to Joe Brandt, National's eastern representative.

Chicago Rialto Books Hank Mann.

The new Rialto Theatre, in Chicago, is the latest first-run house to book the Hank Mann Comedies, distributed by the Arrow Film Corporation. Dr. W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, announced that bookings of this popular series into the Rialto followed the showing of "The Blacksmith" at the Capitol, New York, and five solid weeks in first-run downtown houses in Boston.

"Unscrambling Egbert" a New Comedy.

Roger W. Fowler, of Fowler Films, and his staff have gone to Fentress, Va., claimed to be a heretofore undiscovered "location," to stage a rural screen comedy, "Unscrambling Egbert." Murray Leinster, a short story writer known to magazine readers, is the author.

With the desire to produce an innovation in screen comics, Mr. Leinster, who was born in the Virginia village, has drawn his country characters from real life, as he has known them, and has woven his plot around these people.

Live News from Everywhere

Buffalo Bulletins

Churches Feature Pictures.

IT is beginning to look like Buffalo exhibitors are going to have the churches to reckon with as competitors on Sunday evenings. Last Sabbath the Rev. Frederick Cortland Wagner, of the East Presbyterian Church, South Division street, showed "As a Man Thinks" to accompany his sermon from the pulpit, and now comes along the Calvary Church on Delaware avenue with Mary Pickford in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," which was shown Sunday evening, March 14. Buffalo exhibitors better wake up!

Garden Changes Name.

The Garden Theatre, so far as the name is concerned at least, has ceased to exist. It opened as a motion picture house Sunday, March 14, under the name of the Empire, with William Farnum in "The Adventurer" as the feature. Prices are 20 cents in the afternoon and 30 cents at night. The Empire is ideally built for a picture house, all the seats being on one floor. The house has played burlesque for several years.

Loew to Replace Warehouse.

Loew Theatres, Inc., has filed plans for the erection of a warehouse at 510 Washington street to cost $65,000. Upon completion the building will be occupied by the Household Outfitting Company. This company now occupies a warehouse in Washington street standing on one of the parcels of property purchased by the Loew interests upon which the new theatre will be erected.

In order to secure the consent of the furniture company to a termination of its lease on the building the theatre company consented to acquire an adjoining piece of property and erect a warehouse which the furniture concern might lease. The filing of the plans for the new building is the result. Work on the structure will begin at once. The new Loew theatre will be one of the largest and elaborate in the chain.

Dewitt L. Marten, of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Protective Union, has issued a warning to proprietors of small picture houses and to churches and schools where moving picture machines are operated by boys that the state law provides that such an operator must be of age and should have an operators' license. It is pointed out that the proprietor of a small moving picture house was recently convicted of violation of the law, and both the exhibitor and the operator, a minor, were fined for operating a machine without a permit.

The law, Mr. Marten said, is also applicable to all amateur operators whether they operate the machine for profit or not. The maximum penalty for a violation of this statute is $100 fine and three months imprisonment, or both.

Installs Ladies' Orchestra.

Elmer C. Winegar, manager of the Central Park and Premier theatres, has installed a ladies' orchestra in the former house at Main street and Filmore avenue. The move has proven a most popular one. Special concert programs are given before the opening of the show each evening.

Old Globe Now Auto Store.

The old Globe Theatre at Main and Ferry streets, is now a high-class automobile agency, the Sentinel Motor Corporation having remodeled the theatre into an attractive showroom. The Globe was one of Buffalo's first picture houses, but always had a rather stormy career.

Maxine Theatre Being Remodeled.

The Maxine Theatre in Seneca street is being remodeled and redecorated, and will have a gala opening Easter week. The house is having an addition built on it which will give it a much larger seating capacity. George Hall and George Haney are proprietors of this house. The new house, the Capitol, being built by these exhibitors will open Easter Sunday.

Pretty Girl Competitions.

Samuel Carver, manager of the Family Theatre, put on a "pretty girl" scheme in conjunction with the showing of "Mother, I Need You." He arranged with a local photographer to take the photos of the entrants.

Reproductions of the photos were thrown on the screen. A trailer will be made of the photo of the selected beauty and shown at the Family.

Morgan Buys Variety Theatre.

William A. Morgan has purchased the property at 740-742 Fillmore avenue, which adjoins the W. A. Morgan & Babcock, Inc., property at Broadway and Fillmore. The deal includes the Variety picture theatre. Wincenty Bielanski was the owner of the Variety.

Pushing New Hertel Theatre.

The Hertel Theatre Corporation is pushing the work on their new theatre building on Hertel avenue, between Norwalk and North Park avenues. W. F. McDonald is head of the company. The steel is on the ground and going up as fast as weather will permit. Several stores have already been rented in the building.

Attractive Elmwood Program.

"When your spirits wane and even the baby won't make you laugh come to the Elmwood for the treatment that revives and makes you look upon life with a more cheerful aspect," says Manager Bruce Fowler in the March 14 issue of the Elmwood program. The Elmwood issues an attractive little vest pocket edition bulletin of the week's attractions which through a large mailing list is put into thousands of homes in all parts of Buffalo.

Shea Metropolitan Going Ahead.

With the return of P. B. McNaughton, president of the Shea Amusement Company, from Palm Beach plans for the new Shea Metropolitan Theatre are expected to go ahead with speed. Actual construction work on the mammoth Buffalo picture institution will start May 1, said Harold B. Franklin.

Hoosier Happenings

New Cinema for Evansville.

THE Standard Realty Company, with a capital stock of $1,000,000, will erect a motion picture theatre at the corner of Main and Sixth streets, Evansville, in the near future, according to plans announced this week. The incorporators of the company are F. H. Gruneberg, A. F. Brentlinger and O. H. Olson, who also are associated with the Bankers and Merchants Theatre Company, of Indianapolis.

Work on the new theatre will start about April 15, according to Henry Dreier, Evansville representative of the company. The building will be an eight-story structure and will be one of the finest of its kind in the Middle West. The upper part of the building will be used as a hotel.

With the announcement of the building of this theatre came the announcement that a New York company is seeking a theatre site in Evansville for the purpose of erecting a combined vaudeville and motion picture theatre at a cost of $500,000. Three downtown sites are now under consideration, it is understood.

Loew House for Indianapolis.

Work preparatory to the construction of the new theatre building, to cost more than $500,000, was begun this week on the site in Indianapolis that has been leased for ninety-nine years by the Marcus Loew Realty Company. The theatre will be erected on the east side of Pennsylvania street extending from Court street north to the Fletcher American Bank Building. The property has a frontage of ninety-three feet in Pennsylvania street and a depth of 202.5 feet in Court street, extending in the shape of an "L" around the rear of the bank building. Plans call for a seating capacity of 3,000.

Mogantown Theatre Burned.

Fire destroyed the motion picture theatre operated by J. S. Knight, Morgantown, last week, causing a loss estimated at approximately $3,000. The loss is partly covered by insurance. The fire started after midnight and apparently had been burning for some time before it was discovered. All of the equipment of the theatre was burned.

The Dulls Buy Another House.

The Colonial Theatre, Bloomfield, has been sold by Carl Shertzer to W. B. and W. A. Dull. W. A. Dull is a banker in Wilshire, O., and is said to be interested in several motion picture theatres in that state. His son, W. B. Dull, who recently returned from extensive service overseas, will move to Bloomfield from Indianapolis to take charge of the Colonial.

Quits Grocery to Run Theatre.

Newton A. Culbeck, a grocer of Nappanee, has closed out his store and has leased the motion picture theatre that is being erected in Goshen by Samuel R. Spohn. When completed, the new theatre will be one of the most attractive in that section of the state.

Denver Doings

Screen Club Will Hold Exposition.

THE motion picture industry in miniature will be on exhibition in Denver this spring at a convention of the moving picture men to be held under the auspices of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club. All phases of the industry will be shown exhibitors, exchange men, operators and all other attaches who attend.

The screen club is composed of moving picture men in all branches of the industry from Colorado and adjoining states. Combined with the exhibition will be a convention of theatre men from all parts of the state and the entire Rocky Mountain region.

A movie ball, to which a number of stars now on the Pacific Coast will be invited, will be the social wind-up of the convention. The screen club is arranging for special railroad rates for out-of-town delegates.

Tabor Grand's New Hours.

A new policy, affecting only the hours of the shows, has been adopted at the Tabor Grand. Vaudeville will be shown three times daily, at 3:45, 8 and 9 o'clock, but the show, augumented by moving pictures, will be continuous from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m.

American Legion Benefits.

With the proceeds of the week going to the American Legion, business was excellent last week at the Princess. The attraction was "Dangerous Hours." The lobby of the playhouse was elaborately decorated for the occasion.

Norma Talmadge Asked to "Frat."

Patron Sues Theatre for Sprain.

Because she sprained her ankle while leaving the Sterling Theatre, Greeley, while the house was in darkness Mrs. Nellie Johnson has brought suit against the Moore and Graves Amusement Company, lessees, Denver, for damages of $1,200. She claims her foot caught in a hole in the aisle carpet.

Pittsburgh Paragraphs

Showman Prints His Own Paper.

H. B. KESTER, of the Cameraphone Theatre, East Liberty, Pittsburgh, made press agents, house managers and the movie fans of East Liberty sit up and take notice March 6, when he issued a special four-page newspaper, announcing Eugene O'Brien, the popular Selznick star, in his latest feature, "His Wife's Money," for a week's showing, beginning March 8.

An edition of 5,000 copies was published, with the entire issue edited and prepared by J. Howard Lichtenstein, exploitation representative of the Select-Selznick Enterprises.

In addition to the featuring of the current attraction Mr. Lichtenstein played up the Goldwyn picture, "The Street Called Straight, which comes to the Cameraphone the week of March 16, and also the picture for the week of March 22, when Olive Thomas appears in "Out Yonder." The issue was also complete with interesting data of moving picture stars, with the result of drawing capacity business to the Cameraphone Theatre during the past few days.

The paper was distributed by boys dressed in white coats, with the name "Cameraphone" painted down the front of the coat, while on the back the following appeared:

"Cameraphone," Week of March 8; Eugene
O'Brien in "His Wife's Money," a Selznick Picture.

This alone was an exploitation stunt that attracted attention to the feature advertised and brought its percentage of business.

Beautiful House in Oil City.

With the new seats arriving for the (McCartney's) Penn Amusement Company's new motion picture palace, Oil City, and most of the elaborate changes required in transforming the big building to its proposed purpose completed, there is good reason for the expectation that the formal opening will take place within the next six weeks at the latest.

When the public is admitted for the first time it will see one of the most complete and up-to-date motion picture houses outside of the larger cities in the country—one that possesses notable devices for the safety of the patrons. These include foundations that are capable of sustaining many tons more weight than could possibly be placed on the floors, elaborate system of fireproofing, many more exits than the law requires, electric wiring and heating appliances of the latest and most approved character for places of amusement, besides an elaboration of convenience and elegance for patrons.

The screen is 18 by 22 feet and at either side the cathedral organ is installed in chambers, a grill work of ornamental mesh permitting uninterrupted emission of the music. The seats are of circassion walnut, with iron standards. There are 614 on the first floor and 302 upstairs.

The Penn Amusement Company are the owners. In this company are such men as W. A. McCartney, H. A. Tuller, Oil City, and R. B. Taft, of Cattaraugus, N. Y.

Fairbanks Opens Tarentum Palace.

The new Palace Theatre, which cost $200,000, erected by the Palace Amusement Company at Tarentum, Pa., was opened February 28, with Douglas Fairbanks in "His Majesty the American" as the attraction. The house is beautiful, with 560 seats, and a real credit to the town. They turned 'em away on the opening night, and are continuing to do so. A five-piece orchestra furnishes the music. The officers of the company are John McGinley, C. K. Nichols and W. L. Brown.

Rowland and Clark Shake Up Staff.

The acquisition of the Strand Theatre of Erie, Pa., to the chain of the Rowland & Clark theatres has resulted in quite a shake-up among the managers. William J. Bernardi, formerly of the Savoy, Pittsburgh, whose long connection with the R. & C. Enterprises earned him the much coveted position, drew the Erie assignment.

Ferguson, whose first name must be "Fergy," for that is all he is known by, even by his associates, is keeping the box office working smoothly at the Plaza. Harry Thomas, young in years but old in experience, has been elevated to the post of assistant to Jerome Casper at the Liberty Theatre.

Charles Smith, best known impressario in the local territory, has the managerial reins at the Savoy. John A. Reilly, whose "Fighting Irish" has made the Belmar Theatre one of the most successful of the R. & C. chain, will occupy the post of manager of the Strand henceforth. Reilly is the dean of R. & C. managers, and there never was a more popular man in the R. & C. employment.

Duquesne to Have New House.

A. H. Berg, of the Maryland Theatre, Duquesne, Pa., is erecting a large new house there, to be called the Liberty, which will be completed about May 1. U. T. E. equipment will be installed in the projection room.

Old Showman in Titusville.

Mr. Schweitzer has taken over the Orpheum and Grand theatres at Titusville, Pa., from Robert Fulton. Mr. Schweitzer is an old showman, having formerly operated amusements in Pittsburgh.

Two West Virginia Items.

Mr. Cool, of the Court Theatre, Kingwood, West Va., has remodeled his theatre, has put a new marquise in front of his house, and also added a confectionery store to his lobby.

The Dixy Theatre at Morgantown, West Va., has been closed, and is being converted into a bank.

Lombardis of Du Boise Sell Out.

The Lombardi family (brothers and sisters), owners of the Empire Theatre, Du Boise, have sold the house to Homer Alsworth, of Clarion, the new owner having taken charge on March 1. Mr. Alsworth is an old exhibitor, having conducted houses in Latrobe, Oil City and Butler. Miss Lombardi, who was in the city recently, states she will contract for a picture house, but it has got to have a capacity of 1,000 to 1,500. No more small theatres for her, she says.

Eddie Johns Goes to Wilmington.

Eddie Johns, formerly manager of the Wonderland Theatre, Fifth avenue, has been transferred by his employers to another one of their houses at Wilmington, Del. E. J. Harkins is now looking after both the Lyric and the Wonderland theatres here.

Wilmerding Exhibitor Dies.

H. C. Estep, formerly manager of the Grand Theatre at Wilmerding, died recently at his home in Pittsburgh, aged 57 years. Pneumonia was the cause of his death.

News Briefs and Personals.

A. J. Simon, formerly manager of the Strand Theatre, Oakland, is now in charge of the William Penn Theatre, North Side.

C. A. Feinler, of the Virginia Theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., will have an all Robertson-Cole week, beginning April 5.

Theodore Flocos who, with George Stratigos, is part owner of the Regent Theatre, Etna, has sold his Winkinsburg real estate holdings and expects to leave in a month for Greece.

Baltimore Brieflets

Will Rejoin Metro Scenario Staff.

KATHERINE KAVANAUGH, of Baltimore, who has been doing free lance writing in this city for several months and who formerly was a member of the Metro scenario staff, will rejoin the staff of writers of that company again this summer. Miss Kavanaugh will probably write a prologue for "The Forbidden Woman," starring Clara Kimball Young, when that production is shown in Baltimore.

Another Reichenbach Idea.

Miss Kavanaugh saw the feature at a private showing in New York recently, and a plan was outlined by Harry Reichenbach, personal representative of Miss Young, to have her write a prologue for the play and have the acting performed by Baltimore talent; the cast to be made up of Miss Kavanaugh's pupils. The student who closely resembles Miss Young will assume the role of the star.

The stage will be set for a short play, in keeping with the scenes of the picture, and the players will represent characters in the feature. Miss Kavanaugh has been conducting a dramatic and motion picture school in Baltimore, and Hilda Rose, who played the leading part in "Love's Crossroads," a picture produced by Miss Kavanaugh in Baltimore, has been engaged by Equity and has the star role in a publicity story being produced by this company.

Ordinance for Theatre Passed.

The ordinance giving permission to John T. Murphy to build a moving picture theatre at 1610-12-14 Druid Hill avenue, was passed by the City Council of Baltimore March 8. There was some opposition to this measure from Warner T. McGuinn, representative of the Fourteenth Ward. The ordinance is now awaiting the Mayor's signature. It is understood this will be a colored playhouse.

Out-of-Town Notes.

H. Clay Evans, who represents the company operating the San Toy Theatre in Lonaconing, Md., and also owns the Empire Theatre in Frederick, Md., has now taken over the Opera House in the latter city.

The management of the Garing Theatre in Greenville, S. C., which was recently damaged by fire, will repair the structure, and the estimated cost for the work will be $10,000.

The Strand Theatre, Fayetteville, N. C., which is operated by H. T. Drake, is to be enlarged, according to plans now under way.

Benefit at Parkway.

In order to purchase linen and clothing which was lost in the fire which damaged the St. Vincent's Male Orphan Asylum February, 1919, a benefit performance was given at the Parkway Theatre Sunday afternoon, March 7. L. A. DeHoff, supervising director of the Whitehurst Theatrical Enterprises loaned the playhouse for the occasion and personally arranged the program of moving pictures and had charge of the performance. The music was furnished by St. Mary's Industrial School Band, and the affair was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Asylum. An appeal for funds was made by the Rev. Hugh Monohan and there was community singing of patriotic songs.

Cincinnati Cullings

Photoplays In Old Standard.

CINCINNATI'S newest first-run photoplay house, the Boulevard, Canal and Vine streets, which was formerly the Standard Theatre, opened March 14 with "The Beloved Cheater," in addition to presenting for the first time "Lost City of the African Jungles." The largest pipe organ in any theatre in Cincinnati and the only gold-fibre screen for reflection of pictures are the features of the theatre. Manager Fisher has announced that none but the highest type of pictures will be shown at the Boulevard Theatre.

Another Theatre for Avondale.

The Engler Apartment building at 3462 Reading Road has been purchased by Charles Schaengold, moving picture magnate, for the purpose of opening another motion picture theatre in Avondale. The building occupies a lot of ground immediately adjoining the Avondale School, with a frontage of about 50 feet on Reading Road and extends approximately 159 feet to the rear. Mr. Schaengold said plans for the new theatre will be announced later.

Five Feet of Film Offers.

Mary Milburn, starlet in "Angle Face," Victor Herbert's play, which appeared at the Grand Theatre last week, received two offers before leaving this city for Indianapolis from producing companies to enter the movies. Miss Milburn is considered the smallest woman appearing on the legitimate stage today, her height being five feet.

Thornton Brothers Make Merry.

Mat Thornton, booker at the Cincinnati branch of the Goldwyn Corporation, was one of the happiest exchangemen in this city last week. The occasion for this was the meeting of his brother, Bernard Thorton, comedian with the "Angle Face" company. This was the first time they had met for five years.

Going Back to Grease Paint?

Eugene Sheridan, superintendent at the Family Theatre for the past three years, has resigned that position. Mr. Sheridan was formerly a vaudeville actor, and his many friends believe he contemplates returning to the stage. Mr. Sheridan refused to make public his future plans.

600 Square Feet of Fine Art.

The Fine Arts Film Exchange, whose offices are in the Strand building, has leased floor space of 600 square feet in the Film Building, located at Pioneer street and Broadway, for a yearly rental of $750.

Bower Back—On Crutches.

Oscar Bower, Cincinnati resident manager of the Goldwyn Corporation, who has been suffering with a broken leg for the past month, made his appearance at the office last week on crutches. Mr. Bower is feeling fine, but it will be some time before he will be able to do without the props.

Films Fighting Bolshevism.

W. W. Rowland, president of the Film Board of Trade, Chamber of Commerce, said the country-wide screen campaign to combat Bolshevism would be started March 31 in all the leading motion picture houses in Cincinnati. Trailors for the news films are to be used in an effort to "Win America For Americans," he said.

Lisbon Gets Associated Franchise.

The management of the Walnut, Strand and Family Theatres has concluded negotiations for the Southern Ohio franchise of Associated Exhibitors, Inc. This means that they will handle every picture released by this organiaztion.

In allying himself with this association Manager Libson of the three theatres becomes part of one of the most influential factors in the industry.

"Shakespeare" Gets Into Pictures.

A motion picture theatre, to be known as the Shakespeare, will be built on the east side of State avenue, near Eighth street, by the Shakespeare Amusement Company, organized recently. The company was organized by persons formerly interested in the Waldorf Amusement Company, which ran the National Theatre, this city.

New England News

Hub Company Producing Photoplay.

THE Hub Cinemagraph Company, Boston, has secured Stanley J. Worris to head its scenario department and take complete charge of making the adaptions and writing the continuity for its productions. Eugene Sue's story of the underworld, "The Mysteries of Paris," is the first.

Ed. Cornell is now engaged in making the photodrama in eight reels at the company's studio, Winthrop, Mass. It will require about two months to complete.

Mr. Worris is a member of the staff of the Boston American and has been freelancing scenarios since 1917. Before joining the staff of the Boston paper he was in the scenario department of the New England and Historical Feature Film Company.

Barre Film Theatre Burned.

Park Theatre at Barre, Vt., owned by Black Theatres of New England, Inc., was destroyed by fire, along with the adjoining Zanleoni Block. The Barre fire department was handicapped by the high wind and deep snow but succeeded in keeping the flames within the two buildings. The fire started from an overheated furnace.

No Change in Leominster Houses.

Thomas and Rosina McEvoy, proprietors of the Gem Theatre, Leominister, Mass., have decided not to take over the Music Hall, also a Leominster moving picture theatre operated by Daniel O'Keefe. The McEvoy's had deposited a forfeit of $1,000 on the property, but Charles O. Amazeen, the owner, returned the money to Mrs. McEvoy.

The McEvoys had archtiects-over from Fitchburg, but found it would take $30,000 to remodel the Music Hall in accordance with McEvoy ideas. "This expense would make the deal bigger than we care to handle just now," said Mrs. Evoy.

San Francisco Sayings

THE Exhibitors' Protective League has been formed by theatre owners in Northern and Central California with a membership of about 100. Meetings are being held weekly at No. 240 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco.

The officers are D. S. Markowitz, president; H. Gobish, vice-president; N. K. Herzog, recording secretary; Miss Bessie Morris, assistant recording secretary; Robert A. McNeil, financial secretary; Sam Gordon, treasurer, and A. S. Newburgh, attorney.

Committees have been appointed with these chairmen: Executive, L. Freitas; publicity, J. Clark; grievance, Mrs. F. E. Smith, membership, R. M. Ford, and by-laws, Frank R. McCauley. The charter will be held open for members until April 15.

Producers Invade San Francisco.

Several moving picture companies arrived in San Francisco during the second week of March to secure local settings. Some plan to remain for a considerable period. Bessie Barriscale, formerly of the Alcazar stock company of this city, is here with a company of ten, which includes Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Stanley, Jack O'Shea and W. C. Cabanne.

Anita Stewart is paying this city her first visit, arriving recently with a party of ten to work on "The Yellow Typhoon." Bessie Love and company is here to secure scenes for "The Midlanders," her first picture for the Andrew Callaghan Productions, under which name the star's own company is operated.

The production is being directed by Ida May Park and Joe de Grasse. Others in her company are Jack Donovan and Truman Van Dyke. R. A. Flynn has arrived here with a party of fifteen to make pictures for the Fox Film Company and William Russell and Eileen Percy are expected this week.

Several companies are working in the mountains east of here, the recent snowfall having made the taking of winter scenes possible. The Vitagraph Company has a company headed by Pauline Stark working at Truckee, and Thomas Ince has a company there headed by Hobart Bosworth. The Metro Company is producing Jack London's story, "Burning Daylight," in San Francisco's winter playground.

Moving Picture Concerns Incorporate.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of California has been incorporated at San Francisco with a capital stock of $12,000,000 by J. A. Pritchard, M. Christman, I. M. Golden, V. B. Clement, S. F. Walter, J. P. Meehan, H. G. Rosebaum, G. Vizzard, H. Shanks, G. R. Huff, W. A. Mead, J. M. Bettincourt, Sydney Cohen, A. Lauricella and J. J. Partridge. The purposes set forth cover the entire field of the film production and exhibition business.

The Pacific Motion Picture Studios has also been incorporated in this city, the capital stock being placed at $100,000. The directors are W. O. Edmunds, L. C. Hutt, Herman Lubfin, O. H. Stolberg and W. J. Cerlett.

Gets Rights to Kyne Stories.

C. E. Shurtleff, who last year secured the film rights to all Jack London stories, has just completed arrangements whereby he has secured exclusive screen rights to the stories written by Peter B. Kyne, plus all the stories that Kyne will have published within the next three years.

New Policy for Frolic Theatre.

Under the direction of Manager B. A. Goodman the Frolic Theatre has been renovated and redecorated throughout with new lighting and projection equipment installed. In the future nothing but first-run pictures will be shown there. The orchestra will in future be heard at all performances, instead of evenings only.

San Francisco Film Exports.

The importance of the port of San Francisco as an export center for moving picture films is steadily increasing. The last available report of the Customs House showed that these were averaging about 3,059,484 feet a month, with a valuation of more than $100,000.

Daylight Saving Plan Up Again.

The Board of Supervisors of San Francisco are preparing to take action at an early date on the proposition of adopting a daylight saving plan along the line of the one followed nationally during the war. In addition to there being some public demand for such a measure the acute power shortage is cited as being a factor in favor of the plan.

Brief Trade Notes.

J. C. Cohen, head of the Consolidated Amusement Company, Honolulu, T. H., has returned to his San Francisco headquarters from a brief trip to the Islands.

F. J. Alberti, who transacts a supply business at No. 94 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, is now doing business under the name of the F. J. Alberti Distributing Company.

Bernat Jaulus, one of the leading musicians of San Francisco, has been engaged as director of the Rialto Theatre orchestra.

The Majestic Theatre, Sacramento, Cal., has been remodeled and transformed into a modern moving picture house.

The New Liberty Theatre, Healdsburg, Cal., has been opened by T. Tucker.

T. Casey, at one time manager of the Tivoli Theatre, San Francisco, has been made manager of the Sun Theatre, succeeding Abe Markowitz, who has resigned to devote attention to his Crescent Theatre Company interests.

Morning Matinee for Night Workers.

The management of the Westwood Theatre, Westwood, Cal., a lumber town in the northern part of the state, has instituted the plan of putting on a matinee at eight o'clock in the morning for the benefit of the men who work on the night shift in the mills.

Theatre Company Incorporated.

The Napa Theatre and Realty Co. has been incorporated at San Francisco, Cal., with a capital stock of $50,000 to build and conduct a theatre at Napa, Cal. The directors are Vincent Aaron, G. Kane, L. Keyes, C. T. Patterson and A. I. Newburgh.

Southwest Showmanship

Another House for Sumter, S. C.

A CHARTER has been granted to the Hills Rex Theatre, of Sumter, S. C. The capital stock is $15,000 and the incorporators are Roland G. Hill, president; W. B. Hill, vice-president; J. C. Hedgpath, secretary and treasurer. A new motion picture house will probably be constructed at Sumter by this company.

Carolina Producing Corporation.

The Hamilton Producers Film Arts of North Augusta, S. C., has been granted a commission by the Secretary of State. The corporation is capitalized at $10,000 by G. H. Shelton Hamilton, of North Augusta, and Lillian R. Gordon and Thomas R. Gordon, of Augusta, Ga. The company's business is set forth as to "make and manufacture motion pictures, to buy and sell motion pictures and to operate motion picture exchanges."

To Educate with Films.

The Chattanooga High School Parent-Teachers' Association is raising funds for the purchase of a motion picture machine to be installed in the new high school at Chattanooga. Plays especially suitable to be seen by children of high school age will be shown when the machine is ready for operation.

Two More Lynch Houses.

The S. A. Lynch Enterprises will construct two new theatres in the near future at Gadsden, Ala., and Griffin, Ga. Sparklin & Gondolfo, Inc., of Washington, D. C., have drawn plans for both structures. Several other motion picture houses are planned for the South by the Lynch people this year, some of which are already under construction.

Among Busy Exchangemen

Universal's Branch Located by Vote of Picture Showmen

WICHITA, Kan., a great town, center of the oil industry, center of a fine agricultural territory, a town that moving picture exhibitors and exchange men like to visit, is to have a real exchange. The Universal will open a branch there about April 1. Wichita has been an important moving picture point for many years, but somehow has never been hit upon for distribution of pictures on the scale that the Universal will give it.

The Wichita office will be a branch of the Kansas City office, but in effect it will be a direct distributing office. Exhibitors will deal directly with the Wichita office, which will have in its own rooms the films with which to fill orders.

It will have the same stock as Kansas City, though possibly not so many copies.

Harry H. Buxbaum.

Recently made New York exchange manager for Famous Players-Lasky.

H. Buntley, now office manager at Kansas City, formerly at Omaha with the Universal, will be manager of the Wichita exchange.

Location Chosen by Vote.

The exhibitors of western Kansas chose Wichita as the location for the Universal exchange which will serve western Kansas business. The Universal had carefully studied the field, and had decided that an exchange for western and central Kansas should be established either at Salina or at Wichita.

Salina is a very important distribution point for many lines of merchandise; it is near the center of the state, and is well served by railroads. Wichita is about the same location east and west as Salina, but farther south. The railroad service of Wichita is, perhaps, more extensive than that of Salina.

The advantages were about balanced between the two cities, the more central location of Salina offsetting some favorable features of Wichita. The fact that Wichita was much the larger city was not an important consideration in the company's judging of merits—the chief consideration being service to exhibitors.

In order that the decision might not only be satisfactory but pleasing to a majority of the exhibitors who would be served, the Universal sent a questionnaire to all the exhibitors in the territory to be allotted to the Wichita office. The large majority of the replies favored Wichita. With letters received urging that Wichita be chosen, and promising to come in there as often as possible to trade with the proposed exchange, the Universal was sure that Wichita was the destined site for an exchange.

K. C. Universal the First In.

The Universal was the first exchange to establish itself in the new film exchange building in Kansas City. It has the entire second floor, and also is using space in the basement floor for store room. The building is not completed, and visitors find their way through a maze of scaffolding—but the coast is clear as far as hazards are concerned.

The exchange has been able to effect an especially convenient arrangement. Executive offices, four of them, are on the west side of the building, with windows on the side street. The bookers have fine rooms with large windows on the Main street side.

J. C. Calvert, formerly in charge of the Universal at Omaha, reached Kansas City in time to move the exchange, and to put his ideas as to arrangement into effect. Manager Calvert took a few live ones with him from the Omaha office—H. Huntley as office manager, W. Hoover and S. Epeley as salesmen. Mr. Hoover used to operate the Twelfth Street Theatre in Kansas City, so finds many old friends to welcome him.

Goodman Becomes Assistant Manager.

From the Republic branch office in Philadelphia comes the news that C. S. Goodman has been appointed assistant manager. The office also reports a number of bookings of the Williamson subsea picture, "Girl of the Sea." Exploitation ideas have been planned for this release in the Philadelphia territory.

Dresner, Being "From Missouri."

Abe Dresner, of the Exhibitors' Film Exchange, never believes anything he does not see, and when a bunch of New Yorkers at the Washington Elks Club started in to tell of the height of the snow piles in New York, Abe's hair stood up on end and he said:

"Boys, yuh gotta show me."

He told his wife Harry Crandall wanted him to pick out some new features for exhibition at the Metropolitan, and he went to New York "on business." He saw the snow, according to Joe Morgan, of the Metropolitan, and he describes it in his own inimitable way while the bunch sit in the draft of electric fans.

Whitaker Loops Country's Loop.

Vivian P. Whitaker jumped into Washington the other day after a visit to all of the Selznick exchanges with the single exception of Boston. He went across the continent from New York and back home via New Orleans and the Southern centers. He was accompanied by Mrs. Whitaker.

Buffalo "Game Hunters" in Utica.

The Utica convention is on the tongues of every Buffalo film man. Buffalo was honored by having one of its exhibitors, Ira M. Mosher, manager of the Palace Theatre, re-elected to a vice-presidency of the state league. A journey around exchange row, however, brought out one very prominent fact, and that is "that a great time was had by all," some to their sorrow and some to their glee.

By reading between the lines it seems that "the links" were overcrowded with participants in the "African Golf" tournament and that Bill Hart missed an opportunity to shoot some very realistic "Red Dog" scenes. However, all declare that the convention was the most successful in the history of the state league.

F. P.-L. Renews Exchange Lease.

Allan S. Moritz, manager of the Buffalo Famous Players-Lasky branch, announces that the lease on the present offices in Franklin street has been renewed for another year, as a protection, in case the new exchange building is not ready for occupancy at the expected time. When the office is moved into the new structure the present offices will be sublet.

Exchange Screens "Turning Point."

P. H. Smith, First National manager, screened Katherine MacDonald in "The Turning Point" in Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, Friday evening, March 12. The showing was attended by several local exhibitors and newspaper men.

Bert Adler Visits Buffalo.

Bert Adler, Realart exploitation man, was the guest of Henry E. Wilkinson, Buffalo manager, for the week end, March 12. While in Buffalo Mr. Adler discussed plans for exploiting "Soldiers of Fortune," which it is expected will soon be shown here. Mr. Adler reports exhibitors throughout the country strong for real exploitation.

Plans Elaborate Screen Showing.

Frank S. Hopkins, Buffalo manager of the Universal office, is planning an elaborate screening of Priscilla Dean in "The Virgin of Stamboul" on March 20. It is probable that the Arab patrols of Ismailia Temple and Zuleika Grotto will be invited to attend in full regalia to give the proper atmosphere. Mr. Hopkins is planning an elaborate publicity campaign to put the feature over in this territory.

Eddie Hayes in Gotham.

"Eddie" Hayes, Robertson-Cole chief in Buffalo, attended the R. C. convention in New York the week of March 15. Hayes reports booking H. B. Warner in "A Fugitive from Matrimony," with E. O. Weinberg, manager of the Strand Theatre, for first run in Buffalo. Weinberg is planning a special lobby display for this production.

Al Becker Visits His Mother.

Al Becker, of the Becker Theatre Supply Company, Buffalo, was in New York the week of March 8 to visit his mother, who is confined to her bed on account of illness. While in New York Mr. Becker conferred with Simplex officials and visited the projection departments of the leading Broadway houses.

in Big Distributing Centers

Showman Boosts Dempsey Serial.

"I want to tell you that I have never used a serial but one day, but this one, 'Daredevil Jack,' with Jack Dempsey, I have signed for three days, and only because of the quality. Anyone that wants an O. K. on this serial, refer them to me." So wrote Fred C. Bitner, manager of the Havens Theatre, Olean, N. Y., to Manager C. A. Taylor of the Buffalo Pathe office, following his showing of the Pathe serial in Olean. Mr. Bitner reports the serial went over like a shell from a Big Bertha. Mr. Taylor has engaged Bryon Interbitzen, formerly with Independent Films Company, and John Predari, formerly with Famous Players in Salt Lake City, as new members of his sales staff.

Hayes Establishes Record.

Three first runs one week and two the next is the record made by Eddie Hayes, Buffalo Robertson-Cole manager. Mr. Hayes was visited by F. G. Sliter, eastern supervisor, during the week of March 1. During his stay here Mr. Sliter and Mr. Hayes called on the leading exhibitors in Buffalo and also journeyed to Rochester for a day.

Aurora Mardiganian Coming.

P. H. Smith, manager of the First National exchange, announces the coming of Aurora Mardiganian, herself, to Buffalo territory for an engagement of eight weeks with the presentation in the various towns, and possibly in Buffalo, of "Auction of Souls." Accompanying Miss Mardiganian will be the First National publicity marvel, Lieut. Jim Anderson, who had all Utica believing that Anita Stewart was really on her way to the state convention and that a big snowstorm at Detroit was the only thing that inhibited her from arriving on time. Such a man should be able to convince "the sticks" that daylight saving is a good thing.

Flood Catches "Buck" Taylor.

The annual spring flood in the South Buffalo district this year was so extensive that it took in the home of C. A. Taylor, Pathe manager, with the result that "Buck" played the role of skipper in going to and from his domicile. Donned in hip boots, "Buck" worked all one night in an effort to keep the waters from moving his "domus" into another section of the city.

Gardiner, Inc., Film Activities.

T. R. Gardiner, president of Gardiner Pictures, Inc., of Buffalo and Albany, has bought the Magnet Film Exchange, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, where Mr. Gardiner will assume active management at once. This company has bought the state rights on Murray Garsson's "The Blindness of Youth," "Tillie's Punctured Romance" and "A Dream of Fair Women." With less than one-third of the state covered, Gardiner Pictures, Inc., has secured the U. S. rights on "The Lost Battalion." This feature film and a band of Overseas Jazzophiends has proven a popular attraction. Twelve more companies will be organized at once.

New Haven Exchanges Will Have This Film Building.

Famous Players-Lasky have leased the first two stories. To be built by J. P. Kilfeather of granite and Indiana limestone. It will comply with all requirements of the Underwriters and the N. A. M. P. I. It will cost over $500,000, and will house all New Haven exchanges.

West Coast Hustlers Making Records in Their Exchanges

C. C. Thompson, formerly with Robertson-Cole, is now manager of the San Francisco Hallmark branch, succeeding Sol Davis, who has been made manager at Dallas, Tex., of Special Pictures Corporation.

George Chamberlain, of the Independent Film Exchange, has secured the world rights to "The Pageant of San Francisco," a five-part production made by the Pageant Film Company.

Coming East With Big Feature.

Frank A. McDonald, of the Sun Film, Inc., will visit Los Angeles and soon go on to New York with "The Heart of the Cumberlands,' for which the world rights have been purchased. He expects to remain East for two or three months disposing of State and foreign rights to this production and purchasing other pictures for his Pacific Coast film exchanges. William Hussey, of Los Angeles, will look after his San Francisco interests during his absence.

H. S. Meyer, for several years connected with the San Francisco office of the World Film Company, and its successor, the Republic Distributing Corp., as assistant manager, has left for Seattle, Wash., to become manager of the office of the latter concern. He has been succeeded at San Francisco by Harry Schmidt.

Floyd St. John "On His Own."

Floyd St. John, who recently left the Republic Distributing Corp. to start a cooperative film exchange, has opened headquarters at 105 Golden Gate avenue.

Harry Carney, formerly with Pathe, is now with the All Star Features Distributors as salesman. This concern is now distributing Al. St. John comedies and is about to release Vivian Martin's first state right production, "Husbands and Wives." It has taken over twenty-four features from Hallmark and is also handling the Rothacker scenics.

Friedman Visits Old Haunts.

Henry E. Friedman, formerly connected with the Washington office of the World Film Corporation, visited a number of his old friends in Washington last week. Mr. Friedman left Washington June 1, 1916, for Chicago as assistant manager of the Pathe office there.

Later he became branch manager and returned to the East to become connected with one of the film exchanges in New York City. He left the business about a month ago, and his new activities brought him to Washington on a visit. Friedman was one of the best known film salesmen in this territory, earning the nickname "Tarheel" because of his connection with the North Carolina Exhibitors' Exchange.

Philadelphia Touches Live Wires.

The Electric Theatre Supply Co., one of the oldest independent exchanges in Philadelphia, has removed to new quarters at No. 1309 Vine street, where they will occupy the entire building. The Electric was organized about 1898 by Harry Schwalbe, the present treasurer of the newly organized First Pictures Corporation, who is the proprietor and is being managed by L. B. Bache.

A significant change in the policy of the Electric has been its entire divorce from big feature productions to short reel subjects exclusively. Over $20,000 has been spent on the new building, with the result that today the Electric is without doubt one of the classiest exchanges on Vine street. The interior offices are of colonial design and finished in old mahogany.

All of the employes of Metro, Philadelphia, paid a visit to their manager, "Bob" Lynch, at his home last Saturday, where he has been confined during the past two weeks with a severe cold. "Bob" being the life of the office is being very much missed.

Harry M. White Is Honored.

Harry M. White, chairman of the Motion Picture Group, of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, and manager of the Goldwyn, was presented with a handsome silver and copper hammered cigarette case at a luncheon given at the Arcadia Cafe on February 26, in appreciation of his untiring efforts in the interests of the organization. Bob Lynch is responsible for the planning of the affair, while John Clark was elected to make the presentation speech.

Exchange Doings Around Detroit.

Harry A. Ross, for the past three years Detroit manager for Famous Players-Lasky, has been promoted to assistant general sales manager with headquarters at the home office. He has already assumed his new duties.

The employes of the Detroit exchange presented him with an English kit bag upon his departure. Mr. Ross did splendid work in Detroit, bringing up the efficiency of the office to where it enjoyed the reputation of the best conducted exchange in the entire Paramount circuit.

Charles W. Perry, assistant to Mr. Ross, succeeds him as manager. He was formerly with Pathe in Detroit and Boston, and in the early days was an exhibitor in New England.

Frank Stuart succeeds William A. Kent as assistant manager of the Select exchange in Detroit. Mr. Stuart has heretofore done the bookkeeping and was former manager of the local general exchange. J. O. Kent continues as Detroit manager for Select.

Jess Fishman, of the Standard Film Service, Detroit, is preparing for a big campaign on "The Lost City" serial, which he predicts will bring higher rentals and greater gross business than any serial ever released in Michigan.

J. O. Brooks with Pathe.

J. O. Brooks has been appointed feature sales manager of the Pathe office in Detroit. Mr. Brooks has been feature salesman with the local exchange since he was discharged from the government service, being for over eighteen months in charge of the Liberty Theatre, Camp Custer, Mich.

Ralph Quive, Realart manager in Detroit, is back after spending a week at the home office, conferring with Mr. Kohn, Jack Woody, Jack Ragland and Jay Gove. Mr. Quive now has 100 per cent. more enthusiasm than he ever had.

W. N. Skirboll, Detroit Metro manager, says he has taken more 100 per cent. Metro contracts in the past thirty days than he took in the first three months of the season.

Young First Past the Post.

J. H. Young, Vitagraph's salesman in Detroit, won first honors in the recent competition which ended February 21, covering a period of four weeks. This was for the entire country and it makes Mr. Young, who is new in the film business, the best Vitagraph salesman for new business.

J. M. Duncan, Vitagraph manager in Detroit, reports that he has secured first-run booking at the Washington Theatre, Detroit, for Alice Joyce in "The Sporting Duchess," and Earl Williams in "The Fortune Hunter," one week on each. Both will play there in April.

The Detroit office of the Republic Distributing Corporation will shortly move from the sixth floor of the film building to the fifth, where it will occupy space with the Select exchange. The Republic selling and office staff will remain intact, the Select merely doing the physical distribution. Dave Mundstuk, Strand Features, Detroit, operating independently, left for New York March 14 to look over the state right field.

Canadian Exchange Activities.

Following the return to Montreal of Capt. J. B. MacKay, managing director of the Anglo-Canadian Picture Plays, Ltd., Montreal and London, from the British Isles, where he had gone to complete arrangements for the sending to Canada of pictures from many British studios, announcement was made at Montreal that the Anglo-Canadian company had arranged to send representatives to India, Australia and South Africa to open negotiations for business features.

Pritchard Back to the States.

R. E. Pritchard, director of publicity for the Allen Theatre Enterprises, Toronto, has resigned to return to New York City, where he was formerly associated with Motion Picture News. He has been succeeded at Toronto by W. H. Worden.

John S. Bowen, formerly with Select at New York, has become the auditor of the Select Pictures Corporations, Ltd., with office at Toronto, where he succeeded G. Mauer, who has returned to New York.

James Davidson, formerly with Regal Films, Ltd., and Specialty Film Import, Ltd., Toronto, has joined the sales staff of the Toronto Select office.

The Exhibitor's Distributing Corporation, Toronto and other cities, has secured the Canadian rights for the Vivian Martin special, "Husbands and Wives." This company has also secured "The Prodigal Wife," a Screencraft production, for Canada.

Vincent McCabe Makes the Round.

Vincent McCabe, of Toronto, Canadian general manager for the Fox Film Corporation, has made a six-weeks' tour of the Canadian West, where the Fox company has established its own exchange branches. The new offices at Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver are already securing a nice share of business. It was the first trip for McCabe over the Canadian territory that has become covered in a direct manner by the Fox corporation.

Picked Up Around Pittsburgh.

John McAleer, formerly of Pittsburgh, where he was manager of the Universal exchange, is back from New York. He will have charge of a branch of the Circle Film Attractions, which handles a number of feature productions.

A. V. Birkholm, representative of the Nicholas Power Co., New York, spent several days recently with Manager France of the Pittsburgh U. T. E.

Mr. Bernstein is the new manager at the Pittsburgh Fox office. He was formerly assistant manager at the Fox Philadelphia branch.

Signs Up "The S. R. O. 12."

W. A. McCartney will open his beautiful new theatre in Oil City in about two weeks, and it is said the debut of the latest addition to Oil City's list of theatres will occur under the most auspicious auspices. Michaelson, of Pittsburgh Universal, had the honor of having Mr. McCartney sign the first contract for pictures for the new theatre—the "S. R. O. 12."

St. Louis Exchange Notes.

Charles M. Winston, exploitation director for Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at St. Louis, has left for New York to assume a position as assistant exploitation manager. Charles Raymond has succeeded Mr. Winston in the St. Louis office of F. P.L.

Charles Desberger, formerly local manager for Realart Pictures, has succeeded Fred. Keller as St. Louis manager of Robertson-Cole Distributing Corporation.

Baltimore Exchange Notes.

"Big Ben" Abrams, a well-known film salesman in this territory, has now become associated with Republic. He has gone South to act as division manager of serials for this company, his territory including Washington, Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas, Texas.

H. M. Williams, Universal salesman, took a trip over the Pennsylvania territory during the week of March 8 and got many names "on the dotted line."

Myer Woolfert, formerly with the Universal, and now with Pathe, has been succeeded at the Baltimore Universal office by Samuel G. Smith, who formerly managed the Liberty Theatre, Salisbury, Md.

During the week of March 8, Simon Feldstein and Myer Woolfert, of Pathe,; L. D. Lyon, of Realart, and George Lyon, of Vitagraph, made a trip over the Eastern Shore of Maryland territory.

Denverite Doing Dry White Way.

David L. Townsend, general sales manager for the Art-O-Graf Film Company, Inc., Denver, accompanied by his wife, is doing Broadway, New York, and, according to letters received by Denver friends, is making many new friends in the movie world. Townsend attended the convention of the independent producers and then went to New York for recreation.

Another Cleveland Exchange.

A new exchange has opened in Cleveland. It is the Essenel Productions De Luxe Co., Inc., and a woman is the president. She is Miss Loraine B. Leibtag. The exchange is located at 607 Belmont Building, and is handling Essanay reissues with Richard Travers, Haylor Holmes, Jack Gardner, Bryant Washburn and Henry B. Walthall.

Louise Glaum's Human Document Story Is Interrupted by the Nameless One

By EDWARD WEITZEL

IN many ways a publicity promoter is an asset to a moving picture star, but he isn't a bit of use to an interviewer when one of these human interrogation points is after simple facts rather than seeking to record the spectacular flight of a soaring, not to say daring, fancy. I found this out when I interviewed Louise Glaum the other day. Her enterprising press agent made the preliminary arrangements and offered to be present when the interview took place. Said I to myself: "All right, young man; but this affair is for the sole purpose of picking up a few little anecdotes about Miss Glaum that may interest the public, and you're not going to ring in a lot of publicity about her latest picture." It took quick work to head him off.

Twenty-four Important Items.

I'm not going to give him the satisfaction of using his name in this article, but the moment the introduction was over and we were seated in Miss Glaum's suite in the Claridge, he started to get in his best professional touches, and directed my attention to a number of photographs on the table.

"Here are some of Miss Glaum's pictures in the costumes she uses in 'Sex.' Isn't this stunning?" he demanded, and held out a photograph of the actress that would make any woman with a leaning toward Paris gowns, stop, look and wish for one like it.

I pretended to give the photograph a careless glance and tossed it back on the pile. Turning to Miss Glaum with my most reassuring smile, I spoke as one who had no interest in such matters:

"Tell me something about yourself that will make a good story," I began.

"Tell him about your twenty-four gowns for the new picture!" put in eagerly the one who shall be nameless. "Here is the latest thing in dancing frocks. Miss Glaum wears this when—"

Circumventing a Space Grabber.

I merely waved the picture aside.

"We may as well come to an understanding at once, young man," said I. "This is to be an interview and not an excuse for grabbing space to advertise the wardrobe of your star. The contents of a press sheet is very important matter when printed in the proper place, but I want short, human documents about Miss Glaum that smacketh not of the publicity stunt."

Once more I turned my back on the nameless one. "Have you a straight picture, Miss Glaum?" I asked.

"Only this one with my dog," replied the impersonator of the "Lone Wolf's Daughter," picking up an "at home" picture of herself sitting on a bench under a tree and holding an alert looking Boston bull in her arms.

"Fine dog * * * where is he now, out in California?"

"Yes. Poor little fellow, he broke his leg and I had to leave him behind."

"Tell Mr. Weitzel about the part he was going to play in 'Sex'," came promptly from the Los Angeles word-juggler, who was turning over the leaves of a scrap-book and giving out signs of a feverish desire to read aloud one or two dozen articles of his own composition touching upon the merits of the Glaum releases.

The Rebellious Rompers.

For the third time I turned to Miss Glaum. "Will you kindly ask this publicity person of yours to leave the room or henceforth hold his peace?" I almost implored.

"A press agent who holds his peace can't hold his job," interjected the irrepressible one, before Miss Glaum could reply to my request. "And it's straight goods about the dog's part in 'Sex,'" he added.

Once more I endeavored to pursue my interview with Miss Glaum:

"If anything of an amusing nature really did take place while you were at work upon the picture, I know that your many admirers would be delighted to learn the particulars," I remarked, in an attempt to imitate the choice speech of your carefully schooled society reporter.

"Several funny things happened," replied Miss Glaum; "but the most amusing little human document I recall was a five-year-old child we used in another picture. The little girl was as bright as a new pin and a born actress, but her mother instinct completely ruined quite a number of feet of film when she came on in one scene, leading a three year old boy. The little fellow was wearing a pair of rompers, and looked so cute and cunning. His sister was supposed to be very proud of him, and she did this so naturally that we were all charmed with her. But when the cameraman started to take the scene, the little tot put in a piece of business that broke all of us up and made a retake necessary. Just as she got well on with her brother she discovered that one side of his rompers had become unfastened and she immediately dropped on her knees and proceeded to make him shipshape. The scene itself was a serious one, and when we grownups couldn't restrain our laughter there was nothing to do but retake the scene."

"Not the first time; but that pair of rompers was cursed with buttonholes that were too large for the buttons, and one side or the other would manage to come unfastened before the scene was completed. The little girl would try her best to take no notice of the expose but modesty always triumphed over art, and down she would go on her knees and repair the damage."

Miss Glaum laughed heartily at the recollection of the incident, and so did I. But the nameless one looked pained.

"Oh, I say, Miss Glaum," he protested with near-tears in his voice, "he can't use that story: It's about an old picture. Please tell Mr. Weitzel about your Boston bull and why he didn't appear in 'Sex.'"

A Sad Home-Coming.

"We were all terribly disappointed," she said. "The poor little fellow knows so many clever tricks that we concluded to use him in the photoplay, and Mr. Sullivan, the scenario writer, wrote in a part for him. The day before we were to start rehearsing his scenes he ran away, a thing he had never done before. He was gone two weeks and when he did return his leg was broken. We couldn't wait for it to mend, and so his part in the picture had to be cut out."

"But that didn't hurt the picture any!" spoke up the faithful dispenser of important information. "And Miss Glaum's two dozen gowns that she wears in 'Sex' are the finest examples of the Paris dress-maker's art ever brought to this country."

Determined to shut off this stream of eloquence by the only possible means, I brought the interview to an abrupt close and bade Miss Glaum good afternoon. As I stated in the opening paragraph, no publicity promoter can put it over on me when I'm after a human interest story. It may be his duty to get the name of his star and her latest picture into print as many times as possible, but he must get along without any help from me.

A special part was written for him in "Sex," but his debut was halted when he broke his leg.

"Gunfighter's Delight."

Another Bernard Durning Picture.

Exhibitors and public were informed this week that Bernard Durning, who made an "overnight hit" in "When Bearcat Went Dry," the motion picture which was distributed by World Film Corporation, and who followed up his success by another winner under the title of "The Gift Supreme," distributed by Republic Distributing Corporation, is shortly to appear in a new feature called "The Sowing of Alderson Cree." In this production it is announced that Pauline Stark will be his leading woman.

Robert Warwick ana Dorothy Gish in Famous Players Pictures for March 14

ROBERT WARWICK in "Jack Straw" and Dorothy Gish in "Mary Ellen Comes to Town" are the Paramount Artcraft feature releases announced for March 14. Both are comedies, the first named being an adaptation of W. Somerset Maughan's stage play.

As adapted by Olga Printzlau, the central figure of "Jack Straw" is an iceman who falls in love with one of his customers, the pretty daughter of a hard working clerk and a mother with social ambitions. There is nothing especially deep or significant in such a story, but through the excellent character delineation of Robert Warwick something most delightful in the realm of screen comedy is said to have been achieved. The production has the added benefit of having been directed by William De Mille, who is now engaged in making special productions for Paramount Artcraft bearing his own name.

As Mr. Warwick's leading woman, Carroll McComas, erstwhile stage favorite, was chosen, this being her first appearance in pictures in several years. The cast also includes J. Monte Dumont, Charles Ogle, Sylvia Ashton, Helene Sullivan, Frances Parks, Lucien Littlefield and Robert Brower.

As in the case of all the preceding pictures which Dorothy Gish has starred in, Elmer Clifton directed "Mary Ellen Comes to Town." Wells Hastings, author of "Turning the Tables," wrote the scenario. The old story of the country maiden hall bedroom, longing for the bright lights, journeys to a New York York hall bedroom with high ambitions and a wicker suitcase, is tempted without falling and then returns, disillusioned, to a little village, is said to be given a brand new and uproarously funny twist—several of them, in fact—by the vivacious somedienne.

Warn of Maryland Censor Rules.

Warning has been sent out by the Washington Exchange Managers' Association to its members to observe carefully the rules of the Maryland board of censorship, which require the Maryland censor's seal to be affixed to all reels going into the state. Failure on the part of the shipping and inspection departments of exchanges to comply with this regulation, it is pointed out, is apt to result in annoyance to exhibitors in Maryland, and, possibly, legal entanglements with the board of censors.

Holding Rentals to Set Sum Is Mistake, Says Exhibitor

EXHIBITORS who hold rentals down to a set sum a week and then make their attractions fit into this amount are making the mistake which prevents really big profits, according to Manager McAtee, of the Elk's Theatre, Mahanoy, Pa. Mr. McAtee is a recent convert to the idea that success lies in booking according to the drawing powers of a production with the cost estimated on a percentage basis.

Until recently Mr. McAtee booked on the proposition of keeping rentals for the month about even with the total for previous months. As far as this permitted him, he booked the better class of pictures, for he made a fair allowance out of the earnings of the theatre for rentals. About two months ago the First National Attraction, "Auction of Souls," was exploited by several theatres in the larger cities near Mahanoy and three or four patrons of the Elk's asked Mr. McAtee if he intended showing it.

He inquired about the rental for a two days' showing and was told it would be $125. He refused to pay this price because it was above his allowance. After a discussion in which the salesman stated that the picture would draw $200 a day even if it was shown in a barn, a proposition was made to show it in Mahanoy, the distributor to get 62½ per cent. of the first $200 and 50 per cent. of everything above $200. Mr. McAtee accepted this proposition because the percentage on an average two days' business would pay the distributor about the price he had been willing to pay in flat rental.

The two days' showing resulted in an income of nearly $400 and the First National exchange got nearly $100 more out of these receipts than the $125 rental asked for the two days. No special exploitation was done, so Mr. McAtee figures that if he had investigated the drawing power of the picture first he would have been $100 better off.

Annual Film Rentals Paid by Showmen in Southeast Total Over $12,000,000

THE tremendous growth of the moving picture industry in the seven southeastern states is clearly indicated by estimates given out at the southeastern district publicity offices of Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., at Charlotte, N. C., which place the annual film rental paid by exhibitors, representing the income of the distributors, at more than $12,000,000.

These estimates are based on the film rental of an average picture, and do not include the rentals paid by the exhibitors to the distributors for the "added attractions," which item would amount to several millions more. Neither is the cost of advertising matter included in the estimates.

In the seven southeastern states there are 982 theatres which exhibit motion pictures. North Carolina has 178, Georgia, 176; Virginia, 153; Florida, 131; South Carolina, 128; Alabama, 109, and Tennessee has 107.

According to the population of the towns, there are 495 theatres in towns of 2,000 population or less, 133 theatres in towns of 2,000 to 4,000, 114 theatres in towns of 4,000 to 10,000, ninety-four theatres in towns from 10,000 to 25,000, sixty-eight theatres in cities from 25,000 to 50,000, thirty-two theatres in cities from 50,000 to 100,000, and forty-six theatres in cities from 100,000 to 165,000.

These estimates indicate that the daily rental charges paid by theatres in the southeast to exchanges is $35,000, or $250,000 a week, for average productions. A compilation of figures including the feature attractions would show a much larger amount than this.

For the presentation of these picture plays many millions of dollars is invested in theatres, varying from the converted store room in the small town to the palatial theatres of the larger cities. Thousands of persons are given employment by these institutions and a tremendous sum is received at the box offices each day in admission charges. While no estimate could possibly be made that would show the exact attendance figures, perhaps 2,000,000 would come pretty close, this including only the motion picture houses in the southeast.

The important film distributing cities of this section are Atlanta, Jacksonville and Charlotte. There are thirty exchanges in Atlanta, fourteen of which do business on an enormous scale, while Charlotte has six and there are several in Jacksonville.

SIMPLE SOULS

RUBBERNECKING IN FILMLAND

Who Will Donate Portrait of His Nibs Ananias for the Studio Publicists?

By GIEBLER

IT has been a quiet week. No scandal—nobody has busted into the limelight with a scheme to revolutionize the industry. The one hundred and eighty-nine companies that are fully organized and willing to start shooting as soon as some one puts up the money are still figuring, but making no new statements.

No collection of eminent directors or eminent anybodies have formed an association of any kind. No one has sprung into the arena with a glad cry and a set of blueprints for a studio big enough to house all the movies under one roof.

No big or startling news of any kind—the absence of which allows some throbbing facts that otherwise might have been crowded out, to be spilled to an expectant, and I hope, a grateful world.

Multum in Parvo.

For instance: Priscilla Dean got burglarized of a lot of her keepsakes and jewels; Lila Lee is wearing one of the new hats from Paris, the kind that have glass flowers on them; Sid Grauman has had his hair cut; Eddy Polo set 'em up to a dinner to Jim Corbett; Bessie Love has been sick; Mae Marsh, who was ill, is much better and able to work again.

Wallie Reid is so tickled over the hit he made in "The Rotters" at our Little Theatre that he's going to step over to the regular stage for a while; Shirley Mason, while on a location trip, stopped off at Santa Ana, our local Gretna Green—and had her only wisdom tooth pulled by the Santa Ana dentist.

Jack Dempsey has gone to Tehachepi for location stuff; the Farnum brothers, Bill and Dusty, are away on a fishing trip; Bob Brunton has bought a new nickel-plated automobile; Frank E. Woods wants it known that he is not conducting a school for scenario writers, as has been reported by Mrs. Rumor.

Book Shower Suggestions.

The Studio Publicists, who held a meeting recently in honor of truth and George Washington, have adopted George as their patron saint because of his reputation for veracity, but we understand that they are still on the fence as to whether they will have a cherry tree couchant and a hatchet rampant on their coat of arms, or a Joshua tree and a pair of scissors, suggested free gratis by the Rubbernecker.

There is talk of a book shower to be given to the publicists very soon by the photoplay and dramatic editors of our fair city. As a guide to what would be most suitable for the occasion, I would suggest the works of Baron Munchausen, Marco Polo, Sir John Mandeville and the writings of Doc Cook in handy reference size.

Vick Is "Work Brittle."

Ted Taylor, the able editor of the Mouth Organ, the official journal of the publicists, is already the proud owner of the complete works of Jo Miller, which he allows the other members to use when the occasion arises, which is often. So that book is not needed. Any one who has contemplated blowing himself for a copy of Jo to take to the shower may take an illuminated portrait of Ananias or Sapphira, to hang on the wall instead.

I went out to the Charles Ray studios this week. A busy place, a regular beehive, running over with carpenters, plumbers and electricians.

Richard Willis, general manager of the new plant, and one of the fastest steppers in the industry when it comes to hustling, was going faster than I've ever seen him go. Dick is "work brittle," as we used to say back in Missouri when describing someone who was troubled with industry. I'd like to see anybody try to tell him that Rome wasn't erected in a day—they'd have a job making him believe it.

A Rapid-Fire Inspection.

Dick took me all over the place, though and showed me the improvements that have been made and the new ones that are going on. I didn't get more than half of it, however; he would point out a new dressing room or a new laboratory, and by the time I had poked the Neck around the corner to get a little inside look, he'd be way over yonder somewhere, explaining about the new battery of eighty studio lamps, or the shower bath system, or the new glass stage that is 70 feet wide and 120 feet long, with a 20 by 20 pool in the center or something like that.

I got enough, however, to convince me that the place is modern and up to date in every respect, and that every facility will be on hand to produce the kind of big stuff that is planned.

$1,000 a Minute.

Charlie's first release, which is now being made, will be George M. Cohan's great success, "Forty-five Minutes from Broadway," and the Charles Ray Corporation paid more than $1,000 for each minute of the forty-five for the privilege of putting it on the screen.

I did not get to see either Charlie or his director, Jerry Storm, since they, like most of the colony, had taken advantage of the fine weather to go traipsing around on location. But I met Albert A. Kidder, Jr., the business manager of the company, and looked at his and Dick Willis' new offices, and met Chester Lyons, the electrical and lighting expert, and Wesley Gilmour, the studio manager, all of whom seem to be well matched with Dick Willis in his love of work attitude.

In Search of Perfect Peace.

Personally, I do not understand how anybody can have such low tastes, but if work makes people happy, far be it from me to do anything but pat them on the back and say "Go to it, boys!"

After leaving the work-agitated atmosphere of the Ray studios, I went out to Lasky's and hunted up Art Reeves of the publicity department.

"Art," I said, "is anybody out here making any of them slow pictures, where the people just kinda creep along, or is somebody maybe shooting a close-up of the hero looking long and lingeringly in the eyes of the heroine? I want to look at something restful."

"No," said Art, "but I can show you a scene that is very interesting, and it will be restful because it is dead—there are no actors in it."

Hit the Bulls-Eye of Memory.

Art used to be the star sport writer on one of our leading journals before he went into the movies, and knows all about newspaper offices; and I knew what he meant by saying the scene was interesting the moment we reached it.

The set was made to represent the city room of a daily paper and it was perfect.

"A Dark Woman Is Going to Cross—" Well, You Know What All the Palmists Say.

Bebe Daniels looking into the future for Wallace Reid and "Fatty" Arbuckle, all Paramount players.

"What do you think of it?" asked Art, after I had looked it over.

"They've done it at last," I said.

The set was the realest thing I ever saw. There was the curved desk of the city editor; the clothes horse file for copies of "our leading contemporaries"; the tall brass cuspidor that is regarded as more of an ornament than a receptacle in the average "City" room; the copy table, the mustard jar paste pots, the green eye-shade of some poor devil of a rewrite man who had stepped over to Mike's Place for a little something to make the night seem less long and the stuff that came to his hand seem less stale.

"As Sweet as Violets."

The set is being used for a Wallace Reid film called "What's Your Hurry?" a Byron Morgan automobile story. Sam Wood, who is directing the play, had just finished with the action and taken his players elsewhere.

There were no actors in the set until Art Reeves and I got there, and then I'm afraid we both acted up a little. It was like a couple of old fire horses smelling smoke.

We stirred up the paste pots—the stuff was sour, but was sweet as violets to us. I put the eye-shade on and read some proof, and Art sat down at the city editor's desk and looked tired, like all city editors look.

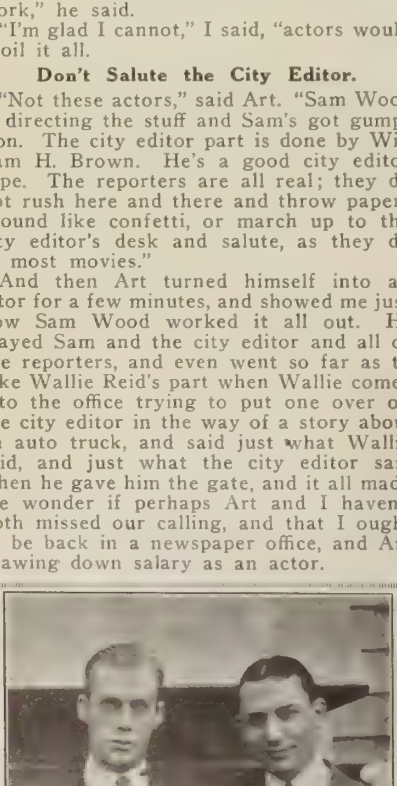
"I'm sorry you couldn't see the actors at work," he said.

"I'm glad I cannot," I said, "actors would spoil it all.

Don't Salute the City Editor.

"Not these actors," said Art. "Sam Wood is directing the stuff and Sam's got gumption. The city editor part is done by William H. Brown. He's a good city editor type. The reporters are all real; they do not rush here and there and throw papers around like confetti, or march up to the city editor's desk and salute, as they do in most movies."

And then Art turned himself into an actor for a few minutes, and showed me just how Sam Wood worked it all out. He played Sam and the city editor and all of the reporters, and even went so far as to take Wallie Reid's part when Wallie comes into the office trying to put one over on the city editor in the way of a story about an auto truck, and said just what Wallie said, and just what the city editor said when he gave him the gate, and it all made me wonder if perhaps Art and I haven't both missed our calling, and that I ought to be back in a newspaper office, and Art drawing down salary as an actor.



Suppose the Gong Rang?

Al St. John, Warner Brothers' star for Paramount comedies, and Benny Leonard swap lies on old times.

Progress of Kenneth McGaffey Marked by Much News Concerning Mary Pickford

ON March 12 Kenneth McGaffey, personal representative of "Our Mary" Pickford, arrived in New York. His progress from the coast had been duly noted by correspondence of Moving Picture World in Denver, Pittsburgh, Baltimore and other "high spots" between here and there.

Mr. McGaffey made stops among other cities in Salt Lake, Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, Fort Worth, Dallas, Houston, New Orleans, Atlanta, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Washington and Baltimore. In all of the places visited the Pickford representative declares he found exhibiting conditions of the best. In Texas he found the houses opening at 10 o'clock in the forenoon and continuing until midnight. New theatres are going up "all over." As to conditions in Los Angeles, Mr. McGaffey said the last winter had been a busy one for everybody. With a straight face he insisted there was not to be secured in any of the stores of the Studio City such an article of directorial equipment as a pair of puttees or a megaphone.

It is Mr. McGaffey's first visit East in five years. He admits he is a confirmed Californian. In fact, four days after his arrival he was anxious to be starting on the return journey, which will be by way of the northern route. Boston will be the first stop on leaving New York.

The records show Mr. McGaffey "missed no bets" as he Pullmaned across the continent, and it is safe wagering local newspapers have printed evidences of his activities in the cities he has visited. He is in New York incidentally to book passage for Miss Pickford, who goes to Europe, probably in June, to produce three pictures. Generally his mission is to meet exhibitors and learn first hand what they desire most in the way of Pickford productions.

Denver Hails Its "Native Son."

Denver Correspondence.—Kenneth McGaffey, business manager for Mary Pickford, was a visitor in Denver, while en route from Hollywood to New York City. "Mac," as he is familiarly known in Denver, where he worked on local newspapers for a number of years, was surprised with the advance the industry is making in Denver. "Mac" declared that he remembered when all the exchange offices used to be second-floor establishments and was surprised to see the long line of up-to-date offices on Welton street.

Pittsburgh Notes Bird of Passage.

Pittsburgh Correspondence.—Kenneth McGaffey, personal representative for Mary Pickford, spent a day in Pittsburgh recently, with Manager Moore, of the United Artists branch in Pittsburgh.

Baltimore Interviews the Gentleman.

Baltimore Correspondence.—On his way from Los Angeles, Cal., to New York City, to arrange and book passage on one of the ocean liners for Mary Pickford's forthcoming trip to Europe, Kenneth McGaffey, Miss Pickford's personal representative, stopped over in Baltimore March 11. Mr. McGaffey was interviewed by the Moving Picture World representative at the Emerson, where he was stopping, after having been introduced by Bernard Depkin, Jr., manager of the New Wizard and five other houses in Baltimore.

Problem: Is an Ocean Wet or Dry?

"Due to the fact that many people are preparing to visit Europe this year it is hard to obtain accommodations for the trip," said Mr. McGaffey.

"Does Miss Pickford care to travel on boats with or without bars?" asked our correspondent.

"That doesn't enter into the problem at all," smiled Mr. McGaffey, "for Miss Pickford simply wants comfortable surroundings."

Discusses "Percentage" of Fans.

Mr. McGaffey went on to state that according to the latest statistics, the number of people who see moving pictures each week equals 25 per cent. of the population of the country.

"The number that attended the moving pictures before the war was 15 per cent. each week, during the war it increased to 18 per cent. and now it is 25 per cent. And the number of people who have attended each month equals the entire population of the country."

Three pictures will be produced by Miss Pickford while she is in Europe, according to Mr. McGaffey—two in England and one in France. Then he and the rest of her friends hope she will give herself a rest and take a six months' vacation.

Auburn Theatre Drops Prices to Ten Cents for Experiment

THE high cost of exhibiting motion pictures has effected a decided change in prices at the Morgan Theatre, Auburn, N. Y., and strange to say this change is not upward, but downward. The Morgan is a large house, and as the increasing cost of film has warranted an upward trend in admission prices, there has been an increasing number of vacant seats. Competition is by no means lacking in Auburn. Manager McAvoy doped it out that he had either to buy cheaper films or increase his receipts.

To cut the quality of his show always hurts a good showman, so he decided to make an effort to get more money first. It seems that the prices charged were over the heads of Auburn people, who apparently preferred the cheaper houses with possibly not such good pictures. Mr. McAvoy finally decided to make a sweeping cut in his prices, reducing every seat in the house to 10 cents, plus war tax, and to make an effort to keep these seats filled all the time.

He put his plan before the public through the press and from the stage and screen. He announced that he was now paying $236 for Mary Miles Minter first run Realart pictures, whereas he formerly got the same star in American pictures for $50. His clientele likes the star, so he felt compelled to book her. He put it to the theatre-goers directly that he can and will book such expensive first runs at a fair profit on a 10-cent admission, if attendance keeps at a high mark. During the past few weeks the experiment has proved entirely satisfactory.

Leopold Sutto in New York.

Leopold Sutto, special representative of the Gevaert Company, Antwerp, Belgium, arrived in New York on March 14 on the steamship La France. M. Sutto was accompanied by the Gevaert Company expert, M. Van den Broeck. The Gevaert Company is one of the leading European manufacturers of raw stock, having been in business for twenty-five years. The company, which supplies all of the European countries, is known for its solidity and conservatism. It makes a specialty of colored stock. M. Sutto, who is stopping at the Hotel Astor and whose Paris address is 9, Place de la Bourse, expects to be in New York several weeks.

To Handle "Children Not Wanted.

An announcement deemed of special moment to exhibitors was made this week in connection with the feature, "Children Not Wanted," starring Edith Day, which has been advertised in the trade press. It is to the effect that Republic Distributing Corporation, of which Lewis J. Selznick is advisory director, will distribute the production.

"Children Not Wanted," which is described as a feature built first as a box office attraction and later to please the public, was secured by Republic from Crest Pictures Corporation, of which Carle Carlton is general manager. The story was written by Stuart Sinclair especially for Edith Day.

Republic Branch Heads to Be Present at Selznick Meet

MANAGERS of the Republic branch offices are to be included in the second annual convention of the Selznick managers which will be held at the Astor Hotel beginning April 5, according to an announcement made by Briton N. Busch, president of the Republic Corporation.

This decision was reached after a conference held by Lewis J. Selznick, Mr. Morris and Briton Busch. In view of the fact that the topics of discussion at the convention will deal largely with the expansion of the Selznick interests it was deemed especially advisable to bring together the representatives of the Republic organization with those representing the Select interests.

Republic branch managers are expected to arrive in New York on April 4, the day before the opening of the convention and have been instructed to arrange their business so as to make this possible.

Dorothy Dalton Begins on New Play.

After a vacation of two weeks Dorothy Dalton has commenced work again at the Fifty-sixth street studio, New York, of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. She is still occupied with the stage production of "Aphrodite," which keeps her busy nights and matinee days. The title of the picture is "This Woman—This Man," by Avery Hopwood, one of the best known of American plays. "This Woman—This Man" was produced in 1908 with Carlotta Nillson in the leading role. It is one of the first plays written by Avery Hopwood, author of "The Gold Diggers," which is making such a big success in New York this season. Harley Knoles will direct.

Dempsey Serial Going Strong.

"Doubling up on Dempsey" is the order of the day says the serial sales department of Pathe in an announcement which states that precedent was never so completely ignored by any serial offered by that company previous to "Daredevil Jack."

Reports indicating that the demand for the "Daredevil Jack" serial could be met only by holding the episode over for a longer run than originally intended are not rare. The Lyric Theatre, Tiffin, O., played the first episode on March 1. The management conducted a newspaper advertising campaign of the showing and anticipated a big crowd, but apparently realization was rather greater than anticipation, for early the next morning the exchange received a wire requesting that the booking be extended.

Optimism, Not Pessimism, Should Rule in Discussions of Foreign Conditions

ARTHUR ZIEHM

Manager of Goldwyn's Foreign Department

IT appears to me that recently there has been a tendency to paint the foreign market, as it concerns American producers, in unnecessarily dark colors. A number of film men, whose word carries weight in the trade, have subscribed to views that are likely to have a depressing effect on our producers and exporters, whereas a careful consideration of the situation should lead to more optimistic conclusions.

Take the matter of unstable foreign exchange, as it is one of the causes most frequently advanced for the fear of a long period of difficult financial relations with European countries. Granting that foreign exchange has been and still is in a chaotic state, there is no reason to suppose that the condition will be a factor for any considerable period.

Are American Producers Timid?

As near as I can figure, well informed business men in other lines quite as dependent upon European trade as the motion picture producers and distributors, believe that there is nothing at all extraordinary about the money markets of the European countries in the first stages of recovery from the demoralizing effects of a devastating war. Even at the present time the exchange in all foreign countries is showing unmistakable signs of improvement, and it can be only a question of time before it returns to a healthy state. Why magnify a temporary situation into a permanent menace?

Then there is the question of American pictures competing with those of European make in their home territory. Well, what of it? Have American producers suddenly become so timid that they fear competition instead of welcoming it as a spur to renewed effort?

Competition Steadily Increases.

Of course there will be competition. Italy and Germany even now are making high-class films, and as the industries regain their balance we may look for more and better pictures than ever came from the European studios, even in their palmiest days before the war. Most assuredly, however, this does not mean that there will be no room for films of American make, providing they are good.

It does mean, though, that our producers will be obliged to abandon their dream of continuing what has come close to a monopoly of the foreign market. Rather too frequently for the good of the trade, foreign buyers, forced to purchase American products, were treated with a "take it or leave it" attitude, and if they are a trifle resentful it is not surprising.

Need Very High-Class Salesman.

The customary way to meet competition, and the way characteristic of American industry, is to beat the other fellow at his own game. Instead of counting upon our goods to sell themselves because there are no others to buy, we will be obliged to send high-class salesmen into the field, men who are really familiar with the countries they are covering. They must speak the language and know the customs, tastes and business methods of the people with whom they are dealing. Salesmen of this stamp will overcome whatever prejudices have arisen against American producers.

Then, of course, the quality of American films must be maintained at a high level and permitted to grow with the times. Instead of merely watching each other, the men who set the standards in film production will have to recognize that they are in competition with the guiding geniuses of the great European studios, who will not be content with merely following our lead in devising artistic improvements.

But, after all, is not a situation such as this entirely healthy and inspiring, rather than a cause for gloom? Speaking as a representative of the Goldwyn corporation, I may say that our own relations with foreign countries are on a basis of friendly understanding that causes no fears for the future. Any company that cannot face competition is not likely to live long under any circumstances.

Mooney Plans European Trip; to Investigate Conditions

PAUL C. MOONEY, general sales manager of the Anita Stewart, Mildred Harris Chaplin and Louis B. Mayer Productions, will start for Europe shortly in the interest of these companies and others who have not been divulged. He plans on remaining abroad for at least three months, during which time he will visit England, France, Italy, the Central Powers and the Scandinavian countries.

The primary object of Mr. Mooney is to open foreign markets for the Anita Stewart productions, Mildred Harris Chaplin productions and other productions he is to handle. He will also pave the way for the big exploitation campaign which has been planned in connection with "In Old Kentucky" in England and on the Continent.

"The unsettled condition of the foreign market at the present time makes it almost imperative to secure first-hand information regarding conditions as they really are over there," said Mr. Mooney. "Every one returning from abroad brings a different story of these conditions, but all seem to agree that American producers must act promptly and energetically if these conditions are to be changed materially for the better."

New York to See "Virgin of Stamboul."

The new Universal-Jewel production, "The Virgin of Stamboul," starring Priscilla Dean, will have its initial public showing at the B. S. Moss Broadway Theatre, New York City, Sunday night, March 21. The picture is booked in that theatre for an indefinite run. Advance exploitation stunts of unusual magnitude and success already have made the picture known to metropolitan film fans.

The presentation of the picture will be accompanied by an elaborate stage and musical setting, as well as by additional schemes by which the interior of the theatre will acquire an Oriental atmosphere.

Florence E. Turner in Radin Pictures.

Florence E. Turner, popularly referred to as "The Vitagraph Girl," will be seen in a one-reel comedy entitled "Stenographers First," to be sold to state right buyers by Radin Pictures. Miss Turner, in point of service, is one of the oldest favorites in pictures today.

Committee Opens New York Office.

The Americanization Committee of the Motion Picture Industry, of which Francis K. Lane, formerly Secretary of the Interior, is chairman, has opened New York headquarters in Room No. 1, 1520 Broadway. William A. Ryan, who has been associated with Secretary Lane for a long time, has been appointed executive secretary of the committee and will be in charge of the New York headquarters. The activities of the committee has necessitated the opening of the New York office.

Heavy Advance Bookings on "Bringing Up Father"

BACKED by a newspaper campaign of national scope and by the long standpopularity of the "Bringing Up Father" comic strip which appears in more than 400 newspapers in the United States, the new International comedies based on the comic of McManus are destined for immediate success, according to early reports to the Pathe Exchange. Many important bookings have been recorded for the first comedy which will be released on April 4.

"Jiggs in Society" is the title of the first comedy to be released, and it is a fast moving story of the adventures of the long suffering Jiggs at the hands of his wife, Maggie, and her friends in high society. The comedies are being made at the Christie Studios under the personal supervision of Al. Christie.

A live story created from several of the cartoons of McManus is the basis of the first comedy, and in it Johnny Ray, in the character role, and Margaret Fitzroy as Maggie have an excellent opportunity to show what the nature of their work in future offerings will be.

Exploitation and advertising will back the comedies to the limit, for the efficient organization of International co-operating with the newspapers running the comic are in a special campaign to popularize the screen appearance of Jiggs.

Capitol Theatre Signs Up Booth Tarkington Comedies

CLOSELY following the enthusiastic reception given the first of Booth Tarkington's "Edgar" comedies which had its initial showing in Los Angeles, comes the announcement that Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has booked the series to the Capitol Theatre, New York. "Edgar and Teacher's Pet," as the opening episode is called, is scheduled for the week of March 21, when it will be made an important part of the bill.

That the "Edgar" Comedies should be selected for a place of featured prominence on the Capitol program is a convincing testimonial to the quality of the screen stories being written by America's foremost interperter of boy life and directed by E. Mason Hopper at the Culver City studios.

The second and third episodes have been completed and will be ready for distribution soon, but it is not announced at what intervals they will be shown at the Capitol. It is certain, however, that not many weeks will elapse between the presentation of the instalments.

Mayer Adds to Scenario Staff.

Ethel Gillette, one of the best known writers of scenarios and continuity for the screen, has been added to the staff of the Louis B. Mayer forces in Los Angeles and is now engaged in writing continuity for Anita Stewart and Mildred Harris Chaplin.

Miss Gillette is the daughter of former Governor James N. Gillette, of California, and is a graduate of the Leland Stanford Junior University.

Picture Showmen Pay Association Dues by Using Advertising Slides on Screen

KANSAS has about 100 members in the state association, all of their dues being paid on the dot. The association expects to increase the membership to include the number of exhibitors in the state in the next year or so. And all their dues will be paid on the dot, too!

Fifty-two dollars a year, each. No collection letters sent out by the secretary, no receipts. The treasurer always has the money on the first of the month.

The members pay their dues by running a slide at every performance, advertising a Kansas City breakfast food. The breakfast food manufacturer pays the association the dues of each member monthly. That's the answer. And it works like a charm. Fifty-two dollars a year is a dollar a week—a small price, for most exhibitors, for running an advertising slide. But the price is not unreasonably low, after all. For the exhibitor is saved numerous small expenses that possibly would total the difference this dollar and is usually three or four or seven dollars.

For instance, he doesn't have to do any bookkeeping on these slides.

For instance, he doesn't have to do any bookkeeping on these slides; no collection from advertiser. The details of handling the slides are wonderfully simplified—every two or three weeks a new slide comes in, with it a postage stamp which he affixes to the mailing box, putting the slide just run into this box, and sending it to the post office. That's all.

And that process not only gives him the dollar a week credit, but also acts to pay his dues, too. For the advertiser takes care of the detail of paying the dues. It sends a list each month of the members who have used and properly returned the advertising slides, the list corresponding to the amount of money transmitted.

There are some theatres in Kansas which have never run advertising slides. These are running the "membership dues slides," however, and here's the reason for that:

The slides are not filled completely with advertising of the breakfast food. One-third of every slide exploits the Kansas State Association of Exhibitors, and only two-thirds mention the breakfast food. Thus, the exhibitors get slides at no cost to themselves or the association, fresh slides every two or three weeks, which promote the interests of the state association.

"We wouldn't run the slides, nor make such an arrangement, if the slides bore nothing but advertising," said a mebmer.

It is hinted that perhaps a better contract than $52 a year per picture house running the slides, can be made with an advertiser for next year. A mighty fine contract it would be for the advertiser, at a pretty long price—automatically getting his slides into the theatres of all members of the state association, with a minimum of bookkeeping, and a maximum of good will!

It is also suggested that similar contracts might be made with advertisers in widely different lines, to produce revenue for the association, or as a means whereby the association might produce direct revenue with little trouble for the members.

Business in South Now Normal.

The influenza epidemic which swept the South recently and played havoc with some exhibitors has subsided to a marked degree and business is rapidly assuming normal conditions, according to reports from the Selznick southern branch offices.

Many of the theatres in the Carolinas and in Georgia which were closed have again opened. Towards the close of the epidemic it became apparent that theatregoing had little or nothing to do with the spreading of the disease. In fact, very few of the Atlanta houses were closed because health authorities did not favor closing.

Word has been received that the Owen Moore production, "Sooner or Later," has made a decided hit in Birmingham. This is the report of the manager of the Alcazar Theatre there.

Use Care in Booming "Sacred Flame"

This Schomer-Ross Production Must Be Treated With Care to Most Fully Realize on a Story Which Differs from Average Plays

By EPES W. SARGENT.

EXHIBITORS who offer the Schomer-Ross production of "The Sacred Flame" along conventional lines will not realize the full value on their investment. It is a "different" production and must be advertised as such, not only to warn those who might be disappointed if they come expecting to see the average melodramatic story, but more to get the attention of the larger class of playgoers who seldom attend the picture shows, but who will be interested in a story by Abraham Schomer.

This is the big point you want to remember in planning your advertising. Both your regulars and those who seldom come will be interested in a picture by Schomer whose "Today" was a sensational success on the stage and almost equally strong on the screen. Tell that this is another study of New York life, different from, but as powerful as "Today." Tell that it reflects a condition not unusual, particularly in Jewish life, the education of man at the expense of a woman who becomes interested in him. But be careful not to convey any suggestion that this interest is of an improper sort.

Emphasize the Human Side.

Tell that today there are hundreds of young men who are fitting themselves, through college courses, for better careers at the expense of some woman; generally their fiancee. Tell that this is the story of a school teacher who becomes interested in the career of a man who cannot push himself to the front and who gets behind him and advances him to a position as corporation lawyer. Then tell that he meets a society vamp whose money attracts him —and leave the rest to curiosity.

Tell clearly what the story is. Tell that it is not a cheap melodrama, but a study of the real life of men and women who walk the streets of every city and town. Tell that Mr. Schomer has given realism to the theme idealized by Griffith in "True Heart Susie." If you used that Griffith production, get your patrons interested in the difference in treatment. The theme is the same but the technique is utterly unlike. Don't let them get the idea it is the same thing, but emphasize that it is something very different in all but the central idea. Get them interested in a comparison of methods.

Start in with the teaser cuts reproduced on this page and which will be found in the press book. In the press book you will find the suggestion that the name of the house appears above each section of the cut. Ignore this. Run the cuts without the house name the first day, stipulating that the three shall appear upon different pages, or if time permits start with cut number four (the last third) the first day, run two (the first third) and four the second, the three on the third day and the three assembled and with the house name, on the fourth. Make this the break of your full advertising and go on with some of the other advertisements suggested in the four pages devoted to the ready-made displays. And remember that if you have not time to send for a mat or cut, you can take the clip copy to the printer and at least give him an idea of a display type advertisement which will be better than his own thoughts on the matter. These advertisements are so well prepared you cannot do better than to follow them.

But back your displays with press work, for this is a story you can sell best through appeal to the intelligence. The title will win the non-readers, but you have such ample material for appeal to the more intelligent that you will lose out if you do not get your appeal over. If you do not advertise and so cannot command the use of the reading columns, put your presswork on throwaways. Work the "meanest man" angle, with or without a stunt. For a stunt offer a short season pass to the first man who will confess that he is the meanest man and who will consent to be introduced to your patrons as such. Make this introduction a few days before the first showing, and make it the basis of a brief talk on the play. You might use this same angle for a newspaper contest.

Where the local laws prohibit teachers from marrying, you can play this angle strong, pointing out that if the heroine had not been forced to hold back her whole career might have been changed. You might put it to a vote of the audience to decide whether or not she was unfortunate in not being able to marry Lionel, offering a prize for the best argument in support of the decision or a prize each for a decision for and against. In this case tell the story well in advance and let the discussion that will ensue help to advertise the play.

Here's a Lobby Idea.

If you are ingenious work a lobby stunt. Build a hollow pedestal with a top higher than the heads of your patrons. Inside place lights to illuminate ragged strips of salmon colored chiffon, tacked around the opening, to suggest flame. Use an electric fan to give motion to the flames, but cut in a flashing device to alternately throw on and off the current, so that the flames rise and sink. Then letter a card to the effect that "The Sacred Flame Never Dies," which will give the keynote to your story. Put the lamps inside of the pedestal, with reflectors and use four or five red lights, two yellow and one blue. You can get a really striking effect as the flames rise and fall.

The plan book letter stunt, for which you can get an electro, is a good one if worked right. Use a good quality of letter paper and print as nearly as possible in imitation of handwriting. Violet paper and purple ink will be better than white and black. Perhaps your printer can help you to pick up a job lot from the supply house or your local stationer may have some dead stock he may be willing to sell cheap.

Don't Be Undignified.

Avoid the flashy, sensational stunts as not in keeping with the play. Flash will keep from your house the class of patrons whose business will mean most to you at the time and later on. Make your appeal prominent, but not cheap. You want chiefly to reach the men and women who think, and you cannot attract these with chalked sidewalks and similar stunts.

Your chief selling points are the distinction of the author, the dignified and vital angles of the play, and Emily Stevens. Keep this always in mind. The human interest side will reach the unthinking, and they will be pleased, but you want chiefly to direct your appeal to the better class among your patrons and possible patrons. To do this you must keep in character and not disgust them with ballyhoo stuff. You have plenty of chances for this with other productions. Make this work the right way. Make it add to the reputation of your house.

Get after them with such lines as "A story of the moment by the author of 'Today,'" or "A story of the conditions we find on every hand." Bear down hard upon the fact that the story is out of the usual run; that it is written by a man who dissects life as the surgeon gains facts from the human cadaver.

Use Lobby Pictures.

Use a profusion of lobby pictures both in the lobby and in windows. Use heralds generously, being careful to see that they get into the right hands. Use a mailing list even if you do not usually employ such a medium, and add to your steady patrons any church or school list you can obtain. Give a special after-school performance for teachers and print their opinions even if you can do no better than to letter them on a lobby sheet.

Get the exchange to copy for you some of the best subtitles for use on lobby cards and in your advertising. Show the sheet to the school principals and ministers. These titles will help to convince them that this is a story out of the ordinary. Then tell them that the production is simple and direct, with a close adherence to real life and living conditions. Get these people in a receptive frame of mind and they will pass the word along where it will do you the most good.

Brown Leaves Clark-Cornelius to Go with David P. Howells

COLVIN W. BROWN has resigned his position as assistant treasurer of the Clark-Cornelius Corporation, and on Monday, March 22, will become associated with David P. Howells, Inc. Mr. Brown entered the motion picture business as manager of the Chicago office of Exhibitors' Trade Review, and later became assistant manager of advertising for the Mutual Film Corporation. He succeeded Terry Ramsaye as chief of the advertising department when the latter resigned to organize Kinograms.

Mr. Brown continued in charge of all Mutual advertising and publicity during the time that concern functioned under its merged title of Exhibitors' Mutual Film Corporation. When the heads of the Clark-Cornelius Corporation withdrew from Exhibitors' Mutual and organized their present company Mr. Brown was made assistant manager.

Quimby's Presence Required in New York; Cuts Stay on Coast

F. C. QUIMBY, general manager of Associated Exhibitors, Inc., has cut short his stay in Los Angeles and now is on his way to New York. Mr. Quimby was here for only a few days. He stated that he had intended to remain for some few weeks, but that his presence was required in New York at once in connection with the contemplated consummation of several arrangements of vital importance to Associated Exhibitors, Inc., and of deep interest to the industry at large.

During his stay here Mr. Quimby explained to many prominent picture folks the plans and purposes of Associated Exhibitors, Inc. It is said that several of the biggest stars and producers have evidenced a much deeper than passing interest in the organization represented by Mr. Quimby, and that news of the affiliation of several of these with the association may be forthcoming soon.

Pathe's February Business Established New Sales Record, Says E. R. Pearson

THAT February, the shortest month of the year, has established a new high record for the business of Pathe Exchange is taken as an emphatic indication that the policy of "selling the salesman" is the strong productive principle of scientific business getting. Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager, points to February as the promise of what may be expected during the rest of the year with a perfectly functioned system of sales and the strong personal element of achievement fostered by Elmer R. Pearson, director of exchanges. Mr. Pearson points out that though February consisted of only twenty-two banking days, yet the total cash business exceeded any previous month, with the exception of November and January, and it "rubbed" those two months' records very close.

"Seven or eight of our branches had the biggest month's business in February, exceeding their highest previous month by goodly margins," says Mr. Pearson. "Quite a number of theatres throughout the United States were closed during February on account of the "flu." Our reports indicate that very few theatres now remain closed on that account.

Feature and Serial Business Increase.

"The feature business continued to increase in the most gratifying manner. 'Other Men's Shoes,' released on February, is establishing a wonderful record, bookings thereon to date exceeding any previous Pathe feature release by over 100 per cent.

"Serials also are showing splendid business increases, particularly 'Daredevil Jack,' which has a volume of bookings to date far exceeding any previous serial. And most gratifying of all is the fact that not one single disappointment has been called to our attention, whereas we have been in receipt of hundreds of telegrams and letters from all over the United States which are one in the statement that box office receipts on this serial are far above that of any previous serial. In a great number of cases box office records are being established in excess of similar engagements on any kind of film.

"The Harold Lloyd two-reel comedies are still giving great satisfaction at the box office and continue to secure many new contracts each week.

March Is "Brunet Month."

"March is one of the best months in the business and for Pathe it is likewise 'Brunet Month.' This year we are offering over $6,000 in prizes to our managers and sales men of the four winning branches, and all indicating to date point to a month's business that will exceed any previous record by anywhere from 30 per cent. to 50 per cent. We therefore have every proof that exhibitors are not unmindful of the tremendous efforts we are making to release nothing but the very best film of its kind that money and genius can produce.

"It is also our opinion that our customers appreciate our attitude of co-operation —our open booking policy—and are refraining entirely from competing with them in their province. It distinctly is our opinon that the producer has his sphere, the distributor another and the exhibitor yet another, and that the best interest of all are conserved by each sticking to his own knitting. And, by all means, if our industry is to develop properly, and increased box office receipts be maintained, the exhibitor should remain independent and competitive. All our efforts will be concentrated on making the exhibitor's independent position stronger."

"Pity the Poor" Gets Under Way.

Work on the producing of the screen version of the editorials of Herbert Kaufman is progressing smoothly according to Myron Selznick. The latest "Kaufman Weekly" to be started is "Pity the Poor," and Wray Physioc is handling the directorial megaphone on this one. No expense is being spared in producing these pictures, Mr. Selznick states.

Robert Louis Stevenson's Stepson Tells Origin of "Treasure Island"

AS a guest of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation at a private showing of Maurice Tourneur's production, "Treasure Island," which will be released on April 4, as a Paramount Artcraft Super-Special, Lloyd Osbourne, stepson of Robert Louis Stevenson, lingered long in the projection room after the final scene had faded from the screen and he told many reminiscences of the great author as he knew him.

"The picture has preserved completely the spirit in which Stevenson wrote 'Treasure Island,'" Mr. Osbourne said. "Mr. Tourneur has done a splendid piece of work. The battle between the pirates and Dr. Livesey and his supporters gave me as great a thrill as it did when my step-father first read me the story from his manuscript. I confess I came with fear and trepidation for I had heard that a girl was to play Jim Hawkins, but Miss Shirley Mason gives a performance which I do not believe could be excelled."

He Claimed 750 Readers.

Asked how "Treasure Island" came to be written, Mr. Osbourne said:

"Years ago when I was a little boy of 12, I was spending my holidays in Scotland with my mother and my step-father. He was an unknown and unsuccessful author named Robert Louis Stevenson, who wrote books that never passed beyond one small edition, and whose gay acquiescence in failure cost me many a childish pang. I knew his books were very poor, for being a great reader I had toiled through every one of them.

"Indeed, they were so uninteresting that I even wondered he had as many as the 750 readers he claimed. Feeling that he ought to do better, I often timidly remonstrated with him, pointing out that, while he wrote beautifully, his fault seemed to be in the choice of subjects. But his only answer was to burst out laughing and then to tell me with humorous impressiveness that there was certainly one thing he would never be—and that was a popular author.

How the Idea Originated.

"The thing that puzzled me was that he was as fond as I of Mayne Reid, Fenimore Cooper, Jules Verne and Marryat; it was not as though he didn't appreciate good books; and certainly none of the 750 readers of 'An Inland Voyage' could possibly have recognized in him the Indian, or frontiersman, or explorer, or naval officer (with accompanying midshipman) landing with secret despatches on a hostile coast which served to give such delight to our walks together and always brought me home in such a glow of romance. That idolized step-father of mine was the most inspiring playfellow in the world, which made it seem all the sadder that he was unable to write a book worth reading.

"We lived in a small house that was known the neighborhood by the somewhat depressing name of 'the late Miss McGregor's cottage'; and here one rainy morning it, and, with his affectionate interest to be tinting the map of an island I had drawn. Stevenson came in as I was finishing it, and, with his affectionate interest in everything I was doing, leaned over my shoulder and was soon elaborating the map and naming it.

"Oh, for a Story About It."

"I shall never forget the thrill of Skeleton Island, Spy Glass Hill, nor the heart stirring climax of the three red crosses! And the greatest climax still when he wrote down the words 'Treasure Island' at the top right-hand corner. And he seemed to know so much about it, too—the pirates, the buried treasure and the man who had been marooned on the island. 'Oh, for a story about it,' I exclaimed in a heaven of enchantment, and somehow conscious of his own enthusiasm in the idea.

"Then after writing in more names he put the map in his pocket, and I can recall the little feeling of disappointment I had at losing it. After all, it was my map and had already become very precious owing to its association with pirates, and having been found in an old sea-chest that had been lost and forgotten for years and years.

Read First Chapter in Bed.

"But my step-father took it away, and the next day at noon I was called up mysteriously to his bedroom (he always spent the mornings writing in bed), and the first thing I saw my beloved map lying on the coverlet. Still wondering why I had been summoned so specially, and not a little proud and expectant, I was told to sit down while my step-father took up some sheets of manuscript and began to read aloud the first chapter of 'Treasure Island.'

"Thus one of the greatest, the most universal of all romances came to be written, and that I should have had a share in its inception has always been to me a source of inexpressible pleasure. Of course, in any case Stevenson was destined to become famous; sooner or later his genius was certain to receive worldwide recognition; yet had it not been for me, and my trumpery box of paints, and possibly my insistence on his writing something 'interesting,' there would have been no such book as 'Treasure Island.'"

"Thirtieth Piece of Silver" Ready for Distribution Soon

A NEW American photonovel, "The Thirtieth Piece of Silver," is in the final stages of production. A triumph of art work on the titles adds the last touch of perfection to a special which gives the producers a great sense of satisfaction in anticipating its future.

The plot in itself is unusual, a product of the study and genius of a well-known author, Albert Payson Terhune. The thirtieth piece of silver, which is the base of the story, is the only existant coin of those infamous talents for which the Master was betrayed by Judas, and which he afterward remorsefully turned back to the high priests. This historical relic, locked away in his cabinet by the young man who had a penchant for such curios, with the pre-emptory order of a Bluebeard to his bride forbidding her to touch it, brings much troube into an otherwise idea home. Around this incident is built an unique and captivating plot. The action is quick and convincing. The heroine is carried unscathed through compromising predicaments which hold the spectators under tense excitement. Resort to a crystal gazer brings mystery and humor to the fore in generous proportions.

A strong cast which includes Margarita Fisher, King Baggot, Lillian Leighton and Forrest Stanley, directed by George L. Cox, have made a superb picture from Mr. Terhune's novel. The American announces that it will be ready for distribution in a few weeks.

William Dunn Again a Villain.

William R. Dunn, who played the villainous cousin in "Respectable by Proxy," also is cast as the emotional heavy role in "The Blood Barrier," J. Stuart Blackton's coming Pathe release. "The Blood Barrier" was the last screen story written by Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady before his death.

Effect of Export Situation on Trade Is Now Being "Grossly Exaggerated"

By GUS SCHLESINGER
Manager of the Department of Foreign Film Sales, Inter-Ocean Film Corporation

OF the many important and perplexing problems with which the motion picture industry has had to contend since the cessation of hostilities, undoubtedly the most pressing and acute is the present outlook in foreign film circles. While everywhere the cry is being made for the stabilization of foreign trade between the United States and other countries, the present economic upheaval has caused a radical depreciation of foreign exchange and according to some exporters is threatening to strangle the very life of commercial enterprise. In fact, the exchange has reached such an astounding low rate that a feeling of grave uncertainty is held by many in financial circles.

While speculation is rife as to the outcome of the problems that at present beset the foreign market, it is obviously apparent that the situation is only temporary, and that in due course of time conditions will return to normal. While the export situation is in a critical stage, its effect on the trade has been grossly exaggerated. I arrive at this conclusion after a thorough study of the foreign market and on the counsel of merchants who are financially involved in other commercial pursuits and who have experienced the same difficulties in exports.

Our Films Will Always Predominate.

Foreign exchange, according to its financial definition, is the bridge over which payments for trade between different countries is effected. The bridge to my mind has had to bear a larger burden than it could safely carry and consequently has bent beneath the strain. As soon as the bridge is rebuilt things will assume a different aspect. We are at present going through the reconstruction period and must continue to do business as if the bridge were strengthened.

American motion pictures will never be supplanted by native product entirely. There is no need of worry on this point. While no one questions the reports that have been received from foreign territories regarding increased production in these countries, the fact remains that American pictures will always predominate and be greatest in demand. The American producer is better equipped technically, artistically and financially to make finer productions than his European and South American confreres.

The reason for this is obviously apparent; during the war the American producer continued producing while his European friend was forced to shut up shop. This placed America four years ahead of any other country. The facilities for production in America are also greater, and accessible to all producers. In other countries, however, production is still in its experimental stages.

Should Continue Exporting.

I personally believe that we should continue to export motion pictures, and the fact that Inter-Ocean Film Corporation is doing as large an export business now as ever in its history, confirms my belief in this respect. I do not believe that the foreign outlook is as terrible as it has been painted and I repeat that, while I am cognizant of the fact that we are passing through a critical period, I am positively certain that it will soon be over with and that exports will resume their natural course.

Partly counterbalancing this abnormal situation are the statements from American producers that they will make fewer and bigger productions during the year of 1920. This necessarily means that the motion picture supply will be materially reduced. Better pictures will undeniably insure a permanent market for the American product.

Faith Is Needed.

If it is true that the export market is suffering from a relapse in foreign exchange, then the thing to do is to extend a helping hand now. Nothing could better demonstrate the unshakeable faith of America in its hope for the expansion of foreign trade, and the only tangible method of emphasizing this faith is by continuing to export motion picture films in larger quantities than ever before.

Engaged Players for National Film.

Walter Miller and Grace Darmond, two well-known film players have been engaged for parts in "The Invisible Divorce," according to Harry Rapf, West coast production manager for the Selznick interests. These two players have been engaged to support Walter McGrail and Leatrice Joy, the two leading players in this third National Picture Theatres production. All of the principals of the cast for this production have been selected, although there are a number of minor parts yet to be filled. Tom Mills is directing the picture.

Selznick and Republic Make Changes in Office Locations

IN order to establish a closer relationship between Select and Republic executives and to insure a greater efficiency in various departments, several important department transfers were made last week in the home offices in New York of the two organizations by Lewis J. Selznick.

The Republic executives moved their offices to the Select home office building, 729 Seventh avenue, and a number of the departments which were formerly in the home office building are now occupying the offices given up by the Republic officials, which are at 130 West Forty-sixth street. The transfer of these departments is the result of a plan which General Manager Sam E. Morris has contemplated for some time.

Briton N. Busch, president of Republic, and George Meeker, Republic sales manager, now have offices at 729 Seventh avenue. The Select auditing department, under Comptroller M. C. Howard and the purchasing department, under C. C. Ryan, have been moved to the Forty-sixth street building.

The suite of rooms formerly occupied by the legal department, Konta, Kirchwey, France & Michael, will be used for executive offices and the law staff has been assigned the suite of rooms on the sixth floor of the Seventh avenue building. The advertising, art and still departments, have been moved to Forty-sixth street.

George Archainbaud, Selznick director, is supervising the cutting and titling of the latest Elaine Hammerstein production, made by Myron Selznick. This production was finished a few days ago and is titled "The Shadow of Rosalie Byrnes."

American Buys Rights to Famous Tales of Romance, Ambition, Peril and Humor

AMONG the recent purchases effected by the American Film Company are the picture rights to "Their Mutual Child,' by Pelham Grenville Wodehouse, "The Blue Moon" by David Anderson, "The Thirtieth Piece of Silver" by Albert Payson Terhune, "The Week End," by Cosmo Hamilton, "Payment Guaranteed" and "The Gamesters" by Lois Zellner. A few of these stories have already been filmed and have been marked up on the "Flying A" calendar for release to follow Samuel Merwin's novel, "The Honey Bee," which was chosen as the medium for Mme. Marguerita Sylva's initial appearance on the American screen.

"The Thirtieth Piece of Silver," which will soon be ready for distribution by Pathe, is said to be one of the "neatest, most compact and unique plots ever screened." The story centers on an old coin in the hands of an up-to-date society man whose penchant for coin collecting supersedes everything else in his life, even his love for his hard-earned young bride.

Romance, Thrills and Humor.

"The House of Toys" was written by Henry Russell Miller. The book is at this writing in scenario form in the hands of George L. Cox, a director of the American at the Santa Barbara studio. It is a strong drama of love and ambition, a picture of empty, superficial existence, a fragile structure, under which the author builds a foundation of worth-while living.

"The Blue Moon" obtains its name from a gorgeous pearl, and the setting is among the pearl hunters on the Wabash flats of Indiana, who furnish the author with a new type and fresh inspiration. Paramount interest lies in the pearl hunters, a reckless, dangerous breed of river-men, their mode of life and their strang occupation, from which develops a romance crowded with action, mystery and heroism.

Through "Their Mutual Child," a 1919 novel, the American's silversheet will poke fun at eugenics and the attempt at bringing up children according to mathematical rules.

In Cosmo Hamilton's "The Week End" the American will present a fast-moving love drama which attempts only to be mighty entertaining and amusing. What a pretty witch of a girl can't do at a week-end party, especially if she is being harassed by an unwelcome suitor, backed by her very proper parents burdened with constant memory of Mayflower antecedents, is not worth telling. And Cosmo Hamilton's heroine isn't slow.

Hillegass and Snyder Open Aurora Theatre at Pennsburg

THE New Aurora Theatre, Pennsburg, Pa., is being advertised as the largest playhouse in the Perkiomen Valley. The New Aurora is a new building erected just in time for the winter season. The playhouse is jointly owned and operated by William I. Snyder and Foster C. Hillegass. Mr. Snyder has been in the picture business for upward of ten years. After the erection of this new theatre Mr. Hillegass, a newspaperman, bought a half interest.

The theatre has been inspected by city managers, who are unanimous in their expression of opinion that "The New Aurora is truly a modern 'city' theatre." And especially are these managers surprised to learn that the theatre is located in a town of 1,200 population.

The New Aurora has a seating capacity of 455, modern stage equipment, in fact the building is complete in detail. Added to all this Snyder and Hillegass have just contracted for the installation of a cooling system that will add another big feature to the comfort of the patrons next summer.

Exploit New Jersey in Pictures.

Under the auspices of the State Board of Institutions and Agencies, motion pictures in the interest of the 10,000 wards of the State of New Jersey are now being shown in many of the theatres throughout the State. The official series, hitherto unpublished, covers seven separate reels (one for each State institution), depicting the interesting shop, industrial and recreational activities and scientific medical and research treatment in the seven largest institutions in New Jersey.

Big Simplex Sales Is Report of Exhibitors' Supply Co.

FROM the Exhibitors' Supply Company, with offices in Chicago, Milwaukee Indianapolis, comes a report of Simplex sales that indicate a large number of Simplex installations that have recently taken place in the territory of this theatre equipment house in the Middle West.

A close perusal of the report indicates that not only are the theatres throughout the Exhibitor's selling zone demanding Simplex but many of the groups included in the non-theatrical field as well.

De Mille's Latest Special Is Breaking Los Angeles Records

ACCORDING to word received from Harold G. Ballance, Los Angeles branch manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, "Why Change Your Wife?" Cecil B. De Mille's newest special production, which recently started an engagement at Grauman's Rialto in Los Angeles, will eclipse the records of all its Paramount Artcraft predecessors at that theatre.

Mr. Ballance's telegram, which was addressed to Al Lichtman, general manager of distribution, was as follows:

"'Why Change Your Wife?' at Grauman's Rialto, off to a flying start and will absolutely break all records in this territory. At close of first week's business 'Why Change Your Wife?' grossed eleven hundred more than 'Male and Female.' Will undoubtedly run seven or eight weeks. Press unanimous in praise of this production. The line-up at the ticket window the past week has not broken since last Sunday, as there has never been a time that there have not been hundreds of people waiting to buy tickets."

Among those who saw the De Mille production at a recent private showing at the Lasky studio in Hollywood was Jack Partington, of the California, Imperial and Portola theatres in San Francisco. "One hundred per cent.," was Mr. Partington's laconic declaration, and then added, "it's the last word in picture drama."

"Why Change Your Wife?" probably will be released generally in May.

Changes Title of Polly Moran Comedy.

The title of the second Polly Moran one-reel slapstick comedy, produced by the National Film Corporation and distributed by the Marion H. Kohn Productions, has been changed to "A Scrambled Romance." The film was previously titled "Dollars and Scents." It is one of a series of fast action comedy reels being produced by this company. The first of the group, "The Ragged Road to Romance," has been completed and is now ready for release.

American Cinema Starts New Play.

Walter Niebuhr, president of the American Cinema Corporation, has just signed a contract with James Vincent, to direct its next production, which will be put under way next week. Mr. Vincent will take his company to Florida to film the exteriors which will be an all-star cast feature, based on an original story recently purchased from H. Thompson Rich.

Associated to Handle Curwood Film.

Contracts were executed recently at the offices of the Associated First National Pictures, 6 West Forty-eight Street, New York, whereby James Oliver Curwood's next feature production entitled, "Nomads of the North," will be exploited by that company.

David M. Hartford, who so successfully directed "Back to God's Country" will also direct this picture and Ernest Shipman will continue as New York manager of the Curwood productions.

Sawyer Off to South America to Close Circuit Film Deals

CHESTER E. SAWYER, of David P. Howells, Inc., sailed on March 17 for South American film centers to conclude negotiations for rights to recent First National Exhibitors' Circuit attractions.

Mr. Sawyer will visit Rio de Janeiro, Buenos Ayres, Santiago, Chile, Lima and Peru to renew acquaintance with buyers and renters met on previous trips. He took with him prints of "Back to God's Country," "The Greatest Question," "The River's End" and other of the First National releases, to all of which, with the exception of the Chaplin productions, Mr. Howells controls the foreign rights.

Before joining David P. Howells, Inc., Mr. Sawyer organized the Carribbean Film Company, which operates theatres and distributes pictures in Cuba and the West Indies.

His trip will require six months to complete.

Marshall Neilan Stages Big Thriller on Railway Coach Top

A SPECTACULAR thrill that probably outdoes anything for nerve and daring is one of the features of a Marshall Neilan Production which the director is now producing in California. A man dropping from an aeroplane to the top of a swiftly moving train and then climbing back to the airship is the episode of the picture which will cause any audience to gasp.

The filming of the feat, which required two days, was done on a branch road of the Santa Fe Railroad near Riverside. A special train was hired from the railroad company

Atop of one of the coaches, a platform was erected on which three cameramen set up their cameras and Neilan and his assistant took their places.

An aeroplane from a nearby army aviation field ascended with Daredevil Campbell as a passenger. The train got under; the airship kept pace and suddenly flying low glided to a position directly above the coach on which the cameras started grinding.

When Neilan gave the cue to Campbell the daredevil climbed out of the cockpit, descended down a rope ladder, hesitated but slightly and then dropped a distance of five feet, landing upright on the round shaped top of the coach. This feat accomplished, Campbell then took his place before the camera to perform a most hair raising stunt.

Cronjager Has Camera Invention.

Henry Cronjager, cameraman of Marshall Neilan Productions, has invented an appliance which promises to revolutionize the present method of making still pictures. It is an attachment whereby a still camera can be secured to the moving picture camera and permit the taking of an unlimited number of stills showing all the action of a scene without the delay of rearranging the lights or the special posing of the actors.

Pennies of Rochester Folks Provide "Hospital Happiness" for Their Sick

THAT those who daily enjoy the pleasures of the screen may share these same pleasures with their more unfortunate fellow humans, a plan has been worked out by Rochester motion picture men which is said to be unique as well as original. "Hospital Happiness," it is called, and the plan contemplates that all Rochester picture fans are potential backers of the move to inject a ray of hope and pleasure into the lives of the crippled, the bedridden—in fact, all those unfortunates who by reason of physical incapacity are unable to go to the theatres.

When Rochester fans go to a show they now see on the screen a slide which reads like this: "If you have enjoyed the show, drop a penny in box in the lobby, so that a little of the same enjoyment may be given to the sick in the hospitals or at home," or "A penny from you will pay for moving pictures for those who will never see them except from a bed of pain," or again, "Moving pictures in the hospital wards will turn cries of anguish into smiles of joy—if it's worth a penny drop one in the box." In Rochester, like in the average prosperous city, the appeal for pennies is not in vain.

McInerney a Prime Mover.

The plan, while yet in its infancy, is meeting with great success. The details have been under discussion by the Exhibitors League for some time and have finally been worked out by a committee. John J. McInerney, general counsel for the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors League, is one of the prime movers in the organization of "Hospital Happiness," as well as being the originator of the idea. Erwin J. W. Huber, managing editor of the Pictureplay News, is chairman of the committee. Other members are Mr. McInerney; Dr. John R. Williams, of the Hahnemann Hospital; Florence R. Fennyvessey, manager of the Strand Theatre, and William A. Calihan, manager of the Regent Theatre.

The committee has engaged an operator and purchased a portable motion picture projection outfit. Films are secured from the regular exchanges—not for nothing, although the committee is glad enough to get them at the lowest reasonable price. These films are shown by the operator in various wards of the local hospitals, the operator being engaged for the work at a salary and for his full time. The exhibitions in the different wards are limited in length to a time set by the medical men. The number of patients in a ward has nothing to do with the exhibitions. Those who need the pictures most get them first.

People Approve Idea.

There are about 35,000 people attending the picture houses in Rochester daily. One cent from each of these patrons daily would mean $350 daily and $2,450 weekly. The committee, however, does not ask for or expect such receipts, as it can carry on the work for one-tenth of that sum weekly. Many people contribute more than the cent asked for, too. Certain exhibitors were so pleased with the plan that they offered to make up any deficiencies, but it is not believed that there will be any.

The fans have caught on to the idea and seem to like it. The exchanges and exhibitors say that particular advantages of the plan, aside from the human element, are that film is handled only by a capable, licensed operator and that the work needs very little supervision otherwise. The fans as they sit in their comfortable theatre seats, seem to sense a new interest in others who enjoy the screen and greet the slides with great applause. The response, in the form of pennies, and other coins, too, proves that many hearts beat in sympathy with "Hospital Happiness."

Irma Harrison Back from Georgia.

Irma Harrison, who was last seen as leading woman for Gareth Hughes in "The Red Viper" and opposite Johnny Dooley in the first of the series of Dooley comedies, has returned from Georgia, where she finished the exterior scenes for the starring role of the Buffalo Film Company's third independent production, "The Daughter of Devil Dan," a story of the moonshine country. Miss Harrison is supported by Kempton Green in the leading role.

Mayflower Launches Great Exploitation for Features Released Through Realart

AN invaluable method of motion picture exploitation has recently been established by the Mayflower Photoplay Corporation for the promotion of pictures presented by Mayflower through the Realart Pictures Corporation. Under the direction of John W. McKay, general manager of distribution, Mayflower has launched an extensive exploitation campaign as a result of which exhibitors showing the Mayflower product will be afforded the personal services of a corps of exploitation expects.

Manager McKay is now getting his staff of exploitation men into the field and it is expected that within a few days Mayflower will have at least twelve publicity representatives co-operating with exhibitors in all parts of the country. Realart will lend every possible co-operation in carrying out this plan, in order to stimulate box office activity all along the line.

Mr. McKay's men will work in conjunction with Realart exchange managers, covering all key cities and contiguous territory with elaborate exploitation drives. Each exhibitor will be favored with individual attention and campaigns especially suited to his particular requirements will be outlined and put into effect through co-operative work between the exhibitor and the exploitation man working that particular territory.

At present, Manager McKay's forces will concentrate on Allan Dwan's "Luck of the Irish" being handled through Realart and Emile Chautard's "Mystery of the Yellow Room," also under the Realart banner.

Edward Holland left New York early this week to exploit a showing in Cleveland of "The Mystery of the Yellow Room." After this he will cover several Ohio first runs on "The Luck of the Irish." Ace Berry has been sent to Columbus to pave the way for a "Luck of the Irish" showing. Daily reports will be turned in to Mr. McKay by the exploitation men, thus enabling the Mayflower sales manager to keep very close tab on the productions.

Crane to Play Original Stage Role in "The New Henrietta"

WILLIAM H. CRANE, for two generations one of the most distinguished stars on the American stage, will play his original stage role of Nicholas Van Alstyne in "The New Henrietta," the forthcoming all-star Metro production of that popular drama of business life. The continuity of the play, which was revised by Victor Mapes and Winchell Smith from "The Henrietta," by Bronson Howard, is now being completed by June Mathis. Winchell Smith, who recently joined the Metro forces at the company's studios in Hollywood, will personally supervise the picturization of "The New Henrietta."

The production of "The New Henrietta," which was given at the Knickerbocker, December 22, 1913, was an enormous success. It was something more than a revival—it was a new play, and the splendid cast that interpreted the roles lent an unusual distinction to the performance.

After the stage production, Mr. Crane retired from the boards, having played for more than fifty years before the footlights. He has been in California for some time, and already has a host of friends and admirers in the motion picture colony.

Larry Semon Packs 'Em In.

It is only necessary to whisper the name of Larry Semon in order to pack a theatre, according to M. M. Flemister, manager of the Colonial Theatre at Milledgeville, Ga. Mr. Flemister declares in a letter to Vitagraph, that Larry Semon's latest comedy, "The Grocery Clerk" was the best laugh maker he had seen in years.

"Larry is on top to stay," adds the exhibitor. "It's only necessary just to whisper he's coming on such and such a date, and you will pack your house. Please allow me to congratulate you on this excellent picture."

Vitagraph Blankets Country with Thousands of Posters

VITAGRAPH has blanketed the United States and Canada with appealing twenty-four-sheet posters on "The Courage of Marge O'Doone," James Oliver Curwood's well-known story. Thousands of billboards from the upper reaches of the continent to the gulf as a result today present the spectacle of two enormous bears tearing each other to death. Vitagraph claims that this is the first time any film company has ever posted its message so extensively in behalf of one single production.

The posters have been placed on numberless high roads, railroad arteries and turnpikes in the land. The greatest proportion of the sheets are seen in the suburban towns lying at the gateways to the great cities and in the heart of these cities.

The enormous task of placing the sheets was completed by March 15 under rental contracts to remain in place from one to two months. The locations along Broadway, in New York City, at points where literally millions of eyes may see them, will be retained for the maximm period.

"The Isle of Destiny" to Be First Character Production

THE first of the new series of Character pictures will be "The Isle of Destiny," from the work of Mack Arthur. Paul Gilmore, well-known stage star, who was recently signed by Character Pictures, will be featured in the production and will be his first vehicle for the company.

"The Isle of Destiny" is a story different in type from the average run and considered a masterpiece in its delineation of characters. The story for the most part concerns several individuals who are cast upon a tropical island, but the plot departs radically from the usual type of island story and contains a new twist. Besides thrilling and dramatic situations, the story has a deep underlined theme which promises to be the big punch of the production.

"The Isle of Destiny" will be produced on Oriental Island, where Character Pictures Corporation recently purchased several acres of land. Many parts of the island are so densely tropical as to resemble a jungle, and it is expected that this will provide opportunity for making beautiful photographic shots and effects.

Rotchford Returns from Trip.

John J. Rotchford, assistant general manager of the Select Pictures Corporation, has returned to the home office after a visit to Kansas City where he spent several days arranging for the new quarters of the Republic and Select branches in that city. While there Mr. Rotchford studied the sales records of the Kansas City territory and upon his return stated that a large amount of new business is being done.

"Adams-Owned" Houses Are Being Built in Iowa Towns at Rate of Two Monthly

THE great advertising stunt was put on by the Adams Theatre Company, of Des Moines, Iowa, last week. The company secured a full page in the rotogravure section of the Des Moines Sunday Register and "sold" the idea of the Adams company. The page included pictures of the three officers and exteriors and interiors of eleven of the twenty-two houses now Adams-owned.

The Adams company has no house in Des Moines, but the Register with its 85,000 circulation reaches the great mass of people in the towns of southern and central Iowa, where the circuit has its houses. The company is only twenty months old, but is now one of the strongest in the country. It is growing at the rate of two theatres a month.

J. L. Adams, managing director, came to Iowa from Salt Lake City, where he has been connected with exchanges for a numbers of years. J. W. Adams' secretary and treasurer, is Mrs. J. L. Adams. W. D. Jamieson, president, is democratic national committeeman and one of the stage's "big" men. Adams chose the Iowa field for his circuit because he thought it capable of the most development of any in the United States.

Now Plays 109 Films a Week.

The circuit began with the Lincoln during July, 1918. As soon as he got that on its feet—it was a rundown proposition—he secured others in the immediate vicinity. By July, 1919, he had ten houses. Then he opened headquarters in Des Moines, where he still is, at 600 McCune Building.

The circuit now includes twenty-two houses in fourteen county seat towns. There are 256 employes. The circuit plays 109 pictures a week, all films being booked around the circuit, but playing two or three days, depending on the size of the town. The company expects to expand to fifty houses during 1920. The company is interested primarily in the small towns, and while one man devotes his entire time to looking for good "buys" no towns of more than 50,000 population are considered.

All but one of the houses bought were "lemons." They were not paying propositions and Adams secured them at a low figure. But every one is now paying its own way and making real money for the circuit. Adams considers the small town field the best paying and for that reason confines all his efforts to that field.

Build Up Rundown Theatres.

"We feel that there are no 'hick' towns," he explained, "and that accounts for our success. People in small towns want picture palaces, and the same presentation, the same pictures, the same projection and the same good music that they do in Des Moines, Chicago or New York. They are willing to pay for it, so we give them the best—and only the best. Adams theatres have become civic centers in the communities. In many instances they are the only theatres in the towns.

"Our policy is to buy rundown propositions and build them up. We know we can make them successful. The only thing we are interested in when considering a town is its size. We are not afraid of the town's 'spirit' or its religious preferences or anything else. We ask for no help from civic bodies, and we don't need any."

Adams buys all his theatres outright and they are all owned entirely by the company. The company, by the way, has but three stockholders—the three officers.

"We intend to make our company cooperative some day and take in all our employes, from managers down," Adams explained. "That is still in the future, however."

Foster Community Spirit.

The company owns a $25,000 printing plant at Chariton which prints the weekly program that is uniform for all the houses on the circuit. The program has a circulation of 60,000 weekly. One man devotes his entire time to securing advertising from local merchants for the program and the venture more than pays its own way.

Every house has its own manager and the managers are all trained by Adams. Each manager does all in his power to co-operate with the people of the community in making the house more than a place of amusement. No worthy charity conducting a campaign in an "Adams town" ever fails to secure a 100 per cent. benefit performance at the theatres.

Ten thousand children were made happy at Christmas by the theatres. Every house had a Christmas tree and a special performance for the kids. Free candy and nuts were given the children. In addition, the theatres co-operated with charity organizations and "good fellow" clubs in providing useful gifts for needy children. All children in the community were asked to write to "Santa Claus" at the theatre. The letters were turned over to a civic committee and all worthy requests were granted.

Prices Remain Uniform.

There are no "small time" theatres on the Adams circuit. Every one plays the biggest films that the company can secure. Every house has an orchestra or a pipe organ. Many have both. There is no difference in the way a film is presented at the Garden, Waterloo, which has a population of 40,000, than throughout the circuit. The lowest is 20 cents (tax extra, 10 cents for children). Big features bring 15 and 25 and 25 and 35 cents.

Eastern film men who have visited Iowa recently and have seen the remarkable growth of the circuit and its great popularity have called it "the most efficient theatre circuit in America."

The houses included in the Adams chain are the Lincoln and Isis, Chariton; Willard, Creston; Olympic, Star and Grand, Knoxville; New and Idle Hour, Leon; Orpheum and Victory, Fairfield; Auditorium and Pastime, Mt. Pleasant; Graham, Washington; Empress, Indianola; King and Comet, Albia; Rialto, Newton; Empress, Shenandoah; Irving, Carroll; Garden, Marion; Garden, Waterloo.

Marshall Neilan Plans Novel Stunts for Exploitation of Next Three Films

NEW and novel exhibitor stunts, the result of long and unhurried study far in advance of release date, as unusual exploitation for the next three Marshall Neilan special attractions, to be obtained by providing theatre owners in each territory with a complete synopsis and story theme months before they play the pictures, will be sought by James R. Grainger, general representative for Marshall Neilan, in a tour of all First National Exhibitors' Circuit exchanges. He will leave New York next week.

Mr. Grainger's plan is to establish facts which will demonstrate the relative importance of carefully considered advertising and publicity and its benefits at the box office, in contrast to overnight adjustments of prepared matter to fit peculiar local conditions, eliminating the need for haste, instant conclusions and impromptu exploitation by providing exhibitors alert to showmanship possibilities with necessary information months before the productions are released.

Wants Maximum of Exploitation.

"This," he declares, "is a practical business move to obtain the maximum of exploitation value from every Marshall Neilan production. Mr. Neilan wants every release he makes through First National Exhibitors' Circuit to have specific exploitation advantages which can be traded on by exhibitors in their advertising and publicity designed to attract patrons to their theatres.

"An attraction may have unusual artistic merit, but if it lacks story twists and situations and appeals which can be turned to good account in advertising, both in text and illustration, it is less than 50 per cent. efficient at the box office. Every really big screen success in motion picture history has had unusual exploitation angles. There have been many releases with superior artistic advantages, but they have not been the box-office triumphs their producers and distributors anticipated because they lacked exploitation material which could be used by exhibitors to strike a responsive cord in theatre-goers."

To Make Personal Calls.

The continuities for the next three Marshall Neilan productions have been completed, and, from these, detailed synopses have been prepared which Mr. Grainger will take with him into every territory, where he intends to call personally on various exhibitors who hold contracts for Neilan releases.

Beauty Chorus in "Dinner Hour."

A big "dream of fair women" chorus and orchestra composed of California beauties are an added feature of the new Rolin Comedy, "The Dinner Hour," released by Pathe March 28. "Snub" Pollard, the "pint-sized" comedian is starred in the production. Marie Mosquini, Eddie Boland and "Sunshine Sabo" lend their efforts to make the fun of the fast and furious variety. One of the most elaborate sets ever seen in a two-reel comedy, showing a big cabaret in full swing, was built for the principal scenes.

Miniature Masterpieces Much in Demand, Says Mack Sennett, Relating His Plans

MACK SENNETT'S first-of-the-year announcement that he proposed, during 1920, to produce several multiple reel photoplays of the type and importance of "Down on the Farm" and "Mickey," coupled with recent arguments carried on amongst "the fans" as to the future of the two-reel comedy, gives timeliness to Mr. Sennett's recent utterances on the value of the short comedy or farce from an entertainment point of view.

"It would be a grave error for exhibitors and producers to conclude, because there have been exceptional demands for effective five and seven-reel productions, that there is any diminution of demand for effective two-reel comedies," he said. "The fact is that the public's demand for the latter will always be keener than its demand for long productions, for the very excellent and obvious reason that a miniature masterpiece is scarcer than a triumph in large forms.

Length Does Not Indicate Quality.

"No critic would be fool enough to measure the value of a book by its length. Bulk and quality have nothing necessarily in common. A gem of a short story is just as difficult to create as a masterpiece in novel form. There will always be short film plays just as there will always be seven-reel productions. The only thing for the producer to decide is whether his plot will require two or five or seven reels for its proper, concise and effective unfoldment."

That the public is in favor of the two-reel comedy needs no argumentative prophets to expound, says Mr. Sennett. Exhibitors know best that the "two-reeler" which they insert as "spice" is frequently the bulk of the fare provided, and that featuring the short comedy productions of Sennett has independently developed a house clientele that is faithful to the bill no matter what the longer production may be.

Avoids "Padding" Meagre Plot.

Mr. Sennett's devotion to the two-reel comedy on which his first fame was securely founded remains complete. He is, he says, more addicted to it than ever, which is evident, he points out, by his first-of-the-year promise to produce them in fewer and better numbers and quality. His devotion to the five-reel "super-production," of which "Down on the Farm" is declared to be typical, is itself, perhaps, an outgrowth of his two-comedy development.

"I permit my story," says Mr. Sennett, "to determine the length of my production. At our studios we seek to avoid the common mistake of 'padding out' a meager plot in order to sustain five reels. If the story naturally goes to five reels we permit it. If it spins itself into a maze of complications and then out again in two reels, so much the better. On the stage 'the play's the thing,' not the star nor the cast. On the screen 'the story's the thing,' not the number of feet nor the number of principals nor the brilliance of the star.

Know When to Stop.

"Let your story tell itself concisely, naturally and with sufficient, not labored episodes. When you are finished, stop. The science of stopping in time is of enormous importance in making good pictures. The producer must know when—not too soon nor too late—he has come to a full stop. If he has found a good story and has told it properly it will determine its own length."

Included in this year's output thus far the Sennett studios in Los Angeles have put forth "Down on the Farm," a five-reel super-production soon to be released; "Gee Whiz," "The Gingham Girl," and two other two-reel comedies yet to be named, in one of which Charlie Murray will be starred, and a five-reel super-production of a quality to match "Mickey" and "Down on the Farm."

Cissy Fitz-Gerald in New York.

Cissy Fitz-Gerald, of the Cissy Fitz-Gerald Picture Corporation, has just arrived in New York from Los Angeles on a flying visit, and is negotiating with Lawrence Sterner for the picture rights of his successful farcial comedy, "The Club Baby," which played for over a year in England.

Fox Buys Ridgewell Cullum Novel.

Negotiations have been closed with those handling the literary works of Ridgewell Cullum, whereby William Fox secures the world's rights to that well-known author's western novel, entitled "The Twins of Suffering Creek."

This is not the first of Mr. Cullum's works to be converted to motion pictures, but it is regarded as one of his best efforts and is certainly well adapted to the silent drama.

William Russell, increasingly popular, has been selected as the star. Work has already been begun on the adaptation of the story at the Fox scenario department in New York.

Arthur Zellner En Route to New York to Write New Script

ARTHUR ZELLNER, of the Metro scenario staff, is en route from California to New York, where it is planned that he will write the continuity for the first of the special productions to be made at Metro's Sixty-first street studios under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger. According to present arrangements, Mr. Zellner will write only one 'script in New York, and then return to the Pacific coast.

What Mr. Karger's first production will be has not yet been announced by Metro officials. "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "Polly with a Past" have been mentioned among the early possibilities. It has been definitely settled, however, that June Mathis (who is still at the western studios) is to picturize Blasco Ibanez's novel. She has completed the first draft of the scenario. Mr. Zellner may make the scenario for Ina Claire's starring vehicle, although this is not settled.

Mrs. Tom Moore's Mother Dies.

Racing to reach the bedside of her dying mother, Mrs. Tom Moore, wife of the head of the chain of theatres bearing his name, arrived at her mother's home in Washington, D. C., only a few minutes too late. News of the serious illness of Mrs. Alice Martin reached Mr. and Mrs. Moore while they were in New York. Every effort was made to return to Washington before she died, but, despite the best speed that could be made by trains and automobiles, they were twelve minutes too late.

Mrs. Martin, who was 74 years old, resided at 1120 Euclid street northwest, and had been a resident of Washington for many years. Death was due to an attack of heart trouble.

Loew Books "Dangerous Talent."

That the patrons of first class theatres give a "velvet" reception to "Jim the Penman" type of drama is evident, and the Loew circuit of New York leads the chain theatres in booking this American superfeature, "The Dangerous Talent." Only in this film version the role of Jim is taken by an unsophisticated young girl, which adds greatly to the appeal of the story.

Other big bookings are scattered all over the country, in first class houses. The Strand of Denver, the Hippodrome of Seattle, the Orpheum of Akron, Ohio. Rex Theatre of Dallas, the American of Salt Lake, the 20th Century of Chicago, the Amphion of Brooklyn and the Casino of Cester, Pa., are recent contracts for extended runs.

Mrs. J. R. Bray Back from Europe with Vivid Impression of Film Conditions

MRS. J. R. BRAY, wife of John R. Bray, inventor of the Bray Pictograph, who recently returned to this country after an extended tour of England, France and Germany on an investigation of educational film conditions abroad, reports that American feature photoplays and educational films are in greater demand now than at any former period in the history of the motion picture.

"We have shown the world what America can do with the photoplay," said Mrs. Bray, "and Europe realizes the technical proficiency we have attained."

Mrs. Bray was the first woman to leave occupied German territory for the interior unaccompanied. She traveled to Berlin alone, and from there to Vienna; but the sight of the stricken, starving people there caused her to return at once to Berlin.

Women Starve in Vienna.

"In Vienna I walked two blocks from my hotel and picked up three fainting women who could not stand because they were half starved. I could not think of talking pictures to the Viennese, so I came back. But the train service is so inadequate that the next train to Germany left four days after my arrival in Vienna."

The impressions Mrs. Bray received in each of the countries visited may best be told in chronological order. Her first visit abroad was to London, where she met A. George Smith, Goldwyn's European representative, who is in charge of the distribution of Goldwyn feature pictures and the Goldwyn-Bray pictograph in England and on the Continent. While in London Mrs. Bray made her headquarters at the Goldwyn offices and renewed her old acquaintance with Charles Lapworth and Ralph Block, who are at present organizing the advertising and publicity departments of Goldwyn's European distributing organization.

Many Film Fans in England.

"The English people are wildly enthusiastic about photoplays these days," said Mrs. Bray. "They have been starved for entertainment, and now you will find crowds a block long in front of almost every motion picture theatre every evening. There are not nearly enough theatres in England to supply the demand for motion picture entertainment. There are perhaps 4,000 theatres in England; and builders are trying their best to obtain materials to erect more. In the meantime shows are being held in converted stores, in halls and in any place available. The movement there resembles New York's experience some years ago when grocery and other stores were converted overnight into motion picture theatres. But as soon as they can obtain the necessary material new photoplay theatres will spring up in England by the hundreds."

Artistic Presentation in England.

"On the whole English theatre managers devote more care to the artistic appearance of their theatres than do the small theatre managers in America. Of course, England has nothing to compare with our Strand, Capitol, Rivoli, or Rialto; but all the smaller theatres show care in the appearance of the lobbies, interiors and in the method of showing the pictures. For example, the English know how to decorate a theatre with plants and so lend an artistic and intimate atmosphere to the interior of the house. More care seems to be taken with such important details as ventilation; and there is a general desire to see their audiences comfortably entertained. This is, of course, a fine trait of the English. The courtesy of the house attendants is unfailing; and a theatre patron is a guest rather than a customer."

Our Projection Machines Best.

In the matter of showing the films, Mrs. Bray thinks that England has not quite solved the projection question.

Mrs. J. R. Bray

"America seems to be ahead of England on the mechanical side of the industry. I believe the projection machines are not quite as good as we use over here. But this will soon be remedied as the manufacturers are experimenting with various new types of machines.

"You have no idea how enthusiastic they are in England over the Bray pictures. I gave a private showing to the London local board of education and the members wanted to use our pictures in their schools immediately. The animated technical drawings fascinated them. They had never seen entire courses of instruction so clearly and entertainingly presented, they told me. The schools in England are anxiously waiting for us to complete our library before they use our entire output.

"Of course, there has been a great improvement in the English motion picture since the war. They are using American feature pictures as models, and the development is going on at a tremendous rate.

"Another development of the English film is the propaganda subject in the interests of reconstruction. Various facts concerning the national life are pictorialized and flashed on the screen."

A little personal investigation among the smaller theatres convinced Mrs. Bray of the popularity of the educational film.

"I stood outside a motion picture theatre in London and observed the people coming in. And would you believe it several patrons asked to know what educational picture was being shown. They came, it seems, for the educational film and accepted the feature picture as a side issue."

French Film Conditions Disorganized.

From England Mrs. Bray went to France; and after visiting some of the smaller cities made her headquarters in Paris. There she found that only the larger distributors had a keen sense of fair dealing with their exhibitors.

"It seems that the rights of distributors are not sufficiently protected, and the authorities make few and futile attempts to guard stolen pictures from being sold to irresponsible if not dishonest exhibitors. During my stay in Paris I traced a stolen Mary Pickford picture, but the authorities did nothing to establish the rights of the real owners of the picture.

Paris Lacks Theatres.

"The motion picture theatres in Paris are not nearly so well kept as those in England or in America," she said. "And as for presentation Paris is far behind us. France needs more motion picture theatres than any country in Europe, with the possible exception of Russia. The lack of them is seen in the social life of the people. For in every country where a large proportion of the people attend the picture shows I have found a public more enlightened on general matters than in territories where few people have the opportunity to attend them.

"And in France the propaganda value of the motion picture has scarcely been appreciated. Where in England and in America we get news events colorfully told in pictures and use the screen as a pictorial magazine besides a mode of entertainment, in France it is still an entertainment medium only and not a particularly good one. Excerpts from film magazines are shown occasionally; but a screen magazine as a form of photoplay is practically non-existent. Even in England the propaganda value of the screen magazine has not been appreciated as fully as it is in America.

Germans Want Our Features.

"Everywhere in Germany educational films—American educational films—are in great demand. I gave a private showing of some of the Bray educationals to several professors of the University of Berlin and they immediately wanted to take our entire product for the local schools and for the university. They offered to co-operate with the Goldwyn-Bray production staff in the making of scientific subjects, as they were convinced that a method had been found whereby the technical intricacies of scientific studies might be presented on the screen in a far clearer manner than is possible either through the lips of a lecturer or through the pages of a text book.

"But motion picture production in Germany is about ten years behind that in America. The Germans want our pictures badly. It seems that the stock on which they photograph is poor and the results are consequently unsatisfactory. Nevertheless, so eager are the people to see motion picture entertainments that they flock to the theatres whenever they can afford the luxury, and enjoy whatever is presented."

Foreign Field Never So Fertile.

In conclusion, Mrs. Bray said that the foreign field for American photoplays was never so fertile as at present.

"We must realize that our pictures are in demand on the other side. They want our pictures now for their entertainment as well as for their instructive values. And not only do the people want them, but the producers as well. The latter are eager to take advantage of the technical progress that America has made in the past four years."

Greiver to Publish an Educational Film Weekly

SIMON GREIVER, president of the Greiver Distributing Corporation, has fully completed arrangements for the production and the national distribution of the Greiver Educational Weekly.

Two years ago the Greiver Distributing Corporation identified themselves with the distribution of educational films, gaining experience of a valuable nature, which should be helpful in their present venture. Since that time Simon Greiver has toured the country with the idea of investigating the short-reel requirements of the theatre. He has visited the smallest as well as the largest theatres, studying the effect of pictures on the different audiences, in an effort to discover which particular style of single reels make the most lasting impression.

The first of the Greiver Educationals is ready for the market, and has been pronounced by a jury of producers and men widely known in the film industry, to be a reel of exceptional interest. An agreement was effected between Greiver and certain producers, whereby they will furnish regularly pictures to be known as Greiver Educationals.

Some Things Worth Knowing

That No. 59 of the Universal New Screen Magazine shows William G. McGee, a violin maker of the Cumberland mountains, at work on one of these instruments. McGee's violins, made entirely by hand, are well known throughout the country.

That the Universal safety first film "Careless America" was shown recently in Baltimore before an audience of 3,000 school children. The exhibition took place in the Garden Theatre, under the auspices of the Safety First Society. At the close of the entertainment, which was arranged by Louis A. DeHoff, manager of the Garden Theatre, the question, "Will you think of safety first? was flashed from the screen. Three thousand lusty voices answered back, "You bet!"

That one of the recent and interesting subjects treated photographically by Burton Holmes is "The Boys' Pig Club." In this picture freckle-faced youngsters are seen borrowing from the bank on notes signed by themselves, and then purchasing baby pigs, which they later rear into fine looking porkers. The combined lesson of thrift, industry and productivity furnishes a valuable contribution to pictures of American life.

That Kinograms for March 16 shows a three thousand acre celery farm which is cultivated by a colony of Hindus in California, scenes in a doll hospital in New Orleans, the biggest herd of bison on the Pacific Coast in a preserve in San Francisco, and other interesting events.

That in the Fox News No. 46 Barnard College girls give an interesting exhibition of the right and the wrong way to dress. This number also contains moments with the Atlantic fleet at Panama, pictures of the baby lambs on the lawn at the White House, and a premature explosion of 500 pounds of dynamite at Chicago.

That the DeVry portable moving picture projector is found useful in the home as well as in the school room. More than one moving picture magnate now views films in the parlor of his own home, thanks to the portable machine.

Educational Engages Pritchard.

R. E. Pritchard, who for seven months has been director of advertising and publicity for the chain of some fifty theatres of the Allen Enterprises in Canada, has returned to New York to take a similar post with the Educational Films Corporation. He will direct the special exploitation determined upon by E. V. Hammons, vice-president and general manager as the result of the vastly enlarged scope of operations of the company.

Films Used to Inspire Men to Punctuality in Industry

IN discussing the educational film situation with a representative of the Moving Picture World recently, Charles Urban, of the Kineto Company of America, said:

"One of the new uses for Educational Films is a practice that has come into vogue with industrial concerns, namely, giving the workers worth-while entertainment to make them come to work on time. It is commonly acknowledged that the reason for present-day high prices is, among other things, the lack of adequate production. Workers are being paid 100 per cent. to 400 per cent. more than before the war, and the average workman turns out less than 75 per cent. of what he formerly produced. Part of this decreased production is due to lack of punctuality, nor can the employer be too severe about this tardiness, lest the workmen might take exception to it.

"Into this breach the more progressive American producers, including the United States Rubber Co., have injected or are planning to inject the motion picture, in order that the workers may be drawn to the plant thirty minutes to an hour before the blowing of the whistle. They are meanwhile shown some worth-while film, and best of all a good attendance is assured, it having been proved in actual practice that the old saying, 'You can draw more flies with molasses than with vinegar,' is equally good in this instance, and that more workers show up by reason of the entertainment than they do under threats.

"Nor is this all that the worth-while educational picture or entertainment feature has to do for the workman. Every student of the subject realizes that each bit of information that is added to the workman's store of knowledge is making that workman more worth while. The more he knows the better is his work, be it in a factory or an office. Therefore, the better the films that are shown to the workman in these commercial auditoriums, the more certain the prestige of the commercial house, hence improvement in the product, increase in production and gradual lowering of the high cost of living.

"This might seem to be a far cry as a result of using the worth-while motion picture, but any earnest student of the situation will agree with me that there is more in this idea than appears on the surface."

Both of the above pictures were taken from the "Bird and Animal Life" film produced by William L. Finley.

Charles Burr Describes Exploitation That is Popularizing Torchy Comedies

"WE will have our own exploitation department to assist exhibitors in putting these comedies across and advertising them to the public," said Charles Burr, producer of the Torchy comedies. "As no expense is being spared in making these comedies clean and high class in every respect, likewise we will spare no expense to have them properly exploited after they have been sold to the distributor.

As soon as distribution details are completed a photoplay edition of the first book will be off the press. This book will be profusely illustrated with scenes from the film. As rapidly as each of the pictures is completed another of the Torchy books will be issued with the photoplay illustrations.

Already there are seven volumes of these stories in print, and the stories themselves have been appearing for eleven years in the best known newspapers throughout the country. At the present time the current stories are appearing alternate weeks in twenty-three newspapers in the United States and Canada. The news syndicate handling Sewell Ford's stories will increase the number to 100 or more newspapers to coincide with the release date of the comedies.

Booked by Both Strands.

Master Films, Inc., will have its own exploitation department and already this branch is being organized. The publicity and co-operation work will be handled in such a way that these comedies will be real drawing cards, wherever they are shown.

Johnny Hines as Torchy made such a big hit at the New York Strand that it was booked for a week at the Brooklyn Strand and at both places it went over with big success.

Other theatres not only in New York but throughout the country have heard what the Torchy series is doing and they have written and wired Mr. Burr for information as to play dates. Among these are Picker's New Rio in New York City and The Auditorium in Minneapolis. These requests were turned down for the time being in justice to the company which will handle the distribution.

Stewart Begins Executive Work.

Now that L. I. Stewart, of Southern Enterprises, Inc., of Atlanta, who is well known to the trade in New York City, has conquered the intricacies of his income tax blank, he is "resting content" and looking forward to soon undertaking executive instead of creative work for his company.

The news is contained in a letter to Moving Picture World. He will soon be chief of newspaper advertising for the Enterprises in the eleven southern states, paying especial attention toward bringing about greater efficiency in expenditures, copy, lay-outs, etc. He is now on the first of a series of visits to town and cities in his territory. Mr. Stewart has been editor of the "Square Dealer" published by Southern Enterprises, Inc.

Magnificent St. Louis Hall Has the Simplex Equipment

ST. LOUIS now boasts a magnificent hall consecrated to the artistic and civic life of the city. The new hall of the Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney Store is eighty feet long by thirty-five feet wide and seventeen feet high and seats 500 persons. The decorations are from the Marie Antoinette era of France and the Adam period of England. The hall is rectangular in shape, having a short mezzanine balcony opening from the sixth floor of the store. There are a suite of rooms to be utilized for teas and other entertainments.

The stage is about twelve feet deep and has an elaborate organ and a Minusa gold fibre screen. In back of the auditorium is a spacious, modern booth equipped with the latest model Simplex motor-driven projector.

F. I. L. M. Club Welcomes S. B. Kramer's Return

THE New York City F. I. L. M. Club will welcome the return of S. B. Kramer, new manager of United Picture Productions Corporation. He at one time represented the Bluebird Photoplay Company. Mr. Kramer will return with an added knowledge of exhibitor conditions from his twelve months' experience as operator of the Globe Theatre, 2186 Third avenue.

Jules Burnstein, manager of Magnet Film Exchange from its inception, which he has sold to the Gardiner Syndicate, will bid the F. I. L. M. Club farewell for a time. T. R. Gardiner will succeed him as a member. The membership of the New Jersey Metro Exchange will be transferred to the N J. Rolfe Film Company and Mr. Proskie will continue as representative.

Kenneth Earl
Son of Edward Earl, president of Nicholas Power, who was killed in an aeroplane accident in Miami, Fla., last week. He was buried at Montclair, N. J., on March 15.

The joint meeting in Utica of the Buffalo, Albany and New York City F. I. L. M. clubs was the first gathering of this nature. The results attained indicate that these will be annual events in the future. Buffalo and Albany have joined the Hoy Credit Agency and will be kept in close touch with conditions in Boston, New Haven and New York City.

The club has written exhibitors under no circumstances to depend on oral agreements, pointing out that all promises must be contained in written contracts.

"Fly Cop" New Semon Comedy.

Larry Semon's latest feature comedy film, "The Fly Cop" has just arrived from the coast at Vitagraph's main office. The exploits of heroes and villians, opium thieves, jewel smugglers and assassins are condensed into two reels.

Larry plays the role of a brave super-detective. He disguises himself forty-two and a half times and invades underground palaces and dens. And it is reported that he doesn't say "Hist!" once.

"Go Ahead and Shoot! I Need a Light on My Cigarette!" He's a Reel Hero, Too!
All this trouble is over "My Lady's Garter," which belongs to Sylvia Breamer, seen in the center. It's a Paramount picture.

Selznick to Distribute Prizma Pictures; to Produce Five-Reel Dramas in Colors

AN announcement of importance and interest to the motion picture industry of the entire world is contained in the statement of Lewis J. Selznick that he has acquired the sole and exclusive right not alone to distribute the products of Prizma natural color pictures but also that Prizma will invade the field of screen drama by producing in colors long subjects of five or more reels. Further that Myron Selznick will have active supervision of the color picturization of famous novels and plays made by the Prizma process.

Contracts have been entered into by and between Lewis J. Selznick and Lee Benoist, president of the Prizma company, whereby Select Pictures will take over the distribution of all Prizma subjects heretofore handled by the Republic, and will serve the theatres with these and such other Prizma subjects now in process of production.

Lewis J. Selznick, in discussing this coup, whereby his company secures the advantages of the Prizma color process, said:

Watched Progress of Prizma.

"I have watched with great interest the progress of the Prizma color pictures since their introduction on the market and the evolution of improvement was so marked that I realized that it was color photography which would register the high water mark in the field of achievement of motion photography. This is an epoch that has been awaited by all who have in any way been connected with the business. That it only needed natural color to give to pictures the final impetus that would mark the character of entertainment—one of lasting and substantial permanency. That color, with its multitudinous variations gave to the celluloid strip the stimulating interest that goes with never-ending changes and provides a suspense which the spoken drama holds for an audience by means of the different tones of the actor's voice.

"When, the other day, William Van Doren Kelly, the inventor of the Prizma color process, told me that he had at last perfected his camera to that state of efficiency where the fringing of colors had been eliminated and besides the filtering through the lens of the seven primary colors together with shade variations had been accomplished as evidenced by test pictures, I knew the psychological moment had arrived to secure this wonder of wonders as a fitting accompaniment to my studio products. Kelly's invention is as far in advance of the ordinary process as tungsten is to the carbon filament of the incandescent lamp—so is Prizma to the black and white."

Meeker Gets New Post.

Although no changes have been announced in the personnel of the Prizma organization following the statement that Mr. Selznick has acquired the Prizma product, it has been made known that George Meeker, who has been general sales manager of Republic Distributing Corporation, has been delegated by Mr. Selznick to the Prizma forces, where he will serve in an executive sales capacity.

Prizma Pictures, it is cited in the Selznick statement can be projected through the regulation projection machines. No special equipment or apparatus is necessary as the Kelly invention is complete in the film when it is put into the projector. That this fact is appreciated is evidenced by the large number of theatres which have been selecting the Prizma color reels to present preceding the feature, or long picture, of the program, thus lending the whole program a touch of color.

In closing his announcement, Mr. Selznick said: "Prizma holds a unique and distinct place in the programs of the country, and we intend to make it still more valuable to exhibitors. If there is an improvement of any kind possible, the industry can rest assured we will not neglect it—and I believe there is much that can be done and accomplished for the exhibitor and the public.

William De Mille States Convictions Regarding Literary Growth of Screen

FROM the standpoint of the man of letters the motion picture industry stands on the threshold of its third great period of development. With this fact in mind, I spent the greater portion of my time while in New York in interesting well-known playwrights and novelists in the present and future possibilities of the screen."

Although Mr. De Mille is perhaps best known to the theatregoers of today as the director of Paramount-Artcraft special productions, he also occupies an enviable position as a playwright and essayist. His literary work won for him the friendship of some of the greatest American dramatists and writers, and this fact made it possible for him to carry through his recent missionary work.

Regarding the literary growth of the photoplay Mr. De Mille has the following convictions:

Showed Production Advance.

"The screen story firs assumed fictional form. That is to say, the motion picture at a comparatively early date ceased merely to be pictures that moved of Niagara Falls or a railroad train. Stories began to be shown on the screen. Those early efforts were often crude and sketchy, but they marked a distinct advance in the progress of the motion picture.

"The second stage came when these stories assumed dramatic form. The majority of photoplays produced today are in this form. By a process of experimentation a separate system of dramatic construction was developed from the screen as differentiated from the drama of the stage. This stage has been marked by the entrance of famous men of letters, whose works, either in the form of stage plays or novels, have been adapted for the screen.

"In the process of adapting novels or stage plays for the screen many necessary changes must be made. Critics often forget that the art of the screen is a separate and distinct branch of literary endeavor and they have critized the photodrama for these so-called 'liberties.'

Literary Era Is Third Development.

"Today the screen drama has reached the threshold of its third great stage of development—the literary era. By the phrase 'literary era' I mean that the photoplay is now ready to develop a literature of its own. No longer will it be necessary to adapt novels and stage plays to the need of the screen. Within the next few years we will see many of the great writers of the world writing directly for the screen.

"It was the conviction that the time was ripe for the entrance of writers of proven ability that led me to talk with various playwrights of note during my recent Eastern trip. These men will have to master a new type of dramatic style. They will have to forget many of the rules of their stage work and learn many new rules. But they are capable of making these changes, and before many months have passed I expect to see my work bear fruit."

"Proof of Picture Is in Box Office" Says Hobart, Praising "April Folly"

THE reason why Cosmopolitan Productions' pictures have been so successful for us and for our exhibitors is because we never lose sight of the box office angle. In other words, the element of popular taste plays a most important part in our productions plans, for we know full well that no picture can rightly be called a success if it doesn't draw at the box office."

Thus did Henry M. Hobart, vice-president and general manager of International Film Service, Inc., producers of Cosmopolitan Productions and Hearst News Reels, sum up the why and wherefore of his company's success since Cosmopolitan Productions made its first appearance on the motion picture horizon.

"After all, the proof of the motion picture is in the box office," continued Mr. Hobart. "A commercial failure overshadows whatever artistic success a picture may achieve simply because success in anything is measured today by the yardstick of commercialism. If a venture doesn't make money it's a failure. So it is with that idea in mind that we make our pictures, and it is with that idea in mind also that we exploit and market them. Our exhibitors must make money with our pictures —that's our first slogan.

Expense Is Never Considered.

"Taking the production end first, I can say for it, and I am sure that our exhibitors will bear me out in this, that we consider no expense in the making of Cosmopolitan features. Our star, Marion Davies, is too well known to the trade and the fans to require any introduction. Her box office pull has been well demonstrated in the past and her following is legion. Miss Davies is given only such stories as fit her rare personality. She is always surrounded by a cast of exceptional screen players and she has the best directors as well as the best in scenic assistance, etc.

"In support of this statement I recall to mind 'The Cinema Murder,' in which Miss Davies starred. This picture is a big financial success and is still in demand among exhibitors. This holds true, too, of 'The Miracle of Love,' which featured Lucy Cotton. The same elements that go to make up Miss Davies' starring vehicles go also in the making of other productions which feature Lucy Cotton and Alma Rubens, individually.

Promise Still Greater Exploitation.

"These productions, which are the first and only contributions made so far to the screen by Cosmopolitan Productions, proved to us that we are on the right track. They made big money and are still making big money for exhibitors everywhere. We have been in receipt of unsolicited communications from representative exhibitors to the effect that our pictures have made money for them and I have yet to receive one letter to the contrary.

"This brings me to 'April Folly,' Miss Davies' latest screen work, which will receive its first showing anywhere, at the Capitol Theatre, New York, beginning March 28. We have great hopes for 'April Folly,' because in our judgment it has every element of popularity and because it has every sign of a sure-fire box office success about it. In the first place it has Marion Davies for its star, and in the second place the story was written by Cynthia Stockley, who is one of our most famous authors.

"Then again, 'April Folly' will be given such a publicity and exploitation send-off as none of our former productions has had. That is saying a great deal, I know, when one recalls to mind the splendid publicity which surrounded 'The Miracle of Love' and 'The Cinema Murder.' I have no hesitancy in saying that the publicity and advertising on 'April Folly' will be a revelation to all the case-hardened film folk who think they have seen the best in exploitation."

Universal's Eastern Exchange Managers to Meet in New York City on March 22

UNIVERSAL'S exchange managers from all branch exchanges east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio will meet in convention at the Hotel Astor, New York City, on March 22 to discuss plans for the next season's sales campaign. This convention, which will last several days, will be followed by other conventions of Universal sales managers in other sections of the United States and marks the beginning of an elaborate system of conference and co-operation by which Harry M. Berman, general manager of exchanges, plans to perfect the sales machine.

The convention in New York City will afford the exchange managers in the eastern district under A. A. Schmidt an opportunity to see the opening on Sunday night, March 21, at B. S. Moss' Broadway Theatre of "The Virgin of Stamboul," Priscilla Dean's new super-production. Plans for handling this picture will form an important part of the convention business. The assembled film men, including several of the publicity men in the embraced territory, will hear talks by Carl Laemmle and other Universal officials. A dinner will be one of the features of the convention.

Those Who Will Attend.

Among the managers who will be present besides Mr. Schmidt, whose headquarters are in Cleveland, are George Uffner and Charles Rosenzweig, of New York; F. S. Hopkins, Buffalo; Herman Stern, Pittsburgh; E. J. Smith, Cleveland; Louis Baum, Cincinnati; W. D. Ward, Detroit; Ralph Abbott, Indianapolis; Edward Golden, and W. H. Hill, of Boston, and Vernon Garrick, of Philadelphia.

Second Convention at Chicago.

As soon as the exchange managers of the eastern district have returned to their homes, Mr. Berman will call the second convention at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago. This conference will include all exchange managers under George Burke and W. A. Chase, the two district managers for the Middle West. Among those to assemble in Chicago will be I. L. Leserman, Chicago; George Levine, Milwaukee; Edgar B. Haines, Des Moines; H. F. Lefholtz, Omaha; Joe Roderick, Minneapolis; Sam Benjamin, Oklahoma City; Barney Rosenthal, St. Louis, and J. H. Calvert, Kansas City.

The third convention will be held in Los Angeles, to which center Mr. Berman will call the following managers: Eugene Gerbasse, Denver; G. A. Hager, Salt Lake City; C. A. Nathan, San Francisco, and C. L. Theuerkauf, Los Angeles, as well as representatives from the southern states.

Berman Promises Surprises.

The final convention will be held in Seattle, it is contemplated, and will include Herman Lersch, Butte, Mont.; V. M. Schubach, Seattle; C. W. Koerner, Portland, Oregon, and Wallace Potter, of Spokane.

Original of North American "Strands" Will Have Festive Sixth Birthday

DURING the week commencing April 11 the Strand Theatre will celebrate its sixth anniversary and managing Director Jack Eaton is busily engaged preparing an elaborate festive program. The Strand Theatre was opened to the public on April 11, 1914, and became a success over night. It was the first theatre to present motion pictures in conjunction with a high class musical program.

When the management—the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corporation—announced that it contemplated showing motion pictures to the musical accompaniment of the large concert orchestra and offering vocal and instrumental soloists between films, the project was predicted a dismal failure by some theatrical experts. The news of the success of the Strand, however, was spread throughout the country, and in less than two years almost every city of any consequence had a large theatre offering similar entertainments.

Strand Theatres Found Everywhere.

Many of these theatres were named the Strand. The public, in many instances, was led to believe that these Strand theatres were conducted under the same management as the original Strand Theatre in New York. This belief was strengthened to some extent owing to the fact that the Mitchell H. Mark Realty Corporation owns and controls a string of Strand theatres throughout the country. For this reason Moe Mark, president of the corporation, has instructed all the managers of the Strand theatres operated under his management that these theatres will be known as "Mark" Strand theatres.

Mr. Mark and his associates have, ever since the theatre was first opened, endeavored to improve the shows. Thus the Strand Concert Orchestra, which on the opening night numbered sixteen musicians, today is an organization of over fifty men, all accomplished soloists. Much effort and expense have been devoted to the musical part of the entertainment at the Strand. For a time popular Symphony concerts were given every afternoon, preceding the regular program. The Strand also inaugurated a series of condensed versions of grand opera, sung by artists of international renown, and properly staged and costumed.

Here are a few statistical facts of special interest: During the past six years 1,095,000,000 feet of film have passed the Strand Theatre's projection machine. The lost and found department has turned over to its owners 78/65 per cent. of articles reported lost and several thousand dollars in cash. Thirteen thousand one hundred and forty performances have been presented. People to the number of 25,680,000 have paid admission since the opening night.

Carpentier to Remain Here.

Georges Carpentier has arrived, and after a consultation with Robertson-Cole officials the announcement is made that the European heavyweight champion will work in an eastern studio.

The story to be produced has been completed by Willard Mack, and negotiations will be consummated shortly for one of the indstry's best directors.

Duffy Resigns as Pathe's Short Subject Sales Head

FRANK DUFFY, for five years associated with the sales department of Pathe Exchange, Inc., and most recently short subjects sales manager, has tendered his resignation to Paul Brunet vice-president and general manager. Duffy is a good example of the possibilities offered every employe of Pathe exchange, Inc. He worked himself up through the ranks, and at every turn found reward for his services.

Sessue Hayakawa Signs Four Year Contract Renewal With Robertson-Cole

NEARING the end of a succession of dramatic triumphs, Sessue Hayakawa has just closed a new contract with Robertson-Cole, which will cover the next four years. Within a short time the new contract will go into effect, and soon after that Robertson-Cole will announce the title and nature of the first of the new productions.

According to the terms of the new contract Hayakawa will make only four pictures each year. From four to five months will be devoted to one of the four with the purpose of making it a super-feature. Money, time and care will be lavished so that these productions of the next four years will be the greatest of Hayakawa's career. The best of direction, deliberate casting, careful selection of locations, and close scrutiny of all stories will be some of the elements which will contribute to the success of these pictures.

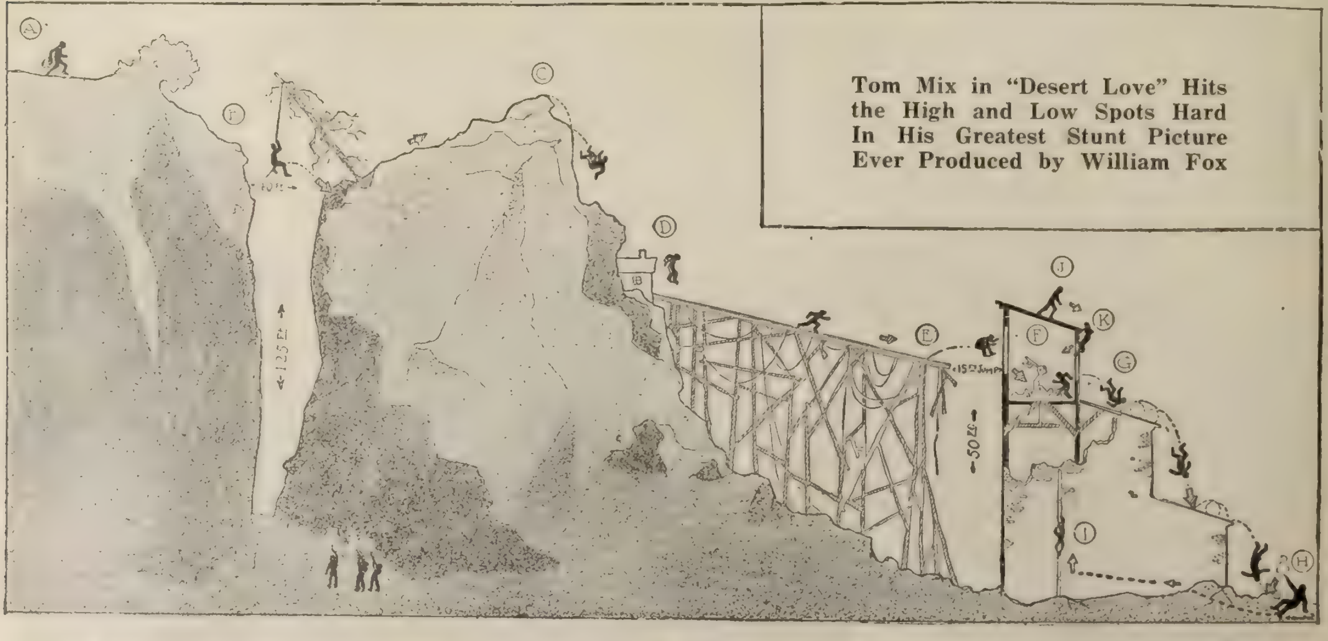
Through his Robertson-Cole productions, which have been made at the Haworth studios, Hayakawa has found a world-audience. It is his determination to fix himself in the good-will of his audience by even greater pains and care during the years which are still ahead.

Hayakawa is now searching through many books and carefully examining the scenario market for new stories in which to base his coming productions.

Special Showing on "Inner Voice."

On Tuesday March 23, at 10 o'clock in the morning, the American Cinema Corporation will give a special showing at the Strand Theatre, New York, of its first E. K. Lincoln production, "The Inner Voice." Mr. Lincoln is surrounded by Agnes Ayres, Ailey Hatch, Fuller Mellish, Walter Greene, Edward Keppler and others. This picture was directed by R. William Neill.

Tom Mix in "Desert Love" Hits the High and Low Spots Hard In His Greatest Stunt Picture Ever Produced by William Fox



(A) Tom Mix, without a gun, starts to rescue the girl imprisoned in old mine mill. (B) Lassoes old tree and swings across chasm. (C) Pitches headlong down precipice. (D) Lands on trestle and races toward the mill. (E) Jumps 15 feet to mill, crashing through window, frame, 50 feet above ground. (F) Lands in room and has fierce battle with villain, who throws him through window, after Mix has tossed the other's gun down to the ground. (G) Mix lands on shed roof and rolls off to roof below, falling from there to ground unconscious. (H) Discovers the gun and with mighty effort shoots at villain in window. (I) Crawls to leader pipe and climbs up side of mill. (J) Reaches roof and moves to edge. (K) Swings over edge of roof and down into room once more to find that his last shot had reached its mark and the girl is safe.

Marie Shotwell in Meighan Picture.

With the selection of Marie Shotwell for an important subtle characterization in "Civilian Clothes," the Paramount-Artcraft production Thomas Meighan is making in New York under the direction of Hugh Ford, this capable actress, star of both stage and screen productions, makes her first appearance under the banner of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Mr. Ford chose Miss Shotwell for the part after a careful deliberation over the requirements for the role, and the actress decided to accept his offer when she thoroughly understood the difficulties of the role, for, Miss Shotwell said, so long as the characterization is there it really matters not whethere one is starred or featured, for the public picks out the player who really does things.

Arbuckle Signs to Appear Exclusively in Five Reelers

IN response to the insistent demands of exhibitors, who for a long time have wanted him to appear in feature pictures, Roscoe (Fatty) Arbuckle has just signed a contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to appear hereafter only in five-reel feature comedy productions as a Paramount Artcraft star.

Mr. Arbuckle's new contract not only will bring him into five-reel comedy features exclusively, but also adds another to the list of Paramount Artcraft stars. In the past Mr. Arbuckle has been producing for himself, under the name of the Comique Film Corporation, of which Joseph M. Schenck is president and general manager.

Mr. Arbuckle has just returned to Los Angeles, after having signed a contract for three years, during which time he will devote his screen activities exclusively to five-reel feature comedies.

Arbuckle's departure from short comedies into feature work marks one of the most interesting developments of recent years and is a direct result of requests from exhibitors throughout the country for Arbuckle pictures of greater length.

Mr. Arbuckle will begin work at once in the Lasky studio at Hollywood.

Selznick Men Wide Awake at New York State Convention

THE Lewis J. Selznick organization was very much in evidence at the convention of the New York State Exhibitors' League, held in Utica on March 9 and 10. Representatives from the New York and Buffalo offices, publicity and exploitation men, and officials from the home office were on the job every minute and put much "snap" in their work. New York exhibitors were given a visual demonstration that the Selznick organization is a "live wire" in behalf of the showmen.

Miss Zena Keefe, the Selznick 1920 star, was the "Mystery Woman," for whom every girl in Utica was looking. Through the Utica Observer, Selznick offered $50 to the women who could pick out Miss Keefe on the street and identfy her.

The big surprise from the Selznick office came when each exhibitor found in his box at the hotels, or in his room, a copy of the convention number of the Selznick Bulletin, a newspaper gotten out on the spot.

Charles McClintock directed the "stunts."

Change Title of Vitagraph Film.

Corinne Griffith, the Vitagraph star, changed the name of her newest picture. The feature is an adaptation of the story by O. Henry entitled "The Memento," and it had gone half way into its celluloid life under that title, until Miss Griffith changed it. "The Garter Girl" is now its name.

Radin Pictures Makes Its Debut in the Independent Field; Has Popular Stars

ONE of the newest companies to make its appearance in the independent market is the Radin Pictures, which this week makes its bow to the state right buyers of the country under the guidance of Matthias Radin, president and general manager of Tyrad Pictures, Inc. This announcement does not mean that Radin has retired from the Tyrad organization. Such is not the case. He still continues as its active head and will operate the Radin Pictures entirely apart from Tyrad, handling separate and distinct product through the latter named company, so that the two will in no way conflict.

The first feature to be offered to state right buyers by Radin Pictures is a five-part drama of mystery featuring Frank Mayo, Ben Alexander and Claire MacDowell, entitled "Thru the Eyes of Men." This photoplay contains a story of the unusual type, one which lends itself to special exploitation. It is a clean drama of the human interest order and a box office attraction.

To Release Short Subjects.

That Radin Pictures does not intend to limit its product to feature subjects of length is evidenced by the fact that it will have ready for release on or about April 15 a series of twenty-four single part comedies released under the brand name of "Zip Comedies," starring Chris Rube, Florence E. Turner, Neal Burns, Ben Wilson, Bardine Burkette, Harry Mann and Mr. and Mrs. Carter De Haven.

On the same date a series of twenty-four two-part "Real Star Dramas" in which such prominent stars as Violet Mesereau, Mary Fuller, Zoe Rae, William Mong, Francis Ford, Grace Cunard, Violet MacMillan, Lena Baskett, Molly Malone, Irene Hunt, Franklyn Farnum and J. Warren Kerigan appear, will also be ready for distribution. The stars mentioned appear in different groups of releases in new subjects never before shown.

"Burlesque on Carmen" Proving Popular.

The Mickey Film Corporation of Chicago, owners of "A Burlesque on Carmen," starring Charlie Chaplin, for Illinois, report it has broken booking records with this Kremer attraction. In several instances Chicago theatres have booked Carmen for the same day and date, and many larger downtown theatres will show the comedy within the next few weeks. A partial list of the bookings secured by the Mickey Film Corporation follows:

Rialto (one week), Casino (two weeks), Hamlin, Logan Square, Howard, Atlantic, Davis Square, Wanda, Liberty, Clark, Twentieth Century, Gold, Plaza, Shakespeare, Star, Oakley, Rose, Rosette, Mabel, Emmett, Irving Park, Casimir, Magnolia, Ashland, Grand, Americus, Madlin, New Paris, New Lyric, New Era, New Cicero, Stadium, Karlov, Parkway, Argmore, New Park, Prairie, Tiffin, Monogram and Eagle Theatre.

Durant Sells Four Plays for Broadway Production

HARRY DURANT, of the Famous Players-Lasky organization, is turning his typewriter again toward the "legitimate" stage after several years spent in writing for the screen.

Mr. Durant now has four of his plays scheduled for New York openings—"The Beautiful Virgin," with which Georg Broadhurst will open the Broadhurst Theatre early in the summer; "The Man Within," a Napoleonic drama with Jose Ruben in the title role, to be produced by Oliver Bailey at the Fulton Theatre; "Neither Do They Spin," a comedy drama which Lawrence Webber will bring into his Longacre Theatre, and an unnamed melodrama which Producer A. H. Woods believes has all the elements of a sensational success.

In addition to these four plays, of which Mr. Durant is the author, he is to take a flier in the producing game himself with "Growing Pains," a comedy by Sidney Toler, and in which Ernest Treux will be starred. Mr. Toler is also the author of "The Golden Age," which George Tyler is now rehearsing and of "The Rag-a-tag-Man," which Sam H. Harris has listed for an early production.

Walter Miller in Artclass Productions.

Artclass Pictures Corporation announces that Walter Miller is to be featured in five productions which it will make for release through Robertson-Cole. Mr. Miller played one of the leading roles in "The Return of Tarzan" and was loaned to Selznick Pictures for "The Invisible Divorce." He is now playing opposite Betty Compson in her first picture to be made by her own company.

Consensus of Trade Press Reviews

Here are extracts from available reviews printed in the five motion picture trade papers. It is the aim to present one sentence that will reflect the spirit of the writer's opinion. The papers are indicated as follows: Moving Picture World (M. P. W.); Motion Picture News (N.); Exhibitor's Trade Review (T. R.); Wid's (W.); Exhibitors' Herald (E. H.).

The Hell Ship

(Madlaine Traverse—Fox)

M. P. W.—The story is one of such unusual quality that it holds the interest firmly.

N.—A vigorous story. One with a sustained punch throughout.

T. R.—Not one for sensitive folks. It contains many brutal scenes and nothing that is pretty or dainty.

W.—An unusual and forceful subject because of the striking difference of its plot from the general run of feature stuff.

E. H.—Contains action enough to hold interest every minute.

High Speed

(Gladys Hulette and Edward Earle—Hallmark)

M. P. W.—Is one rarely exceeded of its kind.

N.—Contains many thrills and exciting moments.

T. R.—"High Speed" is a high speed melodrama.

E. H.—It is a story particularly suitable for patrons deeply interested in automobiles.

Judy of Rouge's Harbor

(Mary Miles Minter—Realart)

M. P. W.—Is melodrama beautifully produced.

N.—Hectic melodrama fails to hit bull's-eye of truth.

T. R.—A strong attraction.

E. H.—Presents Mary Miles Minter at her best.

The Last Straw

(Buck Jones—Fox)

M. P. W.—Buck Jones featured in Fox Production which spins first rate western romance.

N.—Buck Jones makes debut in interesting western.

T. R.—A very entertaining Fox feature.

E. H.—The production is well directed and is an entertaining five-part subject.

Mary's Ankle

(Doris May and Douglas MacLean—Paramount)

M. P. W.—Presents Doris May and Douglas MacLean in well made farce comedy.

N.—A clean farce full of clever lines and situations.

T. R.—Will lure the eyes of the tired business man away from his troubles and make a fine antidote for the blues.

E. H.—An attraction to rcommemnd to your patrons and advertise strongly.

April Folly

(Marion Davies—Paramount-Artcraft)

M. P. W.—Provides fair entertainment.

T. R.—Serves very well as a background across which the winsome Marion flits like a joyous butterfly.

W.—Star pretty as usual, but story adaptation badly handled.

E. H.—A very novel story has been adapted, and the action is carried through the five parts in such a manner as to retain interest throughout.

The Blooming Angel

(Madge Kennedy—Goldwyn)

M. P. W.—From every standpoint the production is most enjoyable.

N.—Miss Kennedy saves poorly developed idea.

T. R.—Exhibitors will make no mistake in booking this cheerful program attraction.

W.—Here's a case of what was probably a good magazine story being entirely unfit for screen use.

E. H.—The play differs widely from the past productions in which the star has appeared and should give satisfaction.

Double Speed

(Wallace Reid—Paramount-Artcraft)

M. P. W.—Rolls on through numberless entertaining situations.

N.—Undue use of coincidence, but still highly entertaining.

W.—The subject stands as one to be spoken of only in terms of praise.

E. H.—A weakness of story and too apparent padding detract greatly from its effect. There are, however, a great many laughs and spectacular features counterbalancing these defects.

Footlights and Shadows

(Olive Thomas—Selznick)

M. P. W.—It serves to bring out the beauty of the star more than ever. There is no denying her personal attractiveness.

N.—A pleasing picture, with many strong points.

T. R.—Has a wealth of charm and reveals such lavish and lovely settings that it is sure to please.

W.—It is generally interesting throughout, well put together and attractive by reason of the star, who shows to her best advantage.

E. H.—Presents Olive Thomas in a typical role. It is excellently staged and the suspense is well sustained throughout.

The Fortune Hunter

(Earle Williams—Vitagraph)

M. P. W.—One of the finest comedy-dramas with a rural atmosphere that the screen has ever produced.

N.—Famous stage success made into entertaining picture.

T. R.—Gives Williams a capital role.

E. H.—Taken from Winchell Smith's successful stage farce of several years ago, makes splendid screen material.

The Paliser Case

(Pauline Frederick—Goldwyn)

M. P. W.—Sensitive, magnetic, vital, this Goldwyn star fulfils every requirement of her role.

N.—High-class melodrama which holds interest.

Respectable by Proxy

(Sylvia Breamer and Robert Gordon—Pathe)

M. P. W.—There are some strong and unusual situations in this six-part Pathe release.

N.—Artistic production and good interpretation lift story.

Seeing It Through

(ZaSu Pitts—Robertson-Cole)

N.—Heart interest story carries bewildering detail.

T. R.—Is a pleasing picture, offering a story rather out of the common.

W.—Short of advertising possibilities as well as a poor entertainer.

E. H.—It is unique, well produced, interesting throughout and entertaining.

His Wife's Friend

(Dorothy Dalton—Paramount)

N.—Has many good points which should satisfy.

T. R.—In point of melodramatic interest "His Wife's Friend" ranks with the best of the Ince productions.

W.—Murder mystery story doesn't register.

The Cinema Murder

(Marion Davies—Paramount)

M. P. W.—A fairly entertaining tale, but has not been adapted to the screen with any too much skill.

N.—Conventional story lifted through sumptuous production.

T. R.—Has all the ingredients necessary to the successful mystery movie.

E. H.—The picture will satisfy.

His Temporary Wife

(All-star—Hodkinson)

M. P. W.—Succeeds in holding the interest of the spectator from first to last of six reels.

N.—With such a cast and a title which sounds interesting this ought to get business. How well it will please depends on the individual. If your audience is critical they are apt to ask you questions.

E. H.—A social drama with a rather unique plot. Direction, however, has been handled poorly, and the screen version becomes monotonous.

Jubilo

(Will Rogers—Goldwyn)

M. P. W.—Amusing story of the American hobo.

N.—Will Rogers scores in charming picture.

Haunting Shadows

(H. B. Warner—Robertson-Cole)

M. P. W.—H. B. Warner scores big in Hampton adaptation of Meredith Nicholson story.

N.—H. B. Warner has a winner here.

Stronger Than Death

(Nazimova—Metro)

M. P. W.—Presents Nazimova at her best in a superbly pictured story of India.

N.—Nazimova's rare art is capitalized again.

Live Sparks

(J. Warren Kerrigan—Hodkinson)

M. P. W.—Is well made, its characterization is interesting, and its subject substantial.

N.—Is a well-balanced picturization of a simple but entertaining story.

T. R.—An entertaining comedy-drama, well directed, and registering as a valuable program attraction.

Sidelights and Reflections

THE good old days when the grocer or the butter and egg man pushed a long slender testing instrument into a firkin of butter or sliced off a tempting morsel of cheese and invited a customer to sample either article are evidently gone, never to return. And such a method of picking out a moving picture will probably never come into use. A hundred feet or so taken haphazard from a five-reel feature will hardly give clear and comprehensive knowledge of the nature of the story, the acting and the production, and the commercial value of all three. Booking pictures by sample will never become popular.

Nevertheless it is surprising what one short scene will reveal. While at the Norma Talmadge studio a few weeks ago I was invited into the projection room belonging to the establishment by Director John Emerson. There was a five minutes wait while a set was being rearranged and the director wanted to take advantage of it and have a short scene from "In Search of a Sinner" thrown on the screen. We seated ourselves, and the operator started his machine.

Before our eyes appeared that amusing bit that sounds so shocking to describe in words and proves such innocent good fun in film form—the incidents where the bored young wife sets an experienced vamp of generous proportions and an alluring display of back to lead her husband from the paths of rectitude, to which he adheres with an unfaltering but deadly monotony. By all the rules laid down for such a situation the wife's conduct is most unbecoming, but I only laughed at the little woman's anger and disgust when she found she had failed in her wicked plot. And spectators wherever "In Search of a Sinner" is being shown, are all laughing just as heartily.

Here is a sample scene that tells exactly the spirit of the entire picture, and explains why it is that subtitles and situations that seem to set at defiance the moral code made and provided for rebellious wives and frisky widows, are received with positive glee by ethically unimpeachable persons. The intent of the authors of the story is, of course, only to amuse, and no actual moral fracture takes place. But the thing that makes the whole series of social revolts on the part of the heroine merely innocently entertaining is the personality of Constance Talmadge. She is the embodiment of Georgiana Chadbourne, a young woman whose ingenuousness render her attempts to be shocking as unobjectionable as the antics of a playful kitten.

Sooner or later all actors learn that personality often has the deciding voice in their selection for a part. Constance Talmadge is blessed with the same wholesome impishness that made Lotta the idol of her day. The bald plot of "In Search of a Sinner" sounds racy, if no worse. There are laughter and wit and good taste in it, but no trace of sin. Weitzel.

Next week New York will see "The Idol Dancer," the picture that took D. W. Griffith to the Nassau, where fate staged a real "Lost at Sea" for him. WEITZEL.

"Girl of the Sea"

A Williamson Submarine Picture of Unusual Appeal, Released by Republic Pictures.

Reviewed by M. A. Malaney.

EXHIBITORS who have followed the progress of the deep sea photography invention of the Williamson Brothers will find "Girl of the Sea" the best piece of dramatic work they have turned out. It has all that is necessary for the success of a good photoplay, and in addition fascinating scenes below the water, all a part of a thrilling drama.

We recall that the first effort of the Williamsons was heralded as a new wonder and accepted as such by audiences everywhere. "Girl of the Sea" surpasses it in every way. The portions made under water are as clear as most pictures made on land. The story is almost entirely of the sea. In the forepart there is a very realistic sinking of a merchant ship on a reef of the West Indies. There is a tropical storm later on and then the deep sea pictures, which have not been overdone in the least.

The work of Betty Hilburn as the girl of the sea, who grows up on an uninhabited island after being cast adrift from the wreckage of the ship is another feature, especially her diving and swimming. She is pleasing to the eye in these scenes and full of pep in the dramatic moments. A giant octupus is used to provide some of the excitement, and it is the first time we have seen such an exhibition that did not look "faky" at times. Chester Barnett also gives a good interpretation of the role of Tom Ross, who has set out in search for missing papers in the sunken vessel, and finds the girl of the sea. Another member of the cast who deserves credit for his work is Alex Shannon as "Matt Cuttle."

According to the producer, the entire picture, story, directing and photography was produced under the personal supervision of J. E. Williamson. The pictures having been made on and in waters adjacent to the tropical islands of the West Indies, there was opportunity for many beautiful bits of scenery.

The Story.

Stephen Verrill, after locating a gold mine, dies, leaving the deed to the property to his widow and little girl. They live in the West Indies. The widow offers Capt. Ross, of the steamer Caribee, a third interest if he will take her to New York and help finance a company to operate the mine. While enroute a notorious trader named Cuttle, with the help of the mate, Allen, scuttles the ship. The wreck takes place on a wild coast, and as the life boat goes ashore it is seized and destroyed by a giant octopus. The little girl is washed ashore. Cuttle and Ross reach safety in a life-boat.

As Verrill apparently has no heirs his property reverts to the state, and Cuttle buys it. Ten years later Horace Allen, son of the mate, and Tom Ross, both back from the war, become friends. Horace tries to get Tom a job in the mines, but his father objects, saying he will not hire the son of a captain who had sunk his ship. Tom is sure that his father was an honorable man, and he determines to go to the southern sea, locate the wreck and clear his father's name.

Horace finances the expedition and they land on a beautiful island. There they discover Mimi. She is a nature girl, subsisting upon fruits and nuts and fish. With her aid Tom locates the wreck, dons a diver's suit, examines it and finds his father's remains with a knife stuck in his back. Suddenly he is attacked by a giant octopus, but is rescued by Mimi. Cuttle goes to Vergua, the seat of government and denounces Tom and Mimi when court action is taken by them. Mimi recalls the deed in the money belt she left in a cave on her island home. Court is adjourned until it can be produced. Then, as Mimi and Tom start for the island, the girl is seized by Cuttle and taken to his boat and a race to the island follows. Cuttle gets there first and threatens to kill Mimi and Tom if Mimi does not produce the deed. She gets it and Cuttle is just burning it when Tom appears and a terrific fight ensues. Tom is knocked into the water, and Mimi rescues him from the sharks. Cuttle, who also has gone overboard, falls a victim to a pirate of the deep. The mine is returned to Tom and Mimi after they had married.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines: A bewitching sea nymph—bewildering background of tropical beauty—a fearless diver and giant octupus—they provide the thrills in "Girl of the Sea."

She has courage and daring, beauty and grace. She is "Girl of the Sea."

Exploitation Angles: The press book on this picture contains some interesting stories of the octopus, obtained from the Smithsonian Institute at Washington, into which is worked a mention of the picture. These should be offered to your newspaper as feature stories. They are excellent reading. In your ads play up the photos or cuts of the girl in the diving costume and the scene of the battle between girl, diver and octopus. Don't fail to dwell on the merits of this submarine play compared to others made by Williamson Brothers, and be sure and tell your patrons that it is a drama, not just an educational production. The posters on "Girl of the Sea" are very attractive and should be used on billboards and as cut-outs.

"A Manhattan Knight"

Five Reel Fox Subject Presents Tense Melodrama Based on Novel by Gelette Burgess.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IT is seldom that a melodramatic feature holds such a well-sustained pace as does this five-reel Fox subject, adapted from a novel by Gelett Burgess, entitled "Find the Woman." Not only is the action swift and intense, but the production is full of original situations. It may be safely recommended as a "crook" story that possesses novelty and general appeal. It should keep the spectator in his seat from start to finish.

A pleasing feature of the number is its excellent introduction of the characters and types. Although many players take part, there is never any loss to remember who they are or what part they play. The types from low life are individual and interesting, such as Schmidt, the stool pigeon, the crook butler and others.

One of the unusual features is the simultaneous presentation of two rather breathless episodes, one of theft of some jewels and the visit of the young thief to his sister's apartments, the other a supposed police raid on the chambers of a crystal-gazing medium in the same building. George Walsh, who plays the hero, is soon up to his ears in both affairs and finds his hands full in saving the girl and her brother from disgrace.

The treatment is rather sketchy at times, and the long arm of coincidence plays a strong part, but this is all easily forgiven in the general fascination of the pictured events.

Cast.

John Fenton	George Walsh
Belle Charmion	Virginia Hammond
Gordon Brewster	William H. Budd
Their Uncle	Warren .Cook
Crook Butler	John Hopkins
The Family Doctor	William T. Hayes

Story by Gelett Burgess.
Scenario by Paul H. Sloane.
Directed by George A. Beranger.
Length, Five Reels.

The Story.

John Fenton, in "A Manhattan Knight," visits a crystal gazer in an effort to gain some knowledge of his parentage and also in a spirit of adventure. While in the medium's rooms a police raid occurs and he climbs the fire-escape to the apartment above. Entering by the window he finds a girl standing in an attitude of horror over the body of a young man, who has just shot himself.

The girl, whose name is Belle Charmion, explains that her half-brother, Gordon Brewster, has stolen some jewels from an uncle. He had attempted suicide, thinking the police would get him. Fenton conceals the brother in an adjoining room and impersonates him when the police arrive. Later he and Belle take young Brewster in an automobile to his uncle's home.

In the general excitement the jewels have been forgotten and Fenton goes back to Belle's apartment to search for them. By this time the family butler, who is a member of an underworld gang, has tipped off his friends and they rob Fenton of the jewels. At the butler's home a general scuffle ensues, following which Fenton recovers the jewels and learns the secrets of his parentage he had been seeking to find. An engagement with Belle follows.

He Visited the Crystal Gazer—Just Then the Police Raided the Place—He Dashes Upstairs and Finds a Girl Standing Over Her Dead Brother's Body—Such is the Action in "A Manhattan Knight," with George Walsh.

Exploitation Angles: Boom Walsh and work on the original title, "Find the Woman." It might be a good stunt to work the "Raffles" idea for this, using a woman and playing on the book title.

"The Evil Eye"

Benny Leonard Surrounded by Competent Cast in Fifteen Episode Hallmark Serial.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THREE episodes of the new Hallmark serial, "The Evil Eye," were given a private showing in the Wurlitzer Fine Arts Hall, on Thursday afternoon, March 11. Benny Leonard, lightweight champion, is the featured player of the serial, and is surrounded by a competent cast. "Below the Deadline," "In the House of the Blind Men," and "The Golden Locket" are the titles of the first three chapters, which give good promise for the remaining twelve.

This serial contains the sensational quality that the masses are looking for. It might be contended that the mysterious personage of "The Evil Eye" is played up too heavily. It is fantastic rather than realistic, and no doubt holds good with the super-melodramatic nature of the story. The line of thrills in which the author indulges has occasional variations from the regulation article; and as the serial advances the plot gains speed and intensity.

Benny Leonard is slightly camera-shy, and for some time has difficulty in holding his own in the midst of a group of real actors. But while the villain is nonchalantly walking away with the honors of the dramatic art, Benny is getting ready to land him one of those irresistible punches that have made the boxer famous. In the second and third episodes he has a chance to demonstrate his art, and spills some pretty wallops among the thieves in the house of the blind men.

"The Third Woman"

Robertson-Cole Presents Carlyle Blackwell in a Picturesque Story of Race Prejudice.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE motive of "The Third Woman," released by Robertson-Cole, assumes a race prejudice against intermarriage with Indians, though it would seem to be a matter of individual taste. The leading character is a half-breed, played by Carlyle. His father is a man of high intelligence and social station, yet his wife was a full-blooded Indian. The half-breed son marries a white girl in the end. The prejudice is individual as against individuals. It is a matter of natural selection.

While the subject-matter lacks vital interest and the story is not told in dramatic form, the treatment is picturesque, highly so in that portion portraying Pueblo life. It not only shows how the modern Indian differs from the conventional one of moving pictures, but touches him with new and romantic interest. Some of the camera views of the Pueblo village and tribe are veritable works of art. They are far more beautiful and impressive than any painting of the subject ever shown.

Carlyle Blackwell has a difficult role, one whose sympathetic appeal is very slender, but he carries it with dignity, and he puts up a mighty struggle when called upon to display physical prowess. The three ladies who "come into his life" typify the modern beauty of social aspirations, the humble Indian maiden and the plain little American home girl. It is made obvious from the beginning that the latter is to be "the Third Woman," thus depriving the story of any element of suspense. The whole product is a fair entertainment.

The Cast.

Luke Halliday	Carlyle Blackwell
Marcelle Riley	Gloria Hope
Eleanore Steele	Louise Lovely
Mo-Wa	Myrtle Owen
Judson Halliday	Winter Hall
James Riley	George Hernandez
Scar Norton	Walter Long
Tonawanna	Frank Lanning

Directed by Charles Swickard.

The Story.

"The Third Woman" of Luke Halliday's choice is modest Marcelle Riley, who loves him in secret. She bravely congratulates him at a party where his engagement to beautiful Eleanore Steele is about to be announced. Before the announcement is made there is a revelation. Blackmailing Scar Norton threatens Luke's father with exposure, and Luke overhears that he is a half-breed. In vain he begs his father to deny it. He turns on Norton with a deadly threat, if the word "squaw" is ever again applied to his mother. He then breaks his engagement on the pretext of a quarrel and leaves home.

In response to the call of the wild, Luke joins a band of Pueblo Indians and is given a place of honor by the tribe. At the Feast of the Shearing, a Pueblo festival, Luke is chosen by Mo-Wa and becomes her betrothed. Now the call of his white blood becomes dominant and he deserts the Indian maiden on the wedding eve. He is cast out by the tribe and wanders alone.

Chance leads Luke to where the Halliday mine is in operation. In a bar he is accused by Scar Norton of being a half-breed and his mother called a squaw. In the fight that ensues Norton kills an innocent spectator. He is about to be dealt with by quick justice, when Luke claims the privilege of killing him. He fights Scar Norton to a finish and chokes him to death. Marcelle Riley has wandered far to find Luke. Now she finds him and gives him the true-hearted love that was always his in secret. The Third Woman is the best of them all.

"The Deadlier Sex"

Pathe Releases Entertaining Comedy-Drama in Six Reels, Written by Bayard Veiller.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

IN this six-part Jesse D. Hampton production, written by Bayard Veiller and released by Pathe, there is a unique combination of humorous plot and pictorial charm that will entertain any audience. The basic idea is of a breezy and rather preposterous nature, and this renders some of the dramatic situations slightly unconvincing, but there is a wholesome appeal about the production as a whole that disarms criticism.

Not in a long while has a feature subject been shown of such irresistible scenic beauty, and the photographer, Charles Kaufman, has turned out some camera work of unvarying excellence. The director, Robert Thornby, has also achieved some splendid effects. The death of the father, in the opening reel, is a fine piece of suggestion, without the usual painful details.

Blanche Sweet is charming as Mary Willard, and Mahlon Hamilton is pleasing as the hero. The plot concerns a girl and man who are Wall Street rivals, warring over the possession of two railroads. The girl spirits her rival out into the wilds, where he is held a practical prisoner until his financial plans have gone by the board. Not until he has practically fallen in love with the girl does he learn that she is his financial rival. In an amusing climax they decide to join hands in matrimony and consolidate material possessions as well.

The Story.

Mary Willard, in "The Deadlier Sex," inherits the management of the railroad property at the time of her father's death. The girl wishes to make a success of the road in order to satisfy her father's dying wish that the stockholders should be protected. Pitted against her in Wall Street is a young broker, named Harvey Judson, a man who is not exactly crooked, but stops at little to gain his ends. Judson covets the railroad of which Mary is president, in order to consolidate it with one of his own.

Learning of a plot to raid her stocks Mary determines to kidnap Judson, and this she succeeds in doing. She has him conveyed to a beautiful wooded region, with a staunch guide to act as her protector and Judson's jailer. The latter, though free to move about, is a virtual prisoner because he does not know his way out of the woods.

There are a number of dramatic and adventurous moments, including a hand-to-hand battle between Judson and a French-Canadian trapper named Jules. Mary saves Judson from this fellow and later he saves her, and in the course of events they fall in love, with Judson still in ignorance of Mary's true identity. Later, when the facts become known, he swears to continue the rivalry, but in the end love prevails and they become business and matrimonial partners.

"Sinners"

Alice Brady Gives Fine Performance in Owen Davis Stage Success—Has Capable Support.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

REALART'S adaptation of the Owen Davis stage success "Sinners" is a convincing piece of work. It succeeds well in drawing a contrast between life on the primrose path, and the more simple, cleanly mode of living, with a satisfactory balance on the moral side. It leaves the spectator impressed with the wisdom of a righteous life, it preaches the doctrine of tolerance, and shames by comparison the ensnarer of the innocent.

Alice Brady, as the star of the production, repeats the success which she made in the same role on the stage. Her conception of the character of Mary Horton is delightful. She is always at ease, and succeeds in registering correctly a variety of emotions.

Augusta Anderson, in the role of Hilda Newton, gives one of the best character portrayals in the picture. A memorable scene is one of the earlier ones, which she holds alone in a retrospective mood. The keynote of this character is regret for a life of immorality. The entire cast, including Frank Losee, James L. Crane and Agnes Everett, is a capable one.

One of the pleasing features of the picture is the genuineness of the atmosphere in Mary Horton's home. The production contains suggestions of wrong-doing, but carefully avoids scenes which would be objectionable. What faults it has are technical, and interfere little with the enjoyment of the picture.

After struggling to gain a livelihood she finally comes in contact with Hilda Newton, also from Ponset Point, who has fallen in with evil associates and leads a life of shame. Hilda, regretful of her own misdeeds, realizes Mary's plight, invites her to occupy a room in her apartment, and employs her to do plain sewing.

Among the men who frequent Hilda's apartment is William Morgan. One evening he brings with him Bob Merrick, a man with whom he is trying to put over a business deal. Merrick, alive to Mary Horton's danger in the company of Hilda's friends, keeps an eye on her welfare. One day when Mary is on the brink of making the mistake of accompanying William Morgan and his party on a week end trip, she is suddenly called to her mother's sick bed. While she is at home Morgan determines to drag Mary to the level of his other feminine associates. He brings his party, including Hilda, to her home, where they are entertained in homely fashion by Mary's mother. Horace Worth, a former friend and admirer of Mary's, tries to make trouble for her by enlightening her mother and denouncing Hilda. Bob Merrick steps into the breach, exonerating Mary, and Morgan and his friends depart, leaving Hilda and Merrick behind. The story closes on the betrothal of Mary and Bob Merrick.

The story opens amidst the scenes of turmoil that inevitably result when a busy business man neglects a love-nurtured wife. Ailsa Randall (Mildred Harris Chaplin) is the neglected heroine and she is induced by another man's wife, who is in the same fix, to trot around in society and frivol her husband into a fine state of jealousy. It is an amicably unpleasant situation when both couples decide to spend a few weeks at the seashore together and invite a young social parasite, who has been the spoon in the mess kettle, to accompany them. Abused wife No. 2 runs off with the villain, but the plan is frustrated by the heroine, who has to do some fast, hard thinking in the final reel to save herself from an embarrassing predicament when her husband arrives on the scene. However, both affairs are adjusted satisfactorily and a double fade-out proves it.

"Dangerous Days"

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

AS a careful illustration of a printed work of fiction "Dangerous Days," as produced by Goldwyn, shows plainly that great pains have been taken in the treatment. This is always elaborate and at times picturesque, notably in the first scenes. In preserving the form of the novel, however, particularly in view of its many lines of action, the producers have done so at the expense of clarity. It is difficult to follow these diverse lines while watching the flying pictures and one distracts from the other. The average spectator is at loss where to securely place sympathetic interest. This distraction and shifting of interest becomes acute disappointment at the abrupt conclusion. We are led through devious paths with promise of entertainment, only to experience no compensating pleasure, even no relief, at the end.

The German spy and bomb plot of "Dangerous Days" is strictly conventional. The best part of the story is its unqualified wartime patriotism. This is sincerely emphasized in the subtitles. Next in merit comes the picturesque treatment of the burning munitions factory. The types are good in spots, honors going to those actors who have the largest opportunity. They are Lawson Butt as Clayton Spencer, Barbara Castleton as Audrey, Ann Forest as Anna, and the heavies, Stanton Heck and Farnk Leigh. "Dangerous Days," as presented at the Strand, is a painstaking attempt to artistically visualize a novel too complicated in the original to suit in that from clear and sympathetic screen production.

The Story.

"Dangerous Days" are those just before the war for the Spencer Steel Works. Rudolph Klein, German spy, is plotting to have his brother Herman, trusted employe, blow up the munitions plant. Herman, having been long associated with the Spencer concern, is reluctant, but he resigns on the ground that he cannot help to make shells to be used against the Germans. Clayton Spencer, head of the corporation, attends strictly to business, while his wife, Natalie, is occupied with gay social entertainments. She is also becoming interested in handsome Rodney Page, an architect in love with her.

At a ball both hosts and guests barely escape destruction by a powerful explosive concealed in a fountain pen. Clayton becomes sympathetically confidential with Audrey Valentine, whose son was among those who enlisted with the Canadians. Clayton's own son is secretly loved by Delight Haverford and more openly by impassioned Anna Klein, the young man's private secretary and the daughter of Herman Klein. Rudolph tries to embitter Herman against the Spencers because of his daughter's love for Graham. Graham is fond of her. He gives her a little wrist watch as a token of friendship. The infatuated girl is foolish enough to wear it. Rupert discovers it and uses his discovery to inflame Herman against the Spencers. Herman cruelly beats the girl, but he wants more proof. Anna escapes from her home and is taken to a quiet retreat by Graham. This is also discovered by Rudolph, and Herman is now bent on revenge.

When America enters the war an open rupture occurs between Graham and Natalie on account of the prospective enlistment of their son. He gives up the idea to please his mother. Clayton finds consolation in the society of Audrey, whose son has been killed at the front. Audrey secretly goes to work in the factory to do her bit. Anna Klein overhears a conspiracy in which her father agrees to blow up the factory. She escapes from her room by tying the bed clothes together, and hurries to save the works. She is too late. Even as she reaches the scene her father starts the conflagration.

Audrey tries to telephone the factory owner and gets caught in the ruins. Clayton and his son rush to the scene. He saves Audrey, but Anna dies in the arms of Graham. The latter now decides to enlist. His mother announces to Clayton that all is over between them. She expects to marry the handsome architect as soon as she gets her liberty. Graham is in uniform with his company when he proposes to Delight Haverford, asking her to wait for him. The last seen of him is when he is marching away.

"The Woman Game"

Selznick Produces Fascinating Society Drama in Which Elaine Hammerstein Is Starred.

Reviewed by Mary Kelly.

WITH a theme that stands the wear and tear of centuries and scenarios, a dramatic construction both forceful and original, "The Woman Game" is, no doubt, a production that will please modern tastes. In this, the favorite pastime of society consists of staging love affairs just for the mere sport or profit that may be found in the process, with entire disregard for the feelings of those concerned. The man and woman vitally affected, in this instance, happen to be of a worthier sort and the shallow intents and purposes of the others only serve to promote their ultimate happiness.

The all-important role of Amy Terrell, the girl who plays the game upon the instigation of her hostess, is handled by Elaine Hammerstein, whose youthful buoyancy and interpretative skill win admiration and sympathy by turns. Also she wears some charming frocks. Andrew Masters, the other "victim," is played by Jere Austin impressively, albeit with undue restraint. The selection of types for the other roles has been given careful consideration. Louis Broughton, Florence Billings, Ida Darling, Blanche Davenport and James Morrison are among these.

The pretentious indoor and outdoor scenes that comprise society's playground have been tastefully conceived, and produced with evident extravagance. Photographer and director have exercised similar skill in their respective accomplishments. The sub-titles serve a real purpose and are pleasantly "unstereotyped."

Length, about 5,500 feet.

The Story.

Amy Terrell and her mother are gently patronized by members of a certain social set who realize Amy's usefulness to them. At one of Mrs. Van Trant's house parties Amy is requested by her hostess to amuse Andrew Masters, whose vast wealth makes him desirable as a guest, but whose old-fashioned ideas in regard to women render him difficult to please. At first Amy refuses, but reconsiders when circumstances lead her to believe that Masters has become hardened and inconsiderate of the less fortunate because of his money.

Consequently, in a train of incidents that prove heartily amusing to the onlookers, Amy dresses the part and plays the part of the girl of simple tastes with remarkable success. Masters is interested in this different girl, whose most exciting game is romping with Mrs. Van Trant's youngest son. Then one of her friends plays false. He manages to let Masters know that Amy is cheating him, just before Amy herself has decided that she can no longer carry on the deception, since she realizes her love for him. Masters is hurt and disappointed and declines to hear her explanation. He prepares to leave.

Then once more Amy is victimized by Mrs. Van Trant who, in order to shield herself, inveigles her in a scandal with a popular young captain. Amy is subjected to the most unpleasant and unjust criticism. The news is carried to Masters, whose chivalry is aroused and who abruptly rises to her defense and announces that he intends to make Amy his wife.

Exploitation Angles: The title should be worked hard. It affords the best angle for exciting interest. It can be used in some such way as this: "The Woman Game." Time—Past, Present and Future. Place—Everywhere. Cast—Everyone. The universality of the theme must be impressed upon the public. Also the fact that it has been given an original twist in this production. Be sure to exploit it as a drama of high society.

"Uneasy Feet"

First Release of New Comedyart Films Proves Excellent Entertainment in Novel Form.

Reviewed by A. H. Giebler.

THE first release of the new Comedyart Films, which will be placed on the market by the Special Pictures Corporation beginning March 28, was given a private showing in Los Angeles to an audience of trade and newspaper representatives on March 9. According to an announcement made by Louis H. Thompson, president of the Special Pictures Corporation, the idea of Comedyart is to incorporate a comedy, a scenic and a topical or educational subject, all in one 2,000 foot unit that can be used with a five-reel feature to make up a well-balanced entertainment and save the exhibitor the time, trouble and money usually spent in shopping around for the few thousand feet of film necessary to arrange a diversified program.

The first release of the Comedyart subjects seems to accomplish this aim in an admirable manner. The main feature of the reel is the comedy, 1,400 feet long, entitled "Uneasy Feet." This is followed by a 400-foot scenic and concludes with a 200-foot novelty comedy called "In the Sweet High and Dry." In the long comedy the entire story is worked out without the use of a single sub-title and with the exception of a few flashes at the very last, in which are shown the upper forms and faces of the players, nothing but the feet, ankles, legs and hands of the players are seen. "Uneasy Feet" is nothing but feet, 1,400 feet of feet, and the whole thing is a tribute to the ingenuity and ability of Ward Lascalle, who directed the film. He tells a complete story, has his dramatic moments, his laughs, lots of them, and maintains perfect continuity, working out the whole thing foot by foot with nothing but feet.

There are fast feet, slow feet, dancing, prancing, slipping, sliding, gliding, staggering feet. Feet in French kid, and in "busted kicks"; feet that dance in perfect time; feet that stagger under a load of too much wine; feet that stamp in fury; feet that falter, and at the last, feet that forgive. The last few feet of film show the faces of the owners of the principal pairs of feet—and gets the biggest laugh of all, for the bodies that go with the feet are not at all in keeping with what would naturally be expected from looking at the pedal extremities.

The scenic part of the reel was photographed in the newly explored Zion Canyon in Utah and bears out the statement of the explorers that a more wonderful place than the Grand Canyon has been discovered. The scenic pictures are titled so that they tell a little story of their own, and they are beautifully colored by the Handschiegel process, and best of all, there is not a single tall and graceful explorer standing on a high rock and blotting out the grandeur of the scenery at any point of the film, and no dogs and no footage wasted showing a pack-train carrying the equipment of the party that shot the stuff.

The last 200 hundred feet of the film constitute a bright and snappy satire called "In the Sweet High and Dry," and shows a saloon before and after the passing of booze in a manner that gets lots of laughs.

The first unit of the Comedyart productions is distinctly good. The photography is excellent, the subjects well chosen, the titling bright and snappy, the whole 2,000 feet of film shows class all the way through It should be a welcome addition to any program, and a rare prize to the exhibitor who wants the diversified entertainment for his program all in one bright and snappy package. The Comedyart features will be released weekly through the Special Pictures Corporation branches that have been established in all exchange centers.

"The Blue Pearl"

Well-Constructed Mystery Drama Produced By Lawrence Weber and Distributed By Republic Is Enacted By a Talented Cast.

Reviewed by Mary Kelly.

THE appearance, disappearance and reappearance of a stolen gem gives rise to some many-sided situations in "The Blue Pearl," a truly thrilling photodrama. Crooks mingling with respectable society folk; husbands and wives engaged in mutual trickery; a detective who traces the crime until suspicion points to the woman he loves; a hypnotist who unwittingly sets the stage for the theft—these are some of the characters who become involved in various mystifying complications. Interest is at a high pitch throughout; the plot is logically though melodramatically unraveled; splendid acting is to be seen despite the absence of stars from the cast; and effective directing gives force to the whole.

Happily, the element of mystery is just strong enough, without being so predominant that the play suffers from an artistic standpoint. Certain human touches, not sensational but highly realistic, are not omitted as in many dramas of this type. A sprinkling of humor, too, helps to maintain the balance. Sub-titles seem unnecessarily scarce, but, in quality, are satisfactory. Elaborate settings attractive women and a display of extravagant gowns increase the esthetic value of the picture which has been ordinarily well photographed. The work of the entire cast is excellent.

Frederick Thurston	D. J. Hannegan

Story by Anna Crawford Flexner.
Scenario by Emma Belle Clifton.
Direction by George Irving.
Length, Six Reels.

The Story.

"The Blue Pearl," which belongs to a royal Rumanian family, has come into the dishonest possession of Frederick Thurston and Penrose Kent, the latter an unscrupulous gambler who moves in New York society. They manage to sell the pearl to Holland Webb, who buys it for Mrs. Kent, with whom he is carrying on a disgraceful flirtation, apparently without the knowledge of his unhappy wife, Laura, whom he has influenced to furnish him with the amount of money necessary for the purchase.

Meanwhile the police have been called to locate the pearl and to keep an eye upon Thurston, who is a suspect. Richard Drake, New York police commissioner and an admirer of Laura's, sets Wilfred, Laura's brother, to the task of trailing Thurston. In following out these orders, he discovers the perfidy of Webb by finding him with Mrs. Kent and witnessing the act of Webb's presenting her with the pearl.

Later that night a social affair is in progress at the Webbs'. A famous Russian pianist with hypnotic powers is the honored guest. After learning that he is a hypnotist, Mrs. Kent eagerly offers herself as a subject. While she is under his spell, lights are suddenly turned out, confusion ensues and by the time the lights again go on, the pearl is missing. Mrs. Kent is unable to tell whether a man or a woman snatched it from her. Drake is present and cross-examines each one, thereby finding sufficient reason for suspecting several. Meanwhile Thurston has been caught prowling about the windows, and is being pursued by another detective.

Everyone present is searched except Laura. Mrs. Kent demands that she be searched. Laura confesses secretly to Drake that she has stolen the pearl, which is inscribed with Mrs. Kent's and her husband's names, and which she intends to use as evidence in obtaining a divorce. The affair of Webb and Mrs. Kent then becomes generally known, the pearl falls into the hands of the police and the future holds out bright prospects for Laura and Drake.

Program and Exploitation Catchlines: "The Blue Pearl"—the Story of an Ill-Omened Gem That Turned a Gay Social Affair Into a Rigid Police Search in Which Every One Present Was Suspected, None Convicted.

"The Blue Pearl," Who Had Stolen It? It Baffled the Police. It Baffled Everyone Else. And It Will Baffle You.

A Brilliant Drawing Room Scene. Sudden Darkness. Gem Disappears. Who Was Guilty?

Exploitation Angles: The mystery angle gives the best chance for sensational advertising. The question "Who Was Guilty?" is a big one and can be worked in various different ways so as to arouse curiosity. Evil-minded crooks playing the social game are ever interesting to movie fans and therefore should not be overlooked in advertising. Emphasize that while it is melodrama it is high class and ought to attract even your most particular patrons.

"King Spruce"

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

"KING SPRUCE," a Hodkinson release, is strikingly graphic in scenes of the North woods. It is against interesting background of wild woodland and rude lumber camps that most of the action takes place. This necessitates skilled photography, fine in detail and effective in contrasts of light and shadow. The camera work is of such high order that, whether it be of mountain torrent or falling monarchs of the forest, it abounds with the vivid imagery of the truly picturesque.

The story is straightout melodrama. Accidents and incidents dominate the characters. They are controlled by circumstances, woven into a pattern designed to present them in heroic or villainous roles. Attention is focussed upon a central figure of kindly motives and great physical strength. He is an optimist who stands up for the right and brings those guilty of wrong-doing to either punishment or to repentance. This is largely done by his superior physical strength. He wins out whenever it is called into play, and brings about a happy ending for those who deserve it and for some who do not.

Mitchell Lewis plays the lead with good-natured confidence, and his support is strong, notably Melbourne MacDowell as John Barrett and Mignon Anderson in the dual roles of Elva Barrett and Kate Arden. The other types are well-chosen without exception. Care shown in preserving the atmosphere and mood of "King Spruce" and the capable performance of all its actors rank it as good melodramatic entertainment.

Cast.

Dwight Wade	Mitchell Lewis
John Barrett	Melbourne MacDowell
Elva Barrett Kate Arden	Mignon Anderson
Colin McLeod	Arthur Milleter
Rodburne Ide	James O'Neil
Nina Ide	Betty Wales
Tommy Eye	Joe Ray
Ladder Lane	Gus Soville

Directed by Roy Clements.
Length, Seven Reels.

The Story.

"King Spruce" is personified in John Barrett, lumber magnate of the North woods. His domineering character is shown when his daughter Elva falls in love with a school teacher, Dwight Wade. Barrett conspires with his foreman, McLeod, to entice Wade away to the lumber camps, and finally decides to accompany the gang of men himself. He starts in to eject and burn out all "skeeters" who have settled on the land without domiciliary rights. Wade has shown his fighting blood by thrashing McLeod for an act of cruelty, and he now vainly opposes Barrett from motives of humanity.

From the first shack burned emerges a wild girl, Kate Arden, who sets the forest afire in revenge. There is another vengeance awaiting Barrett. Kate is his own daughter by the wife of a woodsman who has waited years to get even. It is he who ties Barrett to a tree, where he must be burned in the fire now raging, but he is rescued by Wade.

Barrett now acknowledges Kate to be his daughter. When his daughter Elva comes to take care of him the resemblance between the two girls confirms his confession.

Barrett attempts a half-hearted redemption by bribing his foreman to marry the wild girl, but he is brought to his senses by Wade and Elva. Wade has become a power through his feats of strength and kindly humanity, and he finally wins the high regard of the spruce magnate himself. He is given a partnership in a newly organized business by Barrett, and Elva, to use her own terms, is thrown in for good measure.

"Trailed by Three"

First Two Episodes of New Fifteen Episode Pathe Serial Have the Necessary Qualities of Thrill and Action.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE opening of this new fifteen episode Pathe-Beck serial which was written by Charles T. Dazey, author of "In Old Kentucky," attended by a wealth of mystery and rapid action. In fact the first reel is characterized by that speedy quality which is often deferred until a serial is well under way. Not so with "Trailed by Three," for from the word "go!" the screen is a busy place. The plot is well defined and interesting, and the action has a convincing punch. One of the first thrills handed out to the spectator is a study in roof scaling by Frankie Mann. This young woman, who is the star of the serial, gets over roofs and down fire escapes in a startling agile fashion; and with her last daring drop lands in an automobile which awaits her below.

Stuart Holmes is also on the job in the role of the double-dyed villain. His partner in crime is John Webb Dillion, who also gets away with much that is akin to murder, in professional style. Wilfred Lytell does good work as the hero, and John P. Wells and William Welsh are also doing well. The serial is carefully directed and promises to be a favorite.

Cast.

Alice Creighton	Frankie Mann
Michael Casserly	Stuart Holmes

Story by Charles Turner Dazey.
Direction by Perry Vekroff.

Length, Fifteen Two-reel Episodes.
Produced by Arthur F. Beck Serials Productions, Inc.

The Story.

The story of "Trailed by Three" has to do with the pursuit of a number of valuable pearls with which Anoto, chief of his tribe, on the island of Manoa, hopes to buy the freedom of his people. With this in view he starts for New York in company with Alice Creighton, the daughter of a missionary, who has sworn to aid him to accomplish his ambition.

Anoto's plan is overheard by one Rankin, who has established himself ruler of Manoa, and enslaved its inhabitants. He orders his lieutenant, Roscoe Trent, to follow Anoto and Alice, and to gain possession of the pearls at any price.

When they arrive in New York, Alice hurries to Carewe & Son, noted jewelers, and conscious that she is being followed, drops the bag of pearls in Tom Carewe's hand, as he stands in the doorway of his father's establishment, and runs, pursued closely by Trent. She climbs to the roof of an adjoining building, crosses to the other side, and descending by the fire escape, is hurried away in an automobile that awaits her. In her flight she finally climbs to elevated railway, and steps on the train which moves out just as Trent gains the platform.

In the meantime, Casserly, who gains admittance into the homes of the rich by forging letters of introduction, makes his way into the home of the Carewes as an invited guest. He is therefore in a position to aid Trent, who is an old friend. And at the close of the first episode Trent has entered the Carewe home, and the pearls become the center of a fierce struggle, which ends with Casserly, from his point of vantage behind the portieres, holding a revolver at Tom Carewe's head.

At the beginning of the next episode Jane turns out the lights, the bullet intended for Tom goes wild, and Trent makes his getaway with the pearls. Then the scene shifts to Arizona, where Tom, Alice and the villainous Casserly, who pretends friendship, are in pursuit of Trent. The thrill of this episode occurs when Trent succeeds in captivating Tom and Alice in a cabin, where he binds them hand and foot, and threatens Tom's life with a scorpion. At the moment Anoto crawls through the window and sets Alice free, and with Anoto's gun she shoots the scorpion from above Tom's head. The chase then heads for San Francisco, where Jane is lured by Casserly into a Chinese joint. Tom follows, and in trying to find Jane is dropped into a pit, which is immediately flooded with water. Anoto appears on the scene in time to save Tom, by lowering a blanket to his assistance. In the meantime Alice is struggling for her freedom, and in throwing a bowl of gold fish at Casserly, it misses him and crashes into the street, attracting the attention of Tom and Anoto, who climb a drain pipe and enter the room, and at the close of the episode some Chinese gangsters who have entered the scene are about to kill Tom.

"Money Talks"

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ONE of the funniest comedies of the season is the Fox Sunshine, "Money Talks." The humor is clean, and there are present none of the objectionable features that are too often found in this otherwise excellent brand of comedies. The plot is a funny complication of love and crookedness, and concerns two men who are rivals for the hand of the same lady. The situations which arise as one tries to avoid the other are excrutiatingly funny, and the settings against which most of the action takes place are extensive and quite elaborate.

After various attempts at getting the bride, the groom and the minister together, and much scurrying, shooting and other comedy tricks, one of the expectant bridegroom finds himself shut in a room in which there is a safe, and in the safe several bags of money. On opening the strong box he finds that his friend, the king of safe crackers, is already on the job, and together they try to make a get-away. One of the best scenes in the picture occurs when one of the robbers tries to hide in a coat of mail. The mail-coated figure falls on the floor, and as the pursuers seize it the man escapes and they are left with the dismembered armor in their hands.

When the police and the criminals arrive in the open there occurs one of the funniest automobile chases that has ever been screened. Telegraph poles to the number of at least a dozen fall before the onslaught of motor power, and finally the situation straightens out and the thieves and the lovers and the money find their respective places. The principals of the cast are Mack Swain, Jack Cooper and Gertrude Selby.

COMMENTS

HER BRIDAL NIGHTMARE (Christie).—A neatly constructed, entertaining two-reel comedy, with Colleen Moore in the feminine lead. It consists of a series of wholesomely funny scenes in which one of the bridegroom's rivals causes a great disturbance. The bridegroom's clothes are stolen by a paid agent, who also bags the wedding presents. The arrest of said bridegroom when he tries to follow the thief up the fire-escape inspires the bride to suicide. Her courage fails her, however, at the last moment because the water looks so "mussy." She is kidnapped by the thief whom she tries to employ as her assassinator. Many amusing incidents happen before the bridal pair finally meet for the performance of the marriage ceremony. Included in the cast are Eddie Barry and Earl Rodney.

THE GUMPS (Celebrated Players Film Corporation).—"Andy's Dancing Lesson." Sidney Smith's famous cartoon characters, have lost nothing and gained everything in their transit from the funny page into movies. The first of these comedies shows Andy's somewhat pained efforts to become a tango tripper. Min, on the sly, takes a few lessons also, and they both subsequently demonstrate their ability and incidentally their inability at a formal ball. A hilariously funny number.

ANDY GOES FLAT-HUNTING.—Andy, in the second comedy, accompanied by Min, starts out to beat the high cost of renting. A process which convinces him that in comparison with other landlords his own is a philanthropist. His experiences almost effect his mental collapse, as well as a martial fued. However, the film ends with a 'Home, Sweet Home" scene. A timely subject treated in a clever way.

A LION'S ALLIANCE (Century).—A two-reel comic, written and directed by Fred C. Fishback, with Merta Sterling and Bud Jamison in the cast. After a series of park flirtations the scene changes to a beauty parlor and athletic establishment. The real fun begins when a cage of lions is released.

BETTER EQUIPMENT

CONDUCTED BY E.T. KEYSER

How Artistry and Experience Serve in Putting the Punch in Poster Publicity

THE better posters are, the more crowded auditoriums will be, for a great poster is a tremendous asset to photoplays, whereas a poor one is a liability. Above all things a poster should be attractive.

To attract only, is not sufficient, for there is a decided difference between the words "attractive" and "attract." A lady with a green complexion will "attract" but she will not be "attractive."

Of course, she can be used as subject matter for a poster of a bizarre type—but that type of poster never did and never will sell motion picture tickets.

It merely attracts without being attractive. It is the easiest kind of poster to make, but it lacks all advertising value.

To make a poster that attractively depicts real people, in a situation that arouses an elemental human emotion, is to produce a poster that is bound to be a box-office success.

If all the world loves a lover, it is doubly fond of a pair of lovers, and whenever these are properly, artistically and convincingly depicted on a poster, an extremely large section of the public will gladly pay to see them act the parts.

Posters That Make Appeal.

The Ritchey Litho Corporation produces posters that do make an elemental emotional appeal—and they do it in an absolutely convincing manner.

It is enabled to do this by having at its disposal a complete organization of advertising experts, poster artists and poster printers all working under a harmonizing leadership. And it is all necessary, for back of such a design must lie a tremendous knowledge—a knowledge of mob psychology—a knowledge of human anatomy—a knowledge of artistic and natural coloring.

To make such posters is an extremely difficult matter, nevertheless it is absolutely essential that the exhibitor should have them—indeed they are as necessary to him as fine window displays are to the merchant—and they were developed to perform a nearly similar service.

Unlike the show window, they are not limited to a given location, but can be posted broadcast throughout the land.

Should Speak Louder than Words.

Besides being attractive there are other qualities that a fine poster should possess.

Tell Us Your Troubles

WHENEVER any exhibitor or house manager runs up against a snag in the matter of equipment—its choice, use or installation; whenever you are in doubt as to just what you should do to make a new house attractive or improve an old one—ask the "Better Equipment" Department and we will dig up the dope for you. BUT don't forget to enclose a stamped return envelop with your inquiry.

It should have the quality of appearing "real" so that "the man on the street" can understand it. It should speak louder than words can, and it's message should carry an absolute conviction.

It becomes obvious that such posters cannot be designed by an individual artist, no matter how talented he may be, if he has only studied art in the abstract, nor can they be printed by an ordinary lithographer. They can only be executed by a complete organization of poster specialists. In the Ritchey Litho Corporation are men who have studied art essentially from the advertising standpoint, which gives them a tremendous advantage over the more abstract students of art.

A brief survey of the posters printed in America shows that it is not possible to overestimate such advantages, for a large percentage of the work turned out by non-specialists has no advertising value, nor any other value whatsoever.

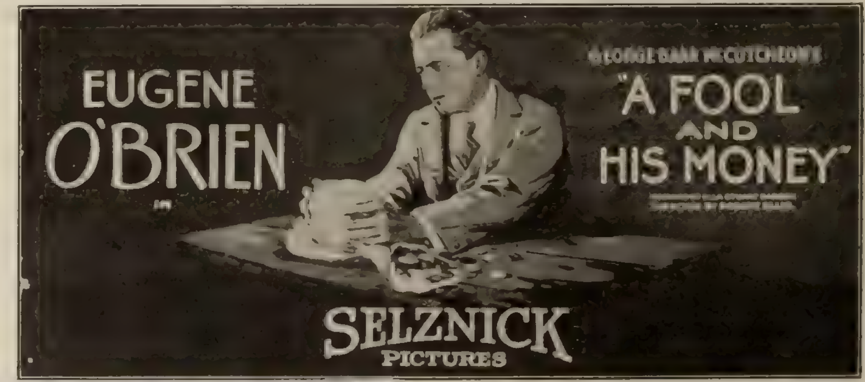
Few people stop to consider that advertising is one of the great arts—and that poster advertising is one of it's highest developments. To even criticize posters constructively requires long years of intensive study.

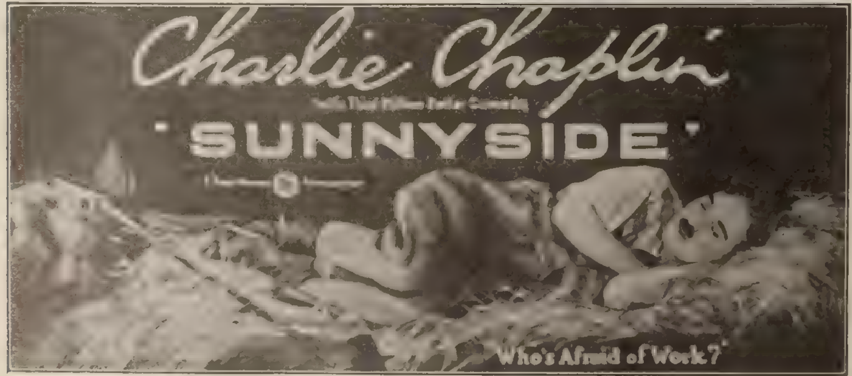
It is not possible for the average business man to have an expert knowledge of the quality of posters, although he realizes perfectly the great importance of having good ones.

Founded Upon An Ideal.

The Ritchey Litho. Corporation is an organization founded upon an ideal. An ideal that had long been in the mind of James V. Ritchey when the corporation, of which he is the president, was formed.

Before that he had been at the head of vast business enterprises that spent hundreds of thousands of dollars for poster advertising. Despite the enormous sums expended, he found that it was quite impossible to secure the kind of posters he was insistent upon having—real posters—convincing posters—powerful posters with a positive advertising value! Although that was many years ago, even then there was a man who could make that kind of poster. That man was Daniel Petigor, the founder of the Poster Artist's Association of America, and universally conceded to be one of the greatest poster color artists in this country.





Some Ritchey Twenty-four Sheet Posters

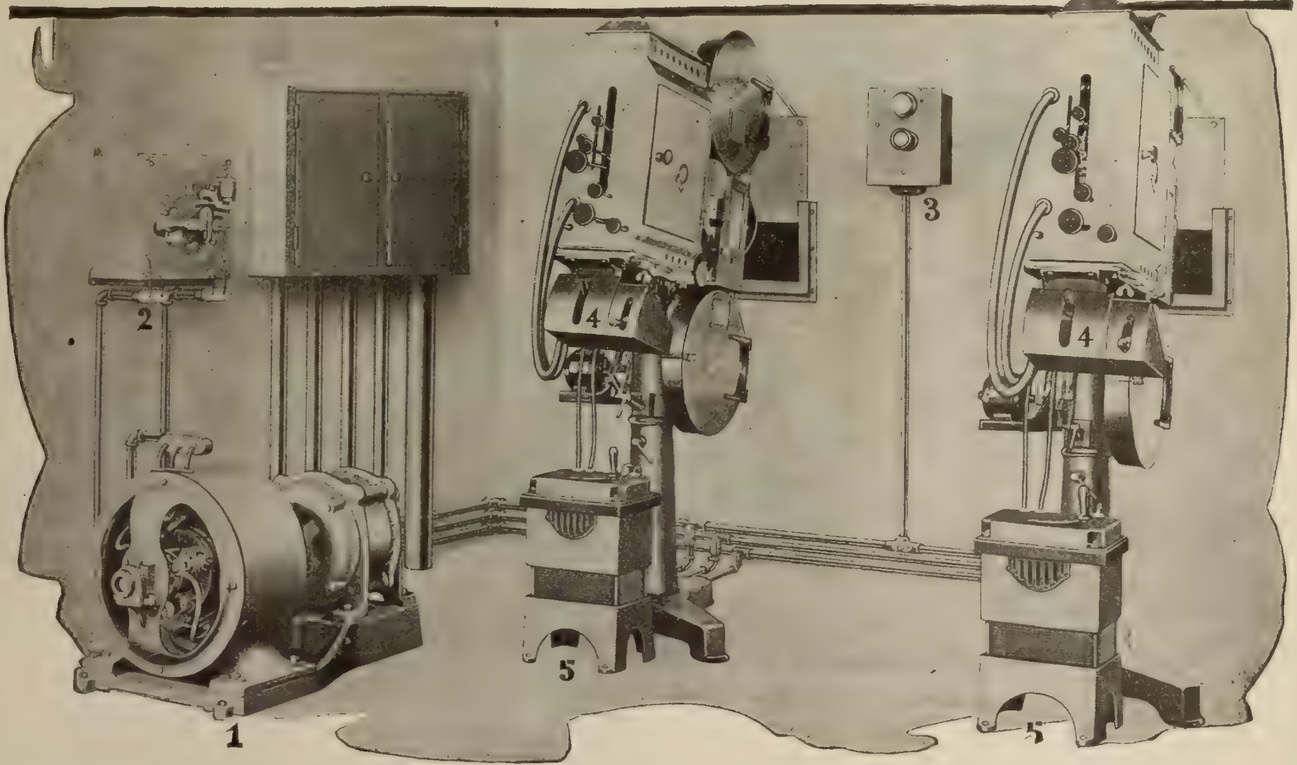
That aided the advertising campaigns of Selznick and First National.

Knowing this, Mr. Ritchey considered him the one man big enough for the purpose he had in mind. The result was the formation of the Ritchey Litho. Corporation, Mr. Petigor becoming vice-president.

Every Man Hand Picked.

Every man now in the organization has been literally hand picked from the industry. Each one of them is an eminent poster

A moving picture theatre is a store with just one kind of merchandise to sell the public—good pictures.



Better Pictures Mean Larger Audiences

Screen, projection machine, film and lamp all contribute to the quality of the pictures but the light source is of prime importance.

Arc lamps operate more efficiently on direct current and produce a steadier, whiter light. To secure direct current from an alternating current supply, reduce it to the proper voltage, and eliminate interruptions between reels, the General Electric Company recommends the motor-generator compensarc shown above:

1. A motor generator connected to any supply voltage, either alternating or direct current and delivering direct current to the projection lamps at the proper current and voltage.

2. Motor starting device which starts the motor generator and automatically shuts it off when lamps are extinguished.

3. Control panel with ammeter for reading current and field rheostat by which the current at the arc can be increased or decreased.

4. Two short circuiting switches mounted on the projector pedestals to enable the operator conveniently to shift from one lamp to the other, without interruption between reels.

Emergency equipment: It is also advisable to use A.C. Compensarcs (5) connected to the lighting circuit for use in case of failure of the power circuit to which the motor generator is connected.

With such equipment an exhibitor is assured of the best possible quality of light for his pictures. Compensarcs are safe, easy to operate, efficient, economical and reliable.

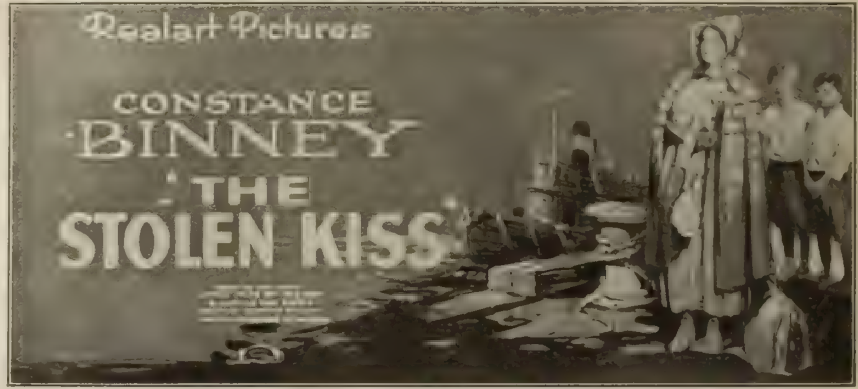
specialist with a reputation that is built upon great native talent, plus long intensive training. Among them are such men as Ira D. Cassidy, A. Wilbur Crane, Domingo Francis, Marius Periconi, Harry M. Guthrie, Ralph Iligan, Michael H. Lipman and a host of other well-known artists.

If all posters were designed by men of this calibre there would be mighty little demand for a poster censorship, for a poster is only offensive when it is vulgarly treated.

The same subject matter that is often decried can be so handled that it's appeal is intensified, and at the same time it will in no way be open to criticism by the most punctilious observer.

For posters are sometimes offensive, not on account of their subject matter, but rather on account of the crass vulgarity of their design and execution.



Two More of Ritchey's Twenty-Four Sheets.

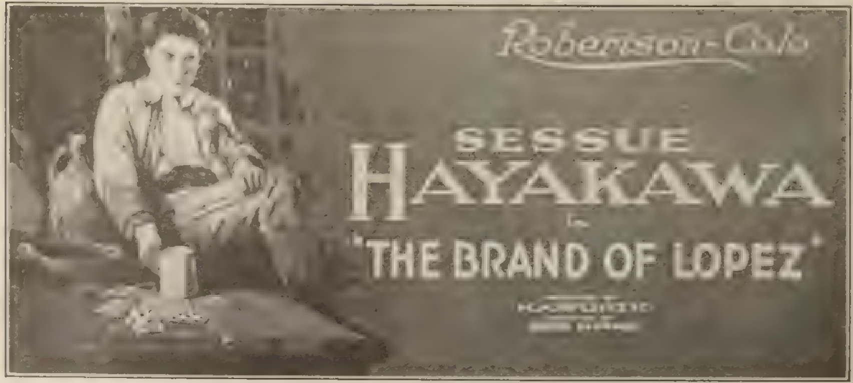
Applies to Coloring as Well.

The same thing applies to poster coloring as well. Color combinations can be crude, loud, vicious, and offensive. On the other hand there can be pure and brilliant color combinations that are much more effective, and tremendously more attractive.

Is it possible to conceive of stronger color than that which appears in the tail of a peacock? Or on the wing of a butterfly? Or in the sunset skies?

Or, it might be added in a Ritchey poster?



Strong, brilliant, pure color must be used to make a really great poster, but such color is exceedingly difficult to use in an attractive and refined way. Only a very great poster artist can do it, and only a highly trained poster lithographic artist can reproduce it.

Men Who Can Do Things.

In the Ritchey organization are men who do these things successfully, as the originals of the posters reproduced herewith give ample testimony.

Such posters as these add very definitely to the value of the film they advertise. They make a strong selling argument for the distributor as well—for when he can say of his photoplay that it stars a great actor—that it's scenario was written by a great author, that it was produced by a first rate director—the Ritchey organization declares that he has only to add that the posters are Ritchey posters, and the exhibitor will at once know that the film in question is bound to be a box-office record breaking program feature!

Two New Chicago Houses Adopt the Typhoon Fan

THE Typhoon Fan Company of New York and Chicago have recently closed contracts for the entire cooling and ventilating of two of Chicago's largest and most beautiful new theatres—the Panacea and the Strattford.

Ventilation has become one of the most important items in theatre construction and the Typhoon Company this year are showing great activity.

A new branch office of the Typhoon Company has been opened in Philadelphia, corner Thirteenth and Vine streets, where Jack Brown, experienced motion picture expert, has been put in charge. Mr. Brown reports that he has already closed in his territory several important contracts for the Typhoon system, and before the arrival of the hot weather he fully expects to close many of his present prospects.

Increases Capital Stock.

At a special meeting of the directors of the Typhoon Fan Company, held in New York City recently, it was decided to increase the capital stock of the company one hundred thousand dollars ($100,000).

This increase in the capital stock is made necessary by the great improvements being made in the construction and the equipment of the new Typhoon factory, and a considerable portion of the money will be used for the equipment of Typhoon offices now being opened in several of the larger cities.

Equipment Note.

Says G. Gallagher of the Strand Theatre, Atlanta, Ga.:

Cashiers are nervous. Granted! They are often seen chewing tickets. Granted! Some patrons are sensitive. Granted! Do they like to handle a ticket that is wet and bitten? They do not! Granted!—Enterprise Square Dealer.

Why not get an automatic ticket seller and restrict the cashier to chewing the rag?

PEERLESS STANDARD PORTABLE PROJECTOR

is ideally adapted to your requirements. Because you can project it as slowly as you like without flicker! Or at high speed if you like.

Price as shown $275
Also Made With Enclosing Magazines

Motor (or hand) drive and rewind at any speed.

Film threads easily, runs in a straight line without twists or turns and where you can see it. Studios and directors use it to cut and edit film as easily as on a rewind table.

Less flicker at three-quarter speed than any other projector at normal speed.

Triple, meniscus, bi-convex, French condenser lenses.

Monoplane Mazda lamps.

Frame and supports all of aluminum.

Wide-faced, helical cut, bronze on steel, noiseless gears.

Oilless bearings throughout. Westinghouse universal motor.

Operates on 32-volt, 110-volt or 220-volt line current A. C. or D. C. or on a small portable storage battery, or, when no electricity is available, on the wonderful Peerless Hand Driven Electric Generator weighing only fifty pounds!

George Feinberg Reports Numerous Simplex Sales

GEORGE FEINBERG, of the Teco Products Manufacturing Company, of Minnesota, which is rated among the leaders of the Simplex Distributing forces, recently spent a week in New York. It developed that since August last the Teco company had taken orders for not less than two hundred and twenty-seven Simplex Projectors in its territory, which includes Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Northern and Eastern Iowa and Northern and Western Wisconsin.

Mr. Feinberg was particularly anxious that proper arrangements for deliveries of a large number of the machines included among the two hundred and twenty-seven mentioned should be made through the Simplex factory.

Minnesota Installation.

Howard Theatre, Alexandria, 1 machine; Strand Theatre, Blue Earth, 2; C. W. Wrage and Son, Cass Lake, 1; F. E. This Big Generating Plant Lighted "Roads of Destiny"

WHEN Goldwyn Pictures Corporation went out into the desert to shoot scenes for "Roads of Destiny," a lamentable lack of public service corporation supplying that district with illumination was encountered. But that didn't bother Goldwyn for a minute.

Louis Kolb, the corporation's chief electrician, had provided for this contingency by taking a trailer along, and on this trailer was mounted about $4,500 worth of juice-producing mechanism in the form of a 100 horse power six-cylinder gasolene motor connected by a flexible link coupling to a 500 ampere, 100 volt, two-wire, interpole, compound wound direct current generator.

"Roads of Destiny" Well Lighted.

These, together with a water-cooling system, a switchboard, a starting motor and battery were mounted upon a cast-iron base, constituting a private electric plant that eliminated all lighting difficulties and made "The Roads of Destiny" well illuminated thoroughfares.

Mr. Kolb is enthusiastic regarding the efficiency of the system and predicts that such apparatus is bound to become popular.

The illustration gives a good idea of the installation of motor, switchboard and giant radiator.

Show Motion Pictures Anywhere!

With the new, portable American Projectoscope you can show motion pictures anywhere—on a white wall, a window shade, even on the ceiling. Uses standard film. Runs forward or backward. Film can be stopped at any point and held stationary on the screen. Ideal for use by directors and film editors in examining film—for exhibitors to use in private offices to view features while the theatre screen is in use.

The AMERICAN PROJECTOSCOPE

This new, compact, easily-portable little projecting machine carries like a suitcase—is fool-proof—can be operated by anyone—uses current from any electric light socket. Throws perfect pictures anywhere. No rewind necessary. Set up and taken down in a moment. Write for descriptive literature. Do it now. You incur no obligation.

Eugene H. Kaufman Has Made an Enviable Sales Record

EUGENE H. KAUFMAN, manager of the Accessory Department of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, is known throughout the trade as a pioneer among accessory merchants in foreign territories. He is a man who has done much for the development of the motion picture accessory product in foreign film marts.

Mr. Kaufman's connection with Inter-Ocean dates back to the humble beginning of Inter-Ocean's activities in the export field more than five years ago, when it then occupied an insignificant suite of offices in the Candler Building. Today the expansion of its business has necessitated the exclusive use of a five-story building with a frontage on Forty-second street.

Eugene H. Kaufman
Manager Accessory Department Inter-Ocean Film Corporation.

It was Mr. Kaufman who was instrumental in bringing about the foreign demand for Speer Carbons before they had yet found their present large market in this country. It was also Mr. Kaufman, who, on the strength of the tremendous sales of Speer Carbons annexed the Fulco Accessories to Inter-Ocean's many products and set up a big demand for these accessories.

Since then Mr. Kaufman has added the Master Projector, the "Projex" Lens, Whol Studio Equipment and numerous other celebrated accessory products to his sales wing.

Mr. Kaufman's plans for the future embrace the acquisition of other well-known accessory products for exclusive foreign distribution.

"NEWMAN" Brass Frames and Rails

A FEW REASONS

why "NEWMAN" METAL FRAMES have been chosen by all the big circuits and best class of theatres.

1.—Because the constant exposure to all sorts of weather conditions cannot affect "NEWMAN" NON-CORROSIVE METAL FRAMES.

2.—Because of their richness in beauty and design, they liven the entrance and render the lobby more inviting than any other kind of frames.

3.—Because they will outlast a dozen wood frames. They are practically unwear-out-able.

Charles Bass Visits Gotham and Promises a New Catalog

After he had shed his gloves and observed that Fifth Avenue looked almost as crowded as State street—a St. Patrick's Day parade was passing at the time—he confided to us that the Bass Camera Company was about to issue a new catalog that would eclipse all its previous efforts in that line and that it will soon be in the mails.

This means that appreciators of Universal and De Frasne motion picture cameras and tripods, De Frasne printers, De Vry and Acme portable projectors should get in touch with the Bass Camera Company and ask to be placed on the mailing list.

The concern continues to specialize on high grade used photographic apparatus for which the demand continues to be extremely good.

Wants a Small Outfit.

Moving Picture World:

Will you kindly put me in touch with the proper concerns to quote me on a small picture outfit for about three hundred capacity.

I shall also appreciate any information you can give me as to obtaining information to put me wise to the tricks of the business.

It is my idea to put in an airdome in South Florida, where I can operate practically the whole year, and I should like to know about the cost of the necessary equipment and fair grade of films rental.

Any general information you can give me will be very gratefully received.

F. A. SWAIN.

It would pay you to visit the International Cinema Equipment Center, 729 Seventh avenue, New York, and the United Theatre Equipment Corporation, 1604 Broadway, New York, who can show you compleet outfits and advise you regarding their selection and use.

Read and study the advertising carried in the Moving Picture World.

The books advertised on page 2192 of this issue will be found most valuable aids in giving you a practical working knowledge of the requirements of the exhibitor's end of the picture industry.

No Vibration in the De Vry!

YOU can balance a De Vry on a tea cup and it produces motion pictures as if shot from a stone wall.

You can put the De Vry on a table, a chair—on any non-rocking object with four legs or none, and it does perfect work. It's in a class by itself in this, as in all other respects. See it and know for yourself.

Preview with a De Vry!

A projector which stands up to that test is what professionals need for previewing.

To a Film Exchange, also, a De Vry is invaluable.

We ask that you let us give you a De Vry demonstration. Say the word and our representative from one of 60 cities will come and show you—in your own office.

There's nothing like the De Vry. So light! So handy! So compact! Remember, a poor projector kills a good film. So see the De Vry before you decide. It is endorsed by the best and most successful people in the motion-picture profession.

Treasure Chests!!

"TREASURE"
ACCORDING TO WEBSTER MEANS—

"Something regarded as very precious"—"prize"

We have never yet heard of a man who did not receive a SIMPLEX shipment with a feeling of gratification and pleasure.

For by this time every projector user knows that a Simplex installation at once raises his Projection Room into the class with the leaders.

And like a treasure the Simplex is kept and kept and kept

CONDITIONS that affect all lines of industry necessarily have their influence upon the manufacture of Motion Picture Projectors. Delays utterly beyond the control of any manufacturer are bound to occur. In a spirit of sincerity and frankness we earnestly advise exhibitors to anticipate their wants by ordering equipment as far in advance as possible.
